"Tom Meany's latest 'Greatest' series picks out 25 pitchers from Jerome McGinnity (1809) to date, each with portrait and record. Many anecdotes and entertaining style." Library J

Booklist 48:173 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:59 Ja 1 '52 20w

"This belongs on the every baseball shelf." C. X. L.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 16 '52 170w

MEANY, THOMAS WILLIAM, and others. Magnificent Yankees. 243p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 New York. Baseball club (American league) 52-6328

Not a history but a series of appreciative sketches of current Yankee players. Among those presented are: Casey Stengel; Joe Di Maggio; Vic Raschi; Allie Reynolds; Yogi Berra; Phil Rizzuto; Jerry Coleman. Index.

Booklist 48:334 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 13 '52 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1207 J1 '52 30w

"The book is badly organized: there is enough weaving back and forth in the material to guarantee dizziness. Mr. Meany includes a chapter on Johnny Mize, a National League man who strayed in. Now and then, unaccountably, a strange author heads up a chapter. Worst of all, it is merely assumed that the Yankee organization has a special aura, an elan vital, that in and out of itself overcomes all competition. Whether it's so or not—and it could be so—it ought to have been elaborated." Wilbur Watson

— N Y Times p17 Ag 10 '52 120w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Boy, an Ozark coon hound. 238p $2.50 Knopf

51-13015

"Greg Oliphant came back from the war in the Pacific outwardly normal but inwardly wrecked. The very sound of an airplane sent him into convulsions of fear. Greg went deep into the Ozark hills and bought a deserted farm, hoping that in the hard work and isolation his tortured nerves would mend. It was old Uncle Fred McHarney and his hound, Ol' Dawg, that brought release to Greg." Sat R

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:129 F 15 '52 90w

"Ozark background is presented with understating and the stereotyped mountaineer has been avoided." A. B. Martin

+ Library J 77:799 My 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 11 '52 20w

"There are exciting and accurate descriptions of hunting and trailing in this book as well as two appendices covering the breed of coon hounds and the procedure of field trials. Unfortunately, although the reader is told how Boy looks and sounds, the dog never emerges as a personality as does Albert Payson Terhune's Lad, or John Ross' Big Mutt." L. R. Davis

+ — N Y Times p16 J1 20 '52 160w

"This is, in many ways, the best story that Colonel Meek has written—and he has written many good stories."

+ Sat R 35:61 My 10 '52 160w

MEEKER, ARTHUR. Silver plume. 249p $3 Knopf

Rohan, Tancred de—Fiction 52-6406

Fiction based on fact, this is the story of a young seventeenth century Frenchman whose right to be called the Duc de Rohan was questioned until his early death in battle brought an end to the controversy.

Booklist 49:33 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 30w

Cath World 176:153 N '52 110w

"It is a tribute to Mr. Meeker's story telling skill that a tale of almost stark emotional simplicity can leave an impression of such deep emotion on the reader. 'The Silver Plume' is a successful experiment in understatement, in calmness as opposed to fervency in writing." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 24 '52 600w

"A pleasantly informative tone about French history and society takes the place of sparkle, and warrants notice of the novel."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52 100w

"A satisfying narrative."

+ Kirkus 20:352 Je 15 '52 200w

"This is a remarkably restrained and eminently satisfying novel which does not resort to the flamboyant superficialities which plague

MEEKER, ARTHUR—Continued
the run-of-the-mill historical novel." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1405 S 1 '52 110w

"This is a 'true' story based on considerable original research and told with the facility of a writer who has succeeded before (especially in 'The Ivory Mischief') in pleasing the vast group who send historical novels soaring on the best-seller list. A good many readers will find his tale of a misplaced and sensitive boy both arresting and moving."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 31 '52 280w

"As a novel, it is a technical advance over his earlier books; the writing is economical and firm, and Mr. Meeker conveys something of his own excitement and awareness. . . It is in effect the story of the 'marvelous boy,' caught in a world he cannot master, and in which he has no destiny. Here, the novel, for all its brightness, fails; Mr. Meeker's insight is imperfectly transmitted. The inevitability is not inevitable; the reader is not prepared for it, despite French history, for tragedy is not the mantle for Tancred's shoulders. This is Mr. Meeker's fault." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '52 450w

"Mr. Meeker tells this story as rapidly as possible, sketching in his characters in only the broadest outlines and permitting them only black or white motives and actions."

New Yorker 28:71 Ag 30 '52 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 S 14 '52 200w

"Slight but charming historical tale." P. T.

+ Sat R 35:40 S 13 '52 240w

Springf'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 70w

MEERLOO, ABRAHAM MAURITS. Conversation and communication; a psychological inquiry into language and human relations. 245p $4 Int. univs. press

401 Speech. Language and languages

52-11331

"A psychiatrist whose previous publications have dealt with psychological implications of war, peace, and harmonious human relations, considers here the part language plays in bringing people together or keeping them apart. . . He also discusses the aims of communication, the various methods used to communicate, and difficulties of communication; he defines and analyzes conversation, and treats at length of its creative uses." (Booklist) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:43 O 1 '52

"Unusual and provocative book. 'Conversation and Communication' could do with a little more discipline, but in general its speculative approach is the right one." Charles Spielberger

+ N Y Times p46 N 23 '52 380w

MEERLOO, JOOST ABRAHAM MAURITS. See Meerloo, A. M.

MEGAW, ARTHUR STANLEY. See Bible. Whole. Selections. Bedside Bible

MEIGS, CORNELIA. LYNDE. Dutch colt; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 136p $2 Macmillan

52-13341

Historical story of Pennsylvania in William Penn's time. While William Penn was in England on business all but one of his horses had to be sold to pay his debts. The beautiful Dutch colt was the last horse of any value left to him, and the story is of two brave children who recovered the colt after it had been stolen. For ages 8 to 12.

Kirkus 20:553 S 1 '52 80w

"A must for Pennsylvania librarians." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 77:2077 D 1 '52 80w

"Miss Meigs writes with all her old skill at weaving in description with the action she knows children like. Both boys and girls of around nine to twelve will enjoy Hugh and Gertrude." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p2, p6 N 16 '52 160w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross

N Y Times p52 N 9 '52 150w

"Rich in background and atmosphere, this is a fine story to give to younger boys and girls of the early days in America."

+ Sat R 35:56 N 15 '52 150w

Springf'd Republican p13C D 14 '52 50w

MEIGS, ELIZABETH BLEECKER. Crusade and the cup; il. by Edward and Stephani Godwin. 150p $2.50 Dutton

52-5293

Story of two Irish brothers, Patrick and the blind Alain, who go with Richard of England on a crusade to the Holy Land. After many adventures Alain regains his sight. For ages eleven to fourteen.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 30 '52 150w

"The makeup of the book is good, but the language and ideas are too adult for the age level. Quite melodramatic. There is a good supply of material on this subject. Not recommended." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 40w

"Recommended for its picture of life in this period and for readers who have enjoyed reading about King Arthur." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 110w

"This is an interesting attempt to put new life into legend and history. Some pages are written with power and some with beauty. There is plenty of action to appeal to such boys of around twelve as have already liked the King Arthur stories." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 160w

"The style is lushly romantic, but the story does convey the color and pageantry of the crusade and it also stresses the kinship of mankind despite differences in faith." E. L. B.

N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '52 140w

"It is difficult to reconcile the historic background of the first part and the allegorical atmosphere of the second. We feel that the story tries to cover too wide a canvas. It is certainly overwritten, especially in the second part."

Sat R 35:61 Ap 12 '52 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:179 J1 '52

MEISEL, JAMES HANS. Genesis of Georges Sorel; an account of his formative period followed by a study of his influence. [processed]. 320p $5 Wahr

B or 92 Sorel, Georges

52-8960

"Addressed to those whose knowledge of the Reflections on Violence may be taken for granted; for the Reflections plays a crucial but implicit rôle in this study of the development of Sorel's thought and of its influence. Sorel's most famous work is treated explicitly only in a brief, and very interesting, comparison between Sorel's vindication of violence upon moral grounds and the justification, to be found in Elektra of Richard Strauss, of matricide." (Pol Sci Q) Selective bibliographical chronology. Index.

Reviewed by Helmut Schoeck

Am Soc R 17:120 F '52 250w

Reviewed by William Sacksteder

Ethics 62:305 J1 '52 90w

"Though his is not the first attempt to deal with Sorel's mind historically, Prof. Meisel's treatment is so far as I know, the most thorough and detailed one to date, superb in scholarship, sympathetic, and written with a light and lively touch. As such, it merits the warmest recommendations." A. C. Danto

+ J Philos 49:51 Ja 17 '52 600w

"As a work of scholarship at once sound, sage and stimulating, The Genesis of Georges Sorel is one of the best books on Sorel ever to have been published anywhere. . . Professor Meisel's treatment is distinguished by an almost impeccable scholarship, sweetened by the apt allusions of an alert and literate mind and by a lucid and occasionally witty style. . . As it stands, The Genesis of Georges Sorel is a definitive study, thoughtful and balanced, rich and suggestive." S. H. Lytle

+ Pol Sci Q 67:151 Mr '52 1200w

"This skillful volume, replete with metaphor and neat phrasing, with abundant footnotes and excellent bibliography, will reward both the serious general reader and the social scientist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:237 S '52 240w

MEISS, MILLARD. Painting in Florence and Siena after the Black Death, 194p 169il $12.50 Princeton univ. press

759.5 Painting, Italian 51-14790

"Analyzes and interprets Florentine and Siennese painting from about 1350 to 1375, a short but significant period that here for the first time in a single volume receives full and authoritative treatment." Sat R

"As a former laborer in Professor Meiss's special field, I am all admiration for the master-work he has brought to completion. I can only wish that he had kept in mind a somewhat broader public." S. L. Faison

+ Nation 175:15 J1 5 '52 750w

"Millard Meiss, a deeply and deservedly respected scholar of art history, admits that this period is not 'great' but that he is none the less drawn to it because it is 'problematic.' Why, he asks, in about 1350 did painting in both cities not only seem to lose its strength but also to change its character? Why did the freshness, the dramatic invention and the intimacy of Giotto and Simone Martini give way to the remote, ritualistic and semi-mystical art of Andrea da Firenze and Luca di Tommè? The facts of this startling alteration are noted in Professor Meiss's careful and detailed stylistic analyses of the art itself." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '52 320w

"Distinguished book." R. W. Lee

+ Sat R 35:46 Ap 5 '52 750w

"Illuminating and original account of painting in Florence and Siena after the Black Death of 1348."

Times [London] Lit Sup p340 My 23 '52 1200w

"A small masterpiece of historical detective work, one of the appendixes, concerned with a newly discovered work by Andrea da Firenze, adds much to the value of the book as do the many new insights modestly relegated to footnotes. The lucid and distinguished text is supplemented by wisely-chosen illustrations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:17 Mr '52 300w

MELLEN, KATHLEEN (DICKENSON). Magnificent matriarch, Kaahumanu, queen of Hawaii. 291p il $4.50 Hastings house

B or 92 Kaahumanu, consort of Kamehameha I, king of the Hawaiian Islands

52-8221

Biography of Kaahumanu, the favorite wife and queen of the great Hawaiian King Kamehameha I. After the death of her husband and Kamehameha II, the queen became regent, because her grandson was only eleven at the time of his father's death. Glossary of Hawaiian words; bibliography.

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 3 '52 420w

"Mrs. Mellen, who has previously written a narrative biography of the great Kamehameha, vividly pictures in this book the turmoil and disaster that ensued when white men brought their civilization to the heathen. . . [She] has made good use of official records. She has likewise documented her story from oral traditions still preserved by Hawaiians descended from the royal line." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 13 '52 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '52 430w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5D J1 20 '52 160w

MELLINGER, MAY (MRS DOUGLAS S. KNOWLES). Splint road. 277p $3.50 Putnam

52-5269

Life among the itinerant shingle weavers of the Louisiana cypress swamps forms the background of this family chronicle. It is first the story of Mort Buckner, his motherless daughter and the little adopted cousin whom Mort cared for, and the lovely Miss Stella whom Mort married and took care of the girls. It also follows the girls thru their marriages, until they have children of their own. The novel begins in 1890.

Kirkus 20:84 F 1 '52 180w

"'Splint Road' is a vivid story of the early years of this century, derived from the author's own childhood memories of cypress swamps and migratory shingle weavers." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 23 '52 260w

"'Splint Road' should have been unusual and absorbing. The background is unique, the people are simple, dignified and very human. May Mellinger writes about them easily and with vitality. However, these promising ingredients are carelessly stirred together to make a story which resembles one of the standard-brand female soul-searchers." M. S. Hurst

N Y Times p23 F 24 '52 220w

"Miss Mellinger weaves an intricate yet convincing network of family relationships through which the reader comes to understand many facets of this half-submerged life, and also much about a southern civilization whose older dynamics have about run down, to be replaced with new values. Obviously she is writing about something she knows intimately at first hand, and the publisher's biographical sketch supports this fully. At the same time this is not another of those familiar autobiographical novels. Miss Mellinger has the ability to transmute her first-hand knowledge into the stuff of fiction, and to make her people, and her situations of universal application." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 29 '52 700w

"May Mellinger writes with warmth and compassion and a certain prodigality that is extremely satisfying, if not currently in style. Because she knows the background of her shingle weavers they are neither strange characters nor quaint; only human, dignified, and true. Her women are primitive, timeless, and somewhere, in this world or another, she has known each and every one of them. So has the reader for whom they will be triumphantly, richly, alive." Josephine Lawrence

+ Sat R 35:15 Mr 1 '52 500w

MELVILLE, MRS ANNABELLE (MCCONNELL). Elizabeth Bayley Seton, 1774-1821. 411p il $4 Scribner

B or 92 Seton, Mother Elizabeth Ann (Bayley). Sisters of charity 51-14503

This biography of Mother Seton attempts to give an overall picture of her life, instead of giving an account of her life in religion only. It depicts her as wife, mother, convert and foundress of the Sisters of Charity in the United States. Bibliography. Index.

"A charming, scholarly biography."

+ Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 30w

"Unsentimentalized, yet moving biography of a saintly woman." R. M. Ames

+ Cath World 174:475 Mr '52 300w

"A commemorative biography which traces a maturing courage and a devout acceptance, this should have an established religious market."

+ Kirkus 19:599 O 1 '51 160w

MELVILLE, A. M.—Continued

"What makes this book one to savor and to enjoy for non-Catholics as well as Catholics is Miss Melville's presentation of Mother Seton as a woman of radiant charm, with continual solicitude for others and a quick sympathy for their suffering." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 17 '52 500w

School & Society 75:302 My 10 '52 30w

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Portable Melville; ed. and with an introd. by Jay Leyda. 746p $2.50 Viking

818 52-6308

"On the fair assumption that everyone interested in Melville already has a copy of Moby Dick, that supreme classic is omitted, except 'Father Mapple's sermon,' its finest passage. Two novels, Typee and Billy Budd, are given in full, but the latter is really only a long short story. In addition, this anthology contains substantial sections of four other novels, some short stories, letters, journals, poems and other Melville miscellany." Christian Century

Booklist 48:198 F 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 17 '52 120w

"A grand selection from the works of one of the greatest American writers; but all the rest of Melville is supplementary to Moby Dick." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:222 F 20 '52 60w
Kirkus 19:658 N 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by Katherine Hoskins
New Repub 126:18 Mr 3 '52 320w

"Mr. Leyda's care to secure reliable texts is beyond praise. If he has not fully succeeded in the all but impossible task of reducing Melville to a microcosm, he has at least composed an accessory volume which lovers of Melville will eagerly welcome." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 17 '52 360w

New Yorker 28:148 My 24 '52 60w

MENDELSON, SAMUEL FELIX, comp. Merry heart; wit and wisdom from Jewish folklore. 260p $3 Bookman associates

808.87 Humor, Jewish. Folklore, Jewish 52-99

Collection of anecdotes, most of them humorous, about aspects of Jewish thought and character.

Reviewed by F. A. Levy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 17 '52 80w

"The Gentile who listens in on this conversation—as many will, to their own entertainment and enlightenment—will not take these revelations any more seriously than they are intended and will sympathetically laugh with, not at, the butts of the jests. There is, moreover, a good deal here besides jests, for much faith and philosophy and practical wisdom finds expression through these whimsicalities." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:312 Mr 12 '52 170w

Spring'd Republican p16A Ja 20 '52 120w

MENEN, AUBREY. Duke of Gallodoro. 232p $2.75 Scribner

52-7055

"A fragmentary novel with a slim thread of plot about an Italian author in search of additional material for a book about 'The Dark Ages, Then and Now.' He settles in the charming but explosive village of Gallodoro and becomes exceedingly fond of the violent little walf, Peppin whom he abets in a swash-buckling kind of plan to prove him to be the bastard son of the 14th Duca di Gallodoro." Library J

Booklist 48:215 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:231 Je '52 290w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 24 '52 380w

Kirkus 20:8 Ja 1 '52 190w

"Interesting characters, colorful atmosphere and sympathetic humor combine to produce autobiographical, travel and fictional reading that is a pleasure." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:361 F 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 21 '52 40w

Nation 174:257 Mr 15 '52

"Not all the incidents in this story of the attempt to establish the paternity of a beguiling, homeless walf are equally amusing; often the sheer nonsense in the tale is overdrawn. But throughout 'The Duke of Gallodoro' runs a rich vein of satire, and true satire springs only from a truly serious mind." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 17 '52 750w

"With its warm, shrewd interest in human personalities, it combines a strong suggestion that there is something essentially comic and inconsistent and wonderful about simply being alive, whether in the Old Dark Ages or the New or in between. The writing is charged with a trustful hedonism." Richard Sullivan
N Y Times p4 F 17 '52 550w

"Mr. Menen is obviously a man of thought and humanity. He has respect for writing, and knows what he would like to say. His satire is sprightly, fanciful, and fearless. Unfortunately, it is overweight, too."

+ New Yorker 28:90 Mr 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 22 '52 800w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R 35:21 Mr 15 '52 470w

"One couldn't reasonably expect The Duke of Gallodoro to be quite as good as A Prevalence of Witches, for that book was a nonesuch, a nonpareil. But at least we know now it wasn't a sport; for this story is told with just the same urbane civilised Senior Common Room wit. Mr. Menen's dialogue is funnier than his situations, and his turn for bland epigram is enchanting." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 188:344 Mr 14 '52 90w

"Veined with gentle ribaldry and stocked with bizarre supporting characters, The Duke of Gallodoro is a fictional lighter-than-air craft. Except for some overtalky bits, it offers some of the choicest summer reading of the winter."

+ Time 59:104 F 18 '52 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Mr 14 '52 270w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:12 summer '52 100w

MENOTTI, GIAN CARLO. Amahl and the night visitors; this narrative adaptation by Frances Frost preserves the exact dialogue of the opera; il. by Roger Duvoisin. (Whittlesey house publication) 86p $2.75 McGraw

Christmas stories 52-10343

"First seen on television, for which the one-act opera was written last Christmas Eve, its possibilities as a children's book for Christmas were recognized by Helene Frye, editor of children's books. It called for narrative form which Frances Frost has given, preserving all the words of Mr. Menotti I had found so appealing in the libretto." (Horn Bk) It is the story of a poor shepherd and his mother who gave shelter to the three kings on the first Christmas eve.

Booklist 49:112 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"It is a splendid book for a family to share at Christmas time," Polly Goodwin
 + Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 14 '52 210w

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 20w

"A Christmas story with beauty and love and a joyous sense of a living child at the heart of it. Mr. Duvoisin's full-page drawings in color are a satisfying accompaniment to a story children will like to hear told or to read when the records of the music are played," A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:310 O '52 120w

"With the striking illustrations in color and in black and white, it is an excellent choice as a Christmas gift for anyone, young or old." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:402 D '52 70w

"A fine adaptation of Menotti's opera."

+ Kirkus 20:550 S 1 '52 50w

"The Roger Duvoisin pictures are gems in full color. For anyone who has seen it on television it is hard to separate the two versions. Certainly it is a beautiful Christmas story."

+ Library J 77:1747 O 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:2184 D 15 '52 50w

"Miss Frost has done a difficult task with success. And in many pictures, in line and in full, rich colors, Mr. Duvoisin creates the story again in pictures. To see and hear the opera in its original form is one experience; to meet it in the book is quite another. But it will be very satisfactory to those who love it, to have the book for a gift." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 20w

"A sentimental tale, like many Christmas stories, and moving if not read too close to the Biblical story. . . For me, Roger Duvoisin's drawings are the best part of the book, beautiful, glowing, warm and humorous." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times pt2, p35 N 16 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:194 D 6 '52 80w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:44 D 13 '52 240w

Time 60:106 D 8 '52 30w

MENSHUTKIN, BORIS NIKOLAEVICH. Russia's Lomonosov, chemist, courtier, physicist, poet [tr. from the Russian by Jeanette Eyre Thal and Edward J. Webster under the direction of W. Chapin Huntington]. 203p il $4 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Lomonosov, Mikhail Vasil'evich 52-5826

"This biography of Russia's 18th century genius is a translation of Menshutkin's definitive work (1937). Lomonosov has long occupied an important place in the history of Russian language and culture, but the world's awareness of his contributions in the fields of chemistry, physics and mathematics is due to Menshutkin's meticulous studies. Lomonosov, the son of a peasant fisherman, rose to fame as a leader in the Russian Academy of Science. His studies in optics and geology, and his theories about the mechanics of heat and the nature of gases, were many years in advance of his time." Library J

"By all means read this fascinating book about an extraordinary man and scientist." D. H. Killefer

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1799 Ap 28 '52 250w

Current Hist 22:318 My '52 60w

"Of interest primarily to students of science history." J. E. Brown

Library J 77:594 Ap 1 '52 130w

"This is a valuable addition to the Russian translation project of the American Council of Learned Societies, even though biography now and again suffers from its rather obvious Soviet slant." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p36 Mr 30 '52 450w

"This book, the first on Lomonosov to appear in English, is a translation of a Soviet work, but it seems quite free from the Soviet tendency to make exaggerated claims of priority for Russian inventors and scientists. Professor Tenney L. Davis of M.I.T., who contributes an introduction, guarantees its reliability. It also has the merit of being brief and clear, and is full of odd sidelights on Russian life."

+ New Yorker 28:145 My 24 '52 230w

"With pride Russians today point to Lomonosov as one of the greatest contributors to human knowledge in the eighteenth century. Menshutkin's book justifies this pride and at the same time gives a faithful picture of a remarkable scientist and artist whose accomplishments have been altogether too little known outside of Russia." E. J. Simmons

+ Sat R 35:33 My 10 '52 750w

+ School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 30w

MERCIER, VIVIAN, and GREENE, DAVID HERBERT, eds. 1000 years of Irish prose; pt 1, The literary revival; with an introduction. 607p $6 Devin-Adair

820.8 Irish literature—Collections (52-11400)

The first volume of a two-volume work on Irish prose. "It is the purpose of this anthology to give a rounded understanding of that literary revival through more than 40 excerpts from the best writing of the past 75 years." (Christian Science Monitor)

Booklist 49:9 S 1 '52

Reviewed by J. M. Flynn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 31 '52 250w

"Because of its variety, an anthology is sometimes difficult to review. For the same reason, it is also sometimes delightful to read. That is the case with the present anthology of remarkable writers who burst upon the Irish literary scene some three-quarters of a century ago, who played such a powerful role in voicing southern Ireland's aspirations of national independence, and who today are still writing with a gift which even beyond Irish shores is recognized as having a special quality about it." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 31 '52 550w

"Here is great history, as well as great prose. . . Something quickens in the blood as you read these fragments, and it is not something that is confined to tales of warriors or politicians. The magic is just as strong in the stories of Yeats, Lady Gregory, James Stephens and Frank O'Connor." Emmet Lavery

+ Commonweal 56:470 Ag 15 '52 270w

Kirkus 20:392 J1 1 '52 210w

"The introduction, chapter headings and bibliographical notes are fascinating and pull one to the book—the sort of writing that keeps you turning pages to see what has been said of this one and that, and then makes you read on and on. An excellent volume for browsing and essential for Irish literature shelves." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 77:1073 Je 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps

New Repub 127:21 Ag 18 '52 700w

"I should have made different selections from O'Connor. I should also have included one of the beautiful short stories of Mary Lavin. . . But, then, every man makes his own anthologies and quarrels with those of every other man. Seasoned with its share of surprises, this excellent collection well represents seventy years of Anglo-Irish prose, for which an historical and critical introduction provides a helpful frame of reference. A promised second volume will deal with the mere nine hundred and twenty-odd years of pre-Revival Irish prose." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p4 D 14 '52 550w

"The editors have set up their own standards and, after giving the entire output of the Irish literary revival a thorough shuffling, have come up with an anthology of fiction, essays, and political writings that reads with as much brightness and freshness as though it were the first survey ever made of the period."

+ New Yorker 28:138 O 4 '52 90w

Reviewed by Joseph Carroll

Theatre Arts 36:7 O '52 260w

Time 60:88 Ag 18 '52 380w

MEREDITH, DAVID WILLIAM, pseud. See Miers, E. S.

MERRIAM, EVE. Real book about Franklin D. Roosevelt; il. by Bette J. Davis. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano—Juvenile literature 52-7627

A short biography of Franklin D. Roosevelt for ages 8 to 14.

"A readable summing up of a great career, though at times one feels the anecdotal handling of the family circle and friends is somewhat bland for so vigorous a subject."

+ Kirkus 19:705 D 15 '51 150w

"A sincere and readable biography. . . Recommended." Mary Strang

+ Library J 77:603 Ap 1 '52 20w

"Extremely readable." M. E. Martignoni

+ N Y Times p18 Je 29 '52 10w

MERRILL, JUDITH, ed. Beyond human ken; with an introd. by Fletcher Pratt. 334p $2.95 Random house

Short stories—Collections 52-7134

Twenty-one short stories of science-fiction and fantasy which have not been published previously in an anthology. Contains stories by Lewis Padgett; R. A. Heinlein; Anthony Boucher; Murray Leinster; S. V. Benét; Fritz Leiber, and others.

Booklist 49:158 Ja 1 '53

"Entertaining."

+ Kirkus 20:523 Ag 15 '52 90w

"The best of its kind since Mr. Pratt's own anthology, World of Wonder." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 70w

"The average of quality, in both writing and imagination, is high enough to make this the outstanding anthology of 1952." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 9 '52 240w

Reviewed by J. F. McComas

N Y Times p16 D 14 '52 240w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:41 N 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Kenneth Heuer

Sat R 36:58 Ja 3 '53 140w

MERRILL, FRANCIS ELLSWORTH, and ELDEREDGE, HANFORD WENTWORTH. Culture and society; an introduction to sociology. 611p il $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

301 Sociology 52-8875

A textbook for the introductory course in sociology. The author is professor of sociology at Dartmouth college. Index.

"For an introductory course in which the methods and products of anthropological research are to be emphasized, this is a sound, clearly written text, with thoughtful explanations of key concepts in the early chapters on Man and Society, and Man and Culture. In organization, the authors make a contribution in treating the community and social institutions as a unit, giving emphasis to study of the family and letting a single chapter suffice for discussion of the unifunctional institutions." R. E. Bassett

+ Am Soc R 17:647 O '52 280w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 10w

MERWIN, W. S. Mask for Janus; with a foreword by W. H. Auden. (Yale series of younger poets) 67p $2.50 Yale univ. press

811 52-5355

"Exhibits the work of a twenty-four-year-old Princeton graduate now living in London. Mr. Merwin not only casts most of his lyrics in the moulds of impersonal myth and symbol; he does so with a detachment of considerable calm. This effect of withdrawal may, in part, be due to a monotony of material: aside from a few hopeful carols in the Christian tradition,

Mr. Merwin's verse is death-struck. It is so not in the typical young poet's passion for necrophilia, but in its reiterant picture of man helpless and hopeless amidst the elements which do nothing but work his destruction. The wind has 'malice' and the light is 'bitter.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Merwin is a poet of twenty-four who seems to be learning more and more about his craft. He has seen clearly the general cultural drift and quietly set his own sights accordingly, without the usual whimperings or heroics." M. L. Rosenthal

+ New Repub 128:28 Ja 5 '53 350w

"The technical control of the poems is admirable. The dimmed rhyming, the sly metrical variations, combine to a 'diffident music' which is nonetheless skillful. And this is proper to Mr. Merwin's data, so long as he is deliberately minor. Yet it is in a strangeness, a newness, of diction in the best of the poems one senses intimations of imaginative power." W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 17 '52 150w

Reviewed by John Holmes

N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '52 40w

"Mr. Merwin's language has sinews, his tone is assured, and he has an exceptional ear for the incisive, weighted phrase. There are perhaps half a dozen poems in this collection which outrange the utterances of all the other younger poets of America today." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 Jl 6 '52 130w

"There is an excellence in Mr. Merwin's technique that only long practice and an unusual ear could evolve. His carols and his songs are successive surprises, and his experiments in form and rhythm a delight. He has proportion and music and, above all, vision. There is accomplishment in this twenty-four-year-old poet and the promise of much more to come." I. L. Salomon

+ Sat R 35:21 S 6 '52 240w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:257 S '52 280w

MEYER, ANN. Nibby; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 32p $2.25 Coward-McCann

52-10454

This story of Nibby, who was one cocker puppy too many in Mrs Powers' household, tells how he solved the problem when the Dog Warden came to take him away.

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 50w

"Rather dull baby talk about an unwanted cocker puppy. . . Kurt Wiese has drawn a solid little pup whose round head and curly ears will evoke more sympathy than the story."

+ Kirkus 20:323 Je 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Virginia Russell

Library J 77:1310 Ag '52 30w

"Ann Meyer has spun a satisfying yarn and Kurt Wiese has supplied his usual expressive animal pictures." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 110w

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Boy's book of modern science; by S. M. Jennings [pseud] il. by I. N. Steinberg. 188p $2.75 World pub. 500 Science 51-14873

"A scientific encyclopedia covering 166 miscellaneous subjects in the fields of engineering, chemistry, and physics. Alphabetically arranged, book covers such subjects as antibiotics, cathode-ray beam, geiger counter, iconoscope, electron microscope, isotopes, jet and rocket propulsion, gamma rays, absolute zero, the universe, and seismograph. Conveniently placed together at the end are nine tables of weights and measures. No great detail is given on any subject, and there is no obvious reason for the choice of subjects included. No index." Library J

Reviewed by M. I. Ross

Library J 77:150 Ja 15 '52 60w

"It is a sort of science dictionary, whose value is that the entries are longer than the ones in general dictionaries. Also they are up to date to 1951, and are very clear, considering their brevity." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p30 N 16 '52 50w

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Picture book of radio and television and how they work; il. by Richard Floethe. 40p $2 Lothrop

621.384 Radio—Juvenile literature. Television—Juvenile literature 52-7585

"This book reduces to lowest terms this very technical subject by using simple, non-technical language and many illustrative analogies. Richard Floethe's clever three-color illustrations add to the simplicity. There are short discussions of such subjects as 'How Is Sound Sent Over Wires' and 'What Are Electrons' and brief summaries of radio and television." Library J

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Kirkus 19:679 D 1 '51 210w

"Interest level 8 years up, but reading and comprehension about 10 through high school. Good print, heavy paper, excellent binding. Recommended." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 76:2123 D 15 '51 130w

"Mr. Meyer is easy to understand and he employs a helpful textbook device: summaries at the end of each section of the facts he has given. Since he was aiming at young readers, the author has of necessity passed quickly over technical matters—but sometimes he has passed too quickly." Creighton Peet

+ — N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 200w

MEYERS, BARLOW. Tumbleweed. 192p $2.50 Westminster press

Horses—Legends and stories 52-7256

"As a mustanger in Wyoming, orphanage-raised Rush Jones captures and breaks a prize wild horse, which he then loses in an auto accident. Rush is befriended by a former rodeo rider, and how the two recapture wild horses in the rugged country and start the BJ Ranch in spite of a dangerous and desperate enemy make a thrilling story." Library J

Booklist 48:301 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Kirkus 20:32 Ja 15 '52 160w

"Author's understanding of horses and knowledge of the country seem to be extremely good. Recommended for ages 11 and up." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:541 Mr 15 '52 80w

"A stallion story with a difference, this is a well written thriller for older boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 25 '52 120w

"Older boys and young men, too, should enjoy this junior novel that combines personal problems, ranching, horse training and trail riding, with such fresh material as horse auctions and a Western county fair." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 140w

MICHAELSON, JOHN NAIRNE, pseud. Morning, winter, and night. 188p $3 Sloane

52-8650

"The reactions of children to the realities and urgencies of their own developing sexuality provide the material and theme for a first novel." (Sat R) The central character is an elderly man from the West who returns to the small Ohio town where he lived when he was twelve or thirteen, to "search out beginnings."

Kirkus 20:85 F 1 '52 240w

"A bluntly and tenderly told reminiscence of juvenile love."

+ Nation 175:116 Ag 9 '52 150w

"This first novel, written pseudonymously, is impressive and disturbing despite the fact that it shows many of the crudities one might expect in an apprentice work. The style varies from vague to vulgar and the descriptions from too little to too much; still there is a quality of passionate sincerity that compels both attention and thought. Before he is through, the reader wonders whether he may not have had experiences similar to Jamie's that he will not remember or that he dare not admit." H. C. Webster

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 27

'52 350w

"When this kind of tale must wait beyond passionate youth for telling, one expects a steady force, a sense of experience. But the old man who begins and ends the dream-reality of this book has neither. He starts out an unknown quantity and ends up still largely unknown. Boyishly troubled by the burdens of the flesh, he seldom rises above the erotic fumbblings of his own youthful ghost." Edward Parone

N Y Times p17 J1 13 '52 200w

"The author has redeemed his story from any kind of sensationalism by telling it 'without the conventions of evasion.' It is a simple, often poignant, recollection of the events of a rustic winter, long ago, told directly in the language of country children who seem very well acquainted with elementals. On the other hand, it often seems a trifle violent in its effects." L. V.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 27 '52 220w

"Written with evocative grace and a fine perception into the sensibilities of children. . . Mr. Michaelson has handled his material with a rare combination of delicacy of feeling and verbal frankness. The result is a novel which will have many an older reader looking back at his own childhood with affectionate reminiscence and may make him regard with increased understanding the problems and torments of this generation's children."

+ Sat R 35:54 Je 7 '52 150w

MICHAUX, HENRY. Selected writings: the space within; tr. with an introd. by Richard Ellmann. 297p $3.50 New directions

848

A52-9239

Selections from the writings of a Belgian-born French author much admired by French intellectuals. The original French appears on the pages facing the English translations.

"Michaux's pieces, admittedly experiments, are not altogether new in the literary field, although they bring a strangeness of conception which is certain to be branded as 'novel.' But if placed beside the works of John Donne or Robert Burton, those 17th-century anatomists of the human mind, these prose poems of Michaux may not seem so strange. . . Richard Ellmann's brilliant introduction explains as clearly as English can what Michaux was attempting in these writings of the last two decades." C. T. Houpt

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 19 '52 650w

Reviewed by Philip Spencer

New Statesman & Nation 44:732 D 13 '52 420w

"The translation is excellent—and in a sense helpless—Michaux's individuality shapes any translator's task into one closely approximating transliteration. . . Michaux's insistence on short-short, compressed pieces makes his mordancy extra-readable, his trenchancy very tonic." B. V. W.

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '52 140w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Sat R 34:11 D 29 '51 650w

Reviewed by Martin Turnell

Spec 189:696 N 21 '52 440w

MICHELL, HUMFREY. Sparta. 348p $7 Cambridge

938 Sparta

A scholarly summary of all that is known about the history and life of the people of ancient Sparta. The author is Professor emeritus of Political economy in McMaster university, Hamilton, Ontario. Bibliography. Index.

MICHELL, HUMFREY—Continued

"Professor Michell seems to have written this book several years before its publication since he has not brought his bibliography fully up to date. . . Nevertheless Professor Michell gives us the fruit of much labor and patient research. The expert will admire it and the average reader will read it with understanding and pleasure." C. A. Yeo

+ Am Hist R 53:81 O '52 800w

Nation 174:457 My 10 '52 60w

"Professor Michell, as professor of political economy, has already written on Greek subjects, and now in his retirement has felt the temptation to publish his views on Sparta. The most admirable feature of his book is the curiosity which he feels about every side of Spartan life, multiplying his enquiries in every direction; its fault is a certain lack of robustness in the pursuit of these enquiries, a certain flabbiness of argument." A. Andrewes

+ Spec 189:196 Ag 8 '52 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p567 Ag 29 '52 750w

MIDDLETON, DREW. Defense of western Europe. 313p $3.50 Appleton

940.55 Europe—Defenses. World politics 52-9728

"The chief German correspondent for The Times tries in this book to impart to his countrymen the political and military information which will give them a feeling of urgency about The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's (NATO's) mission of checking Russian aggression. There is no doubt about where Mr. Middleton stands. He believes that Russia will move to conquer the free world in any hour when her managers become convinced that the object can be decisively won. He is not among those who believe that the men of the Kremlin are merely mistaken about that which lies outside their system and would make peace if they were convinced they could get it." (N Y Times) No index.

"The Defense of Western Europe is a mine of information. It offers an answer to, or at least clarifies, a host of crucial questions which many Americans are asking." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:85 J1 '52 370w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 40w

"A stimulating and readable account by an experienced foreign correspondent who has spent most of his adult reporting years in Europe, including a tedious stint in Moscow." J. H. Thompson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 25 '52 200w

"If ever there was a book deserving of the designation 'must reading,' this is it. Cutting through the maze of day-by-day reports it shows the clear and present danger of war and the means to avoid it—without appeasement. It shows how poorly the West has used the little time it has. And it shows dramatically that the western nations, including the United States, have the choice of facing the facts or facing defeat." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 20 '52 600w

"This is much more than a book on strategy. It is a sound discussion of the world situation." + Kirkus 20:219 Mr 15 '52 200w

"Book will be useful in libraries of all types, because of unending controversies about aid to Europe and because of Eisenhower's role in this election year. Unfortunately, there is no index." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:890 My 15 '52 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 3 '52 180w

New Statesman & Nation 43:654 My 31 '52 350w

"Middleton has worked closely with the SHAPE staff, and his analyses presumably reflect its intelligence estimates. But he himself warns against even the loftiest intelligence estimates. . . The book, moreover, was largely written at the end of last year, before Lisbon and subsequent developments, and it insufficiently covers the changes in organization, strengths and political relations which have taken place on the NATO side. It is still full of many sound judgments and illuminating comments on this highly complicated phenomenon." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 8 '52 700w

"Mr. Middleton has been in Europe during the World War II years and since. His book is a mine of information on the military forces, political and economic conditions and what the masses are thinking in the nations on both sides of the Iron Curtain. Each country is the subject of a separate analysis." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p3 My 18 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:140 My 24 '52 130w

"The chances are that this is the best analysis yet published of Western Europe's plans to defend itself against the Soviet Union." G. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '52 230w

Reviewed by Frank Altschul

Sat R 35:10 My 31 '52 2100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Ag 1 '52 1000w

"Few journalists are better qualified than Mr. Middleton is to write about the defense of Europe, since he has for more than a decade been witness to war and politics on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He has not put into this book the analysis or research necessary for a thorough treatment of his subject, but he compensates for the deficiency to some extent by including penetrating observations which are based on his personal experience." U S Quarterly Bk R 8:300 S '52 200w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK (DAVID WILLIAM MEREDITH, pseud). Christmas card murders. 239p $2.50 Knopf

51-11101

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

"A newcomer in the field with an adroit and original twist to a multiple murder yarn."

+ Kirkus 19:590 O 1 '51 50w

"This begins with a winning glimpse of clamorous domesticity in suburban New Jersey but I'm afraid that nothing that happens thereafter is either as immediate or as winning although the whole thing seems to be earnest enough." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 16 '51 190w

"Has a touch of cozily realistic domesticity, but such inadequate construction, such stilted dialogue, such unfair detection that it sounds like the male equivalent of Had-I-But-Known novel of some twenty years ago." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 D 23 '51 90w

"This one seems rather slow and conventional, but the homey middle-class reality of the background is pleasant. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 16 '51 100w

"Agreeable." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:46 F 9 '52 20w

MIERS, EARL SCHENCK (DAVID WILLIAM MEREDITH, pseud). Monkey shines; a baseball story; il. by Paul Galdone. 207p $2.50 World pub.

52-8423

"Sleepy Jones, age 11, organizes his playmates into a Little League baseball team, and enlists the aid of Buzz Kyler, ex big-leaguer as coach. The precocious bunch of youngsters soon begin to appreciate team spirit, and rally to meet unexpected emergencies. A disgruntled sports reporter, symbolizing professionalism and 'star' system injects a sour note, but team loyalty wins out. A monkey mascot adds to the excitement." Library J

Booklist 49:93 N 1 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 16 '52 110w

"Definitely a needed kind of book for those boys like Sleepy who dream of roses or thrush songs in the same breath as a well caught fly, or who get thoroughly down in the dumps for having forgotten to clean their bedrooms. Paul Galdone's drawings are sophisticated comments on the boys and their doings."

+ Kirkus 20:325 Je 1 '52 200w

"A good story for adults, emphasizing amateur spirit. Excellent for teen agers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1192 J1 '52 80w

"It is a little precious. Maybe it could be interesting to precocious youths (vocabulary-wise) of twelve." I. H. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52 30w

"There is fun in the book and a lot of good baseball advice. . . The characterization is good and the whole is an out-of-the-ordinary baseball story for younger readers." M. P. Allen

+ N Y Times pt2, p34 N 16 '52 110w

MIGHELL, RONALD LESTER, and BLACK, JOHN DONALD. Interregional competition in agriculture; with special reference to dairy farming in the Lake States and New England. 320p il maps $5 Harvard univ. press 338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Dairying 51-11577

"Based on studies made within the limitations indicated in the title for the period 1935-48, this book proceeds to develop conclusions within the theoretical framework of existing economic theory. Particular attention is paid to the principles of specialization and comparative advantage and location theory. Finally, a case is made for an agricultural program of adjustments of production and consumption freed by sound and firm research from political struggle among sectional and other group interests." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Asher Hobson

Am Econ R 42:469 Je '52 500w

Am Pol Sci R 46:594 Je '52 30w

"Those who have followed the various monographs, bulletins, and journal articles which have resulted from the regional competition project will find little that is new in this book. The relatively uninformed person in this regard will discover a wealth of significant material but he will have to pay the price of reading a good many pages of highly technical and detailed subject matter." Wilson Gee

Ann Am Acad 280:198 Mr '52 500w

Reviewed by G. L. Johnson

J Pol Econ 60:184 Ap '52 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1338 S 1 '51 80w

"An unusual book, it should be valuable especially to those interested in methodology."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:371 D '51 250w

MIKAN, GEORGE LAWRENCE. Mr Basketball [his] own story as told to Bill Carlson. 80p il $2 Greenberg

B or 92 Basketball 52-6251

"[A biography] of basketball's top ranking player, with many illustrations, and a section on the fine points of the game by Mikan." Library J

Booklist 48:216 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 17 '52 170w

"A brief, readable biography." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:441 Mr 1 '52 30w

MIKESELL, RAYMOND FRED. United States economic policy and international relations. 341p $4.75 McGraw

338.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign policy 51-12630

"The foreign economic policy of the United States as determined by its domestic economic interests and international political objectives is the subject of this study. There is a summary of the major economic policies of the inter-war years, 1919-1939. More recent policies are reviewed in the light of the far-reaching changes in public attitude during the war towards the subject of collective security, foreign assistance, etc. The bearing which this new concept will have on our policies of the future is the subject of the final section of this volume." (Current Hist) Index.

"In terms of the range of topics considered, the book's scope is wide indeed. For students of international affairs, it should prove an extremely useful reference work. . . The treatment is always competent and enlightening, sometimes necessarily brief, and sometimes thorough and critical. Space limitations forbid that I comment specifically on more than a few of the major issues raised." P. T. Ellsworth

+ Am Econ R 42:980 D '52 1000w

"With this broad-gauged and scholarly treatise, Professor Mikesell has signally contributed to a major field of study which, despite the appearance of numerous technical and theoretical discussions, has long suffered from the lack of a comprehensive survey of our foreign economic policy." A. J. Warner

+ Ann Am Acad 281:205 My '52 550w

Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 70w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:599 Ap 1 '52 80w

MILHOLLEN, HIRST DILLON, ed. Divided we fought. See Divided we fought

MILL, HUGH ROBERT. Autobiography; with an introd. by L. Dudley Stamp. 224p il $5 Longmans

B or 92 Geographers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-1856

"Hugh Robert Mill died in April, 1950; an appreciation of his long and fruitful life's work appeared in the October, 1950, issue of the Geographical Review. It was based mainly on his mimeographed autobiography. Now, thanks to the initiative of L. Dudley Stamp, we have the more lasting record of the printed word. Dr. Mill himself selected the accompanying photographs. Dr. Stamp has added an introduction and a postscript, and there is a useful chronological summary." (Geog R) Index.

Geog R 42:677 O '52 60w

"One of its attractive features is a series of thumb-nail sketches of the men he met and knew. Whether he is writing about his fellow-students at Edinburgh or about the explorers and writers of a later generation, his comments are always interesting. All geographers will be grateful to Professor Stamp for having made this narrative accessible. It is a fitting memorial to a pioneer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p355 My 30 '52 700w

MILLAR, GEORGE REID. White boat from England. 354p il maps $4.50 Knopf

797.14 Serica (yacht). Voyages and travels 52-7541

Account of a voyage in a sixteen-ton sloop around the coasts of France, Spain, and Portugal, and into the Mediterranean, taken by the author and his wife.

Booklist 49:29 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:7 O '52 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 20 '52 420w

MILLAR, G. R.—Continued

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p5 J1 31 '52
500w

"It's a modest, intimate log whose boating detail and friendly style makes for sure sailing appeal."

+ Kirkus 20:310 My 15 '52 130w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1073 Je 15 '52 60w

"George Millar has the gift of sharing his experiences, and by his own account this voyage tested his capacity as a comparatively inexperienced sailor to the utmost. He encountered, even in this well-travelled route, excitements, frustrations, triumphs and threats of sudden death, which readers with even a trace of the sea in their veins will follow with emotion only just removed from first-hand. The narrative is crisp, factual, and austere, so that the colours, sparingly used, are seen to the greatest effect."

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:716 D 15 '51 220w

"This account of a small-boat passage down the coast of France and Spain is much more than a cruising yarn. It is full of sharp observation and perceptive insight, brightened with a dry Scotch humor. Not since E. Arnot Robertson's 'Ordinary Families' has such brilliant and urbane writing talent taken up the business of getting about in a boat." Alfred Stanford

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 3 '52 550w

"The book is too richly episodic and too tinged with the character of the author for detailed review. I can only urge all readers to share my delight in it." Robert Hilleyer

+ N Y Times p3 J1 20 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:67 Ag 2 '52 160w

"Even though the reader may never make such a voyage and never want to, he'll keep on reading. Mr. Millar writes so well, and reflects what he saw and did so vividly, that his story takes a peculiarly strong hold on the imagination, entirely aside from its attraction for those who like the sea and sailing." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 20 '52 850w

"This is much more than a tale of pleasure cruising. It is a sensitive account of two travelers and of the fellow pilgrims whose paths they crossed." E. S. Allen

+ Sat R 35:13 J1 26 '52 460w

"Vividly, vigorously and racily the boat and the book reel along, under Mr. Millar's energetic and undaunted piloting; the encounters with human beings are entertaining, those with the elements exciting; it is an excellent and spirited sea yarn. The reader enjoys himself almost as much as the sailors; often, no doubt, a good deal more; and a large part of his pleasure consists in the agreeable reflection that he is not on that wild sloop himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 Ja 25 '52 500w

MILLAR, KENNETH (JOHN ROSS MACDONALD, pseud). Ivory grin. 240p $2.50 Knopf 51-13221

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:202 Mr 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 4 '52 230w

"Perhaps the plot becomes at the end too complicated and a little conventional; one would like to see Mr. Macdonald's excellent detective, Lew Archer, tackle a case at once simpler and psychologically more subtle. But for bitter hardness without viciousness, for warmth without sentimentality, for social meaning without sociological jargon, for prose style without mannerisms, this is a godsend alike to aficionados of the private eye and to straight novel readers." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p20 My 4 '52 150w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '52 80w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p4C J1 6 '52 40w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Rose's last summer. 245p $2.50 Random house

52-7152

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

"Farical mystery that has delightful characterization and a uniquely original plot to engender suspense." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 23 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:577 S 1 '52 60w

"Mrs. Millar in this highly effective kickshaw turns from her sober, mordant mode back to that zany vein she explored in some of her earliest books. The consequence is ebullient mishmash that muddles death, humor and the tangle of situation that makes farce into one of those rare tales that manages to be funny about grue and satisfactorily mysterious too." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 16 '52 140w

"As a pure whodunit this may have slight weaknesses; the solution is neither quite believable nor strictly fair, in a technical sense. But the plot is an ingenious one—so ingenious that even a hint might betray it." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p51 N 23 '52 80w

"May be a little hard to follow through the home stretch, but there are pleasant passages along the way."

+ New Yorker 28:191 N 29 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 7 '52 60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:30 N 29 '52 20w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Vanish in an instant. 245p $2.50 Random house

52-5144

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 15 '52 150w

Kirkus 19:689 D 1 '51 80w

"This is a book so forceful that one reads greedily and at the same time it is the sort of book that is even more rewarding when remembered after it has been read." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 1 '52 250w

"As a formal detective story it's unusually satisfactory. . . But the subtlety and depth of the characterizations, the evocation of the wintry Michigan background, the simple beauty of the prose, and the moving quality of pity and irony behind the plot makes this as outstanding a piece of straight fiction as it is an intriguing puzzle." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Je 1 '52 270w

"A very satisfactory item."

+ New Yorker 28:88 J1 12 '52 110w

"This is a brilliant, sensitive and rewarding novel." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 8 '52 60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 30w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT. Letters; ed. by Allan Ross Macdougall. 384p $5 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-7291

A selection from the letters of Edna St Vincent Millay, written over a period of fifty years, from 1900-1950. Index.

"One finds in it much beauty, seriousness, and noble enthusiasms; much wit and boisterous high spirits; and not a little flippancy and playful nonsense, too."

+ Atlantic 191:87 Ja '53 80w

Booklist 49:57; 124 O 15 '52; D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 30w

"At times one may be annoyed with the marvelous Miss Millay—the child who never quite grew up—and yearn to see more of the mature woman. . . Nevertheless, the total impression of the letters is satisfying; for they reveal a kind, generous woman—witty, brave, unswervingly loyal, and hating passionately any form of injustice and cruelty." R. L. Lowe

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 9 '52 240w

Kirkus 20:524 Ag 15 '52 220w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:2070 D 1 '52 130w

"Let us begin with the ungracious, and obvious, remark that no doubt a much better collection of Miss Millay's letters might have been made. Some items in this book should have been left out, and perhaps many items that are not in the book should have been put in. . . This said, we have, nevertheless, much to be grateful for." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 175:432 N 8 '52 500w

Reviewed by K. G. Chapin

New Repub 127:24 D 8 '52 500w

"The Edna St. Vincent Millay legend was compounded of the effect of her best early verse and the atmosphere of the twenties. There was beside the public image, a more private personality about whom one sometimes heard from the poet's friends. That more private personality is revealed, warmly, richly and with unstudied distinction in these remarkable letters." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 2 '52 1350w

"The letters of Edna St. Vincent Millay have been edited by Allan Ross Macdougall with so much skill and care that they may serve as her autobiography and self-portrait." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p4 N 2 '52 700w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 30 '52 240w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Sat R 35:26 N 15 '52 500w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springfd Republican p7C N 23 '52 500w

Time 60:118 N 17 '52 900w

MILLER, DENNING DUER. Wind, storm and rain; the story of weather [with a pref. by Ernest J. Christie]. 177p il $3.95 Coward-McCann

551.5 Weather

52-11704

"The son of the late Alice Duer Miller tells the whys and wherefores of weather, a subject that captivated his attention during the Second World War, when he was a Naval Air Navigator. Astronomy, geology, volcanoes, oceans, rivers, mountains, the Gulf Stream, and so on—all have their say in dictating the course of weather, and the author, after discussing these engrossing collateral matters, goes into weather prediction, which, he frankly admits, is 'no more than a well-substantiated estimate, a highly educated guess.' He tells the reader how to read weather maps in order to follow the tactics and some of the strategy of the elemental forces always in conflict above us." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 49:119 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:32 N '52 10w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 14 '52 300w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 550w

Nation 175:535 D 6 '52 50w

"The author brings his experience as a writer of basic training manuals for Navy flyers to the task of simplifying a difficult science, and does it effectively and usefully. . . The book is a mature and successful effort to popularize the intricacies of a subject that touches everyone. If he has ever wondered seriously at the whys of the weather, a reader owes himself this book." W. R. Connole

+ N Y Times p45 N 9 '52 220w

New Yorker 28:190 N 15 '52 120w

"Some, of course, are satisfied with the weather-wisdom of the man who, when asked anxiously 'Do you think it will stop raining?' replied 'It always has'. If that much knowledge of the weather is enough for you, then maybe this book is not your cup of tea. But a lot of people would like to know more, provided the knowledge is sensibly and plainly communicated. Such readers will find Mr. Miller's book just what they want, and good reading to boot." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '52 500w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Proud young thing. 310p $3 Appleton

52-7522

Historical novel, the background of which is eighteenth century Charleston, South Carolina.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

"More fiction than fact here and more romance than adventure—good for the girls." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:341 O '52 40w

Kirkus 20:234 Ap 1 '52 250w

"The author's entire cast is very much on its toes—and the sense of reality is maintained to the dramatic finale." Anne Clay

+ N Y Times p23 Je 8 '52 130w

MILLER, HENRY. Books in my life. 323p il $5 New directions

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Books and reading

[52-12736]

"The purpose of this book, which will run to several volumes in the course of the next few years, is to round out the story of my life. It deals with books as vital experience. It is not a critical study nor does it contain a program for self-education." (Pref) No index.

"Shrewd, witty, reasonably calm, much more American than Continental, and full of quotable passages. . . Printed in Ireland, book has several 'typos'; it is dated, for instance, from 'Bug' Sur instead of Big Sur, Calif. (It also attributes Phedre to Corneille and calls Mrs. Fiske 'Lilly.') E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1650 O 1 '52 130w

"This is a quite unorthodox book. And why not? It is one man's reactions to what he has read. Those who respect Mr. Miller as a writer and personality will find it of great interest, and others will read it with the curiosity due a human being who is new and full of vitality." M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 2 '52 200w

"In The Books in my life, Mr. Miller turns away from the dramas of sex and is back in the whirlpool of literature. . . Naive personal revelations, passages of alternating conceit and humility, written in a prose that varies from a loud whine to a brassy arrogance, are interspersed with fine and endearing appreciations of other writers. Three of the main figures, who recur again and again in these pages, are Rider Haggard, Blaise Cendrars and Jean Giono. About these writers Mr. Miller produces pages that are well beyond the scope of most contemporary critics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p434 Jl 4 '52 460w

MILLER, JANE KATHRYN. Belgian foreign policy between two wars, 1919-1940. 337p $5
Bookman associates

327.493 Belgium—Foreign policy 51-4901

"Traces the diplomatic aspects of Belgium's foreign policy from the Peace Conference and its aftermath of reparations and war debts, down through the shift to a policy of independence and its sequel. Contains a general chapter on Belgian politics, 1918-1940, and a 15-page bibliography." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 45:1225 D '51 40w

"Occasional but no serious errors of fact occur. . . Despite faults, Belgian Foreign Policy is an excellent volume with a voluminous bibliography, useful footnotes, and a good appendix, although the flow of the story is sometimes marred by the absence of maps and an excessive number of printing errors." R. T. Turner

+ Ann Am Acad 279:237 Ja '52 350w

"A comprehensive study of one small nation's search for security in a world of large antagonistic powers."

+ Current Hist 21:355 D '51 110w

Foreign Affairs 30:501 Ap '52 20w

"The volume is characterized by factual accuracy and thorough documentation. However, the reader misses that vital element which transforms the documentary fact into living history. At few points does the author seek to interpret the facts brought forth. . . It is possible, of course, that the events described could have been rendered more vivid had confidential documents been available, but even with the material at hand the author might well have indulged in at least some speculative interpretation." L. G. Cowan

+ Pol Sci Q 67:463 S '52 480w

"Miss Miller has specifically excluded colonial and commercial problems from consideration. With these exceptions, however the volume is admirably comprehensive."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:380 D '51 270w

MILLER, JOHN CHESTER. Crisis in freedom: the Alien and Sedition acts. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 253p $3.50 Little

973.44 Alien and sedition laws, 1798. U.S.—
Politics and government—1797-1801

51-14177

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"As a narrative, Crisis in Freedom manages to be entertaining despite the fact that Mr. Miller considers his subject to be Act I in the 'Tragedy of American Freedom.' . . One final comment, concerning the author's scholarship. It appears to be extensive (particularly in newspaper and pamphlet sources of the period) rather than intensive. He adds very little that is new. Mr. Miller, on occasions, skims the cream from more original studies on the Alien and Sedition Acts and the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions. In this fashion the author makes rather free use of the path-breaking research of Mr. Frank M. Anderson and others, without adequate acknowledgment of his substantial indebtedness." Adrienne Koch

+ Am Hist R 57:985 Jl '52 700w

"Probably there exist no more carefully studied episodes in all American history than the Alien and Sedition Acts and their sequels, the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions. And yet this little book admirably justifies the research that has gone into it. By a meticulous examination of primary sources, particularly the newspapers of the period, Mr. Miller has made clear the tremendous influence that public opinion played in all these proceedings." J. D. Hicks

+ Ann Am Acad 280:179 Mr '52 370w

"Prof. Miller effectively transmits the spirit of the period and gives us the best single volume on these important events." C. L. Ver Steeg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 16 '52
140w

Reviewed by M. D. Howe

Harvard Law R 66:189 N '52 600w

Reviewed by R. G. McCloskey

+ New Eng Q 25:113 Mr '52 750w

Reviewed by D. B. Truman

New Repub 126:19 Mr 3 '52 410p

"Although there have been earlier studies of the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798, this is the first book-length treatment of the subject. And it is a good one. Professor Miller has based his study almost wholly upon manuscript sources, contemporary newspapers, pamphlets, memoirs and letters, and has presented his material with a literary skill that makes for firstclass reading. Numerous and well-chosen quotations from the sources add much to the colorful and dramatic character of the study." W. R. Waterman

+ Pol Sci Q 67:626 D '52 470w

Wis Lib Bul 48:33 Ja '52

MILLER, LLEWELLYN. Reducing cookbook and diet guide; il. by Ava Morgan; introd. by James R. Wilson; foreword by Frances M. Telsey. 262p $2.75 Crowell

616.39 Compulence. Diet. Cookery 52-7036

Cookbook for dieters which includes appetizing meals for the whole family. The recipes and menus show originality and are not difficult to follow. Index.

Booklist 48:314 Je 1 '52

"Most of the recipes have zest and imagination, and are presented in a simple, easy-to-follow form. I am sure that you will never sit down to a meal without enthusiasm, or get up from a meal still hungry, if you use this cookbook." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 25 '52
180w

"I'm sold on this one. It really is persuasive—and practical—and offers variety."

+ Kirkus 20:109 F 1 '52 200w

"Some cooks have the idea that a reducing diet must be dull. Miss Miller thinks otherwise, so her useful recipes are filled with imagination and variety. . . Good index." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1202 Jl '52 40w

"Llewellyn Miller has written a book that deals realistically but encouragingly with the subject of weight-gaining. There is nothing faddy about her method nor are the diets so expensively protein as to be beyond the reach of most budgets. The author knows good food and by emphasizing flavor and variety, through the use of herbs, spices and the many non-fattening foods, she plans meals that defy any suggestion of a diet." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 110w

MILLER, MRS MADELEINE (SWEENY), and MILLER, JOHN LANE. Harper's Bible dictionary; by [the authors] in consultation with eminent authorities; drawings by Claire Valentine. 851p col maps $7.95; thumb indexed $8.95 Harper

220.3 Bible. Whole—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 52-7292

A reference book for Bible students, ministers and teachers. It "is encyclopedic in scope, including in its treatment archaeology, geography, chronology, biography, and other related fields. Authors' previous equipment as biblical scholars was aided by consultation with many authorities and supplemented by nine trips to Bible lands during the six years spent in preparation of volume." (Library J) Maps.

"Makes good use of the results of critical scholarship with reference to both the Old and the New Testament. The volume contains many illustrations from photographs, drawings, tables, diagrams and maps. It is sufficiently compact and manageable for convenient use, and sufficiently full to meet ordinary needs." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:1440 D 10 '52 50w

"An incalculable storehouse of current and usable information anent the archaeology, the geography and the chronology of the Bible and of Bible times." R. E. Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 490w

Reviewed by F. L. Wilson

Churchman 166:15 D 1 '52 110w

"Protestant ministers, Bible teachers and students will find this an indispensable reference book."

+ Kirkus 20:762 D 15 '52 210w

"Essential tool for biblical study. . . A welcome addition to libraries of ministers and laymen interested in biblical study, and indispensable to public, college, and seminary libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:1903 N 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by Chad Walsh

N Y Times p11 D 21 '52 20w

"A new and up-to-date Bible dictionary, filling a real need for such a comprehensive and handy reference book." K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 35:10 D 20 '52 90w

MILLER, MARY BRITTON (ISABEL BOLTON, pseud). Many mansions. 215p $3 Scribner

52-12830

On her eighty-fourth birthday, in 1950, Margaret Sylvester looks out from her New York hotel room and decides to take stock of her life. The starting point is her unpublished novel, telling the story of her life. In a series of back flashes she relives her life. At the end of the day the phone rings, but Margaret is dead.

"The plot resorts to a stock twist of the Gothic romance, and from the over-all perspective it is terribly flimsy. But the writing has a poetic vividness, a truth of feeling that make the book memorable. I find Miss Bolton's prose style completely spellbinding. If novels were still read aloud, I am sure she would gain a large following." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:110 N '52 160w

"The discriminating reader will delight in [this] finely written, sophisticated novel."

+ Bookmark 12:34 N '52 30w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 120w

Kirkus 20:429 J1 15 '52 200w

"This is a slight novel, charming and well-told, when it might have been great and tragic. . . Delicate as a water color, it is too skillfully done to be sentimental though told in retrospect through an old lady's eyes, too sure in its psychology. Well recommended." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 77:1504 S 15 '52 60w

"The miracle in this writing is that, where another novelist would have made a pot-pourri of such a medley, Miss Bolton, wonderfully, makes it all part of her design. Her short book, her vision which affirms, is never blurred by an excess of matter." Ernest Jones

+ Nation 175:383 O 25 '52 950w

"Throughout the book, throughout the pages of reminiscence, the old woman as she is today . . . dominates the narrative. It is by virtue of the excellence of her portrait that some of the other characters seem wooden and lifeless." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 21 '52 550w

"It isn't a very interesting life, and Miss Bolton has failed to tie its events together or to deepen them with larger meaning. At the end you have the feeling you have been told a story that is true and deeply felt, but without particular significance." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 36:57 Ja 3 '53 200w

"A fine book." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:6 winter '53 400w

MILLER, MAX. Always the Mediterranean; with a foreword by Walter Karig. 256p $3.50 Dutton

940 Mediterranean sea. U.S. Navy. 6th Fleet 52-10059

A travel book based on the author's trip with the American Sixth Fleet which operates in the Mediterranean giving the American sailors a chance to see the Mediterranean people in their homes, and those people a chance to see the Americans abroad.

Booklist 49:65 O 15 '52

"The author of 'I Cover the Waterfront' has widened his coverage in his latest book to embrace the shore line of the Mediterranean sea. And Max Miller is still at his thoughtful, philosophical best 20 years after his reportorial classic." Robert Nicholas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 21 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:435 J1 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by R. P. Bartolini

Library J 77:1500 S 15 '52 50w

"It is an unpretentious book, with some observations on the scarcity of dogs in Istanbul sandwiched between a brief disquisition on Florence Nightingale and the first visit of an American warship to the Sublime Porte in 1800. . . There is some reportage—a visit to an Arab refugee camp, for example—but the principal effort seems to be to set the present functions of the 6th Fleet against the varied and troublous background of the Mediterranean. The reader might wish for rather more about the fleet itself than the occasional vignettes which Cmdr. Miller supplies." Harry Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 S 21 '52 400w

"Commander Miller, who wrote 'I Cover the Water Front,' served with the Sixth Fleet, the naval force cruising in the Mediterranean without a home port—a Flying Dutchman fleet, always at sea. The experience stimulated him to do a little reading, but not much thinking. He has produced one of the oddest history books on record. It lies midway between Mark Twain's 'Innocents Abroad' and a comic strip." William McFee

N Y Times p35 S 21 '52 350w

Sat R 35:45 S 20 '52 120w

MILLER, MERLE. Judges and the judged; foreword by Robert E. Sherwood; introd. by Ernest Angell, and Patrick Malin [report for the American civil liberties union]. 220p $2.50 Doubleday

384.5 Radio broadcasting. Television broadcasting. Communism—U.S. 52-5749

"An analytical case-history of the origin, development and effect of the 'blacklist' in the field of American radio and television and in the advertising industry that uses these media." N Y Times

Booklist 48:290 My 15 '52

Reviewed by John Beaufort

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '52 650w

Reviewed by J. M. O'Neill

Commonweal 56:177 My 23 '52 1250w

Kirkus 20:114 F 1 '52 180w

"Recommended for censorship, radio, television and theatre collections." George Freedly

Library J 77:718 Ap 15 '52 170w

Management R 41:407 Je '52 10w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 126:21 Ap 28 '52 650w

"The Judges and the Judged' is not merely of interest to the radio and television interests. It is of interest—immediate interest—to every one. The fear it details is not a legitimate fear of Communism. It is a fear that the American processes are not adequate to the challenge which confronts them, a fear that democracy will no longer do." W. F. Kerr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 20 '52 1450w

Reviewed by J. B. Oakes

N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '52 1200w

"Mr. Miller has treated his unpalatable theme dispassionately and with admirable fairness, and his book makes informative, if melancholy, reading."

+ New Yorker 28:146 Ap 26 '52 200w

MILLER, MERLE—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 15 '52
 700w

Reviewed by Francis Biddle
Sat R 35:32 Ap 12 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Theatre Arts 36:4 Je '52 200w

"For those concerned about civil liberties, the report holds an intrinsic interest. . . The book has obvious value as a case study to students of various of the less attractive aspects of American life."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:310 S '52 240w

MILLER, MRS OLIVE KENNON (BEAUPRE),
 ed. My book house. [new ed] 12v il $69.50
 Bk. house for children

808.8

50-14984

"The work under review is a revision of the set first published in 1920 in six volumes, and revised in twelve volumes in 1932 and again in 1937. Reviews of the 1925 printing and 1937 edition appeared in the Subscription Books Bulletin for October 1930 and July 1939 respectively. The set was re-examined and new material was evaluated in the Bulletin for April 1947. In general, the purpose, scope, content, and arrangement remain much the same as in the 1937 edition, with the addition of some new selections, illustrations, prefatory material, and indexes. . . My Book House contains stories, poems, and selections from the classics, arranged in the several volumes according to age levels. . . The three indexes in volume 12 provide much reference help and include numerous see and see also references." Subscription Bks Bul

"The plan back of My Book House is sound, and the books will undoubtedly provide many hours of happy and profitable reading for any child who may own them. Though many great writers of the past appear in its pages, and dozens of favorite stories and poems are included, the faults of earlier editions are still apparent. Perhaps, the most obvious shortcoming is unevenness in quality of text and illustrations. . . A second criticism of the set concerns the lack of balance between the old and the new, between factual and imaginative. . . Yet, in spite of its defects, My Book House offers much good material in convenient form. Though not recommended for libraries, will be valuable in homes where a set of books is preferred to individual volumes." Elizabeth Hodges

+ — Library J 76:783 My 1 '51 600w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 28 '51
 650w

"As in the earlier editions of My Book House, the new edition contains much useful and interesting material. The new three-part index is a valuable addition to the set. However, because most of the selections, abridgments, and adaptations for older children are presented in much the same style and often seem lacking in appeal, and because most are generally available in standard and complete versions in school and public libraries, the Committee's previous evaluations of the set still apply. My Book House will be of value and is recommended as a means of introducing good reading to children in homes that do not have easy access to school and public library collections."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 22:69 O '51 1800w

MILLER, RICHARD IRVIN, Fundamentals of track and field coaching. 271p il $4.75 McGraw

371.74 Track athletics

51-12631

"Designed for high-school track and field coaches, giving an authentic and concise picture of coaching in the various items of field athletics. Each event is illustrated by photographs of a national or world champion in action, with principles of human mechanics employed. Special emphasis on 'What-How-Why' of warming up." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:42 O 1 '52

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
 + Library J 77:1408 S 1 '52 40w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. See Wade, B.

MILLER, WILLIAM, ed. Men in business; essays in the history of entrepreneurship.
 350p $5 Harvard univ. press

338.7 Capitalists and financiers. Entrepreneur
 52-5037

"Twelve essays by practicing economists and historians give the history and development of business in the Western world in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, with the part played by some individuals. . . For the general reader as well as the student of business or social science." Booklist

Reviewed by R. S. Smith

Am Econ R 42:624 S '52 700w

"This book is important both for its interpretive content and its clear-cut adherence to a sound framework of social-economic theory. Such studies will advance history as a discipline in the direction of becoming a genuine social science by compelling more scholars to take up the issue of infusing more theoretical content into the solution of historical problems. Little of literary charm need be sacrificed in the process." Harvey Wish

+ Am Hist R 57:996 Jl '52 800w

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Am J Soc 57:516 Mr '52 800w

"What The Center is trying to do is to write economic history with psychological sensitivity, to write it with an awareness of methods used, to write it with stated criteria of relevance and levels of verification. Not all the contributors of this volume have succeeded in this, but most of them have tried to, and some, especially David S. Landes, R. Richard Wohl, and Miller himself have succeeded as well as anyone now handling historical materials on men in business and in society. It is not an economist's book about business and business men; it is, being a book on the sociology of business, about economics as a sphere of social structure." C. W. Mills

+ — Am Soc R 17:504 Ag '52 700w

Booklist 48:208 Mr 1 '52

"Informing and entertaining, each essay is well written and carefully documented."

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 14 '52
 70w

Foreign Affairs 31:152 O '52 50w

"The scholar or the man of business will find reading this book a rewarding experience." J. A. Batchelor

+ J Pol Econ 60:456 O '52 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:600 Ap 1 '52 100w

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 18 '52 190w

"This collection of essays should appeal to many groups interested in business leaders and the economic and social role of business leadership. Most of the essays are well written, and some are worth reading for their stories alone. Taken together, they are a useful addition to the literature on business men." L. V. Chandler

+ N Y Times p14 F 3 '52 400w

"Written largely by men and women no more than thirty years old, the symposium represents scholarship of a high order. The editing of the volume by William Miller succeeds in giving the collection an unusual air of continuity."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:162 Je '52 230w

MILLIN, SARAH GERTRUDE (LIEBSON)
 (MRS PHILIP MILLIN). Burning man. 310p
 $3.50 Putnam

Kemp, Johannes Theodorus van der—Fiction
 52-9845

Character study of a Dutch gentleman, Johannes van der Kemp. As a young officer he was known for his licentious behavior. In middle life he was converted and went as a missionary to the heathen of South Africa.

But his past followed him and the end of his life was no better than his youth.

"In bare outline, this fictional recreation of a tortured figure in South Africa's history, Johannes Van der Kemp, might have had the makings of a great creative achievement. The rudiments are there. . . But the story falls of its own weight through the studied artificiality of style."

— + Kirkus 20:610 S 15 '52 160w

"The author's objective treatment of her characters fail to enlist the reader's sympathy for them. Not recommended." H. R. Forbes
— Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 50w

"Mrs Millin evokes the primitive force of the man, his tormented sincerity, as vividly as the conflict of light and darkness equally in him and in the world through which he moves with fanatical passion from failure to failure." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 29 '52 140w

"There is a sombre nobility about 'The Burning Man'; it is admirable for the way it makes no concessions; the religious and political backgrounds are part of the close-knit narrative; the scenic background is equally integrated. In clear, clenched prose, with never a word wasted, Miss Millin offers us the portrait of a man whose God would not give him up for lost, or for saved either, no matter how long or how hard the battle." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 7 '52 470w

"Mrs. Millin's style is lush at times, but more often her phrasing is frugal and her viewpoint is distant. Fueled with a true and tragic story, but lacking high-test fiction's hot immediacy, her book burns less than her burning man." Robert Lowry

+ — N Y Times p52 N 23 '52 240w

"This story is so scrappy—at times the author seems to have merely pieced a few facts together—that it doesn't make much sense. There is certainly very little opportunity to get a clear idea of the characters, except that most of them are extraordinarily unsympathetic."

— New Yorker 28:186 N 15 '52 120w

"Mrs Millin makes a genuine and living character out of the hero of these disjointed adventures, and in addition, because she writes with deep knowledge of the South African mind, this interesting evocation of the past is made very relevant to the modern world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Ag 29 '52 350w

MILLS, CHARLES. Alexandrians. 675p $4 Putnam

52-5270

Chronicle of the lives of the inhabitants of a small town in Georgia, beginning with the founding of Alexandria in 1839, and ending with the celebration of its centennial. The central figure is Anna Anderson Redding, a daughter of one of the founding families.

Booklist 48:339 Je 15 '52

"Mr. Mills' scheme is an ambitious one, but he carries it off with triumph; his village and its villagers come alive." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 175:390 Ag '52 430w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 8 '52 400w

"The author's handling of his characters is good as far as it goes. Even the least important of them exist in a very real sense in the mind of the reader. But it is in range rather than development that the author shows his ability. . . The easiest criticism to make about a six hundred and seventy-five-page book is that it is too long. The validity of that charge, however, depends on the author's purpose in writing the book and how well he fulfills it. . . Although there is not much danger of The Alexandrians being taken as an important commentary on the American scene, it is still an interesting and readable one." J. G. Dahms

+ Commonweal 56:254 Je 13 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:265 Ap 15 '52 280w

"Wonders of wonders, here is a long, full-blooded novel of the South with few psychopaths. . . Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 77:894 My 15 '52 100w

"The author's presentation, in these terms, of the pageantry of a hundred years of a Southern town is a remarkable achievement. Alexandria was a town which was touched by no great events; symbolically the great storm struck only its outskirts. But the author gives its life an interest and an excitement of its own, and, at his best, endows the story with something far more than passing interest." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 1 '52 650w

"The multiplicity of characters might seem overwhelming, but such is Mr. Mills' shrewd skill of character identification, the reader follows them through the excitements of decades with easy recognition. They are so real that they become as familiar as the people one grew up with in his own home town." Hudson Strode

N Y Times p4 Je 1 '52 900w

"The story is so leisurely, and so faithful in its reporting of births and deaths and marriages, that we cannot help feeling toward the end that the lives of all these people are lasting too long and that we are hearing too much about them."

New Yorker 28:117 Je 14 '52 130w

"You'll find 'The Alexandrians' an unsentimental distillation of the past, one of those long backward glances that help us to see the present in sharper focus." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Jl 6 '52 700w

"Honest and unpretentious novel. Patiently read, it tells a great deal more about what the South was really like than 'Gone with the Wind' and it deserves praise for not emphasizing events that read well and represent inaccurately. But there are too many characters too little in focus, as in a graduation picture of a high school class you never knew. Emotional identification is rarely possible." H. C. Webster

+ — Sat R 35:21 My 24 '52 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:254 S '52 280w

MILLS, CHARLES WRIGHT. White collar; the American middle classes. 378p $5 Oxford

323.32 Middle classes. U.S.—Social conditions 51-5298

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Mills is grappling resourcefully with the big questions of our day, and even if this reviewer is inclined to give somewhat less portentous answers to some of them, he agrees that the questions are central, the research methods fundamentally sound." David Riesman

+ Am J Soc 57:513 Mr '52 1850w

Reviewed by Lloyd Harrington

Canadian Forum 31:254 F '52 1300w

"Mr. Mills' study of the 'American middle classes' is thoroughly contemporaneous in its recognition of the striking changes that have occurred in recent years in the status and condition of various elements of our society. It is both a wholesome and an instructive book." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:163 F 6 '52 150w

"This book is must reading for every one interested in capitalism or social problems." A. W. Taylor

+ Churchman 166:17 Ap 15 '52 270w

Foreign Affairs 30:334 Ja '52 70w

"White Collar is a book that really should be read twice. The style is so pungent and the material so dramatically presented that the reader follows the story with the anticipation of the outcome of a good novel. For Professor Mills is a persuasive gent, a scholar of high caliber, a writer of a powerful prose—and, unless the reader takes a second look, he's liable to go through life shedding tears

MILLS, C. W.—Continued
for the lost, lonely people of Professor Mills' private version of the white collar world." Lawrence Stessin

+ — Management R 41:136 F '52 1050w

Reviewed by John Cates

New Statesman & Nation 43:239 Mr 1 '52 1550w

"The non-academic reader for whom 'White Collar' seems to be intended must wish for more exciting and human chapters, such as 'The Biggest Bazaar in the World' and 'White Collar Girl'; more specific examples or case histories to illuminate the statements. Undoubtedly Mr. Mills has done much field work. One feels that he has carried his findings into an ivory tower and then refined them with rhetoric." Roger Burlingame

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 27 '52 550w

"Dr. Mills accepts the popular imputations of class, status, and prestige. He apparently fails to see that, in the long run, scientists and teachers are the most powerful agents of social change; he also slights the good features of mass-communication agencies, the far-reaching influence of community agencies in desirable change, and the important role of collective ownership. The insights and heuristic values of the study are, however, noteworthy, and persons with a well-developed background in social science cannot afford to ignore it."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:401 D '51 280w

Reviewed by Reuel Denney

Yale R n s 41:474 spring '52 800w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Year in, year out; with decorations by E. H. Shepard. 215p il $3.50 Dutton

824

52-10441

A collection of miscellaneous essays arranged by months thruout the year. Subjects are varied, from G. B. Shaw, the income tax, and price of sponges, to Shakespeare, and the poetry of Calverly.

Booklist 49:102 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 10w

"Rarely does an author writing a book of this type succeed in making his readers laugh and think and possibly act as he does, but then Mr. Milne has always been successful in accomplishing these things."

+ Cath World 176:319 Ja '53 120w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 16 '52 120w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 600w

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 10 '52 240w

"Like all good miscellanies of its kind, 'Year In, Year Out' presents the character of the writer in the form of unsorted clues, and A. A. Milne's, so revealed, is an engaging one. He has perfect vision out of a small window; and even when he looks through a bigger one the slight distortion can be very charming." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 16 '52 650w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '52 440w

New Yorker 28:68 D 27 '52 50w

"Mr. Milne's perennial charm brushes his pages with magic and makes blossom the roses we thought we had picked years ago. Many of his thoughts have been our thoughts too, but he hands them to us like a freshly-cut bouquet, and they smell amazingly sweet. A little too sweet perhaps for concentrated sniffing, for Mr. Milne is a tolerant man, and his rebukes are delivered more in sorrow than in anger." Virginia Graham

+ Spec 188:754 Je 6 '52 390w

Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 260w

"Year In, Year Out, while demonstrating the versatility of its author, confirms his erudition, his wit and his liberalism."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Je 27 '52 600w

MILNE, LORUS JOHNSON, and MILNE, MARGERY JOAN (GREENE). Famous naturalists; il. with photographs. 178p $2.50 Dodd

925.74 Naturalists—Juvenile literature 52-8118

Series of short biographies of fourteen outstanding naturalists. Those included are: Antony van Leeuwenhoek, Carl Linnaeus, Gilbert White, John James Audubon, Louis Agassiz, Charles Darwin, Alfred Russel Wallace, Henry David Thoreau, J. Henri Fabre, John Burroughs, John Muir, Frank M. Chapman, David Fairchild, Thomas Barbour. An introductory chapter is a discussion of the field. Full-page portraits of each scientist. Index.

Booklist 48:253 Ap 1 '52

"It is welcome for those who want more than the bare bones of an encyclopedia entry and less than a full-length biography."

+ Bookmark 11:162 Ap '52 80w

"Aside from a gross error in the opening chapter, which states that Marco Polo returned from China in 1254, this little book is interesting and worthy in every way." N. S. Chasteen

+ Library J 77:541 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Here is a useful book for high school students, suggesting by inference some fascinating and unusual careers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 6 '52 240w

Reviewed by G. O. Blough

N Y Times p30 Je 8 '52 40w

Sat R 35:63 My 10 '52 30w

Wis Lib Bul 48:179 Jl '52

MILORADOVICH; MILO. Home garden book of herbs and spices. 236p $2.95 Doubleday

635.7 Herbs. Spices 52-5747

Handbook on the growing, preparing and preserving of culinary herbs and spices. Companion volume to the author's The Art of Cooking With Herbs and Spices (Book Review Digest 1950). List of where fragrant herb plants and seed may be purchased. Index.

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:207 Je '52 30w

"A wonderful compendium—for anyone who wants to cultivate them or cook with them and so written as to definitely stimulate the interest of the passing page flipper."

+ Kirkus 20:114 F 1 '52 180w

"Will delight both the gardener and the cook." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1203 Jl '52 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 1 '52 80w

MILTON, JOHN. Poems; the 1645 ed. with essays in analysis by Cleanth Brooks and John Edward Hardy. 353p $5; text ed $3.75 Harcourt

821 Milton, John 51-8878

"This book by two professors of English consists of two parts. The first is a reprint of the 1645 edition of Milton's poems. The second and much longer part contains analytical studies of the individual poems, an examination of Milton's poetic development during his early career, several appendices, a bibliography, and an index. The prime purpose of the editor-critics has been 'to provide a study of the earlier poems, based on the relevant scholarship, but critical in emphasis,' to which end have been employed 'the methods of modern criticism, especially the techniques of close reading and organic structural analysis.'" Sat R

Booklist 48:233 Mr 15 '52

"A fairly strong new vein in the gold mine for Milton scholars."

+ Kirkus 20:185 Mr 1 '52 180w

"The student of Milton—it would have to be a student—who applies himself to this volume will be confronted with serious business, both in the matter and the manner. . . The editors offer in the end not final judgment but only 'preliminary scaffolding, or, to change the metaphor . . . rough contour maps of the poems.' Yes, but. The trouble is that a tractable temperament might well be completely satisfied with what he has been told; the maps are so detailed, the lines so firmly drawn, that it would take a resilient and hardy spirit to insist on further exploration."

Nation 174:436 My 3 '52 140w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 27 '52 40w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 120w

"Professors Brooks and Hardy are industrious, ardent, intelligent soldiers in an endless campaign that must never be abandoned merely because final, complete victory is impossible." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:41 Je 21 '52 550w

"The Brooks-Hardy volume is chiefly remarkable as an application of some of the techniques of the new criticism to Milton's early poetry. Minute examination of the text—of which, for better or for worse, there has never been any lack in the editing of Milton—is here conducted in the interest of discovering and evaluating poetic meaning, divorced as far as possible from all historical and biographical considerations. . . . This edition is in many respects a beautiful job. It will win enthusiastic readers for Milton among those heathen who have hitherto denied him." J. H. Hanford

+ Yale R n s 41:635 summer '52 400w

MINDSZENTY, JOSEF, cardinal. Face of the heavenly Mother [tr. from the German by Charles Donahue]. 150p $3 Philosophical lib.

232.93 Mary, Virgin

51-14179

"The Cardinal gives a clear, popular exposition of Mary's position, chosen as she was 'before the hills she was brought forth, called from all eternity by the Creator,' to be Theotokos, Mother of God. He shows, too, Mary progressively revealed through the Scriptures: in the Old Testament she is prefigured in all the great Hebrew women, in Sara, the mother of Isaac, in the beloved Rachel, the chaste Susanna, the heroic Judith, the queenly Esther. The Cardinal discusses her position as defined by the Council of Ephesus in 431, and shows the mother-saints following their great exemplar. He concludes with a chapter on Mother Church." N Y Times

"The beautiful anecdotes within these pages will reappear in many a Protestant sermon. For the church historian the volume is of little value; for the tired minister, a treasury." C. H. Moehلمان

+ Crozer Q 29:94 Ja '52 180w

Kirkus 19:630 O 15 '51 110w

"The translation by Charles Donahue of Cardinal Mindszenty's 'brief Mariology,' as he himself calls it, is timely both because of the Cardinal's own present position as a witness in prison for his faith and because of the tremendous repercussions the papal pronouncement of the Dogma of the Assumption has had among non-Roman Catholic Christians." Anne Fremantle

N Y Times p34 N 25 '51 160w

"Although this beautifully written book may be especially appealing to Catholics, it also holds a deep and valuable message for all Christians and for people of other faiths as well." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p12A Ja 6 '52 150w

MINTZ, ILSE (SCHUELLER) (MRS MAXIMILIAN MINTZ). Deterioration in the quality of foreign bonds issued in the United States, 1920-1930. 100p $2 Nat. bur. of economic res.

332.6 Bonds. Investments, Foreign 51-3407

"There has been much confusion in the minds, not only of the lay public, but of many economists as well, concerning American foreign lending in the nineteen-twenties. [This is an analysis of the situation] Chapter I deals with the volume of foreign lending. . . . Chapter II describes the construction of the 'default index' based on those issues which, in 1937, had defaulted in whole or in part at any time since their dates of issue in the nineteen-twenties. . . . The remainder of the book constitutes a quite successful effort to explain the reasons for this deterioration in the quality of foreign loans." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This is a welcome addition to the literature on private United States long-term lending to foreign governments during the interwar period. The usual analysis of defaulted loans has focused on economic conditions at the time of defaults. This volume, in contrast, deals with 'the relation between conditions at the time of issue of loans and their quality, their ability to stand the test of depression.'" Virgil Salera

+ J Pol Econ 59:541 D '51 600w

"Brief but intensive and capable analysis."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:260 S '51 180w

MIRSKY, REBA PAEFF. Thirty-one brothers and sisters; il. by W. T. Mars. 190p $2.95 Wilcox & Follett

52-13782

"The book tells the adventures of 10-year-old Nunura, daughter of a Zulu chief, and her thirty brothers and sisters. A true tomboy in a culture which forbids women to take part in men's activities, Nunura proves that a girl, too, can be brave and daring. Her courage is rewarded when she is permitted to go on an elephant hunt with the men and boys." N Y Times

Booklist 49:146 D 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 23 '52 150w

Commonweal 57:172 N 21 '52 50w

+ Kirkus 20:701 N 1 '52 180w

"Recommended." Anne Izard

+ Library J 77:1908 N 1 '52 70w

"The story value and character point made are less striking than the unusual information, which makes us feel far more humanly sympathetic toward these primitive people. Such a book has its obvious uses in elementary schools and libraries, well foreseen by the author, who is on the staff of City and Country School, New York." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 140w

"This is a fascinating account of daily life on the veld, filled with details of tribal customs and descriptions of the country. Children who read about the lovable Numura will learn that boys and girls are much alike the world over." E. H.

+ N Y Times pt2, p35 N 16 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:198 D 6 '52 60w

MISES, RICHARD, edler von. Positivism: a study in human understanding [tr. with the collaboration of the author by Jerry Bernstein and Roger G. Newton]. 404p $6 Harvard univ. press

501 Science—Philosophy. Logical positivism. Language and languages 51-12079

"The present book by the Gordon McKay Professor of Aerodynamics and Applied Mathematics at Harvard University is a systematic exposition of an eminently reasonable and moderate positivism, and steers clear of the extreme claims often advanced by professed positivists." (New Repub) Index.

"This is an important book, equally valuable as an explanation and critique of science and as a good tempered but resolute challenge to the competence of religion and nonhedonistic ethics. It might well be read by every seminarian in the land." C. F. S. Virtue

+ Christian Century 68:1437 D 12 '51 650w

"Von Mises is keenly aware of the present limits of reliable knowledge, and of the tragic inadequacy of current intellectual techniques to many of the capital problems of the day. His book is nevertheless a staunch espousal of rational methods of inquiry in all departments of human concern, and it voices a mature and well-reasoned confidence in the power of such methods to decrease progressively the crucial areas of our ignorance. No one who reads it will credit the frequent but tiresome charge that positivism marks a failure of nerve or a decadence in thought." Ernest Nagel

MISES, RICHARD von—Continued

+ New Repub 125:19 N 26 '51 1000w

"It is a real pleasure to have this volume now in English. Here is a brilliant and erudite mind roaming over all the fields of human knowledge . . . and examining them all from the vantage of a mature and careful doctrine." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R 35:35 Mr 22 '52 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ap 11 '52 550w

MITCHELL, LEONARD JAN. Luchow's German cookbook; the story and the favorite dishes of America's most famous German restaurant; with an introd. and il. by Ludwig Bemelmans. 224p $3 Doubleday

641.5 Cookery, German 52-5764

"Contains more than 200 authentic German dishes, from hering salat [herring appetizer] to himbeeren kuchen [raspberry tart]. There's a wonderful recipe for liver dumplings and sauerkraut, for kassler rippen [smoked loin of pork], and for potato pancakes. There are illustrations and an introduction by Ludwig Bemelmans, and the book is liberally sprinkled with anecdotes of stage, musical, and literary stars who frequent Luchow's." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

"It is a book to read as well as use in the kitchen." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 23 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:543 Ag 15 '52 90w

"All in all, it is a handsome compendium of the best in German cooking, the best of Luchow's." M. A. Kriendler

+ N Y Times p32 N 23 '52 400w

"Anyone who has ever eaten in Luchow's will enjoy the introductory chapters, the recipes and the wonderful Ludwig Bemelmans pen-and-ink drawings scattered through the book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 2 '52 500w

MITCHELL, MARGOT (FINLETTER). Busy girls' cookbook; pictures by Alanson. 84p $1.90 Coward-McCann

641.5 Cookery 52-7359

Not very many recipes but a few general hints, some simple and easy dishes, some more elaborate, employing wine and spices, all for small numbers.

"Slight as this beginner's book is, it is valuable. There is variety in the selection of recipes and though MM sometimes depends too much on the knowledge of the young cook, in her directions, the intelligence of the cook will overcome the omissions. Good buy for library or individual." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1203 J1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon

N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 30w

"If I were a busy girl, I would eat up this slim little eighty-four page volume, spotted with amusing sketches by Alanson Hewes. As a busybody I am loony about it." Lawton Mackall

+ Sat R 35:69 Mr 8 '52 60w

MITRANY, DAVID. Marx against the peasant; a study in social dogmatism. 301p $4.50 Univ. of N.C. press

323.3 Marx, Karl. Peasantry. Communism 51-4252

"In this volume, Mr. Mitrany discusses the very important, but generally neglected, role of the peasant in the rise of Communism. He points out the strange paradox in which a political ideology based on proletarian revolution has consistently, in 1948 as in 1917, come into power through the revolt of affected peasantry. This reliance on the peasant class in the early stages of the revolution has led, in each case, to the necessity for using force to maintain power in the later stages, since Marxian philosophy is inherently alien to the interest of the peasant, just as that ideology itself rejects the peasant as an instrument of revolution." Current Hist

"In general, there is discernible something of a physiocratic bias in the work. It may be argued that the author tips the scale, perhaps too far, in favor of the peasant in an effort to redress the imbalance that exists on the subject in the social science literature. But these are blemishes which detract little from the solid merits of the book. And not the least of its merits is the luminous style that makes this scholarly book delightful reading." Lazar Volin

+ — Am Pol Sci R 45:1197 D '51 1600w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 11 '52 180w

Current Hist 21:356 D '51 90w

Foreign Affairs 30:678 J1 '52 30w

"Recommended for larger educational and public libraries." H. H. Bernst

+ Library J 77:46 Ja 1 '52 150w

"Professor Mitrany has written a book of the first importance, one of those rare books which starts new thinking on a hackneyed subject." A. J. P. Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:439 O 20 '51 1050w

Reviewed by Milton Sacks

Pacific Affairs 25:319 S '52 230w

Reviewed by Norman Rosenberg

Pol Sci Q 67:635 D '52 460w

"I know of no other book from which Western diplomats can gain so much knowledge and wisdom on how to meet and how not to meet the challenge of Communism in the essentially backward and peasant countries of the world." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R 35:25 Je 14 '52 750w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff

Social Forces 31:177 D '52 260w

"The book itself and the full and interesting notes at the end contain a wealth of information on the peasant movements of Eastern Europe. Even if Professor Mitrany is perhaps at times too generous in his judgement of the leaders and policies of these movements, this is a valuable and much-needed corrective to the flood of ignorant and often dishonest abuse which has been cast at them in recent years." Hugh Seton-Watson

+ — Spec 187:544 O 26 '51 800w

"Dr. Mitrany has an unrivalled knowledge of the smaller countries of eastern Europe and has access to sources which are too often a sealed book to western scholars, and when he rids himself of his obsession with Marx he writes illuminatingly."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p743 N 23 '51 1800w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:285 S '52 240w

"The theme of this important and stimulating book is the enduring power of a dogma and its capacity to warp the thoughts and actions of those who surrender to its influence. . . This bare sketch can only suggest the outlines of the thesis which Mitrany has developed with insight, wisdom, and a remarkable mastery of the neglected peasant literature of Eastern Europe. The story he has to tell is of more than European interest. It is written in a spirit of warm sympathy for universal peasant aspirations. In this age of peasant awakening in Asia and elsewhere, it should serve as a reminder that the agenda of agrarian reform can still turn in more fruitful directions than the social dogmatism of Marx." Merle Fainsod

+ Yale R n s 42:143 autumn '52 800w

MITTELHOLZER, EDGAR. Children of Kaywana. 511p $4 Day

52-9609

"A tale of life and death in British Guiana in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Most of the story is constructed around the life of Hendrickje van Groeneweg, a cruel and violent woman who is almost as malevolent at fifteen as she is at eighty." New Yorker

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 7 '52
360w

"A savage symphony which is not without its raw vitality."

Kirkus 20:380 J1 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery
Library J 77:1405 S 1 '52 90w

"A violent book. It has all the subtlety of a pile-driver; but the sheer narrative power, the daring prodigality with which Mr. Mittelholzer piles dramatic shock upon shock carries the reader along as surely as did the more cultivated artistry of the former novel. Sadism is the essential subject. . . Scenes of sedition, rape, incest, flagellation, mutilation and castration crowd Mr. Mittelholzer's pages. Those who remember the gentler approach to sex in 'Shadows Move Among Them' may be shocked at the exclusive emphasis here on its brutality." E. J. Fitzgerald

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 24
'52 600w

"At first shocked, then titillated, then bored, and finally just benumbed, this reader tried to think of some form of evil, depravity, perversion, cruelty or torture which the van Groeneweg family did not inflict with considerable gusto, usually upon one another; the list never got beyond a couple of items. One cannot help suspecting that Mr. Mittelholzer hoped to make historical facts go down easier by larding them heavily with sex. It struck this reviewer as being so overdone that, for once, the saintly characters seemed far more interesting than the sinners." V. L. Warren

— N Y Times p29 S 7 '52 440w

New Yorker 28:71 Ag 30 '52 60w

"Sensuous and violent historical novel, a witches' brew of untamed sex and brutality." Oliver Harrison

— Sat R 35:16 Ag 23 '52 400w

"'Children of Kaywana' packs a tremendous emotional and literary shock, but is there not a boundary which should not be crossed by a novelist in subjecting his readers to such a blood bath of horrors?" L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 400w

"The story is very well told, with vivid descriptions of the natural world; the incidents are themselves exciting, and rather more than the usual share of the obscenity which is customary in historical novels with an American setting is introduced naturally. But—and it is a very big but—Mr. Mittelholzer does not seem to be at home with the English language as it is spoken in England. . . The very tough goings-on are related in a flat, guide-book style which sometimes makes them funnier than the author presumably intended."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Ap 4 '52
400w

MIZE, JOHN TOWNSEND HINTON. See International who is who in music

MODLEY, RUDOLF, and others. Pictographs and graphs: how to make and use them. 186p $4 Harper

311.2 Statistics—Graphic methods 52-5725

"An earlier version of this book, published in 1937 under the title How to Use Pictorial Statistics [Book Review Digest 1937] explained a then little known technique for presenting and dramatizing statistical information. The new volume is a complete, up-to-date guide to the now highly developed technique of creating and using pictographs and graphs. The authors discuss the theory of graphic treatment, the selection of symbols, sources and uses of statistical material and its adaptation to a particular audience, the pictographer's tools, and the preparation of final art work." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 49:71 O 15 '52

"Clear, cogent explanation of such aspects of visualized information as good pictorial symbols and charting methods."

+ Bookmark 12:7 O '52 20w

Management R 41:557 Ag '52 50w

Special Libraries 43:418 D '52 20w

MOEHLMAN, ARTHUR HENRY, and ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, eds. Comparative education. 630p maps $4.50 Dryden

370 Education

52-6263

"A comparative education textbook with sections devoted to Africa, the Arab countries, Turkey, India, China, and Japan." (El School J) Partial contents: Education in the United States of America, by A. H. Moehlman; Education in Latin America, by G. I. Sánchez; Education in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, by Herbert Schueler; Education in France, by G. F. Kneller; Education in Italy, by G. F. Kneller; Education in Germany, by A. H. Moehlman; Education in Czechoslovakia, by J. S. Roucek; Education in the Soviet Union, by W. H. E. Johnson; Education in Africa, by M. M. Chambers; Education in Arab countries of the Near East, by Douglas Rugh; Efforts at internationalism in education, by Emil Lengyel. Index.

"A list of several of the most favorable characteristics would include: consideration of all continents, the employment of authoritative collaborators, frequent and convincing comparisons, restraint in the use of tabular data, sound philosophical interpretations, factual substance from general history that is not excessive or pedantic, no display of prejudices nor exploitation of bias, unity of purpose and design throughout the 630 pages, and adherence to a clear-cut professional aim by the editorial team. A few of the physical features, beside the nine maps which are particularly attractive and valuable, deserve special reference." C. D. Champlin

+ El School J 52:536 My '52 750w

School & Society 75:32 Ja 12 '52 30w

MOLEY, RAYMOND. How to keep our liberty: a program for political action. 338p $4 Knopf
320.973 [342.73] U.S.—Politics and government. Collectivism 51-11984

"Since Mr. Moley's participation in the Brain Trust of the New Deal, his political views have undergone considerable change. After 40 years of observation he has come to the conclusion that the middle interests of America, which constitute a majority, should take militant action by enlisting and training workers to suppress the threat of socialism and restore the rights of the individual." Booklist

Reviewed by R. E. Lane

Am Pol Sci R 46:895 S '52 240w

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

"Mr. Moley's thinking is exciting and challenging, along with being sound. . . Seldom is writing on political thought exciting or lasting. In these days, when individual liberty is threatened by state domination, Mr. Moley has forged a political book with the fire of Thomas Paine, the cold analysis of Niccolò Machiavelli, and the warmth of Abraham Lincoln." Walter Trohan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 9 '52
360w

Foreign Affairs 31:156 O '52 60w

Kirkus 19:721 D 15 '51 280w

Reviewed by George Soule

Nation 174:606 Je 21 '52 1300w

"His book is an ambitious tract and can be read with relish by those who are not afraid to admit classifying themselves as 'conservatives.' It differs from many other books of its type by making its appeal strictly to the reason, ignoring the short-cut of prejudice and emotionalism." August Heckscher

MOLEY, RAYMOND—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 23 '52 850w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '52 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 6 '52 250w

"Moley is a scholarly, experienced, and thoughtful public figure. The present publication is a sober addition to the growing literature of the 'new conservatism,' which should perhaps be called the 'new Federalism.' It is part of the great re-assessment of the aims and methods of our American policy that is going forward as the world crisis continues and grows more intense." H. D. Lasswell

+ Sat R 35:46 Mr 15 '52 950w

"This is often a thoughtful book. That might be expected, since the author is a gifted scholar as well as a good journalist. He is, however, so obsessed with the failings of recent administrations that his scrutiny of what has been going on in the United States recently is extremely lopsided. Conservatives who share Mr. Moley's views will appreciate the support he gives to their position. More objective readers will find the study has missed a real opportunity to make a contribution to political analysis and that it amounts to little more than the personal political testament of a man who does not like the way things have been going." Donald Derby

Spring'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 400w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:171 Je '52 210w

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER).

Where away? il. by Joshua Tolford. 241p $3.50 Houghton

52-5913

"Patience Little's parents had been gone over a year when she heard that they were going around the Horn a second time and wouldn't be back till another spring. Patience and her friend, Cleon, stowed away on a schooner, hoping to join the Pandora in Havana. But their adventure took them, too, around the Horn in pursuit, and almost ended in tragedy, with a fire at sea and Cleon gone. Miraculously, Patience found her parents." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) For ages twelve and older.

Booklist 49:112 N 15 '52

"A splendidly paced sea adventure, profusely illustrated."

+ Kirkus 20:410 J1 15 '52 160w

"As full of danger, excitement, and adventure as one could ask."

+ Library J 77:1739 O 15 '52 40w

"This is a good story of sailing ships for adventure-loving girls of around twelve. The many fine pictures by Mr. Tolford are handsomely lithographed." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 9 '52 120w

"A warm and sassy story, this has a somber note at the end which emphasizes the fortitude required of anyone who follows the sea." Isabelle Lawrence

+ N Y Times pt2, p12 N 16 '52 130w

MOLNAR, FERENC. Romantic comedies; eight plays. 331p $4 Crown

894.5112

52-5983

"These one-act or three-act plays, covering a long and prolific career, are newly revised and rewritten and appear here in authorized translation. Only two have been commercially produced in the U.S. The plays are: Actor from Vienna, President, Waxworks, Anniversary dinner, Blue Danube, The good fairy, Arthur, Game of hearts." Booklist

Booklist 48:317 Je 1 '52

"Highly recommended for drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:534 Mr 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 25 '52 60w

"While none of them matches his best plays of an earlier period, they are, nevertheless, highly playable, given the kind of expertness and worldly charm one associates with the actors of Vienna and Budapest. They reveal, too, the great Hungarian playwright's attachment to a world where nothing is quite so important as knowing which brand of champagne to order, and nothing so pathetic or minor as a money-grubbing middle-class domesticity." H. H.

+ Sat R 35:28 J1 5 '52 160w

MOLONEY, JAMES CLARK. Battle for mental health. 105p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

618.92 Infants—Care and hygiene. Parent and child 52-83

"Dr. Moloney is already well known in psychiatric circles for many articles in professional journals on the subject of infant training on the island of Okinawa and in this country. In the present little book, he writes in favor of the principles of the Cornelian Corner. This is an organization of psychiatrists, psychologists, and social workers in Detroit dedicated to the better emotional care of infants." Ann Am Acad

"This reviewer feels some disappointment that the positive approach indicated in the preface was not maintained through the book. For readers with some psychoanalytic background and interest in anthropology, there is much food for thought. Already troubled mothers, without such background, should not be given this book without other definite help in easing their tensions. . . Undoubtedly the author is deeply concerned for the welfare of the coming generations, but the keynote of the book is heard more clearly in the word Battle than in Battle for Mental Health." M. T. Ross

+ Am J Pub Health 42:600 My '52 180w

"Few child psychiatrists and psychoanalysts would disagree with these aims and means, but some question might be raised about Dr. Moloney's way of advocating them. . . An obstetrician who reads page 65 . . . will probably never get beyond that page. Less tactless language would gain more readers and adherents." R. A. Clark

Ann Am Acad 281:230 My '52 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 16 '52 170w

School & Society 75:15 Ja 5 '52 30w

MONAGHAN, JAMES. Great rascal; the life and adventures of Ned Buntline. 353p il $4.50 Little

B or 92 Judson, Edward Zane Carroll (Ned Buntline, pseud.) 52-5003

The life story of Ned Buntline, born Edward Zane Carroll Judson in Stamford, New York in 1823. "Judson wrote under the name of Ned Buntline and married sundry wives under the name of Judson. In his time he was almost as famous as Mark Twain and led a life even more fabulous than the one he created for William F. Cody as Buffalo Bill. . . He was one of the most prolific authors of literature for the masses during a period of nearly forty years before his death in 1886. Ned was one of a stable of writers kept by the firm of Street and Smith, publishers who supplied a part of the growing market for dime novels." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Monaghan has followed Ned Buntline through a long, sinuous life of literary productivity and general rascality. He writes in good style and tells an interesting story. Possibly his book might have been a better contribution if he had explored a bit the type of American mind which absorbed the old ten-cent thriller and patronized such rapid theatricals as Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show." T. D. Clark

+ Am Hist R 58:192 O '52 290w

Booklist 48:113; 170 D 1 '51; Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 20w

"In a biography as astonishingly frank, lively, and entertaining as its subject, Jay Monaghan presents a topflight bit of Americana—the almost incredible figure of a man after a fast buck—a man that even Ned Buntline, with all his extravagant imagination, would have hesitated to create." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 6 '52 480w

Kirkus 19:655 N 1 '51 210w

"Essential for students and collectors of the dime novel." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 77:145 Ja 15 '52 120w

"Mr. Monaghan's research was thorough, his style is journalistic, his book a slight but interesting addition to the history of low life in America."

+ Nation 174:114 F 2 '52 80w

"The reader of this book is in for a wonderfully good time. I think that Mr. Monaghan himself must have enjoyed writing it. He has to keep Ned's several wives on the run, trying to catch and hold the genial rogue, or to tap him for alimony. He treats the windy talk of his talented charlatan with good humor, and plays Ned's incongruities for all they are worth. They are worth a good deal in the way of gorgeous comedy." Stewart Holbrook

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 6 '52 750w

"Mr. Monaghan's book is more than the biography of an incredible rascal. It provides an insight into the social history of the period covered, especially into the seamy side of American journalism." L. B. Wright

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 6 '52 850w

"An exasperatingly ill-organized biography. . . Possibly because of the nature of Buntline's literary output, which doesn't bear much analysis, Mr. Monaghan has concentrated his attention chiefly, and admirably, on Buntline's personal rascality. . . All this is good, highly colored stuff, but it isn't quite strong enough to stand up under the careless treatment given it here."

New Yorker 27:77 F 2 '52 200w

"For those who enjoy picaresque biography when it also presents a rich slice of solid Americana, the book will be just what they've been looking for." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 10 '52 950w

"Jay Monaghan has searched far and wide for Buntline items and has found an astonishing number. The story is cloudy at times, for at several points Monaghan has to rely on the most undependable of Judson sources, Judson's own writings. Still, the over-all picture is clear." F. H. Harrington

+ Sat R 35:12 F 23 '52 500w

Time 59:98 Ja 21 '52 800w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:119 Je '52 240w

Wis Lib Bul 48:35 Ja '52

MONEY-KYRLE, ROGER ERNLE. Psychoanalysis and politics; a contribution to the psychology of politics and morals. 182p $3 Norton

320 Political science. Political ethics

[51-13082]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"It is impossible to read an essay of this kind without obtaining many valuable insights into human growth, and to gain new hope concerning the long-run impact of self-knowledge upon the democratization of human affairs. However, it is odd to find an experienced student of human affairs who believes in the 'either-or' of rational persuasion or force in dealing with hostile ideologies." H. D. Lasswell

+ — Ann Am Acad 280:218 Mr '52 330w

Reviewed by Mark Kanzer

Nation 174:138 F 9 '52 330w

Reviewed by C. W. Mills

New Repub 126:19 Ja 14 '52 600w

Reviewed by E. H. Rhyne

Social Forces 30:478 My '52 400w

MONEY, trade, and economic growth; in honor of John Henry Williams [contributors, Léon H. Dupriez and others]. 343p $5 Macmillan

330.4 Williams, John Henry. Economic policy. Finance 51-5128

"Essays by seventeen professional associates of the distinguished Nathaniel Ropes Professor of Political Economy at Harvard, first Dean of its Graduate School of Business Administration, 1937-47. The subjects follow in general the lines of Professor Williams' own thinking and writings, and are grouped under three major headings: 'International Economic Organization and World Trade'; 'Factors Influencing the Level of Domestic Economic Activity'; 'Monetary Theory and Central Banking.'" (Library J) Index.

"The standard of all contributions is uniformly high. They are, however, of widely varying difficulty, so that the volume is likely to be read almost exclusively by professional economists and central bankers—which is a pity, as I would like to see a far wider audience for a paper such as that of Mason. But those who do read the essays will be well rewarded." H. H. Villard

+ Am Econ R 42:407 Je '52 1900w

Foreign Affairs 30:330 Ja '52 100w

"Despite the breadth of topics, the book has been held to 325 pages. Consequently, economists have an opportunity with a reasonable expenditure of effort to expose themselves to the stimulation of some of the best minds in the profession. They will find these papers not only of interest to themselves but in many cases suitable for assignment to students in second-tier courses. This collection of papers is a fitting tribute to a respected and influential figure." E. C. Simmons

+ J Pol Econ 60:161 Ap '52 450w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1338 S 1 '51 80w

MONS, HANS MAHNER. See Mahner-Mons, H.

MONTAGU, ASHLEY. See Ashley-Montagu, M. F.

MONTAGUE, KATE BIGELOW. Send the wise wind. 247p $3 Day

52-5372

Novel about the life of the Igorots of the mountain provinces of Luzon. The central character is Kendik, an exceptionally intelligent young girl of the tribe. Many of the customs and ceremonials of the Igorots are brought out during the course of the story. The author lived in Luzon from 1930 to 1935.

Kirkus 20:85 F 1 '52 150w

"If one feels that the picture of Igorot life it gives is a somewhat prettified and idealized one, it is at the same time an attractive display of an entirely consistent culture, and Kendik is a warm-hearted, impulsive, thoroughly 'modern' heroine." J. J. Espey

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 4 '52 500w

"Although at first this story of decades ago seems overweighed with details of tribal customs, habits and traditions, Mrs. Montague builds her narrative into one of mounting excitement with successive crises of head-hunting, drought, disease and civil strife. All too often the Igorots have been dismissed as 'Filipino head hunters.' Mrs. Montague helps put their record straight in her sympathetic portrayals." M. J. Tweedy

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '52 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 9 '52 300w

Reviewed by Benjamin Appel

Sat R 35:15 Mr 29 '52 800w

MONTGOMERY, JAMES ALAN. Critical and exegetical commentary on the books of Kings; ed. by Henry Snyder Gehman. (International critical commentary) 575p $5 Scribner

222.5 Bible. Old Testament—Kings

"The present work follows the usual plan: introduction, dealing generally with text and sources; chronology and history, followed by a running commentary verse by verse on the English translation, interspersed with critical notes on the Hebrew text in small print for the use of specialists." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Indexes.

"The present work has long been expected, and its publication now is biblical news of a high order. We have hitherto had in English but inadequate works on the books of Kings; at last this situation is richly corrected. Here is a great commentary, notable in its exhaustive scholarship, its sane and cautious judgment, its deep insights and, with all this, a direct and compact presentation of its store of knowledge." W. A. Irwin

+ Christian Century 69:779 J1 2 '52 800w

"There are a few sheer errors. . . Most unfortunate of all, Professor Tiele's recent work on the chronology of the kings of Israel and Judah has wrecked the whole chronological scheme of the commentary. . . At the same time, too much stress, giving a false impression of the whole work, must not be laid on faults either of omission or of commission. The commentary contains an immense amount of information, lucidly and concisely set out, which is for the most part quite inaccessible to the ordinary reader, and throws much light, which all students of the Old Testament will find useful and instructive, on innumerable points which have puzzled and perplexed them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 Ag 1 '52 420w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Wapiti, the elk; il. by Gardell Danø Christensen. 186p $2.50 Little

Elk—Legends and stories 52-8339

"Life story of an elk from babyhood to maturity, when he successfully battles his rival and assumes leadership of the herd." Library J

Booklist 49:93 N 1 '52

Reviewed by Vernon Ives

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 30 '52 150w

"Here is a fine report on the life of an elk, written with the eye of a true naturalist and adorned with enough plot and authentic emotion to make it more than a scientific account."

+ Kirkus 20:603 S 15 '52 120w

"Recommended for older boys." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 70w

"It is hardly believable, but boys and girls will like it." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52 50w

"Most of this tale is of the 'adolescent' Wapiti. . . Finally Wapiti finds that his squeal has turned into an earth-shaking bellow. Armed at last with a majestic set of antlers, he challenges the old herd bull. That battle alone makes his book as exciting as it is informative." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times pt2, p16 N 16 '52 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '52 90w

"It is a convincing, well-written story and is obviously authentic in every detail. It is for the older boys and girls."

+ Sat R 35:66 N 15 '52 90w

MONTROSS, LYNN. Rag, tag and bobtail; the story of the Continental army, 1775-1783; maps and end papers by Alice Wesche. 519p $5 Harper

973.344 U.S. Army—History, U.S.—History—Revolution 51-11939

A history of the American revolutionary war, based upon personal reports of eye witnesses, including British and Americans, loyalists and rebels, privates and generals. Index.

"The book will interest a large general audience; specialists will find it of value, and certain of its interpretations challenging. To satisfy professional requirements, there is a fifteen-page bibliography, three fifths of it contemporary materials." Thomas Woody

+ Am Hist R 57:982 J1 '52 650w

Booklist 48:226 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Clarence Ver Steeg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 30 '52 370w

"Lynn Montross has had a long career as journalist and novelist. To the abilities developed by such experience he adds the knowledge that appointed him to the Historical Division of the Marine Corps. These put together make for superb historical writing." Denham Sutcliffe

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 13 '52 750w

Kirkus 19:722 D 15 '51 200w

Nation 174:352 Ap 12 '52 50w

"'Rag, Tag and Bobtail' is a stirring military history of the Revolution. . . Mr. Montross, the author of the excellent 'War Through the Ages' (1944) and at present an official Marine Corps historian, writes with scholarly authority on military matters. He also has a lively prose style as a result of long years devoted to journalism and fiction writing." Douglass Adair

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 13 '52 800w

"'Rag, Tag and Bobtail' ought to dispel any illusions that military history is for experts only. From beginning to end, it is a rapid-paced narrative interspersed with shrewd analyses of the men who commanded the armies and of the battles they fought, and it is distinguished throughout by wit, urbanity and literary skill." J. C. Miller

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '52 850w

New Yorker 28:119 Mr 15 '52 160w

"Lynn Montross' view of the tattered Continental army during the American Revolution is a fresh, interesting one. . . He is particularly good at debunking the hoary old belief that Benedict Arnold was a terribly misunderstood but excellent general who was driven to treason as the bitter consequence of his being unrewarded for his victories." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '52 200w

Reviewed by C. P. Nettles

Sat R 35:16 My 24 '52 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:162 Je '52 200w

MOORE, ALMA (CHESNUT). How to clean everything; an encyclopedia of what to use and how to use it; il. by Tom Funk. 238p $3 Simon & Schuster

648 Cleaning

52-9136

A household encyclopedia, alphabetically arranged, which tells how to clean practically anything found in the home. Bibliography.

Booklist 48:291 My 15 '52

Bookmark 12:7 O '52 20w

"The book sells itself on sight. Every home needs a copy." A. C. A.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 11 '52 30w

Reviewed by E. K. Weaver

J Home Econ 44:738 N '52 200w

"A steady item for a predictably permanent audience."

+ Kirkus 20:64 Ja 15 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 J1 20 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52 100w

MOORE, CHARLES ALEXANDER, ed. Essays in East-West philosophy; an attempt at world philosophical synthesis. 467p $5 Univ. of Hawaii press, Honolulu 14, Hawaii

104 Philosophy 52-861

"The second East-West Philosophers' Conference held at the University of Hawaii in 1949, of which this book is the report, limited itself to problems of immediate concern to philosophers. The papers and conclusions of seminars deal with topics in methodology, metaphysics, ethics, and social philosophy. Differences between the ten participants from the United States and those from India, China, and Japan center in the nature and value of intuition and logic. There is wider agreement about human value—specifically love, freedom, and responsibility, and the need for fuller understanding between East and West." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by G. W. Cunningham

Ethics 63:71 O '52 260w

"A note of optimism prevails, and one is encouraged by the earnest efforts of these scholars to learn from each other and to bridge the traditions which separate them."

+ Sat R 35:53 Je 14 '52 230w

"Judging the book as a whole, it may be said to move toward understanding, without sentimentalism or propaganda."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:143 Je '52 240w

MOORE, DAVID WILLIAM. Sacramento Sam; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 208p $2.50 Crowell

51-5492

"The first-person story of a cabin boy on a brig out of Boston in 1848 who finds himself digging for gold in California. It is far more real, lusty, and adult than most gold-rush stories, and should please many boys of twelve to fourteen who are fed up with the usual western." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"An agreeable adventure yarn."

+ Kirkus 19:295 Je 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 76:1575 O 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 10 '52 60w

"The book is fairly exciting, but it suffers from a lack of development. Good possibilities are opened up but never realized. What might have been a rousing climax never makes the grade because the characters are too weak to carry the load. As usual, Henry Pitz does a nice job in illustrating the story." M. P. A.

+ — Sat R 35:37 Ja 12 '52 120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:42 Ja '52

MOORE, JOHN CECIL. Dance and skylark. 215p $3 Macmillan

52-11199

An English village is all upset over a beauty contest and historical pageant combined. Stephen Tasker, a secondhand bookseller, is caught in the midst of these difficulties, until a friend from Texas comes breezing in and everything smooths out.

"When an English village undertakes to produce an historical pageant with purely local talent, anything can happen, and in this delightfully trivial novel it happens on every page."

+ Atlantic 190:78 S '52 200w

Booklist 48:369; 378 J1 15 '52

"It's a rich assortment and it adds up to a delightful Forever England potpourri." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 3 '52 330w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52 150w

"Nothing in particular but something in a special, small way, deftly and definitely British. For fun indeed, with exaggeration but never with malice."

+ Kirkus 20:328 Je 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by W. B. Ready

Library J 77:1303 Ag '52 120w

"Mr. Moore's story is undistinguished, but he writes with sensitivity, his characters are people, and he pokes mild but affectionate fun at all of them."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 14 '52 280w

"Because the author keeps a poet's eye on the proceedings, the book is often a hymn to beauty. There are glimpses of loveliness and moments when, through all the goings-on, you can hear the Pipes of Pan in the long green hills. The book is a nice assortment of entertainment, all pleasurable." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 3 '52 320w

"A pleasant, if somewhat obtrusively merry, little tale about the pleasures and irritations that attend the preparations for a town pageant in England."

New Yorker 28:75 Ag 9 '52 30w

"This is a lively, lovely book, and shows that some—Mr. Moore is country born and bred—can still find the old England, unre-generated, unbeaten, and with no knowledge of despair." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R 35:17 Ag 9 '52 800w

Reviewed by Barbara Worsley-Gough

Spec 185:424 Mr 30 '51 130w

"An attractive feature of the festival is a beauty queen contest with two distracting contenders. How to judge between them will be something the reader will like to discover for himself. It is evidence of the author's skill. Love is the dominant theme of the book, plus humor and gaiety." S. M. Neal

+ Springfield Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 240w

"The heart of anyone who has ever been involved as a participant in a 'pageant'—that theatrical nonsense which has remained the specialty of the perfervid amateur over the years—will go out to John Moore's novel. . . They're always more fun in retrospect than at any time. And that's the pleasant virtue of Dance and Skylark: it catches all the earnest craziness of the amateur pageant, the more amusingly because you don't have to watch the thing." Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:9 O '52 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p177 Mr 23 '51 210w

MOORE, LILIAN, and ADELSON, LEONE. Old Rosie; the horse nobody understood; il. by Leonard Shortall. 33p $2 Random house

Horses—Legends and stories 52-5855

When Rosie got to be too old to draw the milk cart to the station Farmer Dilly decided she should live a life of ease in the pasture. But Rosie missed the companionship of the family and her attempts to join them got her into a series of escapades, each funnier than the last, but the very last one made a heroine of her.

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 27 '52 120w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 30w

"Old Rosie becomes a welcome addition to the collection of storybook horses. The amusing pictures are as full of action as the text and in themselves indicate clearly why Rosie had to leave her work and how hard she tried to get back to it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:102 Ap '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11 '52 230w

"The story is told in simple sentences and an easy vocabulary. It has action, humor and sentiment, all of which are reflected in Leonard Shortall's illustrations. It will be fun for children to read to themselves and equally nice to read aloud." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '52 130w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52 90w

MOORE, MARGARET EILEEN. Willie without; il. by Nora Unwin. 86p $2.25 Coward-McCann

52-7126

Willie was a worm and because he was a worm without ambition he became known as Willie Without. In this fantasy for young readers it is related how Willie lost his hat, how he became acquainted with Wog, the frog, and how Wog took him to Hookie, the hat-maker, who made him a new hat.

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52
240w

"With delicious bits of satire in the deeper thoughts of its animal characters, this English fantasy, following Willie in his search for a new hat, offers fun for reading aloud. Nora Unwin's enchanting drawings heighten the personalities of Willie and his frog and caterpillar friends." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:108 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:124 F 15 '52 160w

"In spite of the very charming Unwin pictures, we feel that most young children would have no idea what it is all about. It may be clever, but it makes its whimsey carry too much social theory." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 160w

"There is more conversation than action, which probably will not endear this book to the average child, especially as the philosophic dissertations have quite adult overtones. Yet the story has a deal of pleasant nonsense, and a contagious feeling of well-being and contentment." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p28 My 25 '52 120w

MOORE, MARIANNE. Collected poems. 180p $3 Macmillan

811

51-14374

"This volume contains the 'Selected Poems' (1935), 'What Are Years' (1941), 'Nevertheless' (1944), and a handful of hitherto unpublished poems." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 48:145 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:182 My '52 30w

"The rhythm of these poems is finely varied. Miss Moore succeeds in that most difficult of all metrical performances: sustaining a steady rhythm while continually varying the line length." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 20 '52 370w

"The collection is, of course, the outstanding poetry book of the season. All, except those who 'are annoyed by provisos, detainments, and postscripts,' will be pleased with the notes she has appended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 174:113 F 2 '52 130w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal

New Repub 126:21 Ap 7 '52 600w

"Tact is a clever trap: taken far enough, it imposes a tyranny of its own upon behavior. It is a towering virtue as well, of course, but a very careful man can easily carry it to a point of parody. The paradox shows up a curious doubt in many critics as to how far they feel they ought to enjoy Marianne Moore's poems. The vindication of her verse, at any rate the best of it, is the way that in the end it clears this puzzle aside, and humbles the doubters." P. D. Smith

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:644 D 1 '51 750w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 27 '52 450w

"On every page the reader will find proof of Miss Moore's intelligence, sensibility and feeling; will experience her cool sense of structure, her mastery over the form of the whole poem." H. B.

+ N Y Times p10 F 3 '52 330w

"The book contains nine poems, hitherto uncollected, which, like the rest of her work, have appended notes. To read her notes is a special delight, for by their unexpected use of ordinary information they often enhance and become part of the poems themselves." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 28:65 Ag 2 '52 250w

"The publication of 'Collected Poems' is a happy event for anyone interested in seeing altogether for the first time the poetry of perhaps the greatest American woman poet of the last 30 years." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 F 3 '52 120w

"A modernist, Miss Moore is unequivocally a contemporary, whose satirical disquisitions are sharp, elliptical, and unexpected. . . There is an austere perfection in Miss Moore's speech as the imaginative image imposes itself in the lines she writes. She is the flawless worker, whose poems are individual attainments; gathered together they make a many-faceted appearance."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:12 D 29 '51 320w

"Like all American poets, Miss Moore is a born collector, and draws her facts, curious or otherwise, from natural history, museums and art galleries. She writes either in free verse or in irregular measures hinged, as it were, with rhyme. Often she reminds us of a tourist reading out extracts from a guide-book. . . In her charming and extensive notes, she mentions, conscientiously, the books, literary digests, lectures and illustrated periodicals from which she has culled, the facts arranged so neatly in her poems." Austin Clarke

+ Spec 187:714 N 23 '51 600w

"As Marianne Moore goes about her calm daily routine, her mind is often busy arranging words with the grace with which the Japanese arrange flowers: Marianne Moore is just about the most accomplished poetess alive. . . At her best, [she] writes poems for the eye as well as the ear. Arranged in exact syllabic patterns, and sprinkled with subtle internal rhymes, they are difficult to read aloud, and often sound a bit prosy. But on the page, as in The Mind Is an Enchanting Thing, her style is as elegant as a minuet."

+ Time 58:112 D 10 '51 400w

"The later work shows no very marked development or change of style, except for a rather more emotional and rhetorical manner in some poems dealing with the war. The same technique of objective description and Imagist precision persists throughout, mingled with the lively comments of an active though somewhat over-subtle intelligence. Perhaps the merit that the reader will be most ready to allow at once is a command of the concise and epigrammatic phrase."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p767 N 30 '51 1050w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:33 Mr '52 240w

MOORE, RUTH. Jeb Ellis of Candlemas bay; il. by William N. Wilson. 238p $2.50 Morrow

52-5069

A shortening and revision of the author's Candlemas Bay (Book Review Digest 1950) to make a story for grades eight and up. The sixteen-year-old Jeb Ellis has been made the hero, and the story is of his growing to maturity.

Booklist 48:199 F 15 '52

Kirkus 20:32 Ja 15 '52 160w

"Here are very real people, transposed from an adult novel to a fine book for both boys and girls of about twelve to sixteen." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '52 230w

"Condensing a novel is a ticklish business and not always a satisfying one, but in the case of Ruth Moore's popular 'Candlemas Bay' the operation is justified. . . A story which young people will find real and rewarding." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '52 180w

MOORE, WILBERT ELLIS. Industrialization and labor; social aspects of economic development. 410p $5 Cornell univ. press

331 Labor and laboring classes 51-12386

"The general problem set by this volume is to examine the motivations of factory workers as a part of the process of the industrialization of preindustrial societies. The aim is to ascertain the conditions under which workers in preindustrial areas respond to the opportunity for factory employment and the circumstances making for effective work." Am J Soc

"Some minor comments of a negative nature may be in order. There is a degree of illogic, which the author admits, in the categories used in the summary of literature, so that frequently the same things are said twice under different headings. The review of literature is not always critically selective, findings being generally taken at face value. . . The study should be worthy of an independent monograph, not limited by the purpose of this book. In sum, the volume has fewer weaknesses and more strong points than most. For its comprehensive review of literature and thirty-four page bibliography, it will be a major reference work and should be an aid toward research that is cumulative rather than disparate or repetitive. And it merits careful study as an effort to orient specific generalizations within a comprehensive theory of functionalism." R. H. Turner

+ — Am J Soc 57:518 Mr '52 1000w

"Scholarly and carefully written book." John Ise

+ Ann Am Acad 279:204 Ja '52 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:402 D '51 220w

"Moore's study of industrialization and labor is a solid piece of research on the processes by which labor in backward areas is drawn into industrial employment. . . Because it is a painstaking and heavy work, most readers may wish to begin with the concluding chapter in which the principal findings are summarized. Scholars will find much data and careful theorizing, and they should appreciate the unusually comprehensive bibliography." C. E. Lindblom

+ Yale R n s 41:302 winter '52 430w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. The traitors. 222p il $3.50 Scribner

364.13 [351.74] May, Allan Nunn. Fuchs, Klaus, Pontecorvo, Bruno. Spies 52-11797

A serious study of the backgrounds and histories of three members of the atomic bomb spy ring: Allan Nunn May, Klaus Fuchs, and Bruno Pontecorvo.

"The author is one of Britain's best journalists; and as a reportorial job his book is fascinating—offhand, I can't think of any recent thriller which competes with the drama of Klaus Fuchs. But as an attempt to 'explain' the traitors, Moorehead's book doesn't get very far." Charles Rolo

+ — Atlantic 190:90 O '52 380w

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Canadian Forum 32:210 D '52 210w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 24 '52 350w

Reviewed by Peter Lyne

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 30 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:393 Jl 1 '52 220w

"An exciting story, told by one of England's ablest reporters." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1404 S 1 '52 70w

"Despite the obvious gifts of its distinguished author, 'The Traitors' will probably create less of an impact in this country than it has in England. . . His book may well have allayed the British hunger for such details but, as far as Americans are concerned, he supplies little in the way of fresh information." Daniel Lang

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 7 '52 900w

"A short, workmanlike, and not very illuminating account."

New Yorker 28:89 Ag 16 '52 170w

"The Traitors' is a fascinating and well-written presentation of a vital current problem. It should be noted that portions of the book, particularly those dealing with Klaus Fuchs, were published earlier this year in The Saturday Evening Post." I. F. Reichert

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 27 '52 700w

"Mr. Moorehead tells the individual stories with brilliant success. He is at his best on the strange figure of Fuchs. . . Mr. Moorehead had the cooperation of the Atomic Energy Division of the Ministry of Supply, as well as the help of many scientists and officials who knew Fuchs; and he puts the bits and pieces into a coherent and compelling story. . . But Mr. Moorehead's attempt to generalize from the individual episodes to a theory of twentieth-century treason is perhaps less successful." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ — Sat R 35:13 S 6 '52 700w

Reviewed by Peter Fleming

Spec 189:136 Jl 25 '52 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p543 Ag 22 '52 1900w

Wis Lib Bul 48:212 S '52

MOOS, MALCOLM CHARLES. Politics, presidents, and coattails. 237p maps $4.50 Johns Hopkins press

324.73 Voting. Presidents (United States)—Election. U.S. Congress 52-13613

"How many Congressmen can ride into office on the President's coattails? That, Mr. Louis Bean has said, is the modern political counterpart to the medieval 'How many angels can dance on the point of a needle?' . . . Malcolm Moos, Professor of Political Science at Johns Hopkins University, has a go at this question. He doesn't answer it. What he does do is to present some interesting figures on the Presidential and Congressional vote since 1896. He also draws an occasional, cautious and highly controversial conclusion." N Y Times

Reviewed by Murray Snyder

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 O 26 '52 550w

"A timely and fascinating book." E. W. Kenworthy

+ N Y Times p3 O 19 '52 550w

"Instead of a dull book, jammed only with tables and charts, and valuable only to the student of voter trends, Mr. Moos has given us an amusing story of what happens and how it happens, and traces lines of voter action." L. L. L. G.

+ Sat R 35:14 D 27 '52 170w

MORAN, MABEL (O'CONNELL) (MABEL O'MORAN, pseud). Trail of the little Paiute; il. by Claire Davison. 189p $2.50 Lippincott

52-5105

A young Paiute Indian boy joins his grandmother in a journey thru Death Valley, in an attempt to reach California, where the grandmother was brought up. Thru countless hardships the two finally win their way to freedom, rescuing a little white child on the way.

Booklist 48:269 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:164 Ap '52 100w

"Feelingly, but without melodrama, the author clearly demonstrates the irreconcilable differences between white man and Indian which resulted in much shame for the former and tragedy for the latter. It is a good book for young Americans to read." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 13 '52 250w

"A swift-moving, well-written story." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:111 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:31 Ja 15 '52 150w

"Exceptionally good Indian story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 16 '52 360w

MORAN, M. O.—Continued

"As the story unfolds, we gain an intensely interesting insight into the customs and beliefs of the proud but doomed Falutes. This book will appeal particularly to young readers who enjoy Indian folklore." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 180w

"The standards of the Indians, their native dignity, their strength and endurance dominate the people around them. It is an interesting, often a moving story."
+ Sat R 35:61 Ap 12 '52 200w

MORAVIA, ALBERTO, pseud. See Pincherle, A.

MORENUS, RICHARD. Crazy-White-Man (Sha-ga-na-she Wa-du-kee) il. by William Lackey. 320p $3.75 Rand McNally
971.31 [917.131] Frontier and pioneer life—Canada 52-10416

In 1940 the author, at that time a radio script writer in New York city, was told by his doctor that he must live more quietly. Shortly thereafter he bought an island in the northern Canadian bush and lived there for five years. This is the account of those years.

Booklist 49:103 N 15 '52

Reviewed by August Derleth
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 19 '52 220w

"It is an exceedingly cheerful book even though its first half tabulates little but mistaken effort, disaster, and threats from an unsympathetic climate. . . I think there will be no difference of opinion about this muted cry from the blue, green, and white confessional under the northern lights. It is much more than a handbook of what not to do if one happens to be spending six years alone on an ice-beleaguered island. It is a vivid close-up of the Ontario bush—written down with the vividness and gaiety of a man who knew he was free. Its one drawback is lack of depth." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 23 '52 250w

"Told with restraint as regards himself, infectious enthusiasm for others, all leavened with humor. Appeal general, especially men. Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:1807 O 15 '52 100w

"This is recommended reading, for all advertising men, particularly."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 30 '52 130w

"Particularly in the second half of the book we wish that he would forego the easy work of telling us about the evil spirits known as wendigos, philosophical French-Canadians, remittance men, and similar stock characters of the fake bush, and give us more of the keen observation and sensitivity which he shows in his earlier descriptions. Fortunately, the quality of fresh observation and the ring of truth in the greater part of the book outweighs the falseness of the remainder." Robertson Davies
+ N Y Times p36 O 26 '52 320w

MORGAN, CHARLES. River line; a play. 166p $1.75 St Martins
822 [52-68251]

"The English stylist has dramatized his novel with the same title. The postwar reunion of the young American professor with the retired British naval commander and his French wife he had met in the underground escape route is guilt ridden by the memory of Major John Lang, whom they had mistakenly killed for a German spy. When Lang's half-sister, in love with the American, forgives them, they are united in a common absolution." Booklist

Booklist 49:86 N 1 '52

"Highly recommended to drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 77:2006 N 15 '52 20w

"The plot is powerful, the dialogue is on a high plane of intelligence, the theme is one that deeply concerns everybody." E. B.
+ New Repub 128:30 Ja 5 '53 170w

"The River Line is, at the heart of its narrative, intensely dramatic; at the heart of its meaning it is deeply reflective and even a shade mystical. . . Mr. Morgan's novel showed far more struggle. In the main there is little doubt that he has now come back to the medium best suited to the realization of a dignified theme."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p546 Ag 22 '52 600w

MORGAN, CLAIRE, pseud. Price of salt. 276p $3 Coward-McCann

52-8026

"The story of two attractive women whose love for each other precipitates decisions and courses of action which are outside convention, scorned by society, condemned by law. For Carol, it meant sacrificing her husband and child—for Therese risking her future." Library J

"Such a novel will inevitably receive mixed comments. While some may label it sensational, others will call it courageous. It is a straightforward, inoffensive story. Recommended for readers who do not find the homosexual theme unpleasant reading." Elizabeth Nichols

Library J 77:791 My 1 '52 80w

"Miss Morgan presents the issue of homosexuality as the right of individuals to lead a life that gives them satisfaction and does not harm others. Though she pictures it in less somber colors than that much talked of novel of an earlier generation, 'The Well of Loneliness,' the story of Carol and Therese points to the special limitations and frustrations of their relationship, which though different from those in marriage, are, Miss Morgan feels, no greater. This is a well-written novel but so concerned with its subject that it is likely to be read in the light of the reader's view alone." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 1 '52 420w

"Obviously, in dealing with a theme of this sort, the novelist must handle his explosive material with care. It should be said at once that Miss Morgan writes throughout with sincerity and good taste. But the dramatic possibilities of her theme are never forcefully developed." C. J. Rolo

N Y Times p23 My 18 '52 270w

MORGAN, THOMAS BRYNMOR. Faith is a weapon. 278p $3.75 Putnam

261 Communism and religion. Catholic church—Relations (diplomatic) 52-5279

"American foreign correspondent in Rome for over thirty years reports again on Catholic affairs in Europe and finds revival of faith the silver lining to Communist clouds. Mr. Morgan assesses impact of Holy Year, election triumph in Italy by anti-Communists, social and political forces as Popular Union, Catholic Action, Christian Democrats, Jockists; also anticlericalism and national churches. Special emphasis on Germany, France and Italy and personality of Pope Pius XII." (Library J) Index.

Cath World 175:399 Ag '52 200w

"Popularly written, enlivened by personal experiences, and although by non-Catholic, should receive cordial reception given previous books by Catholic reviewers. For general, adult circulation." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 77:890 My 15 '52 120w

MORLEY, FRANK VIGOR. Death in Dwelly Lane. 256p $2.75 Harper

52-7293

The quiet English countryside is stirred by a murder in which the murder instrument is a double-bass violin. The narrator is a famous mathematician, lately released from an American prison, after a term for tax evasion.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

"All of the elements of orthodox murder mysteries are in for delectable spoofing in this grand work of mellifluous entertainment." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 5 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:477 Ag 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 O 17 '52 30w

"Ingenious, entertaining in a manner sometimes donnish and sometimes obstreperous, Mr. Morley's fruit-cake is consistently nutty, but perhaps a little over-rich and over-large for a single baking." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:582 N 15 '52 80w

"A rich and rather indigestible pudding, a sort of lengthy caper with a hundred delightful notions and touches (from the cheerful madness of the Goat-Ladies, Miss Morwena and Miss Hypatia, to that elegant moll, Miss Laura Missenden, an expert performer upon the double-bass) which enliven the mystery of a sudden death at Weedons Pound, Bucks., some time in July, 1948. These incidental diversions are many and rich and comprise the principal virtue of the book." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 5 '52 330w

"Mr. Morley's first novel is an extraordinarily long but extraordinarily charming account of intricate criminal maneuvers in the English countryside. . . Quiet, genteel, witty, allusive, and impeccably plotted, it is at once restful and provocative, and warmly recommended to readers who sip rather than gulp." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p31 O 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '52 60w

"High I.Q. fun." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec 189:612 N 7 '52 220w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 80w

MORLEY, THOMAS. Plain and easy introduction to practical music; ed. by R. Alec Harman; with a foreword by Thurston Dart. 326p $7.50 Norton

781 Music—Theory [52-4913]

A modern edition of a classic treatise on music written by an English musician of the sixteenth century.

"Essential to students of music, of the Renaissance period in particular. For all university and large public library collections. Includes facsimiles." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:1813 O 15 '52 120w

"All told, the 'new' Morley is an important addition to the growing list of reprints of source material, and we are much indebted to Alec Harman and Thurston Dart for brightening our musical scene with the freshness and knowledge of Morley's Plain and Easy Introduction." D. D. Boyden

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 10:98 D '52 800w

"Not only musicians, but also most people who are interested in Shakespeare and in matters Elizabethan, have at some time come across the famous opening of Morley's Plain and Easy Introduction. . . This new edition is a model example of how to present an old book to contemporary readers. The original title-page and text are preserved intact, but divested of superficial and misleading quaintness; the music examples are printed in clear modern notation, except where sixteenth-century typography is essential for an understanding of Morley's point. Mr. Harman's notes are lucid and discriminating; there is almost always a note when one needs one, and it usually tells one what one wants to know. Mr.

Dart's introduction, placing Morley's work in the context of Elizabethan life, musical theory and music printing, is as helpful as it is economical. The production as a whole has elegance and dignity." Wilfrid Mellers
+ Spec 189:308 S 5 '52 650w

"The ordinary musician has long known the book as a repository of human nature as well as of recondite learning. He can now read it and enjoy it as he would a novel or a play or a monograph on an aspect of social history. If he does so he will find the way made still easier for him in this edition by Mr. Thurston Dart's foreword, which is a brilliant summary of sixteenth-century musical practice in England."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p512 Ag 8 '52 800w

MORRILL, WILLIAM KELSO. Lacrosse. 167p il $3 Barnes, A.S.

796.34 Lacrosse

52-6337

"The purpose of this book is to give to those unfamiliar with lacrosse a detailed description of the game (how it is played and what the individual players are expected to do)." Pref

Booklist 48:356 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1408 S 1 '52 20w

MORRIS, GLYN. Practical guidance methods for principals and teachers; foreword by Ruth' Strang. 266p $3.75 Harper

371.422 Personnel service in education

52-5726

"It is a book in which a principal talks frankly and honestly to other principals and teachers less experienced than he. And what distinguishes what he says from countless other attempts to formulate procedures for this new but fundamental part of the high school's efforts to help its students is the author's consistent and persistent objectivity." Springf'd Republican

School & Society 75:286 My 3 '52 10w

"Because of the common elements in all problems facing guidance directors, these pages should be of material value." Mildred Prince

+ Springf'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 120w

MORRIS, IRA VICTOR. Chicago story. 347p $3.50 Doubleday

52-5531

A novel which traces the rise and fall of a Chicago meat packing family. The time covered is from 1905 to 1950.

"It is a story filled with pioneer vigor, ruthlessness, tenderness, and cruelty as well as beauty of dreams in which ironies of human relationships are jerked apart by heady successes or merged into grim intimacies by those same successes." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 9 '52 900w

Kirkus 20:10 Ja 1 '52 180w

"Mr. Morris presents this highly specialized angle of the Chicago story superbly. Along with his brilliant picture of an industry and a family, he offers, by implication, the portrait of a great, still young, robust city engaged in evaluating its past and planning its future." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 27 '52 900w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 2 '52 400w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 19 '52 600w

"The characterization leaves something to be desired, for while the men are generally believable, the women are thinly portrayed. Over all, the character of Adolph Konrad towers, ruthless and somehow majestic, half good, half evil, the symbol of a philosophy we shall not welcome back again." Van Allen Bradley

MORRIS, I. V.—Continued
Sat R 35:17 Ap 5 '52 490w

Reviewed by Mildred Prince
Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52
110w

MORRIS, MRS JANE (KESNER). Julie. 287p
$3.50 McGraw

52-6011

"A study in sharp contrasts is this novel which spans 21 years from the American Civil war to the Haymarket riot in 1886, and journeys from gentle parlors in Victorian England to public soup kitchens in America. It is a sociological novel told vividly thru the experiences of Julie Corper, daughter of a London tradesman, who had been brought up carefully according to the best traditions of lady-like ignorance and fragility." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"The richness of detail and the emotional intensity of the story carry real conviction." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 14 '52
440w

Kirkus 20:353 Je 15 '52 150w

"Will be enjoyed, although many will feel the ending unsatisfactory." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 77:1192 J1 '52 50w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R 35:48 O 4 '52 230w

MORRIS, KATHARINE. Vixen's cub. 224p $3
Dutton

52-7802

A story of English farm and family life during the ten years or so as Willow Herron grows from childhood to young womanhood. Willow is the orphaned niece who comes to live with the Cromwells and becomes emotionally involved with two of the four Cromwell boys, Garnet, cruel and charming, the vixen's cub, and Groom, steady and kind.

"The use of understatement here lends distance to the characters, while the book itself has an episodic pattern. But the undercurrents of life and death, love and hate, the beauty of the central character and quietude of the writing, is somehow reminiscent of Precious Bane, and the writing has a literate distinction which will recommend this to a discerning rather than appreciable audience." + Kirkus 20:307 My 15 '52 210w

"Recommended." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 77:1012 Je 1 '52 80w

"The Vixen's Cub," beautifully, neatly, sensitively written, is hereby recommended for your reading." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 27 '52 300w

"There is much delightful writing in this novel, much delicate understanding of childhood and adolescence, and a profound knowledge of country life and lore. A good deal of it is told in simple and natural dialogue but Miss Morris maintains a too-faithful adherence to the conversational banalities of everyday life. The main theme, which is Willow's subtly changing relationship to Garnet and Groom, particularly the transition of her antagonism to Garnet into a hopeless and unwilling love, is beautifully developed, but to an accompaniment that is strangely off key." Edith Crosse

+ N Y Times p16 J1 27 '52 320w

"This is a violent, fragmentary story, full of imagination and with occasional hints of power in the writing, but it is weak, because it lacks a solid base, because of the frequent indirection of the writing, and because it trails off foolishly at the end."

+ New Yorker 28:66 Ag 2 '52 100w

"There is a lovely, almost inexpressible quality to Miss Morris' writing. One of her own lines expresses it best: 'There's a curious sense of light there in the shadow, a kind of reflection.'" J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 19 '52
330w

"To say that in her first novel Miss Morris shows the same love of native scene and the same humane quality that we find in the fiction of Sheila Kaye-Smith, also a gift for the atmospheric phrase that suggests the prose of Rumer Godden, is not to say that she is imitative. The comparison is merely a rough attempt at some sort of classification. Miss Morris has impressed her own distinctive personality on the way her characters think and feel and on the way they face basic human problems as well as ultimate questions. . . In her transitions, Miss Morris is still an unsure craftsman. . . On the credit side, there is a lovely, intangible quality to her writing. . . And, another important point, Miss Morris has a vision of life. Like Turgeniev and Thornton Wilder, she sees in the temporal an incarnation of the eternal but, because she states it a little too emphatically, she fails to put it over. You are confident, however, that in a future novel she is going to reveal it with more skill." Jane Voiles

+ Sat R 35:17 Ag 2 '52 500w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52
60w

MORRIS, LLOYD R. Incredible New York; high life and low life of the last hundred years. 370p il $5 Random house

974.71 New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Social life and customs 51-14524
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 30w

"The brain reels at the thought of the amount of research Lloyd Morris must have done for this book, the history of the past hundred years of New York City, but what you get is a lively record of an exceedingly lively century."

+ New Repub 126:21 Ja 7 '52 170w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 44:580 N 15 '52 300w

"You cannot read this book without gaining a clearer perspective of just what New York is—and is not. Here is the pride and the shame of the greatest city in the world."

+ Special Libraries 43:30 Ja '52 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p696 O 24 '52
850w

"For those who have no need of sources, dates, or statistics, the succession of vivid images will provide a stimulating experience, a sense of real immersion in the stream of past time. The effect is enhanced by a profusion of well-chosen illustrations, skillfully reduced, drawn from the popular prints of the earlier decades, and from impressionistic work of the serious artists of the later ones."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:79 Mr '52 240w

MORRIS, NORVAL. Habitual criminal. 395p $5
Harvard univ. press

364.2 [364.32] Recidivists. Crime and criminals. Criminal law 52-1338

"Australian jurist has here expanded his University of London Ph.D. thesis. After clarification of various concepts involved, he examines in Part I the laws of persistent offenders in England, the British Commonwealth and European countries. In Part II he analyzes the records of several hundred recidivists, giving some case histories and finally points out the need for further study in this field." Library J

"This volume should be of considerable interest to American criminologists as well as to students of comparative criminal law. Its greatest value, perhaps, lies in its evidence of the need for increased empirical research on sentencing and treatment policies if we are to correct offenders and prevent habitual criminality. Social-legal studies of the sort well represented here are all too rare." P. W. Tappan

+ Am Soc R 17:393 Je '52 850w

Reviewed by F. E. Hartung

Ann Am Acad 284:199 N '52 460w

Reviewed by J. B. Waite

Columbia Law R 52:432 Mr '52 1600w

"The book presents much valuable data on the characteristics of English recidivists and points up the need to discover both the qualities differentiating repeaters from other criminals and the treatment approaches that may correct such recidivists if we are to meet the problem of habitual criminality. . . Morris has provided in this volume a very nice combination of legal-sociological analysis that is far too uncommon in researches published in the United States." P. W. Tappan
+ Harvard Law R 65:1092 Ap '52 1250w

"No cognizance is taken of development outside British countries and main emphasis is on substantial law and its administration; sociological and psychological aspects are not stressed. Within these limits work is a sound and solid presentation of the situation of the habitual criminal in England. Recommended for libraries with collections on criminology, comparative law, and sociology." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 77:145 Ja 15 '52 140w

"It is a very thorough piece of work and there can be little knowledge about the law as it affects the treatment of the habitual criminal which is not found inside its covers."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p759 N 30 '51 950w

MORRIS, RICHARD BRANDON. Fair trial; fourteen who stood accused from Anne Hutchinson to Alger Hiss. 494p $5 Knopf

343.1 Trials 52-6423

"Mr. Morris covers fourteen celebrated trials, beginning with that of Anne Hutchinson for treason and ending with that of Alger Hiss for perjury and including, in between, such famous items as the piracy trial of Captain Kidd, the conspiracy trial of Aaron Burr, the Parkman-Webster affair at Harvard, and the still enduring mystery of the Hall-Mills case. . . In each instance the author is less concerned with the crime itself than with what took place in the courtroom afterward, and his opinion is that in almost every case the verdict, whether right or wrong, was arrived at by questionable legal means." New Yorker

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

Reviewed by H. C. Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 9 '52 210w

Kirkus 20:439 Jl 15 '52 240w

"Book often as gripping as a detective story could aptly be titled 'Fair Trial?'" Strongly recommended." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1501 S 15 '52 100w

"The essays in Fair Trial are, without exception, dramatically readable; they also constitute a valuable study of our developing but still imperfect judicial system." Merle Miller
+ New Repub 127:29 O 20 '52 390w

"Very readable and entertaining." Curtis Bok
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 5 '52 600w

"With one exception, Richard Morris has skillfully laid each courtroom scene in an authentic setting of the relevant political, religious or social climate of its day. This is an illuminating technique, since all of these cases excited great interest and the ultimate verdicts were probably influenced more by the swirling public passions of the time than by the evidence presented in the courtroom. . . My one serious objection to this book is confined to the last chapter, which deals with the two recent Alger Hiss trials." Bernard Botein
+ N Y Times p20 S 21 '52 700w

"It is, of course, hard for a layman to tell how much merit there is in Mr. Morris's argument, but he has certainly turned out a thorough and stimulating piece of work."
+ New Yorker 28:132 S 20 '52 150w

"With high scholarship imbedded in a gay style, this entertaining book tells the stories of fourteen famous American trials, most of them of such interest that the editor of any tabloid newspaper would give them a vast amount of space if they were to occur today. All the cases are spectacular and dramatic."
M. L. Ernst

+ Sat R 35:15 N 1 '52 440w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. Works of love. 269p $3 Knopf

51-11978

"Born in the prairie country, Will Brady becomes in turn a railroad station master's assistant, a hotel clerk, a married man, a raiser of poultry, a well-to-do egg salesman, a deserted husband. . . a wanderer, and an old, well-meaning rememberer of times past. All his adult life, for vague reasons—or in accord with vague compulsions—of his own, he has acted the part of father to a boy not his son. . . He dies, rather dramatically, while acting as a Santa Claus in a Chicago department store." N Y Times

Booklist 48:229 Mr 15 '52

"Mr. Morris shares the philosophy and much of the rhetoric of the late Sherwood Anderson (to whom the book is dedicated) and something as well of Saroyan's invention. . . The Works of Love traces, with discipline and undistracted purpose, a shadowland and maimed view of life which many others, Anderson most notably, have given us before." Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:75 Ap '52 210w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 24 '52 550w

"Haunting and wryly melancholic, but with that recognizable Wright Morris quality, this will appeal chiefly to his special audience, and find no market among those seeking entertainment."

Kirkus 19:711 D 15 '51 170w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados

Nation 174:587 Je 14 '52 800w

New Repub 126:21 My 26 '52 190w

"All the characters are like mummies. Or like a breed of robots. . . The causes of this frustrating muteness are scarcely explored. . . Mr. Morris gets across to us strikingly his message of the horrors involved in a human spirit pounding futilely against its fleshly prison for expression and union with other human beings. For, if Morris is not the master of causation, he is certainly the master of effect." Hugh McGovern
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 13 '52 500w

"This carefully sustained, diffuse and deliberately gentle rendering of Will Brady's modest life seems rather to impose love than to reveal it. And the love which is imposed is a blend of pity and sentiment; it is loneliness that recalls the image of an old man feeding birds. There is a tenderness here, surely; but it does not spread out into any wide meaning." Richard Sullivan
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 2 '52 480w

"Mr. Morris has had, at any rate, his peculiar triumph. He has managed to write a book that is always readable and sometimes flickeringly more about a man who is, within the limits set for him, a dolt. The studied simplicities that marred much of Mr. Morris's earlier work are at a minimum here. He has learned his craft, and all he needs is a theme worthy of it and him." Brendan Gill
+ New Yorker 28:107 F 23 '52 280w

"Morris has dedicated his novel to 'the memory of Sherwood Anderson, pioneer in the works of love.' His debt to Anderson in both style and subject matter is great. Will Brady is a Nebraskan but he is equally a native of 'Winesburg, O.' His native habitat is even a hotel rather than a home. But as Morris stands partly in the shadow of Anderson, he casts his own shadow of talent toward the future also. He has shown an understanding of the philosophical origins of our emotional dilemmas that has been more a characteristic of European literature than of American fiction. For this intellectual coming of age, if for no other reason, 'The Works of Love' is a remarkable step forward." Emmett Dedmon
+ Sat R 35:33 Mr 15 '52 470w

Reviewed by H. E. Paine

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 100w

Time 59:112 Mr 10 '52 400w

MORRISON, GUY. We shared an island; with decorations by Alan Jessett. 227p il $3 Norton 994.3 Great Barrier reef, Australia 52-6125

Wryly humorous account of their experiences when the author, an Australian newspaperman and his family, threw up everything and joined a "communal colony" on a supposedly uninhabited island inside the Great Barrier Reef. The final straw which drove them back to civilization was the arrival of two Americans who had bought the island and proceeded to bring in radios and bath-tubs.

Booklist 48:170 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '52 380w

"Not essential but recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:212 F 1 '52 120w

"Mr. Morrison tells the story simply, objectively, but with a skill that gives the book a surprising amount of suspense. . . There were many dull moments on Moan-ahra, of course, but never a dull moment in Mr. Morrison's account of his family's weird adventure in search of a paradise that wasn't." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 6 '52 650w

"'We Shared an Island' is a worth-while book, with character and grim humor. Alan Jessett's decorations add a distinctive charm." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 20 '52 370w

"A well-written and engaging narrative, not without humor."

+ New Yorker 27:110 F 16 '52 200w

MORRISON, HUGH SINCLAIR. Early American architecture, from the first colonial settlements to the national period. 619p il maps $12.50 Oxford

720.973 Architecture—U.S. 52-7831

"A comprehensive survey of domestic and public architecture in colonies and states along the Atlantic and in the sections of the South and West settled by the Spanish and French. The period covered is from the earliest known buildings to the early 1800's. . . Illustrated with photographs, drawings, and plans. Annotated reading suggestions at the end of each chapter. A book for student or casually interested reader." Booklist

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 189:76 My '52 700w
Booklist 48:244 Ap 1 '52

"Architecture is a thing of structure as well as style, and Mr. Morrison has recognized this in supplying the reader with detached accounts of plan, materials, and methods of building, which will delight any man with an instinct for craftsmanship. He gives diagrams of frames old and new, he explains in detail just how our ancestors assembled and raised a house frame at a raising bee. This is a book to buy, read, and keep for reference. Students of any aspect of the American scene will find it a help in their work." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 19 '52 750w

"A boon to students; pleasant for laymen." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1014 Je 1 '52 40w

"The faults are trifling. For Morrison's Early American Architecture will provide more people with more information of greater interest than any other study of American art that could be written today. It will offer scholars a convenient and competent survey, a base from which to proceed to original research. Considering his other outstanding achievement, his pioneering biography of Louis Sullivan, one must hope that the first scholar to use this book for that purpose will be Hugh Morrison himself." John Coolidge

+ New Eng Q 25:283 Je '52 650w

"Each of the geographic and stylistic subdivisions is handled so comprehensively that the book is more than just a history of architecture. It is a thoughtful combination of political, social and economic history as well and gives further support to the trend away from the artificial and obsolete compartmentalized 'academic disciplines.' Particularly effective in this connection are the numerous passages quoted from diaries and chronicles to indicate the views and living habits of contemporaries at the time various buildings were new." J. D. Forbes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 1 '52 800w

"A remarkable synthesis, which is entertaining, vigorous and clearly written with a minimum of technical jargon. It should appeal to a wide lay and professional audience and prove useful also as a textbook in architectural history." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 30 '52 800w

"A model of scholarship, 'Early American Architecture' is a book that no one who fondly remembers the monuments of our colonial past can afford to do without." Wayne Andrews

+ Sat R 35:35 My 3 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 120w

"The most comprehensive work in its field. . . The ample references both to particular and to general and regional aspects of the subject, with which the volume is documented, constitute an excellent guide to the literature. Addressed primarily to the informed general reader, this brilliantly organized book should prove almost indispensable."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:125 Je '52 200w

MORRISON, MARGARET. The cuckoo. 256p $2.50 Roy pubs.

52-7340

The cuckoo in this case was the adopted son of a middle class English couple. Because the child was adopted to save his wife's life when her own child died, James Peddle took his family abroad to live so that Maisie would never learn the truth. After their son became a famous opera singer the Peddles returned to England, vastly different, and much happier. The time is the early 20th century.

Booklist 48:265 Ap 15 '52

Kirkus 20:132 F 15 '52 100w

"It is not for the unimaginative reader! It is definitely a book for the moment of relaxation. The background of music makes it doubly useful. Humor and music are so seldom combined. The more or less pedestrian 'parents' of the Cuckoo give a balance that the story absorbs quite easily. With this volume Roy has certainly added to the list of gay and readable books." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 120w

"Miss Morrison's novel is uneventful, but she writes with unassuming amiability."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 1 '52 300w

MORRISSEY, ALICE B. Rehabilitation nursing; foreword by Howard A. Rusk. 299p il $5 Putnam

610.736 Nurses and nursing. Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. 52-6042

"A textbook written by a supervisor and teacher of rehabilitation nursing at Bellevue hospital in New York City, giving in simple language the principles, procedure, and practice for treatment of the physically handicapped, to restore the fullest mental, social, vocational, and economic usefulness of which the patient is capable. Although addressed to the nursing profession, many suggestions such as activities of daily living, techniques of mechanical devices, speech rehabilitation, and measures to prevent deformity, could be read with profit by the patient, himself or anyone caring for a disabled person." Booklist

"This is an interesting, easily read book. It will be of greatest interest to the student and to nurses interested in the field of orthopedic nursing. . . In comparison with the definite directions on the patient's physical care offered in this book, the suggestions for dealing with the psychological problems are not too specific. Miss Morrissey includes an imposing list of references which will be valuable to her readers. There is no doubt that this book, within its limitations, will be useful in teaching nurses and others interested in this phase of nursing." Helen Hartigan + Am J Pub Health 42:1012 Ag '52 230w

Booklist 48:192 F 15 '52

MORSHEAD, SIR OWEN FREDERICK.
Windsor castle. 54p 84il $6.50 Phaidon
728.8 Windsor castle [52-77]

"Sir Owen, who is the King's Librarian, has devoted about half his book to an illustrated history of this perfect chess piece of a castle. The rest of it consists of full-page photographs. There are remarkably handsome closeups of furniture, paintings, and tapestries, and corners and ceilings of elaborate state chambers and tough, crumbling old rooms, as well as long shots, which are just as effective, of walls and buttresses and members of the Brigade of Guards going about their traditional business." New Yorker

"The volume unquestionably fulfills the author's purpose to present an account, both scholarly and readable, of the abiding royal home of the British monarchy for nearly nine centuries." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 14 '52 450w

"As his book is intended not for the specialist but for the general public, he has set out his matter in a straightforward, readable text which in eight chapters covers the history of the castle from the days of the Conquest to the last major additions to the building made by Wyattville for George IV. The plates are extremely clear and apposite in the architectural details as well as in the general views." L. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 29 '51 180w
New Yorker 27:180 D 8 '51 80w

"No one living is better qualified to write about Windsor Castle than the King's Librarian. He has at his command—and his notes prove how variously he has selected from it—a mass of historical data, as well as a literary style of courtly, yet sprightly urbanity. His text is, moreover, illuminated with bright patches of human incident. . . Mr. Harold White's beautiful photographs fill half the book and constitute half the history. A plan would have greatly simplified the author's and photographer's efforts to teach us our bearings, which become extremely confused, as we thread our way from ward to ward and tower to turret over the vast area." James Lees-Milne

+ Spec 187:219 Ag 17 '51 750w

"This book is likely to remain the standard popular work on Windsor for a long time."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p480 Ag 3 '51 850w

MORTON, ANTHONY, pseud. See Creasey, J.

MORTON, ELIZABETH. Rags, the firehouse dog; pictures by Morgan Dennis. 38p $2 Winston

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-8979

Picture story book about Rags, the mascot of a Philadelphia fire engine company. For ages five to nine.

"Elizabeth Morton has written this story from her heart, and so it reaches the hearts of its readers."

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 16 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:551 S 1 '52 80w

"Recommended for ages 5-9." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 77:2074 D 1 '52 40w

"Told in short, terse sentences and printed in large bold type, this story will have boys and girls making like sirens before the last page is turned." P. C.

+ N Y Times pt2, p39 N 16 '52 90w

MORTON, FREDERIC. Asphalt and desire. 282p $3 Harcourt

52-6732

In a first-person narrative, this relates the events and experiences, the confusions and yearnings of a young Jewish girl during the summer that followed her graduation from Hunter college in New York city.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:154 My '52 170w

Reviewed by Pat Patten

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 2 '52 160w

"In this, the third published novel of a young Viennese refugee, we are confronted with good character description and some sound social observations awash in a tide of silly dialogue and plot. Something more than a willing suspension of disbelief is required in order to accept a plot solution amounting to a kind of secular miracle—a breakdown of all the natural laws of psychology." Jean Holzhauser

+ Commonweal 55:498 F 22 '52 550w

"Perhaps the family scenes, and the sex, and the publisher promotion will overcome the average reader resistance to the long Wolfe-ian passages of introspection and the rather hyped plot."

Kirkus 20:83 F 1 '52 200w

"Agonizingly modern in tempo and tone, this is a superior novel which will go well especially in rental collections." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 77:361 F 15 '52 70w

"'Asphalt and Desire' is quite hilarious in places; and there perhaps the Viennese in Mr. Morton serves him well, adding a whiff of boulevard comedy to the sharper humors of his adopted city, and infusing enough compassion to take the sting out of the prevalent acid. He has certainly written a novel that is an achievement in itself as well as full of promise for future performance." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 2 '52 800w

"In this book the heroine is second-generation American, and her life is all too obviously presented at second-hand. Although he has achieved some touching moments, the author has not made the reader forget entirely the technical tour-de-force; too often it seems to be Morton speaking, not Iris. The writing (far from that in 'The Darkness Below') is slangy and slipshod, on the theory that Iris would talk that way. If so, one simply does not want to hear so much talk out of Iris." John Brooks
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '52 390w

"Miss Leavis is a nice, bewildered, rather brash girl, whose stream of thought, according to the sample here, is touching, if commonplace, but never revealing."

+ New Yorker 28:108 F 23 '52 70w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 14 '52 800w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Sat R 35:14 Mr 29 '52 480w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Spring'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 100w

MOSES, ANNA MARY (ROBERTSON). Grandma Moses; my life's history; ed. by Otto Kallir. 140p pl $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-11940

"Written and told in her own words, these delightful pages recall Grandma Moses' early childhood, her married years, her discovery of artistic talent when almost 80 and 'the extraordinary events that followed.' Reproductions of 16 paintings in color and other photographs." Bookmark

Booklist 48:213 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:131 Mr '52 30w

"Everyone who knows her paintings and knows her as a person will notice that Grandma Moses does not report on the sensational things in her life. . . All those 'big things' are facts, and the most she can do with them is to record them. In her paintings and in her book she becomes an artist of great warmth and depth when she depicts her life as a simple woman on a farm, as a wife, as a mother." Fritz Richter

MOSES, A. M. R.—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 2 '52 400w

Reviewed by R. E. Donlon

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 6 '52 460w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 55:598 Mr 21 '52 700w

Horn Bk 28:189 Je '52 20w

"There is a not unexpected sense of color here in the world that she sees and looks back on, a temperate philosophy, and a practical realism which gives this much of its charm, and her continually extending following will provide an audience."

+ Kirkus 19:723 D 15 '51 210w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1015 Je 1 '52 50w

"Charming autobiography. . . The description of the conquest by this simple soul of the New York art world is one of the best success stories that has come out of America." Benedict Nicolson

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:730 D 13 '52 70w

"Many people love Grandma Moses' pictures. Many others don't see anything in them. Those who enjoy her paintings will revel in this autobiography for, like her landscapes, it is made up of details, crisp, factual, cheerful, naive." D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 2 '52 1600w

Reviewed by J. I. H. Baur

N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '52 750w

New Yorker 28:121 Mr 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 27 '52 600w

"Jotted down or transcribed at various times in the past decade and pieced together in a roughly chronological sequence, her memories of those years provide a brief, artless, and somewhat episodic journal, but one brightly spotted with casual incidents that illuminate the half-forgotten customs of country life in an earlier America. . . Grandma tells her story in a highly personal way. Otto Kallir, the editor of these reminiscences, has had the grace and good judgment not to alter the text as it was delivered, except to eliminate inevitable repetitions, to arrange the material in order, and, at the author's request, to correct the spelling." M. B. Davidson

+ Sat R 35:10 Mr 1 '52 1100w

"Certainly, 'Grandma' Moses is an unusually gifted old lady, and all that she tells us about her painting—it is not very much—will be read with great interest. The pictures and the text clearly reflect the same wise and loving philosophy, and I wholeheartedly recommend this book to everyone jaded by the cold war who may need some reassurance as to life's 'ultimate values.'" Derek Hudson

+ Spec 189:788 D 5 '52 900w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:119 Je '52 260w

"One feels, after reading this book, that Grandma Moses should have taken up writing as well as painting. The style is as fresh and clear cut as her paintings, since both are reduced to their primitive essentials."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:89 Mr '52

MOSS, WILLIAM STANLEY. War of shadows. 239p il maps $3.95 Macmillan

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 52-8992

Further adventures of the British secret agent, author of Ill Met by Moonlight (Book Review Digest 1950). This time his missions were in Crete, in Greece, in Cairo, and in Thailand.

Booklist 48:263 Ap 15 '52

Foreign Affairs 30:673 Jl '52 30w

Kirkus 20:60 Ja 15 '52 200w

"Capt. Moss is a good observer, with a sense of humor and an easy sympathy with strange customs. His accounts of Communist Nationalist disturbances in the East and of the Siamese people, are particularly good." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 20 '52 290w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p26 Ap 20 '52 470w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

Spec 189:138 Jl 25 '52 320w

"This is a light book, partly adventure, partly travel, written by a man with an ironic sense of humour and a gift for dialogue and characterization. . . It is rather on the philosophical side that the book is weak, and it is unfortunate that it should open with a slightly pretentious dissertation on the nature of death: the Secret Agent chilling his readers' blood. Later he has some very true things to say on the implications of killing, but the opening chapter, though vividly written, is superficial: an ever-dramatized start to an entertaining book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p315 My 9 '52 800w

MOTHERWELL, ROBERT BURNS, ed. Dada painters and poets; an anthology; texts by Arp [and others] il. after Arp [and others] and documents, objects, journals, reviews, manifestoes, photographs, catalogues, invitations, etc. (Documents of modern art v8) 388p 147il $15 Wittenborn

759.91 Dadaism

51-14868

"What was Dadaism? For the general public in the Twenties, hardly more than an irresponsible explosion of hoaxes and practical jokes. . . for the Dadaists themselves, something of a religion, with its own rite and mystery, and a technique of liberation; and now, for Robert Motherwell, who edits this large and fascinating collection of documents, it turns out to have been historically important as one phase of the whole movement of modern art." N Y Times

"This anthology might be compared to a quart of champagne, so brilliant is the gaiety of certain of the extracts, but the gaiety bears the curse of despair. . . Editor Motherwell may or may not understand the implications of nothing, but it would be absurd to deny that the compiler of this astounding anthology is a person of unusual patience and perception."

Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 55:356 Ja 11 '52 1050w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:596 Ap 1 '52 130w

"To any serious library of art or literature it is essential, despite its necessarily rather high cost. . . Bernard Karpel adds a masterly critical bibliography."

+ New Repub 125:19 D 10 '51 140w

Reviewed by William Barrett

N Y Times p7 F 3 '52 800w

New Yorker 28:126 Mr 8 '52 160w

Reviewed by T. B. Hess

+ Sat R 35:53 Mr 1 '52 750w

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER. News in America. (Library of congress ser. in American civilization) 236p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

071 Radio news. Journalism 52-8218

An explanation of the process by which the American news distribution grew up. Partial contents: News as history; Speed: the news as timely report; The human-interest news as news; Domestic news and the news services; News of government; Foreign news; The "Daily Tribune" goes to press; Looking toward the future. Index.

Booklist 49:82 N 1 '52

"Frank Luther Mott's book is an important contribution." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 4 '52 460w

"Finest chapters are 'Objective News versus Qualified Report' and 'News of Government,' with brilliant short discussions as on political partisanship control of press. A must for thoughtful readers of all ages." Karl Brown

+ Library J 77:1893 N 1 '52 110w

"Mr. Mott's 'News in America' is provocative. It is itself hard news skillfully handled and well thought through. It leaves some questions of method unanswered. But it sets one to considering the reporting of news as an improvable factor in American civilization—skillfully handled hard news that can make righteousness readable and democracy attainable." Roscoe Ellard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 21 '52 750w

"Out of a seasoned and affectionate relation to American journalism, Dean Mott deals diligently with the pace and processes of news work, against a mellow background of retrospect. But perhaps one falls too quickly into Dean Mott's amiable way of judging the press by its best. Buoyancy describes his tone. . . This descriptive story of the news is lively, fast-moving, and reflects the excitement of the news itself in its high points." L. M. Lyons

+ N Y Times p52 N 16 '52 750w

MOTT, NEVILL FRANCIS. Elements of wave mechanics. 156p $3.75 Cambridge

530.1 Wave mechanics [52-10250]

"This book is written to replace the author's 'An Outline of Wave Mechanics' (1930) [Book Review Digest 1931]. It is intended for students in the final years of an honours course of experimental physics, and also as an introduction to more advanced text-books for those who intend to specialize in the subject. . . The author has chosen to omit mathematical development that can easily be found elsewhere. This book builds up the elementary theory from experimental facts, and shows how simple problems can be solved. A number of examples are included." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1309 Ag '52 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:64 J1 '52

MOUNIER, EMMANUEL. Personalism; tr. by Philip Mairet. 132p $3.50 Grove
194 Personalism

"In this posthumous work the brilliant editor of the avant garde Paris review Esprit bequeaths a profound analysis in capsule form of the ideological, cultural, political and spiritual situation of twentieth-century man. The viewpoint expounded fortunately eludes any label by which it could be summarily dismissed. Thoroughly indicative of the frontier of continental thinking and dialectical in his approach, the author nevertheless rejects the Heidegger-Sartre type of existentialism and also the Marxist tangent thereof (without ignoring the positive contributions of either) for a position known in France as 'personalism.'" (N Y Times) Index.

"It is a work of ripe wisdom, bearing the fruits of twenty years' direction of his journal, Esprit. . . Mounier died at the early age of forty-four, worn out by superhuman labours. His life and work inspire grave reflections. His remark when he abandoned his university post to devote himself to Esprit, that it is only enterprises founded on poverty that succeed, is characteristic of his spirit. His achievement in building up Esprit without patronage or institutional support till it could claim to be the premier review of France, was a remarkable one." J. B. Coates

+ Hibbert J 50:405 J1 '52 850w

"M. Mounier writes with passionate conviction about the struggle for respect for human persons, a struggle in which he and his group played a notable part, in the tragic context of the political and economic life of Europe. He has some wise things to say about the conditions, both psychological and social, which make possible respect for human beings, and has some sane criticisms of extreme existentialist anarchy no less than of totalitarianism.

But he does not attempt any close discussion of what we mean by a 'personal' relationship." D. M. Emmet

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 25 '52 180w

Reviewed by I. S. Jaffe

New Repub 127:21 S 8 '52 750w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 43:683 Je 7 '52 70w

Reviewed by Frederick Schumacher

N Y Times p21 Ag 10 '52 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p537 Ag 15 '52 500w

MOUNTFORD, CHARLES PEARCY. Brown men and red sand; journeyings in wild Australia. 184p il $4.50 Praeger

994.29 [919.4291] Society, Primitive. Northern Territory, Australia 52-242

A popular account of an anthropological expedition into the central Australian desert to study the life and customs of the aborigines. The volume is profusely illustrated with photographs taken by the author.

"Although there are some purple passages about the beauty of the scenery, there is little of that incisive characterization of members of the party which holds the interest of the reader in a true story of adventure. . . Furthermore, although the author was in personal contact with the 'natives' at mission stations, cattle camps, and the like, it is obvious that he spent no extended period living with the aboriginal people and getting to know their ways 'from the inside.' For these reasons the book is not entirely satisfying to the student of ethnography or social anthropology. Nevertheless, the work is sympathetic to the native culture, it gives one a certain feeling for the wide open, nearly empty spaces of Central Australia, and it is excellently illustrated." John Gillin

+ Ann Am Acad 283:220 S '52 220w

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 30w

"This should be a welcome addition to any library collection since it throws fresh light on a little known people and land. Striking photographs." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:901 My 15 '52 110w

"I am not qualified to assess the scientific importance of this work or to say how far its material is new or controversial. Nor, evidently, is it intended for anthropologists, who may well prefer to consult the author's contributions to scientific journals. But it is unquestionably of interest to the general reader, who will find a fascinating account of the aborigines and their environment written with knowledge, sensibility and exceptional human understanding." Dorothy Carrington

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:310 Mr 17 '51 650w

New Yorker 28:125 Mr 8 '52 150w

"The most impressive sections of the book are not those that deal with the natives, but the descriptions of the silent desert of Central Australia, over which a few great rocks preside—Ayers Rock, Mount Olga and Mount Connor." C. W.

+ Spec 187:456 O 5 '51 450w

"A fascinating account."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p79 F 9 '51 900w

MOWAT, FARLEY. People of the Deer; with drawings by Samuel Bryant. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 344p $4 Little

971.22 Eskimos. Barren lands, Canada

52-5023

The author, a young Canadian, spent two summers in the Barrens west of Hudson's Bay. Drawn there by a childhood memory of the swarming of the caribou, he remained to become the friend and indignant partisan of a fast-dying race of Eskimos, the People of the Deer.

Booklist 48:212 Mr 1 '52

MOWAT, FARLEY—Continued

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 50w

"From a literary point of view, the effect of People of the Deer would have been enhanced considerably if the occasional patches of it which are written in a factual, chapter-and-verse manner had been made a model for the book as a whole. As it is, Mr. Mowat writes with rather more heaving of the chest than is really necessary." John Nicol

Canadian Forum 32:69 Je '52 360w

"A very long review would be needed to point out all the errors and misleading statements in this well-written and plausible book." Clifford Wilson

— + Canadian Hist R 33:295 S '52 360w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 2 '52 550wReviewed by T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 1 '52 500w

"A seldom found 'perfect combination' of the poetically descriptive and the scientifically factual."

+ Kirkus 20:62 Ja 15 '52 210w

"An absorbing book, with many facets, appealing to many interests... Worth reading for its high literary quality alone. Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:359 F 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 S 16 '52 270wReviewed by J. A. Smith
New Statesman & Nation 44:486 O 25 '52 600w

"This friendly study has deeper value than that of a mere travel-and-adventure book if it helps to resolve the question of the future of the remaining Arctic tribes in their favor, the effort has been well worth the trouble. Even so, one need not be an Arctic enthusiast to enjoy this immensely readable and absorbing book." W. S. Carlson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 2 '52 1050w

Reviewed by P. G. Downes
N Y Times p4 F 24 '52 850w

"It is not often that a writer finds himself the sole chronicler of a whole human society, even of a microcosmic one like the Ithalmiut, and Mowat has done marvelously well at the job, despite a stylistic looseness and a tendency to formlessness. Also, his justifiable anger at the Canadian government's neglect of the Ithalmiut, who are its wards, intrudes in places where it doesn't belong, but then, as I said, Mowat is something of a fanatic on this subject. His book, just the same, is a fine one." Albert Hubbell

+ — New Yorker 28:138 Ap 26 '52 1500w

"Mr. Mowat's book is something more than the working out of an effective conservation plan. It is 'felt' writing, often white hot with emotion. It is writing that opens up a new area of experience even though it tells the story of a disintegrating remnant of a dying race. It is 'inspired' writing in the best sense and gives us a respect for human life that we are in danger of losing." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 6 '52 850w

"Here is a really great book: outstanding not because of literary form, though the author writes vividly and uses a refreshingly large vocabulary, nor because of any grandiose plan, for, frankly, it has none. Rather, it is great, and sometimes truly terrific, by reason of its content and its impact." I. T. Sanderson

+ Sat R 35:17 Je 28 '52 500w

Reviewed by Lord Tweedsmuir
Spec 189:661 N 21 '52 2700w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52 420w

"Mr. Mowat made many discoveries on these journeys. One was that he could write. However reluctant one may be to go the whole way with him in his merciless analysis of the past of this people or his passionate plea that in cherishing the future of the Arctic natives we defend our own economic interests and our strategic security, there is no doubt that this is the most powerful book to come out of the Arctic for some years. Much of its story is so tragic that any words recording it would wring the heart. But many of these pages do much more than that, they strongly uplift it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p599 S 12 '52 650w

Wis Lib Bul 48:91 Mr '52

MOWRER, LILIAN (THOMSON) (MRS EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER), and CUMMINGS, HOWARD H. United States and world relations. 466p il maps $3.48 Harper

973 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Foreign relations 51-11941

"Synthesizes geographical, economical, and historical background of the U.S. so as to give the student a better appreciation of his own country, and at the same time show him the economic interdependence of the world and direct his thoughts toward the responsibilities of the U.S. in global society." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:199 F 15 '52

"In its aims, organization, and scholarship, this volume deserves a place among the best of our social studies textbooks. On the other hand, though well written, it is likely to be used most successfully with students whose ability is somewhat above average and whose background in the social studies is substantial. And even with better students the text might well be more effective if it included more maps, charts, and graphs. Notwithstanding these limitations, The United States and World Relations commendably meets a very real need for a senior high school and possibly junior college textbook that is designed to develop world mindedness and place our modern problems in the perspective of a world setting." M. V. B. Jennings

+ Social Educ 16:235 My '52 500w

MOWRY, GEORGE EDWIN. California progressives. (Chronicles of California) 349p il $6 Univ. of Calif. press

979.4 California—Politics and government. Progressive party. Liberalism 51-63048

An account of the development of Progressive sentiment in California. "That development is traced from its beginnings in reform agitation against the Southern Pacific Railroad and against municipal corruption in San Francisco and Los Angeles, through its organization in the Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League and the State Progressive Party, its break and later reconciliation with the national Republican Party." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliographical note. Index.

"The most comprehensive account of the California progressive movement so far written. . . Professor Mowry has used most available major manuscript collections. He has also used the papers, interviews, and unpublished dissertation of Miss Alice Rose of Stanford University, a piece of singular good fortune for, as he says, her pioneer work is a priceless boon to other scholars. That Professor Mowry was forced to write his history without access to the Hiram Johnson Papers, thus giving us a situation comparable to a wedding without the bride, is distinctly not his fault. . . The author has understandably absorbed many of the prejudices of the group that supported and elected Hiram Johnson. This bias could have been modified by using the Scripps newspapers, particularly before Scripps swung to Wilson." H. M. Hooker

+ — Am Hist R 57:1002 Jl '52 700w

"This is an exciting, thorough, and useful work by a professor of history at the University of California, Los Angeles." Murray Seasongood

+ Ann Am Acad 282:138 Jl '52 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:59 Mr '52 240w

MUDD, EMILY (HARTSHORNE). Practice of marriage counseling. 336p il $4.50 Assn. press
301.426 Marriage A51-7952

"This comprehensive presentation of the philosophy, methods and procedures of marriage counseling has resulted from the author's 14 years of experience with the Philadelphia Marriage Council. Mrs. Mudd shows how and why marriage counseling developed in America, its relationship to certain events in our culture, such as the economic depression, world wars and the resulting strains in the family life, complex conditions of accelerated social change, and the disturbances to marriage and family life." Am J Pub Health

"This volume is a clear presentation of a well developed and complete program which includes direct counseling, work with and through community agencies, teaching of students in marriage counseling, and research. It is of value to all persons concerned with the problems of the family today. For public health workers its emphasis on prevention will be especially well accepted." E. P. Rice
+ Am J Pub Health 42:740 Je '52 550w

"Association Press makes a valuable contribution to the entire field of marriage and family relations in this latest volume in their family life series. . . Of all the persons who might have been prevailed upon to write a volume on marriage counseling practice, Dr. Emily Mudd is undoubtedly most competent. The marriage Council of Philadelphia with which she has been identified from its beginning is an outstanding model of a well-organized, carefully developed, professionally sound marriage counseling service." E. M. Duvall

+ Ann Am Acad 279:213 Ja '52 550w
Booklist 48:154 Ja 1 '52

MUDGETT, BRUCE D. Index numbers. 135p $3 Wiley

338.528 Index numbers (economics) 51-11702

"The author is at present Chairman of the American Statistical Association's technical committee to advise on the revision of the BLS Wholesale and Consumers' price indexes. In this book he examines the development of the Bureau's indexes, their inaccuracies through the use of fixed weights in calculation, and argues for a method of measurement to keep weights up-to-date and achieve more realistic indexes." Library J

Reviewed by David Durand
Am Econ R 42:169 Mr '52 1800w

"Dr. Mudgett's book on index numbers is bound to arouse considerable controversy among those interested in the field, and this reviewer predicts that few will accept his conclusions without reservations." J. P. Bursk
Ann Am Acad 280:192 Mr '52 420w

Reviewed by C. D. Jackson
J Pol Econ 60:262 Je '52 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1229 Ag '51 60w
Management R 41:476 Jl '52 80w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:372 D '51 170w

MUDRICK, MARVIN. Jane Austen; irony as defense and discovery. 267p $5 Princeton univ. press

823 Austen, Jane 52-5823

"A scholarly examination, spanning Jane Austen's novels from her juvenilia through Sanditon, which demonstrates her use of irony both as a tool to subvert the society of polite convention from which she came, and as a weapon of self-defense. Irony, more than any other literary device, gave Miss Austen her vision of the world, one without sentiment, involvement, or illusion. For the serious Janeite. Bibliography and appendixes." Booklist

Booklist 48:293 My 15 '52

"Jane was still growing, artistically, to the end, as Mr. Mudrick cites chapter and verse to prove. Indeed he quotes liberally and keeps the discussion so focussed on the books, that one renews delighted acquaintance with these people and these worlds even as Mr. Mudrick most cogently dissects them." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24 '52 300w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 O 22 '52 310w

"The test of a good piece of criticism is its effect on the reader. If it makes him want immediately to reread the works discussed, it has done its job. This result Mr. Mudrick's study will triumphantly produce. Some of the sweetness-and-light Janeites will undoubtedly resent some of his conclusions, but the best advice for them is that they do their rereading, with Mr. Mudrick's help, before they sound off. Jane, they will find, is still Jane: 'Praise the Lord for making her, and her for all she made.'" Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 8 '52 650w

"Serious students of the novel will profit from Mr. Mudrick's careful analysis of the Jane Austen novels from his particular point of view. The more serious Janeites will find their appreciation enriched many fold after a reading of Mr. Mudrick's study." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 20 '52 200w

"Mr. Mudrick's study is exceptional for several reasons. He writes with such close reasoning and fresh expression that the reader must constantly be alert, for the analysis is intensive and entirely free of literary platitude. And certainly the book is not an introductory one; it is for the reader of Jane Austen who has digested and pondered the novels, and is ready now to see them in a new, significant perspective." R. H.

+ Sat R 35:37 O 18 '52 190w
Spec 189:793 D 5 '52 220w

"This plausible and very well written book has been acclaimed in America as 'by far the best book on the subject.' In this country, too, it will find many readers, to some of whom it will appear as light shining in the darkness. Jane Austen herself, it may seem to others, would often have been at a loss to guess what Mr. Mudrick was talking about."

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 S 19 '52 600w

"Few critics have read these novels as perceptively as has Mr. Mudrick. His Jane Austen is not the 'gentle Jane' of legend, but an impressive comic artist whose writings have moral and social significance."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:134 Je '52 220w

MUHLENWEG, FRITZ. Big Tiger and Christian; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 592p $4.95 Pantheon bks.

52-9672

Tells the story of an English boy and his Chinese friend in Mongolia in 1922. The author is a German explorer who lived in the Gobi Desert at various times from 1922 to 1933.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 D 7 '52 170w

"A book to read with a pounding and a wondering heart. The past and future meet on the old Silk caravan road."

+ Commonweal 57:173 N 21 '52 90w

+ Kirkus 20:720 N 15 '52 200w

"It is a book of adventure, of high literary quality. Boys of around twelve to fourteen who read Roy Chapman Andrews' 'Quest in the Desert,' will find this far more exciting and more believable. Any young age boy, however, who could read the many pages of 'Kon-Tiki' can cope with this. It is probably the best adventure reading offered this year, one that girls, too, should not miss." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 23 '52 240w

"The boys' manifold adventures are so intricately plotted, the vast panorama of the country and its people so fascinating, that one doesn't dare skip a page, for fear of missing something important. The author is a German painter who knows the Mongolians intimately and, obviously, the nature of young boys anywhere. He has produced a remarkable book." E. L. Buell

MUHLLENWEG, FRITZ—Continued

+ N Y Times pt2, p10 N 16 '52 200w

"It is a book that will have a long, long life because it has that quality that makes a book live—the vigor and enthusiasm of a writer who has a story to tell and knows exactly how to tell it. It is, in our opinion, the outstanding book of 1952."

+ Sat R 35:54 N 15 '52 600w

"The story never rips & snorts; it moves with the pace of a desert caravan. But in its freshness and steady excitement it has some of the marks of a real children's classic."

+ Time 60:106 D 8 '52 150w

"This is one of those books which appear very rarely, and are treasured by generations, read by the full-grown and read to the young."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 N 28 '52 290w

MULKERNS, VAL. Time outworn. 252p $3
Devin-Adair

52-13184

The love story of a sensitive young Irish girl living in Eire in the 1940's. The scene is variously Dublin, Tipperary and Galway.

"The faults in this book are almost inextricably interwoven with its good points. All of the characters are drawn pointedly and economically, but the protagonists have little more depth and fullness than those incidental characters who wander in and out of the story. The descriptions are carefully done, but sometimes they slide off into cataloging. The closeness we feel towards Maevie leaves us with a lack of conviction that her sorrows are really tragic, and a vague sense that the whole affair is only an overdramatized case of puppy-love."

W. B. Riley

+ Commonweal 57:264 D 12 '52 600w

"To lay out the bare bones of Miss Mulkerns' story is wholly to ignore the beauty of her prose. She has kept the anguish and courage of youth, and the quicksilver humor of the Irish, as well as the lilt of those voices, 'soft as Limerick butter.' . . . Her transitions are sometimes clumsy; her final scenes have a theatrical abruptness, but her rhythms are faultless, her men and women were created by a poet who is luckily also an uncommonly good novelist." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 16 '52 330w

"Much of the writing has sparkle and urgency without inflation of language. But this young author is better at creating a credible scene than she is in knitting scenes into a coherent pattern." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p14 D 28 '52 290w

"Miss Mulkerns manages her people with ease, and her occasional darts of wit make one regret that she did not back away from her story and regard it with a cooler eye before she made up her mind about the ending."

+ New Yorker 28:176 O 18 '52 90w

"To one who, like myself, is somewhat allergic to Irish novels, Val Mulkerns's 'A Time Outworn' comes as a surprise and as a refreshment. It is a young, lyrical book. . . . As to the story itself, it is wholly lovely and original, built around the simple, ordinary things that might happen to young students in the Dublin of today." M. M. Colum

+ Sat R 35:18 N 22 '52 700w

MULLAHY, PATRICK, ed. Contributions of Harry Stack Sullivan; a symposium of interpersonal theory in psychiatry and social science [papers presented at meetings of the William Alanson White association, New York City, Oct. 13-14, 1951]. 238p $3.50 Hermitage

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Sullivan, Harry Stack 52-10213

"Designed as a critical evaluation of Sullivan's contributions, rather than as a memorial to him, this book also represents the first published symposium of the Wm. Alanson White Institute of Psychiatry. The late Dr. Sullivan was a clinical psychiatrist whose theory (as opposed to Freud's), formulated from vast psychoanalytical experience with schizophrenics mainly, stresses interpersonal reactions between the individual and his social order." (Library J) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:787 My 1 '52 140w

"It is fitting that this volume, a symposium occasioned by Sullivan's tragic death, edited by his close associate and interpreter, should contain not primarily eulogy or a new system of axioms but inquiry, appraisal, and criticism. The attitude of the contributors is not that of disciples but of fellow-students engaged in joint investigation. Their papers are notable for being concerned not so much with attribution of credit and priority of discovery as with the ideas themselves." H. M. Lynd

+ Nation 175:155 Ag 23 '52 850w

Reviewed by Rollo May

+ N Y Times p6 J1 13 '52 850w

"The value of the book lies in providing a readily accessible collection of Sullivan's most important contributions to psychiatry.

These papers based on Sullivan's lectures and articles, state his views fully and clearly, more clearly, in fact, than did their originator. The tone of the papers is, however, one of appreciation rather than critical appraisal; because of this, the work of Sullivan is not as adequately related as it needs to be to the history and structure of dynamic psychiatry."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:324 S '52 160w

MULLER, HERBERT JOSEPH. Uses of the past; profiles of former societies. 394p $5.50 Oxford

901 Civilization

52-6168

"Professor Muller turns his attention to history and its lessons for a world in crisis. Adopting the 'tragic view' and irony as essential to the interpretation of history, he considers the golden ages of Greece, Rome and 'Holy Russia,' the legacies of Judaism, the rise of Christianity and the religious philosophies of the East. He concludes that history offers no final meaning and, far from accepting the over-simplifications of historians and the church, it behooves us, as never before, to 'look sharp.'" (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"This book comes as a welcome corrective. It is refreshing to see the Enlightenment established once again in the place of honor, to hear the early Middle Ages frankly called 'dark,' and to read that 'man's history on earth still looks like an evolution, and in the long view even like a progress.' Yet Professor Muller strives so hard to restore a sense of reasonableness in historical interpretation as against those who see only drift, unreason, and decay, that he sometimes says rather more than he needs to." H. S. Hughes

+ Am Hist R 58:73 O '52 800w

Booklist 48:278 My 1 '52

"Professor Muller is convincing when tearing to pieces Northrup's reduction of the opposition between the West and the East to the difference between the intellectual and esthetic (intuitive) approach to reality. . . . Having finished his 'profiles,' Professor Muller wants to draw a conclusion. But he has none to offer. As to immediate prospects, he is pessimistic." N. S. Timasheff

Commonweal 56:157 My 16 '52 550w

Current Hist 23:63 J1 '52 60w

"A professor of English at Purdue University, Mr. Muller writes with agility, candor and from a wide reading background. His book will draw fire but the controversy should be healthy. Recommended." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 77:716 Ap 15 '52 150w

"An exceedingly well written and exciting inquiry into the way history works. . . . For all its eloquence and feeling, the book is the most sensible work on the meaning of history it has been my good fortune to encounter; it deserves lengthy, careful and critical study." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 31 '52 900w

Reviewed by J. H. Randall

N Y Times p6 Je 29 '52 1050w

New Yorker 28:146 My 24 '52 130w

Reviewed by R. E. Turner

Sat R 35:51 Je 14 '52 500w

School & Society 75:400 Je 21 '52 20w

"The book is cogent in thought, rich in illustration, ironic without flippancy, eloquent without strain. Above all, it is a great and much-needed lesson in fearless intellectual honesty."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:285 S '52 240w

MULVEY, TIMOTHY JOSEPH. These are your sons. 278p $3.75 McGraw

951.9 Korean war, 1950-

52-10344

Father Mulvey, an Oblate Father, and former missionary to Japan, assembled these stories of some of the "unsung heroes" of the war in Korea, in order to "tell the people back in America" how their sons were facing up to the situation.

Bookmark 12:32 N '52 20w

"In a style reminiscent of Ernie Pyle the author of this engrossing, exciting book has captured not only the brutal picture of the war in Korea but in a series of sixteen anecdotes, he portrays the humanity, compassion and spirituality of the mere boys who are fighting and dying there."

+ Cath World 176:159 N '52 130w

"The author is Father Timothy J. Mulvey, an Oblate father, and former missionary in Japan. Only a man of the cloth could have written of your sons as he did. But I am prejudiced, for I was there and knew many of the men of whom Father Tim has written." J. H. Thompson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 21 '52 400w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 1 '52 140w

Kirkus 20:440 Jl 15 '52 120w

"The reporting is effectively done and if the style is somewhat effusive, it will undoubtedly appeal to readers who enjoy the Quentin Reynolds approach to war reporting." Roger McDonough

+ Library J 77:1501 S 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Frank Kelley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 5 '52 260w

"Father Timothy J. Mulvey spent his time well. Like most good war correspondents, he was curious and spent most of his hours listening to the men who did the fighting and writing about them. But he had one great advantage over the war reporters—time. His true stories, therefore, are complete and as emotionally satisfying as a good piece of fiction." Harold Faber

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '52 300w

"Father Mulvey writes with admiration, compassion, and wonderful humor, and gives a warmer and more believable picture of the Korean War than most professional correspondents have been able to do."

+ New Yorker 28:179 O 18 '52 90w

"Certainly this is as moving a narrative of our 'police action' as has been written. It is a harrowing experience, told with insight, hope and understanding; dramatic and stirring one moment, gentle and tender the next. Ernie Pyle would have found much in common with Father Mulvey." J. E. C.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '52 350w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Art and technics. 162p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

701 Art and Science. Art—Philosophy 52-1930

"In this slender volume, which reports the Bampton lectures in America, delivered at Columbia university in 1951, Lewis Mumford, social critic and philosopher, restates his position with respect to man and the machine. Mr. Mumford traces historically the conflict in man between the artistic [or subjective] impulse and the technical [or objective] urge, and shows how now one, now the other, of these forces has predominated in man's activities." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 40w

"This is a forceful book and a passionate one." Rexford Newcomb

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 25 '52 170w

Reviewed by Neil Martin

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 500w

Reviewed by F. X. Duggan

Commonweal 56:272 Je 20 '52 2300w

"The book is fairly meaty, and the author draws from his copious knowledge at will. A comfortable and solid dwelling upon ideas we would do well to consider. The author's plea for balance and wholeness in a human life, based upon human rather than mechanical values, will appeal to many thinkers."

+ Kirkus 20:179 Mr 1 '52 240w

"So arrestingly fresh and epigrammatic are Mr. Lewis Mumford's pronouncements, their impact so forceful, that it is only gradually that one realises that these six new lectures of his are the focusing to pin-point intensity of a humane philosophy as old as history itself rather than a new revelation." Clough Williams-Ellis

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 11 '52 460w

"This relatively short book is undoubtedly Mr Mumford's maturest achievement—calm and assured, the product of great knowledge and of deep desire." Herbert Read

+ New Repub 126:16 My 12 '52 1100w

New Yorker 28:106 Je 21 '52 200w

"This brave and profoundly sincere book is one every thinking man and woman would do well to ponder over; though brief, it is the most actual, and in that sense perhaps the most important, Mr. Mumford has yet written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p736 N 14 '52 800w

MUMFORD, LEWIS, ed. Roots of contemporary American architecture. 454p $7 Reinhold

720.973 Architecture—U.S. 52-10519

"A series of thirty-seven essays dating from the mid-nineteenth century to the present . . . [with] an introductory essay and biographies of the twenty-nine writers whose work appears herein [by the editor]." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 49:85 N 1 '52

"Lewis Mumford, the editor, has brought to light much that has been hidden by time. He has brought together essays which are milestones in our development, and, though they cover only part of our history, it is a very important part." W. K. Harrison

+ — N Y Times p24 N 30 '52 700w

MUNDT, ERNEST. Primer of visual art; the basis of advertising, posters, typography, textiles, display, interiors, ind. design, architecture, sculpture, photography, drawing, painting. 42p il spir pa $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

701 Art 51-12763

"This book presents a series of experiments in the fundamentals of the language of art—reduced to their simplest terms. The author emphasizes that they are not 'creative expressions'; they are indications of efforts at understanding and appreciating emotionally, as well as rationally, the vehicle through which the conception, the communication, and the summation of visual art takes place. The creative artist is urged to use these experiments as suggestions for original experiments." School Arts

MUNDT, ERNEST—Continued

"The director of San Francisco's California School of Fine Arts has compressed into small space a large fund of data covering a broad field. It cannot pretend therefore to be much more than a primer, but within that limitation, Mr. Mundt makes refreshingly good sense about the complex problems of typography, textiles, industrial design, architecture, sculpture, photography, drawing and painting." D. A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 16 '52 260w

School Arts 52:adv S '52 130w

MUNK, ARTHUR W. History and God; clues to His purpose. 310p $3.75 Ronald

231.7 History—Philosophy. Providence and government of God 52-6185

"An introduction to the philosophy of history is here presented by Prof. Munk of Albion College, with a foreword by Edgar S. Brightman. The purpose is to answer the question, What is the meaning of history? . . . Following his introductory material, the author seeks to find the meaning of history by examining 'seven clues' each of which when critically analyzed brings him nearer to his conclusion. . . . These chapters lead to the conclusion that history does make sense when all seven clues are followed." (Christian Century) Indexes.

"This volume is especially valuable as an introduction for those who would like to become acquainted with the philosophy of history." W. C. Prout

+ Christian Century 69:899 Ag 6 '52 550w
School & Society 75:303 My 10 '52 10w

MUNSON, GORHAM BERT, ed. Best advice on how to write. (Professional writers lib) 290p $3.50 Hermitage

808.06 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 52-13529

"Stressing Readability instead of Self-Expression, this is a collection of articles and aphorisms on writing by various experienced hands, from Fielding, Schopenhauer and Trollope to Arnold Bennett, Robert Penn Warren (a long, distinguished essay on Tone in writing), and the editor. Though intended for practicing writers, it is also helpful for beginners and interesting for laymen." Library J

Booklist 49:102 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N 52 30w

"The volume would serve best the writer who has begun to show professional skill and has become aware of technical problems and fine points, but who is not yet set in his ways." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 30 '52 70w

"A book for use and application and study, offering much of value in classrooms as well as in the home."

+ Kirkus 20:588 S 1 '52 120w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1650 O 1 '52 110w

"The best writers aren't always the best teachers of writing, but Gorham Munson has collected a thousand and one good ideas and suggestions in this 'treasury of pointers for practicing writers.' As author, editor and conductor of a course in professional writing, Mr. Munson himself is an authority." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p9C N 2 '52 210w

MUNSTERBERG, HUGO. Twentieth century painting. 102p 51il $5 Philosophical lib.

750.9 Painting—History 51-14569

"This book is a brief but thorough discussion of the main artists and main tendencies in the painting of our time. It attempts to explain and evaluate the work of the leading artistic personalities of the twentieth century in relationship to the age in which they live and of which they are such a vital expression." School Arts

"Succinct, illuminating evaluation of artistic personalities. . . . Well-chosen illustrations."

+ Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 20w

Kirkus 19:601 O 1 '51 150w

"The book cannot possibly be considered an adequate survey of twentieth-century art, but there are judgments in it which are sound and sensible. It is, for instance, agreeable to see Kandinsky politely demolished in four lines; one almost wonders if the author realises how complete the demolition has been." S. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 1 '52 170w

"It is written from a serious, historical point of view, but its lively, simple style will appeal to student and layman alike."

+ School Arts 52:12a N '52 40w

MURNAGHAN, FRANCIS DOMINIC. Finite deformation of an elastic solid. (Applied mathematics ser) 140p $4 Wiley

620.112 Deformation (mechanics). Elastic solids 51-14896

"An important contribution to the theory of elasticity. In it—in contrast to the classical infinitesimal, or linear theory—the deformations of an elastic solid under strain are viewed as finite and are studied chiefly by matrix algebra. The work is of practical value to engineers working in fields such as airfoil design where deformations under high pressures and strains must be computed." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:363 F 15 '52 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:20 Mr '52

MURPHY, BUD. Wild stallion; il. by William Moyers. 172p $2.50 World pub.

Horses—Legends and stories 52-8419

Describes the search for a wild Palomino of the Arizona desert region. An Eastern dude rancher finances the search, but it is a wise cattleman, Red Saunders, who does the planning. For young readers.

Booklist 48:382 J1 15 '52

"Absorbing tale." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 31 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:326 Je 1 '52 90w

"Boys and girls who have read and reread Will James's 'Smokey' will find this story almost as good. . . . This is a book that is sure to be popular among young people whose liking for what they call 'Westerns' has never waned."

+ Sat R 35:46 O 11 '52 200w

MURPHY, EDWARD FRANCIS. Yankee priest; an autobiographical journey, with certain detours, from Salem to New Orleans. 316p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 52-5117

Autobiography of Father Murphy, the Salem-born Irish priest who made a name for himself as the author of The Scarlet Lily. He traces his life from his boyhood in a poverty-stricken home in Massachusetts, to his mission in New Orleans, where his life has been dedicated to work among the Negroes.

Booklist 48:195 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:156 Ap '52 30w

"Its pages are full of the good natured fun which an irrepressible Irish sense of humor finds everywhere, and of the wisdom which life often gives as a bonus to those gifted with a sense of humor. . . . If amusing anecdotes make a point vividly, one of the most serious pleas for the Negro ever written is in his short survey, 'The Negro in America.' The information it contains may be surprising as well as stirring. 'Yankee Priest' is filled with persons [many famous] as well as with a personality, with good will as well as with an acceptance of God's will. It is a book which leaves both laughter and comfort in the way of its reading." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 27 '52 600w

Kirkus 19:716 D 15 '51 200w

"Intensely interesting autobiography." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 77:436 Mr 1 '52 140w

"Those who prefer austerity and discipline in writing may find Father Murphy's style a trifle high-flown, at times even too near the 'purple.' Nevertheless he has written a vigorous, entertaining book."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 9 '52 450w

"Here is a story warm and simple, frequently moving, sometimes chucklesome, often eloquent. . . Like many another good Celt, Edward Murphy ranks as a rare teller of yarns and here he offers probably his best book." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 27 '52 450w

"Fr. Murphy's career has been both colorful and inspiring and his story is a warm, human document, sprinkled liberally with humorous incidents that make for pleasant reading." T. J. O.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D F 10 '52 250w

MURPHY, JOHN. Origins and history of religions. 453p $6 Philosophical lib.

290 Religions

"The Professor of Comparative Religion at the University of Manchester, England, has approached this study of the religions of the world by a new and most interesting method. He arranges the religions of the world in a series of 'horizons,' each of which marks a stage in man's history and in the evolution of his culture. He starts with 'the primitive horizon,' the milieu of the food-gatherers and hunters. There follow the cultural circle of the animistic religions, then 'the agricultural horizon' created by the domestication of the food plants, 'the civilized horizon' in which 'the civilized mind' is developed which in turn makes possible 'the prophetic horizon' with its highly developed ethical and religious insights. Using these categories as a frame of reference Professor Murphy passes in review the leading religions of the world." (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis

Am Anthropol 52:423 J1 '50 170w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 1 '52 50w

"It is particularly heartening to find a scientific study of comparative religion which, starting with no precommitments or apologetic purpose, arrives at the conclusion that high religion—and specifically 'prophetic' religion—is not merely a carry-over of primitive traits into a civilized environment but represents a normal and characteristic activity of the civilized mind." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:877 J1 30 '52 750w

Reviewed by Joachim Wach

J Religion 30:153 Ap '50 120w

"A scholarly book, very interestingly written."

+ Kirkus 20:277 Ap 15 '52 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ag 17 '52 150w

"The publishers rightly call Dr. Murphy's book 'the result of a lifetime of study and research' and of many years of university teaching.' The last words suggest that it is also, like some of Aristotle's works, the product of generations of lectures; and, like Aristotle, Dr. Murphy is subject to the defects of this method of compilation. One is a complete lack of the literary graces. Style, presentation and even orthography are alike slipshod. . . A more serious consequence of what seems to be a lack of planning in the compilation of the book is that unequal depth and detail are given to equally important matters." C. M. Woodhouse

— Spec 184:156 Ag 4 '50 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ap 27 '51 550w

MURRAY, MAX. Doctor and the corpse. 221p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

Detective story.

52-13947

Kirkus 20:613 S 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 16 '52 50w

"Few light novelists can be as slickly readable as Mr. Murray; and his slickness this time has a surprising amount of backbone behind it." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p58 N 9 '52 80w

"It is written with the air of casual worldliness appropriate to its background."

New Yorker 28:136 N 1 '52 120w

"Though the general effect is diffuse and unfairly mystifying, there's a rather interesting duel between two doctors on shipboard, to lend suspense, and the writing is pleasant, B minus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 60w

MURRAY, PAUL. Free agent. 240p $2.95 Holt 51-11942

Detective story.

"Thick plot and thin characters."

Kirkus 20:576 S 1 '52 60w

"Love fills the large gaps between incidents in this rather transparent thriller and the consequence is quite slow and labored." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 D 7 '52 90w

"As a suspenseful detective-thriller, it is neat and absorbing, if never quite surprising. As a novel of people, and locale, it is equally satisfying. And melodrama and straight novel are beautifully blended with a nice sense of the continuity of everyday life throughout dramatic events." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p51 N 23 '52 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 14 '52 60w

"Characters are sharply drawn; lad of nine big factor; mature, authentic job; excellent suspense. Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:30 N 29 '52 20w

MURRAY, WILLIAM HUTCHISON. Scottish Himalayan expedition [1950] with 11 maps and diagrams by Robert Anderson. 282p $6 Macmillan

796.52 Himalaya mountains [52-7832]

"The purpose of reconnaissance being to provide data for the next comer, Mr. Murray's report on the party of four he led into the backblocks of Kumaon and Garhwal is a model; a detailed account of experience is fortified with abundant photographs, sketch-maps, a list of supplies and equipment, and a summary of expenses—surprisingly light." Spec

Booklist 48:277 My 1 '52

"Mr. Murray is a beginner. . . Where Ship-ton and Tilman, as connoisseurs, sip the wine and savour it slowly Murray gulps it down in joyful wonder. Yet the new-comer's approach provides the best book. As an explorer's record it is not important, although the party did useful work on new peaks and passes, but as a story of sheer enjoyment and adventure it stands high." Alastair Hetherington

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '51 250w

Reviewed by P. D. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 43:74 Ja 19 '52 300w

"The value of such a record to the prospective conqueror of the Girth Gorge or the Panch Chuli would be inestimable; but it has much to offer also as a narrative of ambitious adventure, of disconcerting difficulties that failed to disconcert." H. B.

+ Spec 188:379 Mr 21 '52 200w

MURRAY, W. H.—Continued

"The lively narrative, the eloquent photographs, which include four in convincing colour, and the 11 maps and diagrams make it easy as well as delightful to follow those competent, humorous Scots round those heavenly mountains. But this is much more than the standard 'expedition book.' Mr. Murray has a taste for the vicissitudes of travel at any level."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 Ja 25 '52
800w

MUSES, CHARLES A. Illumination on Jacob Boehme; the work of Dionysius Andreas Freher. 201p il $3.50 King's Crown press

189 Boehme, Jakob. Freher, Dionysius Andreas 51-13566

"The purpose of this book is to direct attention to D. A. Freher, a disciple of Jacob Boehme, and to rescue his work from the neglect in which it has lain for more than two centuries. Next to nothing is known with any certainty about his life, except that he was born at Nuremberg in 1649, was living in England in 1715, and died in London in 1728." (Times [London] Lit Sup) "The first chapter of Mr. Muses' book sketches Freher's life, circle, and influence; the second provides a full bibliography of the rich sources discovered. Part II of the book contains three chapters in which Mr. Muses summarizes Freher's interpretations of Boehme." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 62:231 Ap '52 250w

"Altogether, Mr. Muses succeeds in rousing a keen hope that more of Freher's work will be made available, until which time, perhaps, it would be as well that his status as an expositor of Boehme should be left undecided."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Mr 21 '52 600w

"The summaries are enlightening, but could well have been more precisely documented. Mr. Muses has, nevertheless, made a valuable contribution to the history of mysticism in Germany and in England."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:43 Mr '52 210w

MUSGRAVE, FLORENCE. Dogs in the family; il. by Robert Henneberger. 245p $2.50 Houghton

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-6897

Mrs. Garden, a widow with four young children, accepted her uncle's invitation to live in his farmhouse one winter and take care of his kennel of dogs while he went to Florida. There were many problems to be faced and obstacles to be overcome but in the end even the one member of the family who didn't love dogs, succumbed to the appeal of the odd dog, Mr. Pim.

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 12 '52
170w

Kirkus 20:451 Ag 1 '52 70w

"A slightly farfetched but quite convincing story. . . It is not important but pleasant. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 77:1521 S 15 '52 50w

"In a very well written family story we meet the Gardens, who, knowing nothing about dogs, find themselves in charge of a kennel of cockers. It is humorous, real, and full of both information and exciting incident. There is a great deal of good conversation. Perhaps it will be best liked by girls of around eleven, but both boys and girls of ten to fourteen who have dreamed of being vets or of owning a kennel will seize it with joy." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 12 '52 70w

"Florence Musgrave, a kennel owner herself, has presented the problems of country living and kennel operations with frankness and realism. Robert Hennebergers' attractive black and white illustrations are particularly effective when portraying boys and dogs. This warm family story will have strong appeal for the boys and girls." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p31 S 7 '52 160w

"In this the author of 'Mary Lizzie' has written a tale that will interest boys and girls who like dogs and want to know about their breeding, care, and training."

+ Sat R 35:67 N 15 '52 110w

MUSSELMAN, MORRIS MCNEIL. Second honeymoon. 247p $3 Crowell

818 Europe—Description and travel 52-1009

After twenty-five years of marriage the author and his wife (of I Married a Redhead fame) sold their California home and its contents, packed three suitcases and headed for Europe on a second honeymoon. Planning for six months they stayed a year finding life increasingly pleasant, relaxing, and inexpensive in France, Spain and finally on the island of Mallorca.

Booklist 48:245 Ap 1 '52

"One of the funniest books of the year and by far Musselman's best." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 30 '52
400w

Kirkus 20:106 F 1 '52 210w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 100w

"'Second Honeymoon' lingers over places where the food is good and wine is warming. Museums and other cultural objectives are given the brush-off, Mr. and Mrs. Musselman enjoyed themselves."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 13 '52 120w

Reviewed by Marshall Sprague

N Y Times p10 Mr 9 '52 360w

"All this is written with indefatigable good humor, without pretentiousness of any kind, and with the inclusion of a surprising amount of usable information if you're perhaps considering a similar trip. . . And behind the whole informal story is the reminder that the way to do something like this is just to do it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 12 '52
700w

MUZUMDAR, HARIDAS THAKORDAS. Mahatma Gandhi, peaceful revolutionary. (Twentieth century lib) 127p $2 Scribner

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand 52-13496

"Haridas T. Muzumdar, who is now in this country and teaching at Cornell College, Iowa, writes as a disciple, a contemporary and a fellow-Hindu. . . This is a work of piety, a tribute, a eulogy, a sermon in which Gandhi's ideas are texts to exhort our wicked world to turn to the true religion." (N Y Times) Bibliography, Chronology, Index.

Booklist 49:107 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:583 S 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p45 D 7 '52 410w

MYERS, CARMEL. Don't think about it; foreword by Lawrence S. Kubie. 60p $1.50 Doubleday

150.13 Consolation 52-5223

In which a famous movie star describes her philosophy of life. When her beloved husband died, instead of nursing her grief she decided to keep grief out of her mind, for her own sake and for that of her children.

"It is good, sane psychiatry and it works. Many people should have this book. It will help them." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 166:15 Je '52 120w

"An inspirational book for those who have suffered heavy loss and find the way back to a normal life blocked by grief."

+ Kirkus 19:695 D 1 '51 160w

Reviewed by Lucy Freeman

N Y Times p23 Mr 2 '52 130w

MYERS, CHARLES ANDREW, and SHULTZ, GEORGE P. Dynamics of a labor market; a study of the impact of employment changes on labor mobility, job satisfactions, and company and union policies. 219p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

331.137 Labor supply. Unemployment
51-11694

"Two professors of industrial relations at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, report on the effect of a widespread business recession on the economics of the labor market in one small New England town. Their study was based on first hand interviews with workers—employed and unemployed—unions and management. Business records were also made available. How workers went about finding new jobs, what the criteria of 'good' jobs were in a period of unemployment, the decline of grievance procedures and the weakening of union pressures are among the many phases considered." Library J

Reviewed by R. A. Lester
Am Econ R 41:1003 D '51 1150w

Reviewed by H. A. Bone
Ann Am Acad 280:194 Mr '52 400w

"The underlying research appears to have been well planned; and the argumentation is convincing. Considering the importance of its conclusions, the section dealing with management policies in the job-scarce market is relatively compressed." C. W. Efroymson
J Pol Econ 60:272 Je '52 650w

"Clearly, simply presented; of interest to unions, management, and economics students." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 76:1339 S 1 '51 90w

"The impact of the mill shutdown on local unions and managements is a worthwhile study. This book is highly recommended for those interested in learning more about the dynamics of labor markets. These recorded experiences show the effect of a mild business recession on both employers and workers and, as a result, should prove useful source material to anyone interested in either the economic or human-relations side of unemployment." R. S. Ostberg

+ Management R 40:787 D '51 500w

MYERS, ROBERT MANSON. From Beowulf to Virginia Woolf; an astounding and wholly unauthorized history of English literature. 75p il $2 Bobbs

817 52-10687

A book of humor which by means of puns, distorted quotations, misinformation as to names and dates, follows a hilarious course thru English literature from early days to the present.

"Myers' tissue of malapropisms and puns is for a rather special audience. Few things are less fun than unrecognized plays on words, and a quite highly developed knowledge of the history of English literature is prerequisite to the full recognition of many of Myers' gags." A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 O 5 '52 200w

"The result is like the English 1066 and All That, but louder, more cosmopolitan, and even funnier. . . For readers who swear by Information Please, or like to hear a pun drop." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1398 S 1 '52 130w

"If you want to know more about the Bucolic Plague or Pepys' Dairy there is no better source. But do you?" David Dempsey
N Y Times p14 O 12 '52 130w

"A worthless little book." R. H.
— Sat R 35:34 N 15 '52 180w

MYGATT, EMMIE D. Rim-rocked; a story of the new West; decorations by Peter B. Andrews. 215p $2.50 Longmans

52-5639

"Three boys spend a summer in Wyoming helping an old rancher who knows thoroughly the mountain country, people and animals, but does not know how to make money and is about to lose his ranch. The things the boys are able to do to help save the situation make an exciting but perfectly credible story." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:235 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 11 '52 180w

"The story [has] a well-developed plot, good characterization and an interesting background." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:111 Ap '52 70w

"Entertaining contemporary western adventure."

+ Kirkus 20:3 Ja 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 11 '52 70w

"Realistic background and skillful characterization give plausibility and add interest to a story which shows that the modern West offers reading as exciting and flavorful as the old." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '52 180w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen
Sat R 35:56 My 10 '52 100w

School & Society 75:141 Mr 1 '52 40w
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 80w

MYSTERY WRITERS OF AMERICA. Maiden murders; introd. by John Dickson Carr [pref. by Lawrence G. Blochman for the Anthology committee]. 302p $3 Harper

Short stories—Collections 52-7294

"Contains this year a selection from stories submitted by its members of the first mysteries they wrote or published." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Contents: Room number twenty-three, by Hugh Pentecost; The fifty-carat jinx, by L. G. Blochman; Bezique of death, by V. P. Johns; The little house at Croix-Rousse, by Georges Simenon; The riddle of the dangling pearl, by Stuart Palmer; Shoes for breakfast, by Lawrence Treat; Find the woman, by Kenneth Millar; Marksman, by W. C. Gault; Victim No. 5, by H. S. Keeler; The man in the velvet hat, by Jerome and Harold Prince; The adventure of the black narcissus, by August Derleth; And on the third day, by David Alexander; Too many brides, by Ruth Wilson; The fourth degree, by Jerome Barry; The second sight of Dr. Sain; Johnson, by Lillian De La Torre; Old calamity tries a bluff, by J. F. Fishman; A great whirling of wings, by Day Keene; Threnody, by Anthony Boucher; The adventure of the one-penny black, by Ellery Queen; The specialty of the house, by Stanley Ellin.

Kirkus 20:430 Jl 15 140w

"Of the twenty stories, Stanley Ellin's 'The Specialty of the House' and Ellery Queen's 'Adventure of the One-Penny Black' are likely to be familiar. Two of the twenty—those by Anthony Boucher and David Alexander—are published here for the first time. But most of them will be new to most readers and nearly all of them will seem worth a reading." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 19 '52 200w

"Even if the stories themselves were indifferent, the mystery fan would be fascinated to see from what acorns today's oaks of crime grew, and to read the author's historical-biographical notes on the circumstances attending that momentous first sale. But the miraculous fact is that this is not just a curiosum, but a much better than average straight anthology of crime and detective fiction." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p39 O 5 '52 280w

"The stories—youthful as some of them may be—are all enviably good; note especially Blochman, Johns, de la Torre, Boucher." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 5 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52 90w

N

NAGELL, TRYGVE. Introduction to number theory. 309p $5 Wiley

511.2 [511.3] Numbers, Theory of 51-13344

"An introduction to prime numbers and other aspects of elementary number theory. It is based upon lectures that were given by the author at the University of Uppsala for many years and the informal lecture style is retained. Proofs of all theorems are included, and some of the proofs are accompanied by supplementary remarks that will be very helpful to the reader studying the book by himself." N Y New Tech Bks

"This book is suitable for college students majoring in mathematics, graduate mathematicians and also laymen who pursue mathematics for recreation." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1938 N 15 '51 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:89 N '51

NAMIER, LEWIS BERNSTEIN. Avenues of history. 202p $3 Macmillan

904 History

"Most of Professor Namier's essays began as casual reviews on subjects as disparate as the Elizabethan Parliament, World War II . . . and the British General Election of 1950. Some, like 'History,' 'Nationality and Liberty,' and '1848,' constitute genuine studies of basic problems; others range from a masterly disagreement with Toynbee to lightweight discourses on long dead and justly forgotten court ladies." Sat R

"This present volume contains pieces of historical illumination which can stand comparison with the essays of Macaulay, Ranke, and Sorel. The opening essay, called simply History, is perhaps the best that even Namier has done." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 20 '52 480w

"In dealing with modern Germany Namier writes with acidulous authority. Seldom have I read anything more devastating than his review of the Memoirs of Richard von Kühlmann, imperial state secretary in 1917-18 and chief German delegate at the Brest-Litovsk peace conference." Keith Hutchison

Nation 175:453 N 15 '52 350w

"These discursive essays are certainly not regarded as constituting a major work, but as an introduction to an eminent British historian they serve admirably. They are what an introduction should be—polite, not too solemn, charming, yet exact." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 127:21 Ag 4 '52 400w

"Certain consistent attitudes, give a sort of unity to the volume. . . There is no doubt about the interest of this collection." James Joll

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:706 Je 14 '52 800w

"Unhappily, sometimes he breaks a butterfly upon a wheel. His style at his usual best is polished and incisive; his good humor seldom deserts him except when the topic is modern Germany." R. P.

+ Sat R 35:46 N 22 '52 240w

"In his new volume of essays Avenues of History Professor Namier groups together some of his recent reviews and articles, and puts readers in his debt by rescuing some striking essays from the back files of periodicals. He displays at the same time the effortless virtuosity of his historical powers, and the strength of the individuality which gives to these widely scattered studies (some of much more substance than others, but none of them negligible) a kind of organic unity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p431 J1 4 '52 1600w

NASH, MRS ELEANOR ARNETT. Lucky Miss Spaulding. 182p $2.50 Messner

52-8396

A combination of career story and love story, written for older girls. The background is a New York fashion store, and Caroline Spaulding works her way up to the threshold of a job as assistant buyer, thru a series of lucky breaks, plus an ability to work hard.

Kirkus 20:79 F 1 '52 170w

"A modern story with enough well-handled romance to satisfy older girls who have wearied of the straight career story. . . Recommended for older girls." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 77:801 My 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 13 '52 100w

"It's refreshing to find a heroine of a career story freely admitting that her success is due to luck, but Caroline Spaulding backed up her luck with determination and enthusiasm when she got her first job as errand girl to a fashion consultant. . . The story is liberally spiced with romance, handled with more verve than is common in this type of fiction." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '52 140w

NASH, OGDEN. Parents keep out; elderly poems for younger readers; drawings by Barbara Corrigan. 137p $2.75 Little 811

51-13805

Light verse, chiefly celebrating the confusion of the elderly vis-a-vis the younger generation.

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

"Surely this volume is a grand gesture to all children, a first-rate stroke of intergenerational diplomacy." Rod Nordell

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:54 F '52 20w

Kirkus 19:486 S 1 '51 90w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 77:366 F 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by S. V. Jacobsen

N Y Times p41 N 11 '51 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 8 '51 500w

School & Society 74:367 D 8 '51 30w

"Elderly readers of the poems, who naturally will have no intention of staying out of them, will recognize many old favorites. Younger readers, in case they haven't already done so, will find in Mr. Nash a good companion and a cheerful influence in a world that sometimes looks pretty corny just now." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p3D D 23 '51 150w

NASSET, EDMUND SIGURD. Food and you. 92p $3 Thomas, C.C.

612.3 Food. Nutrition

51-6896

"According to the author, he aims to provide an introduction to the normal processes of digestion and utilization of food, the nature of foods required for health, and the importance of proper methods of processing and cooking to insure obtaining the best possible value from food. . . Dr. Nasset has a wholesome respect for the marvelous chemical and physiologic devices which make the human machine tick and he takes every opportunity to call attention to specific instances where nature's plan meets a need in a unique fashion." Am J Pub Health

"This little book has a place in the public libraries for lay readers as well as on a professional shelf." H. S. Mitchell

+ Am J Pub Health 42:204 F '52 270w

"An excellent supplementary text for nutrition classes whose physiology background is weak." J. I. Rowntree

+ J Home Econ 44:65 Ja '52 120w

NATHAN, MRS ADELE (GUTMAN). Wheat won't wait; il. by Millard McGee. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin

McCormick, Cyrus Hall—Juvenile literature 52-11820

A fictionalized biography of Cyrus McCormick for junior high school age.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

"A nice treatment."

+ Kirkus 20:557 S 1 '52 70w

"It tells of his inventions and business progress in an easy style that will attract many boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 40w

"The retelling is not inspired." M. P. Allen
Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 10w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. World of George Jean Nathan; selected and ed. with an intro. by Charles Angoff. 489p $5 Knopf 814 51-11986

An anthology of selections from Mr. Nathan's published volumes, containing expressions of his views on a variety of subjects—men and women, Americana, world events.

Atlantic 189:84 Je '52 110w

Booklist 48:293 My '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 30w

Bookmark 12:38 N '52 10w

Reviewed by Charles Collins

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 My 11 '52 440w

Kirkus 20:212 Mr 15 '52 130w

"Recommended for all theatre and drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 120w

Nation 174:532 My 31 '52 240w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin

New Repub 126:21 Je 9 '52 600w

"In 'The World of George Jean Nathan' Mr. Angoff has gathered from the forty odd volumes of his work some excerpts that are thirty—even forty—years old, and they seem still fresh and forceful, reminding us once again of the great influence Nathan has exercised on the changing American literary scene." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 1 '52 1100w

"Some of the volume, it must be said at once, dates, almost nostalgically. . . Fortunately there is more and better in this book. . . There is a great deal of critical good sense and wisdom, if superficial and worldly, and some of it not unlike what passes for wisdom among those Philistines whom Mr. Nathan has so long been attacking." Irwin Edman

+ — N Y Times p3 My 4 '52 1300w

New Yorker 28:143 My 17 '52 160w

"It is a complete delight and should rekindle interest in and enthusiasm for Nathan as the recent H. L. Mencken biographies and collections have stirred interest in that wonderful literary buffoon." William Hogan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 4 '52 650w

Reviewed by Lawrence Langner

Sat R 35:34 My 24 '52 1450w

"Culled from nearly three dozen books of Mr. Nathan's that are now out of print, here is the author of that brilliant work, 'The Critic and the Drama at his best.' Richard McLaughlin

+ Theatre Arts 36:6 My '52 300w

Time 59:110 My 12 '52 1150w

NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE AGING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 1950. Man and his years; an account of the first Conference. 311p $3.25; pa $1.75 Health Publications Inst, Inc, 216 N Dawson St, Raleigh, N.C.
618.97 Old age

"This is a summary account of the first National Conference on Aging sponsored by the Federal Security Agency. The book is framed with brief introductory statements by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, and John L. Thurston, Deputy Administrator, and a concluding chapter forecasting the 'next steps' by Clark Tibbitts, the conference director. In between are eleven chapters dealing with population changes, income, employment and rehabilitation, health, education, family life, creative and recreational activities, religious programs, professional personnel, research on the aging, and community organization." Ann Am Acad

"In this compilation there is inevitably overlapping and duplication in content, but this apparent fault is actually its greatest virtue. The primary needs of older people and of the society in which they live are objectively identified, examined, and analyzed in relation to the special facet of daily life with which a given section was charged. Each chapter, then, becomes an independently valuable source of reference both as to needs and recommended action or program on its particular topic. For those concerned with the future well-being of older people and of the people of whom they constitute a growing proportion, the book in its entirety is a 'must.'" O. A. Randall

+ Am J Pub Health 42:208 F '52 240w

"It is the opinion of this reviewer that both the conference and the book have been well worth the efforts expended and that such a conference should be repeated at a suitable time and place." L. W. Simmons

+ Ann Am Acad 280:210 Mr '52 330w

"Man and His Years should interest social studies teachers, especially those who teach the problems course. This book constitutes the first inclusive treatment of a national problem of increasing importance." J. C. McLendon

+ Social Educ 16:300 O '52 350w

NATIONAL MANPOWER COUNCIL. Student deferment and national manpower policy; a statement of policy by the Council, with facts and issues prepared by the Research staff. 102p $2 Columbia univ. press

355.22 Military service, Compulsory. Students 52-1833

"An examination of the facts and issues of student and apprentice deferment takes into consideration military and civilian needs and presents various viewpoints on the question. A summary of the Council's recommendations is included." Booklist

Am Pol Sci R 46:898 S '52 40w

"This volume presents a vital and continuing American problem in its today and tomorrow setting. . . The study suffers from two defects: Though short, it is repetitious because of its organization. . . Finally, one who has been in communication with individual draft boards about individual students may note that, handsome as the plan is, things do not always proceed according to plan." F. R. B. Godolphin

+ — Ann Am Acad 284:206 N '52 340w

Booklist 48:352 J1 1 '52

"It is a timely work, which contains also some useful statistical tables, highly recommended for libraries of all types." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1197 J1 '52 160w

NATIONAL PLANNING ASSOCIATION. Manual of corporate giving. See Ruml, B., ed.

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL. See Phase transformations in solids; symposium held at Cornell university, August 23-26, 1948

NEGLEY, GLENN ROBERT, and PATRICK, JOHN MAX, eds. Quest for utopia. 599p $6.75 Schuman

321.07 Utopias 52-7939

"An anthology of imaginary societies" containing either the whole or excerpts from more than thirty works dealing with utopias. Among the selections are: Freeland, by Theodor Hertzka; A modern utopia, by H. G. Wells;

NEGLEY, G. R.—Continued
The City of the sun, by Tommaso Campanella; New Atlantis, by Francis Bacon; Niels Klin's journey under the ground, by Ludvig Holberg.

Am Pol Sci R 46:602 Je '52 10w
 + Kirkus 19:429 Ag 1 '51 200w
 "Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
 + Library J 76:1330 S 1 '51 130w
 San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '52 200w

"Anthologies are sometimes suspect on scholarly grounds because it is so easy to collect and to publish the wit and wisdom of others. The indictment, however, does not apply to Negley, a professor of philosophy at Duke, and Patrick, an associate professor of English at Queens. They have performed here a signal service to scholarship. They supply, in addition to their selections, an astute analysis of the entire corpus of utopian literature. They are to be commended for offering to the sociologist and to the general reader alike a unique and intriguing volume." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R 35:34 My 10 '52 480w
 School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 20w

NEIDER, CHARLES, ed. Great shipwrecks and castaways; authentic accounts of adventures at sea; introd. by [the editor]. 238p $3 Harper 910.45 Shipwrecks. Survival (after airplane accidents, shipwrecks, etc) 51-11943

"Here is a collection of true-sea going tales taken from the diaries and letters of survivors of sea catastrophes. Because of the convincing and factual style of the early writers, the author has selected seven of his tales from the 16th and 17th centuries, with modernized spelling and punctuation. Eight of the stories, including the adventures of Selkirk, the original Crusoe, date from the 18th century, five from the 19th, and one, Robert Scott's tragic march to the South Pole, from the 20th." Library J

Booklist 48:170 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 20w

"Each of the stories is a masterpiece in itself, revealing the terrors, horrors [including cannibalism], and soul torture the victims of each disaster experienced. Reading them is like discovering some long forgotten manuscript." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 30 '51 220w

Kirkus 19:653 N 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
 Library J 77:47 Ja 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Acken
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 6 '52 360w

"Here is a book that will continue to haunt the most seasoned armchair adventurer long after he has turned the last page." J. M. Conrole

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 6 '52 600w
 Wis Lib Bul 48:34 Ja '52

NEILL, ROBERT. Elegant witch [Eng title: Mist over Pendle]. 346p $3.50 Doubleday

52-5227

A tale of witchcraft in Lancashire, England, in the seventeenth century. The heroine is a young girl brought up in the Puritan manner, who is sent to live with a much older cousin in Lancashire. The cousin is a magistrate, and in serving as his secretary Margery learns almost too much about witches.

Booklist 48:248 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 20:13 Ja 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by John Raymond
 + New Statesman & Nation 41:660 Je 9 '51 130w

Reviewed by Richard Match
 N Y Times p23 Mr 23 '52 360w
 New Yorker 28:118 Mr 15 '52 60w

"There is a magnificent description of a Christmas Eve party of the period. The accounts of the witch trials ring true and have a sinister quality that is no doubt authentic. There is more than enough evidence that Mr. Neill knows his period, detests its cruelty and poverty, yet admires its color and excitement. He gives you much of all that, and he does it in a style that is not lacking in charm and grace." Robert Taliant

+ Sat R 35:43 My 24 '52 330w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
 Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 30w

"A well-written, exciting novel, which gives an excellent account of daily life in the seventeenth century."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 8 '51 800w

NEILL, ROBERT. Traitor's moon [Eng title: Moon in Scorpio]. 318p $3.50 Doubleday

52-10991

A historical novel about life in London and Lancashire in 1679, the year after Titus Oates revealed the Popish Plot.

Booklist 49:90 N 1 '52

"Historical romancing with an added ballast of contemporary problems, this is a well-steeped brew."

+ Kirkus 20:516 Ag 15 '52 100w

"It will please readers who like their historical novels to be written in good English, with a backing of scholarship and a decent regard for the dignity of history. Mr. Neill has a feeling for beauty of colour and rhythm, but these virtues neither prevent nor offset a general miasma of make-believe and a tiresome, magazinish love-story." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:192 Ag 16 '52 50w

"Mr. Neill has decked out his solid tale with many touches of the times and has provided his hero and heroine with some supporting characters of real interest in themselves. His characters tend to talk much too much and he too frequently slows up the pace by having them explain too much. They're fine though when they are actually doing something, which is a good part of the time."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 7 '52 130w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p36 O 5 '52 320w

"[The tale] is perhaps a shade too leisurely in its telling for some tastes, but that gives [the author] time to get in the period atmosphere, which he makes surprisingly interesting. It also gives him time to develop those subsidiary characters. I like particularly an eccentric astrologer, although he was inclined to go on at somewhat too great length about his craft." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:44 O 25 '52 100w

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 110w

"Mr. Neill, though he draws an enthralling picture of London controlled by Shaftesbury's Brisk Boys, and the fears of Cavaliers and Recusants in Lancashire as the veterans of the New Model Army plot and rearm, has scarcely attempted to bring his fictional characters to life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p449 Jl 11 '52 70w

NEISSER, MRS EDITH (GLICKSMAN). Brothers and sisters. 241p $3 Harper

136.7 Family. Parent and child. Children—Management 51-13114

A study of sibling jealousy and frictions, their causes and cures. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:139 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:39 N '51 20w

"The author, a resident of Highland Park and long connected with the association for Family Living, is friendly and positive in her approach, maintaining that the general atmosphere of a home is more important than the way any one situation is handled." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 4 '51 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

"The only book known to this reviewer which examines sources of rivalry between children in a family, sets up goals for better relationships, and discusses in detail how these goals may be at least partially achieved. The orientation is psychiatric; the approach, practical; the language, as simple as possible." R. F. Osborne

+ El School J 52:538 My '52 700w

Kirkus 19:425 Ag 1 '51 160w

"A sensible book in popular style for parents, teachers and group leaders about relationships of children growing up together in a family. The author is quite familiar with the literature in the field of sibling rivalry, and she has some sound comments on how to handle jealousy in children and how to help families foster satisfying experiences among children." Irving Babow

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 F 3 '52 90w

"A book that can be highly recommended for home, school, and general use. Because it is basically sound and delightfully written, it is sure to become a real resource for parents, group leaders, and teachers." R. H. Alschuler

+ Survey 88:232 My '52 500w

Wis Lib Bul 48:85 Mr '52

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Season for murder. 250p $2.50 Rinehart

52-5561

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 15 '52 70w

Kirkus 20:138 F 15 '52 50w

"It's the incidental trim that matters and I'm afraid there isn't quite enough of it to conceal the fact that it isn't a very interesting mystery." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 6 '52 70w

"The tension building to the opening of the season for fish and tourists, with its attendant complete change in the economics of a small mountain town, is far more suspenseful than the somewhat desultory investigation of a murder or two; and a spectacularly described forest fire builds the ending to a pitch of which neither detective nor criminal is capable." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '52 70w

"Amiable but confusing." Kathleen Sproul

Sat R 35:63 Ap 12 '52 50w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Sleep is deep. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

52-9601

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Kirkus 20:523 Ag 15 '52 60w

"Mr. Nelson gives his principals just enough pungent distinction to catch one's interest nicely and he invents a succession of incidents in which they perform teasingly. It's a book in which one turns pages eagerly." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 9 '52 100w

"The writing's a bit hasty and unsubtle for the subject; but the Colorado mountain background is fine." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 N 16 '52 40w

"Just why these Nelson books miss fire is difficult to say; there's always action, there's interesting background, yet life goes out of them about halfway through. To add irritation, commas usually replace conjunctions." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 60w

"Moves nicely after reader straightens out large cast; adult, conscientious job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:56 N 22 '52 20w

NELSON, JOSEPH RALEIGH. Lady Unafraid; jacket painting and decorations by Richard A. Huff. 278p $5 Caxton ptrs.

B or 92 Nelson, Mrs Rebecca Jewel (Francis). Indians of North America—Missions. Frontier and pioneer life—Michigan. Chipewewa Indians 51-12893

The story of one year in the life of the author's mother: the year 1862, when as a girl of seventeen she served as a missionary teacher among the Ojibway Indians in the village of L'Anse on Lake Superior.

Booklist 48:98 N 15 '51

Reviewed by Edith Prudden

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 F 28 '52 600w

Kirkus 19:378 Jl 15 '51 110w

"Professor Nelson writes with a son's pride in a mother whose resourcefulness and charm made her beloved by Methodist missionaries and Roman Catholic bishop, and won Indian hearts from the youngest to the great Chief himself. Readable throughout, the narrative is climaxed in the story of the feast of 'Moon on the Crust of Snow' where the little school-teacher is being adopted into the tribe."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p33 My 11 '52 230w

"No feature of this unusual story is more significant than the picture of friendly intimacy and close co-operation between the Methodist missionaries and a wise old Catholic bishop. Keen suspense and novel adventure fill the pages of a beautifully made book, appropriate for general family reading." E. G. Eastman

+ Springfield Republican p1A D 9 '51 390w

NELSON, TRUMAN. Sin of the prophet. 450p $4 Little

Parker, Theodore—Fiction. Burns, Anthony—Fiction 52-5007

In the year 1854 a runaway slave from Virginia sought refuge in Boston. Altho he won friends and was defended by Theodore Parker, the Great Abolitionist preacher, the case was lost, and the slave, Anthony Burns, was sent back to Virginia. This is a novel based on the event.

Booklist 48:229 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:152 My '52 250w

"It is an historical novel, but an historical novel, with a difference. Those who are looking for a romance, for an evening's escape, will be disappointed. It is a novel, not to make one emotive but to make one think. . . It is true that he has written fiction, but it is historical fiction in the best sense of the word." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 24 '52 410w

"This novel is well organized and artistically constructed, though at times interest tends to lag. It is an immense mass of material that the author has worked through, and he has succeeded in bringing forth an informative and moving order from a rather chaotic and contradictory mingling of forces and motives." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 69:732 Jl 2 '52 180w

Reviewed by Denham Sutcliffe

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 260w

Reviewed by P. E. Osgood

Churchman 166:15 My 15 '52 190w

"Important and moving reading for our time."

+ Kirkus 19:684 D 1 '51 320w

NELSON, TRUMAN—Continued

"A complete research-filled but never stodgy treatment of a subject and people who walk out of its pages. Essential for all public libraries." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:361 F 15 '52 150w

"In 'The Sin of the Prophet' a sure and vigorous talent has combined the reality of history and the ideal of art." J. S. Redding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 24 '52 700w

"Mr. Nelson deliberately tries to record the event as it happened and to keep his chronology 'fairly exact.' The actual facts are dramatic enough to impart a sweep to almost any account, but Mr. Nelson's wooden dialogue and heavy-handed efforts to create an atmosphere of crisis swell his version into rododromade. Theodore Parker was a great and good man. He does not need, in order that his example be taken to heart by scholars and intellectuals, to have his career turned into a lurid and sensational homily." Perry Miller

N Y Times p32 F 17 '52 370w

"The impact of this remarkable documentary novel is overwhelming. Considering that it is Mr. Nelson's first published book makes it even more remarkable. The pages of 'The Sin of the Prophet' have a subdued epic quality that is directly attributable to the author's bold, dispassionate narrative style and deep feeling for his subject. It is a historical novel that challenges the best of Kenneth Roberts on every point of comparison." Jack Aldridge

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 16 '52 700w

"This book is guaranteed to stir even those readers who may not be prepared to accept without question its total implications. Its narrative power, poetic feeling, psychological insights, and climactic grandeur assure it a deservedly wide reading public." R. B. Morris

+ Sat R 35:19 F 16 '52 900w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:255 S '52 240w

Wis Lib Bul 48:94 Mr '52

NETTL, JOHN PETER. Eastern zone and Soviet policy in Germany, 1945-50. 324p maps $5.50 Oxford

943.087 [943.086] Germany—Economic conditions 51-14125

"Author gives comprehensive analysis of political, administrative and economic developments in Eastern Germany since dissolution of the Third Reich and deals also interestingly with place of Soviet zone in Eastern bloc. Nettl's political information is largely based on 'unpublished and unpublizable' material secured from within the Soviet zone; economic data is taken from various German sources." Library J

"The best study yet to appear on this important subject."

+ Foreign Affairs 30:337 Ja '52 40w

"This judiciously written and well documented volume will be useful for academic and larger public libraries; strongly recommended to students of European affairs." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:1926 N 15 '51 190w

"Thoughtful and well-documented study, the best available." P. E. Moseley

+ Nation 174:64 Ja 19 '52 800w

"Mr. Nettl, I think, underrates both the impact of Nazism and the harshness of a Communist regime. In spite of this, however, the clear lesson of his book is of the danger of continued Russian totalitarian rule over one-third of a divided Germany." T. R. Fyvel

New Statesman & Nation 42:684 D 8 '51 750w

"Among books which deal with the Soviet zone, Nettl's is without doubt the most valuable, reliable, comprehensive and accurate.

The author has no special cause to plead and he has cast light on many aspects heretofore unnoticed or unobserved." Jack Falcon

+ Pol Sci Q 67:302 Je '52 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 21 '52 750w

NETTL, PAUL. Forgotten musicians. 352p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

927.8 Musicians 51-14690

"It is the aim of this book to recapture the memory of musicians who have fallen into oblivion today." To this end the author brings together the translated autobiographies of five 18th-century musicians (Dittersdorf very much abbreviated, Benda, Neefe, Schenk, Quantz) and essays on Schmelzer, Biber, Scheller, Abt, Johann Stamitz, Kelley, Tomaschek, and Vorisek as well as a brief history of Jewish village musicians or minstrels and a roll call of musical monarchs and princes." Library J

Christian Century 69:466 Ap 16 '52 250w

"A varied offering indeed, and absorbing." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:2114 D 15 '51 80w

"There are some minor flaws in the writing, including occasional lapses into fanciful or vague and unnecessary details and a few awkward Germanic constructions. But, on the whole, the book holds the attention and reads easily in spite of an occasional hint of a forced style. The translations appear to be expertly done." Sydney Beck

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:603 S '52 470w

Reviewed by H. C. Schonberg

N Y Times p16 F 3 '52 400w

NEUBERGER, RICHARD LEWIS. Lewis and Clark expedition; il. by Winold Reiss. (Landmark bks) 180p $1.50 Random house

978 [917.8] Lewis and Clark expedition—Juvenile literature 51-14181

Story of the Lewis and Clark expedition told for grades four to seven.

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

"A lively and exciting reconstruction of the amazing expedition of Lewis and Clark."

+ Kirkus 19:440 Ag 15 '51 110w

"Format is excellent and double-page map showing the route is easy to follow and clarifies the material. Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 30w

"Richard L. Neuberger has retold their story so deftly that he gives it a new charm and interest. It should prove one of the most popular of these new additions." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p36 N 11 '51 70w

"This reviewer has seldom read a more worthwhile non-fiction book for young people than this." M. P. Allen

+ Sat R 35:54 F 16 '52 120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:44 Ja '52

NEUGEBAUER, OTTO. Exact sciences in antiquity. 191p il $5 Princeton univ. press

510.93 Mathematics, Astronomy 52-5824

"A scholarly study of Babylonia and Egyptian mathematics and astronomy and their relationship to Hellenistic science. Also there are interesting side-lights on the importance of archaeology to historians of science. The material was originally prepared and delivered as the 1949 Messenger lectures at Cornell University." Library J

Reviewed by Marshall Clagett

+ Am Hist R 58:80 O '52 550w

"The book will appeal to advanced students of the history of science and the history of civilization." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:723 Ap 15 '52 80w

"Distinguished by a degree of clarity that can only result from exceptional mastery of the subject, the book succeeds admirably in conveying 'the fascination which lies in active work on historical problems.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:203 Je '52 300w

NEUMANN, HENRY. Spokesmen for ethical religion. 173p $2 Beacon press

170 Adler, Felix. Ethical culture movement 51-11143

"This book celebrates the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the first Ethical Culture Society in America. The author has been a leader in the Ethical Society for many years, and largely from personal acquaintance gives sketches of Felix Adler, John Lovejoy Elliott, and other leaders of the movement both in America and in Europe. Three chapters sum up the teachings of the Society. Four of the ten chapters are given over to the thoughts and deeds of Felix Adler, founder of the movement." (Crozer Q) Index.

Reviewed by Ephraim Fischhoff

Ann Am Acad 278:228 N '51 500w

"For those (like this reviewer) to whom the Ethical Culture Society has been little more than a name, Dr. Neumann's account provides a pleasant means of filling in a gap of knowledge. I suspect that even the well-informed will be able to learn much." Luke Ebersole

+ Crozer Q 29:80 Ja '52 420w

Reviewed by William Sacksteder
Ethics 62:73 O '51 150w

Reviewed by James Gutmann
J Philos 48:815 D 20 '51 350w

Reviewed by R. D. Kohn
Survey 88:89 F '52 430w

NEURATH, MARIE. Rockets and jets. 36p col il $1.50 Lothrop

629.14353 [629.13338] Rockets (aeronautics)—Juvenile literature. Jet propulsion—Juvenile literature 52-7728

Simple text and easy to understand drawings explain the fundamental principles of rockets, jet propelled airplanes, automobiles and ships, concluding with the space-ship heading for the moon.

Booklist 48:237 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Kirkus 20:156 Mr 1 '52 100w

"Invaluable for science teachers in the grades. Can be read by children from fourth grade up." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:603 Ap 1 '52 80w

"Here are diagrams that make you think you know these matters well, and you do know the basic principles, such as how a jet is used to turn a propeller. A few pages at the end suggest the jet cars, jet ships and space ships of the future. It is a brilliant sort of simplification for all boys of about eight to fourteen who are interested." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 11 '52 140w

NEURATH, MARIE. Wonder world of animals. (Chanticleer ed) 36p il $1.85; bds $1.50 Lothrop

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of "This little book answers many questions about animals which small children ask. It tells which animals are largest—where animals live in winter and how animals work and how they defend themselves and take care of their young. Illustrated with drawings and color wash by the author." Library J

Booklist 49:130 D 1 '52

Kirkus 20:655 O 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 77:1666 O 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12, p28 N 16 '52 20w

NEVENS, WILLIAM BARBOUR. Principles of milk production. 443p il maps $5 McGraw

637 Dairying Agr51-107

"Much ground is covered in this introductory textbook. There are discussions of not only the expected subjects but also of soil management, grass silage, hay drying, etc. The presentation is extremely simple, and the information is up-to-date. Supplementary reading lists refer to more advanced treatments of specific topics. Suitable for use both as an agriculture school text and as home reading for young farmers." Library J

Booklist 48:62 O 15 '51

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:537 Mr 15 '52 60w

NEVILLE, MARGOT, pseud. of MARGOT GOYDER, and NEVILLE (GOYDER) JOSKE, Divining rod for murder. 192p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5230

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:689 D 1 '51 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17 '52 110w

"Divining Rod for Murder abandons the police novel for pure hysteria, with an absurd and unfair plot, tastelessly overwritten prose, and a new all-time high in Idiot Heroines." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p25 F 10 '52 80w

"In spite of one orphan clue about watches, thinness of solution and over-thickness of atmosphere, this has a couple of nice twists and some fresh characterizations. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 70w

"Plotting ingenious, but suspense sequences grow top-heavy as heroine insists on playing lone hand." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:55 F 16 '52 20w

NEVIN, MRS EVELYN C. Captive of the Delawares; il. by Fred Sanchez. 127p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

52-8367

"This story is based on actual historical records. During the Revolutionary War a young girl, Frances Slocum, was captured by the Delaware Indians. She lived with the Delawares, learned their language, moved westward with them, and married a chief of the Miamis. When she was a grown woman with children, she had an opportunity to return to her white relatives. But she had become so accustomed to the Indians and the Indian way of life that she preferred staying with them." Foreword

Booklist 48:285 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 29 '52 160w

"A pretty quiet telling with background at the minimum, but on the whole pleasant and unobtrusive. Fred Sanchez' drawings are equally stylized and quiet."

+ Kirkus 20:124 F 15 '52 80w

"An immediate hit with boys and girls from eight-twelve." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:730 Ap 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11 '52 110w

"I think it may be hard for children, safe in their own homes, to understand fully how Frances could renounce her own family in so short a time. On the other hand, youngsters will probably enjoy very much the descriptions of daily life, the hunts and the rituals." E. L. B.

N Y Times p28 My 25 '52 180w

The NEW MEXICO QUARTERLY REVIEW. New Mexico artists: John Sloan [and others]; guest artist series from the New Mexico quarterly, spring 1949, through winter, 1950-51]. (New Mexico artist ser) 124p il pl $3 Univ. of N.Mex. press

709.789 Artists, American. Art—New Mexico 52-8536

Critical essays which first appeared in the New Mexico quarterly, with reproductions of the artists' works. Contents: John Sloan, by Walter Pach; Ernest L. Blumenschein, by Howard Cook; Gustave Baumann, by Vincent Garofolo; Kenneth M. Adams, by Lózes Goff; Adja Yunkers, by J. P. Leeper; Raymond Jonsón, by Ben Wolf; Peter Hurd, by Paul Horgan; Howard Cook, by Carl Zigrosser.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1510 S 15 '52 100w

"The names of some of the artists chosen for discussion will occasion surprise, especially among readers from the eastern seaboard of the country. The wide differences in artistic style, in subject matter, mood, and approach testify at once to the catholicity of the artists and of the taste that has directed the selection of them. Although the paintings illustrated here are not particularly interesting nor effective, the sketches and drawings reproduced are both lively and rewarding, and many of them were produced especially for this book. New Mexico Artists is, indeed, a small and unpretentious but pleasant testimony to regional taste, talent, and artistic activity."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:128 Je '52 200w

NEW Modern encyclopedia; a library of world knowledge; based on edition ed. by A. H. McDannid completely rev. and reset. 1494p il maps $5 Wise

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"This book carries the seventh copyright date of a work first published under the title Modern Encyclopedia and reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for January 1934. The Concise Encyclopedia, based on the Modern Encyclopedia and published in eight volumes for $2.98, was reviewed in the October 1937 issue of the Bulletin. The 1943 edition, published under the present title, was reviewed in the October 1943 issue. The Foreword, signed by 'The Publishers,' states that the book 'attempts to fill the need for a handy, single volume reference work which will answer quickly and easily most of the questions of Who? What? When? and Where? that occur every day. It does not presume to be exhaustive nor highly technical.' . . . As in the 1943 edition, articles are arranged in one alphabet with two columns to a page. Entries vary in length from one or two short sentences to nine and one-half columns. Pronunciation is not indicated; no authorities are cited; and there are no bibliographies." Subscription Bks Bul

"The small illustrations, chiefly pen drawings and predominantly of natural history subjects, are on the whole clear. . . Few errors of punctuation and typography are noted in The New Modern Encyclopedia. Headings in bold-face capitals stand out well on the page. Type for the text is small but readable, and the paper is thin but opaque. . . Lack of authority, uncertain coverage, and insufficient cross references make The New Modern Encyclopedia an inadequate reference source for homes or libraries. It is recommended only as a low-cost one-volume work, providing information which may prove useful in homes where more efficient and authoritative reference books cannot be purchased."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 23:9 Ja '52 1050w

NEW WRITING (periodical). Best stories; ed. by John Lehmann [Eng title: English stories]. 351p $3.50 Harcourt

Short stories—Collections 51-14182

Contents: The Nowaks, by Christopher Isherwood; Shooting an elephant, by George Orwell; I have been drowned, by Tom Hopkinson; Next door to death, by James Stern; The sailor, by V. S. Pritchett; The red-haired Miss Daintreys, by Rosamond Lehmann; Mr. Jonas, by Henry Green; A great day, by Frank Sargeson; Men at work, by Graham Greene; Pioneer city, by Julia Strachey; The search, by Rollo Woolley; The pigeon cree, by Sid Chaplin; Ward 'O' 3(b), by Alun Lewis; Poets' excursion, by Joseph Gurnard; Mysterious Kör, by Elizabeth Bowen; A wrist watch and some ants, by R. D. Marshall; Summer, by Dorothy Baker; Above the clouds, by John Sommerfeld; Money for jam, Alec Guinness; The judas tree, by Denton Welch; How Claes died, by William Sansom; The blanket, by Jocelyn Brooke; Crowning glory, by P. H. Newby; A dark red chrysanthemum, by Anthony Thorne.

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 174:90 Ja 26 '52 110w

"The variety, the high seriousness, the artistic and intellectual integrity of these stories make this a book which no reader interested in contemporary fiction should miss." William Peden

+ New Repub 126:21 F 4 '52 340w

"To discuss these twenty-four short stories must, indeed, be to discuss the achievement of English fiction in the last fifteen years, for all but a few of the important writers of that period are included among their authors. The quality of writing, the formal approach, the intellectual and emotional pre-occupations represent the main features of the post-Huxley era. There are the common virtues of sharp visual observation, of attention to style, of restraint, and of compassion. The approach is always serious, seldom pompous. . . Heightened sensibility and exact observation too often produce brilliant, but insignificant, reportage, though most of the twenty-four writers represented in the present collection are too skilful to fall deeply into this pitfall." Angus Wilson

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:222 F 24 '51 1200w

Reviewed by Louis Simpson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 23 '51 600w

"It is true that, as a collection, this one seems marked by a very real creative vitality. . . This is not to say that all these stories are excellent, or even good. A few of them are downright weak. But taken all together, they suggest a concern about the faithful rendering of human experience in words. They exhibit no fakery, no apparent twisting or forcing of material to suit either editorial or popular demand." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p4 N 18 '51 550w

"What stands out most strikingly in the collection is the sense of each writer as an individual—a very good, reassuring impression of many minds working in their own ways and at their own speeds. . . It is the sort of book to own and keep handy—a really satisfactory collection of short stories."

+ New Yorker 27:170 D 8 '51 120w

"If you like the quiet charm, delicate perception, and solid craftsmanship which characterizes British short-story writing at its best, you'll like this volume—almost all of it. And you'll thank Mr. Lehmann for making so much of it available, first in his magazine and now in this admirable collection." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:13 Ja 12 '52 370w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec 185:292 Mr 2 '51 160w

NEW YORK (city). Metropolitan museum of art. Art treasures of the Metropolitan; a selection from the European and Asiatic collections of the Metropolitan museum of art, presented by the curatorial staff. 240p il col il $12.50 Abrams

708 New York (city). Metropolitan museum of art 52-14388

"A sample tour of the Metropolitan's European and Oriental holdings in painting, sculpture, drawings, prints, and ceramics is made available in this fine selection illustrated with 130 color photographs and 80 monochromes. Introductory texts to each section explain the Museum's methods of acquisitions as well as some of the historical background of the subjects." Booklist

Booklist 49:137 D 15 '52

Reviewed by S. L. Faison

Nation 175:582 D 20 '52 270w

"It is about the best gift I can imagine for a person who simply likes to sample the riches of the history of art." Kermit Lansner

+ New Repub 127:29 D 8 '52 40w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '52 170w

"Should make Americans proud of having a museum that contains such fabulous and diversified treasures and so perceptive and expert a staff. Here, for the first time on a popular level, the dialogue includes a variety of modes and cultures. . . The 130 reproductions in 'full color and gold' are generally fair, with a few brilliant plates and a few duds. . . Perhaps, too, it is inevitable that public sycophancy to important patrons will blemish any officially institutional publication. Reading this book, the average man is apt to arrive at the curious conclusion that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for example, ranks somewhere between Lorenzo the Magnificent and Leonardo da Vinci in the hierarchy of art panjandrums." T. B. Hess

+ — Sat R 35:11 D 20 '52 320w

NEW YORK TIMES. Greatest sport stories. See Danzig, A., and Brandwein, P., eds.

NEW YORKER (periodical). Twenty-fifth anniversary album, 1925-1950. [380p] $5 Harper
741.5 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons 51-13315

"Collection of humorous drawings, all drawn from the more than 20,000 used by The New Yorker in the first 25 years of its existence. They are in chronological sequence—with headings such as 'Late Twenties, Early Thirties, Late Thirties, Early Forties, and Late Forties.'" Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 48:97 N 35 '51

Bookmark 11:32 N '51 20w

Reviewed by John Beaufort

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 13 '51 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

"Essential in any library and the best possible memorial to Harold Ross."

+ Library J 77:52 Ja 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by Frank Hauser

New Statesman & Nation 42:740 D 22 '51 180w

"This album could be called a social history if we wanted to get stuffy about it. But let's not. It's an incredibly funny book stuffed, page after page, with the wittiest and most trenchant cartoons ever drawn in this country. You'll find all your old favorites in it." John Crosby

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 2 '51 360w

"Witty, these fellows, and—let's hope this doesn't spoil them—socially significant." Harry Gilroy

+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '51 410w

Reviewed by Allen Worth

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 25 '51 80w

"All these are true both to American humour and American life. But even with the best intention of recommending the album it is unfair to separate the words from the pictures. If the food situation leads anyone to fear that his Christmas will not be as merry as his cards anticipated, let him buy it for himself, and laugh, and grow fat. Thurber's dog, coming broodingly in from time to time, is, as Dolly Clandon said of Finch's face, a feast in itself." A. A. Milne

+ Spec 187:790 D 7 '51 750w

"Libraries subscribing to The New Yorker will probably want this book. Others, go slowly."

Wis Lib Bul 47:250 N '51

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Percy, Polly, and Pete; pictures by [the author]. [32p] $2 Harper

52-7848

Picture story of the author's little girl, and Millie, the mother cat, and her three kittens.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 20w

Booklist 49:146 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

"Some of the most beautiful fluffy cats the artist has ever done, and a good story."

+ Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:398 D '52 80w

Kirkus 20:680 O 15 '52 80w

"Good for reading aloud and showing to the youngest and for their elders of all ages. Recommended." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 77:2011 N 15 '52 40w

"It is a charming moral tale for the nursery age, with pictures unsurpassed, some furry, tiny, lovable, some of a bold, sculptured power, all easy on the eyes of the listeners, and handsomely printed." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p5 N 16 '52 90w

"In this latest picture book we again find the delightful rapport between the illustrator and her cats so evident in earlier works. Although the story is slight the boldly outlined drawings—frosted with pink and blue—have a rich texture and a sentimental quality designed to captivate." M. L. Krupka

+ N Y Times pt2, p41 N 16 '52 100w

"An entrancing book."

+ New Yorker 28:188 D 6 '52 70w

NEWBY, PERCY HOWARD. Season in England. 304p $3 Knopf

51-11972

"Tom Passmore returns from Egypt with a mission, that of telling his dead friend's parents of their daughter-in-law. He hopes thus to effect a first meeting between these related strangers. Through Tom's eyes the author presents a picture of rebellion against parental authority and affection. There are elements of sadness and gentle humor as the story unfolds and the reader begins to understand the characters of the parents, the daughter-in-law, the dead son, Tom, and the farmer Cleggs." Library J

"Unfortunately the author of A Season in England, 'an entertainment' of a superior sort, tends to rely upon melodrama toward the end instead of upon the friction of character and motive with which his book so brilliantly begins." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 175:74 Ap '52 170w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 13 '52 380w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 24 '52 420w

"With this, his fourth novel, P. H. Newby may be about to emerge from the same sort of coterie cocoon which enveloped Messrs. Waugh and Greene before the last war. As a stylist Newby can make brightness fall from the air onto the printed page comparably well with Waugh, and he has a depth of psychological penetration which places him in a sensory category with Graham Greene." Joe Dever

+ Commonweal 55:572 Mr 14 '52 460w

Kirkus 19:643 N 1 '51 240w

"This excellent character portrayal in a story that leads one a merry chase of change of pace is well worth the reading. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:49 Ja 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 16 '51 110w

"A Season in England has the headlong excitement of a mystery story and the stylistic excellence of a serious and well-considered novel. However, Newby runs out of gas before the series of revelatory denouements has run its course. . . Nevertheless it hardly seems likely that anyone will be able to put this book down before he has raced through it." H. S. + — New Repub 126:23 Ap 7 '52 110w

NEWBY, P. H.—Continued

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 41:376 Mr 31 '51 270w

"The merits of Mr. Newby's work are especially beguiling to the critic who must read so much nowadays that lacks them—clarity of style, a fastidious use of words, and a desperate hewing to the line of observed and believed truth. Not by an inch will Mr. Newby deviate from his integrity of purpose; and if his authority were equal to his austerity, his characters could be accepted as indisputably as they are offered. As it is, this reviewer will hasten to read Mr. Newby's earlier books." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 13 '52 600w

"The book's plot is a stale hodge-podge of the usual mild eccentricities of the usual mild elderly couple in the—we thought no longer quite so usual—maid-maintained cocoon of an English country house." Evelyn Eaton

— N Y Times p5 Ja 13 '52 600w

"Studies in nullity are apt, of their nature, to be dispiriting and dingy, and the moment of seemingly unintentional low comedy that both brings Mr. Newby's book to an end and throws it off balance is the one thing that keeps it from being wholly tedious." Anthony West

— + New Yorker 27:81 Ja 12 '52 340w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 27 '52 350w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Sat R 35:13 Ja 12 '52 420w

"I could not believe in any of the characters in the book, least of all in the 'pagan, exotic and completely feminine' Greek girl of the story, and the graveyard Nash couple in their Buckinghamshire farmhouse, nor did it seem to me that Mr. Newby had taken sufficient trouble to interest the reader in other respects." R. D. Charques

— Spec 185:394 Mr 23 '51 150w

"Newby tells his decent, civilized story effortlessly and well; but at the end its pallor and essential bloodlessness bring a shrug."

+ — Time 59:94 Ja 14 '52 220w

"Here is a writer gifted with a power of comic, yet realistic, characterization possessed by few of his contemporaries; able to create in a page or two the element of the strange or the macabre; and yet with a quite remarkable incapacity for realizing his gifts in terms of a plausible and interesting story."

Times [London] Lit Sup p177 Mr 23 '51 220w

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:12 spring '52 310w

NEWCUMB, ROBERT, and SAMMONS, MARG. Speak up, Management! how to communicate with employees and public [pub] in association with Modern industry magazine. (Modern industry bks) 308p $5 Funk 658.3 Employment management. Publicity 51-14772

"Discusses communication between an enterprise and its employees, and between the enterprise and the public. The authors, partners in a Chicago industrial relations firm, attack this subject with contagious enthusiasm. They explore the various methods of communication exhaustively, with useful suggestions on what subject-matter should be communicated." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"There is an art in taking yesterday's dinner out of the refrigerator and adding to it a dash of this and a pinch of that to make it appetizing again. And it is an art that the writing team of Newcomb and Sammons have perfected. While this book is warmed-over meat pie, there is still a lot of meat in it. . .

This, then is a book that you might not give to a friend who already has a book on employee communications. But it is a book that should be on the shelf of the small plant manager. Though its advice may appear elementary to the sophisticate in public relations, to the ordinary fellow, and most plants are run by ordinary fellows, Speak Up, Management! speaks the practical, common-sense language he likes to hear." B. F. McClancy + Management R 41:333 My '52 850w

"To many executives the main problem in communication is how to sell the 'free enterprise' system to employees and to the public. Newcomb and Sammons have not set out to solve this problem, but their tools for 'speaking up' are universal, and their book should be a decided aid to any enterprise facing communication problems." J. M. Juran

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 20 '52 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 17 '52 150w

NEWMAN, BERNARD. Turkish crossroads. 258p il maps $4.75 Philosophical lib.

956.1 [915.6] Turkey—Description and travel 52-10536

An English author, who is an experienced traveller, discusses a recent trip to Turkey. He met and talked with all classes of people, all over the country, and has incorporated his impressions in this book. He seems to admire the people and to consider the country a bulwark against Russia. Index.

Booklist 48:376 Jl 15 '52

"Here is a book aimed at the general reader, at the person who has no special knowledge of the subject. Thanks to the author's skill, and I should add, to the admirable illustrations, this aim has been very well achieved. This is an excellent introduction to modern Turkey. It cannot fail to arouse interest. And interest in Turkey is badly needed in this part of the world." R. M. Saunders

+ Canadian Forum 31:235 Ja '52 300w

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ag 10 '52 20w

Foreign Affairs 31:165 O '52 20w

"'Turkish Crossroads' is surely an aid to better understanding of an increasingly important part of the world." Ralph Chapman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 13 '52 270w

"A report which combines the charm of personal exploration with skilful research and solid appraisal of up-to-date information." Hal Lehman

+ Sat R 35:13 D 13 '52 500w

NEWTON, DOUGLAS, See Newton, W. D.

NEWTON, ERIC. Tintoretto. 250p pl $12 Longmans

759.5 Tintoretto, Jacopo Robusti, known as 52-2512

"The material of this book is treated much like the exposition and development sections of sonata form. Part one presents essential themes clearly: the esthetic dilemma of Italian art caught between the giant opposites of Michelangelo and Titian, Tintoretto's harnessing of these into a single new force, and, almost as a contrasting theme, the scanty commonplace facts of the artist's life. The second and much larger part develops each of these, interweaving them skillfully as the author moves from painting to painting, following a chronological order that is the more effective for being flexible." (N Y Times) Index.

"This excellent study should do much to bring before the public eye an artist whom Berenson has called 'in many ways deeper, finer and even more brilliant than Titian.' . . The arrangement and selection of material have been handled expertly." C. H. Morgan

+ N Y Times p20 N 30 '52 450w

"His book certainly deserves full success. It displays all the fine qualities distinguishing earlier publications of this sensitive and penetrating art critic who in this new book has at his command all the vast literary and artistic material, analyzes both of them acutely, and, yet manages, despite this scholarly perfection, to avoid pedantry. He offers delightful reading, and every admirer of Tintoretto, this reviewer included, must acknowledge his indebtedness to him for correction of errors and manifold stimulation." Hans Tietze

+ Sat R 35:64 D 6 '52 750w

NEWTON, WILFRED DOUGLAS. London: west of the Bars. 336p il $3 Macmillan
942.1 London—Description. London—History [51-12240]

"Historical guidebook to London. This one is concerned with that part of the metropolis 'beyond the Bars,' the once-suburban area that lay outside the bars erected to mark the limits of the old walled City of London. This region includes Westminster, Kensington, Holborn, Bayswater, and Notting Hill and, of course is the site of the great palaces of the later Kings of England, the Inns of Court, the theatres and parks and houses where high society lived and amused itself, and the slums and the noisome streets of Dickens' London. Many good photographs." New Yorker

"Mr. Newton's book is written with imagination and a sensitive prose style." Michael Swan
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:722 Je 23 '51 90w
New Yorker 27:180 D 8 '51 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Je 15 '51 600w

NIBBELINK, DON D. Bigger and better, the book of enlarging; drawings by Sherman E. Nelson. 253p $2.95 Garden City bks.

778.1 Photography—Enlarging 52-3226
"Book for amateur photographers who are serious (or should be) about their enlarging. In it are discussed dark rooms, enlargers, cropping, retouching, even mounting, framing and hanging. There are good discussions of such matters as incandescent versus fluorescent lamps in enlargers. The author is associated with the Eastman Kodak Company, and all of the chemicals and equipment specifically mentioned are Eastman products." Library J

Booklist 49:45 O 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77: 1816 O 15 '52 40w

NICHOLAS, HERBERT GEORGE. British general election of 1950; with an appendix by D. E. Butler. 353p il maps $4.50 Macmillan

324.42 Great Britain. Parliament. Great Britain—Politics and government [51-2668]

"[Account] of [the 1950] British elections. American political scientists should be especially interested in the chapters dealing with British law regarding campaigning, and English party organization. The election issues are examined on both local and national levels. Included is a comprehensive biographical analysis of the major candidates. The author discusses the attitude of various newspapers; the reaction to the campaign and its results in the major countries of the world. Mr. Nicholas gives many plausible reasons for the failure of Labor to win a workable majority in Parliament." Current Hist

"Highly technical but vividly written book." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 8 '51 420w

"A comprehensive and lively account. . . In view of this year's election results, his comments are of particular interest."

+ Current Hist 21:356 D '51 90w

Foreign Affairs 30:341 Ja '52 20w

"This able, impartial, and well-written analysis will be read with earnestness by all politicians."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 30 '51 650w

Reviewed by Charles Madge
New Statesman & Nation 41:162 F 10 '51 800w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R 35:27 Ja 26 '52 380w

"This is a political work of reference of permanent value." H. W. H.

+ Spec 185:253 F 23 '51 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p413 J1 6 '51 600w

NICHOLL, LOUISE TOWNSEND. Explicit flower. lrd ed 49p $2.75 Dutton
811 52-6264

A fourth book of poems by an American writer. "Her favorite themes, as always, are drawn from religion, art and physical nature. Probably none is more successful than 'Tavistock Square,' her little elegy for Virginia Woolf." (N Y Times)

"There is a somber music in these, a blending and muting which is achieved through a fine craftsmanship and depth of feeling which never muddies the clarity of line and which creates some affecting and memorable poetry."

+ Kirkus 19:669 N 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 30w

"Like her earlier work, Louise Townsend Nicholl's 'The Explicit Flower' is delicate and precise." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 16 '52 70w

"Comparing Miss Nicholl's marriage of intellect and senses with that of other women poets such as Marianne Moore or Muriel Rukeyser, we are made aware immediately of how far Miss Nicholl has yet to go toward that explicit flowering of language which is great poetry." Lawrence Ferlinghetti

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 60w

"A distinguished performance, the achievement of an assured craftsman in words. And with the quiet mastery of her music goes a serenity, securely based on faith in the iridescence of the body and other matter, prisms through which the soul passes to illuminate." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R 35:39 Mr 15 '52 320w

NICHOLLS, WILLIAM HORD. Price policies in the cigarette industry; a study of concerted action and its social control, 1911-50. 444p $6 Vanderbilt univ. press

338.47 Cigarette manufacture and trade
51-8563

"[Study] of the economic and legal aspects of pricing in the cigarette industry that offers suggestions for the increasing of price competition among the leading manufacturers. . . After introducing the background, Mr. Nicholls presents an analysis of 'concerted action' in the policies of the dominant firms, and of the economic aspects of legal decisions, in which he emphasizes the 'circular interdependence' of price and advertising policies of the major firms. Part III covers the rise and fall of grower cooperatives, the later grower control under federal legislation, and purchasing policies of major buyers. . . Part IV, considers legal aspects of the 1946 Supreme Court tobacco decisions." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Professor Nicholls has presented us with a well-reasoned, well-written, and thoroughly interesting chronicle. . . He has expertly applied economic theory to a concrete industrial pattern, and raised public policy questions which must be faced in other industries where differentiated oligopoly is entrenched. My only regret is—and this is the major short-coming of the book—that Professor Nicholls has not chosen to outline his public policy recommendations, and the alternatives thereto, in greater detail." Walter Adams

+ Am Econ R 42:461 Ja '52 1000w

Am Pol Sci R 46:582 Je '52 30w

"Some significant questions were either not asked or not explored fully. . . Regardless of such questions, this is empirical research of a very high order which should aid substantially in theory formulation for oligopolistic markets." R. B. Hefebower

NICHOLLS, W. H.—Continued
+ J Pol Econ 60:345 Ag '52 750w

"A comprehensive and thorough study. . . Lawyers, economists, business executives, and legislators will find this clear, interesting, and provocative treatise very much worth while."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:49 Mr '52 300w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. All I could never be; some recollections. 348p $4 Dutton
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-5301

"Mr. Nichols' second experiment in autobiography, a sequel to 'Twenty-Five.' The story is told in episodes—now he's on the Riviera with Maxine Elliott and Lady Mendl, now he's in Bucharest having a heart-to-heart talk with Queen Marie, now he's in New York editing a magazine, now he's in London throwing a wild party for the Bright Young People." New Yorker

Booklist 48:244 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:156 Ap '52 30w

"Nichols is a versatile writer. . . But he has always remained on the surface, never exploring the depths of anything. . . His superficiality does not detract from his writing ability, however. The book is formless, too wandering, and digressive. But it is packed with good stories." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 6 '52 280w

Kirkus 20:106 F 1 '52 180w

"It has style and tartness, and to any one whose personal history touched London journalism and the theater during the '20s it is spiked with a certain wayward charm. . . 'All I Could Never Be' is a little sad, as well as considerably wise and witty. It is the answer both of and to the bright young man who thirty years ago knew just what he wanted to be—and in large measure succeeded." James Hilton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 16 '52 1050w

Reviewed by Roger Pippett

N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '52 300w

New Yorker 28:125 Mr 8 '52 120w

"Mr. Nichols tells his reader that he is trying to create an atmosphere by a spate of irrelevancies, but his book is a well-knit, professional piece of writing about people he has met and experiences that have given meaning to his life." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '52 360w

"The first two hundred pages of this book are on a cheap level, rarely rising above the gossip column. . . The last third of the book, however, has more feeling, better taste, and deals not so lightly, even when it is gossip, with people and events." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 23 '52 650w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl

Springfd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52 300w

"All I Could Never Be is engaging for all its irksome pretensions and posturings. . . Mr. Nichols is certainly a little mellow now in his views on politics and the international scene. But the real, or rather earlier, Beverley Nichols is still with us. . . He is at his anecdotal best in his word-etchings of Maxine Elliott, Sir Hugh Walpole, Gertrude Lawrence, Cecil Beaton and Somerset Maugham. It's a chatty book for the chatty, no doubt of it." Richard McLaughlin

+ Theatre Arts 36:78 Ap '52 140w

"Most of All I Could Never Be is far too simple and sorry to stir up any ruckuses; the rest of it is first-rate gossip. The only ax it has to grind is Beverley himself."

+ Time 59:112 Mr 17 '52 1150w

NICKALLS, JOHN L., ed. See Fox, G. Journal

NIDA, EUGENE ALBERT. God's word in man's language. 191p $2.50 Harper

220.5 Bible. Whole—Versions 52-5466

"The director of translation work for the American Bible Society describes, with many human-interest stories, the unique phase of mission work that makes the Bible available in native languages. Indexes." Bookmark

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 30w

"Here is one of the most fascinating books likely to be published this year about the Bible." Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 11 '52 250w

Christian Century 69:1290 N 5 '52 100w

"Anyone interested in language study as well as those concerned with the deeper meanings of scripture will find this a fascinating book."

+ Kirkus 20:345 Je 15 '52 100w

School & Society 76:15 Jl 5 '52 20w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. Irony of American history. 174p $2.50 Scribner

973 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—History—Philosophy. U.S.—Civilization 52-8724

"In this volume Reinhold Niebuhr, who has been called 'a contradictory, conspicuous figure in the two worlds of religion and radical politics,' examines the position of the United States in the contemporary world from the viewpoint of the Christian philosophy of history which he expounded back in 1941 in his 'Nature and Destiny of Man.' As the title indicates, the picture which emerges is essentially ironic. The 'innocent' nation of Jefferson and the Puritans, so confident in its virtue and unique mission, has developed into an incredibly powerful one, involved in a world struggle. In the exercise of its responsibilities and power, it now finds itself forced to rely on such unvirtuous weapons as the atomic bomb." Sat R

"Mr. Niebuhr's methodology will not bear the scrutiny of a critical historian. He has read widely and discriminatingly from the works of such authors as James Bryce and De Toqueville, and he has selected from the smörgåsbord of his reading those morsels that satisfy his appetite for moralizing. He too readily extracts historical generalizations from their context and transforms them into absolutes. . . This social Darwinism does not enhance a book that has many penetrating observations. In spite of its faulty methodology, it has the great merit of passing moral judgment upon wrongs and pretensions which cause hate and lead to war. Mr. Niebuhr is fully cognizant of the tradition of Christian morals; and he uses this plumb line to measure the crooked walls and shallow wells of our society. For this reason his book deserves many readers." R. G. Cowherd

+ Ann Am Acad 283:199 S '52 440w

"Written with lucidity and intellectual grace. . . Although there are matters on which I do not share the author's outlook, I found his essay packed with provocative insights and important truths. If—to indulge in a fantasy—it were to be read and inwardly digested by millions, I suspect that this commonwealth would add greatly to its understanding." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:78 My '52 600w

Booklist 48:294 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:233 Jl '52 40w

"This sane and wise book, unfortunately written for a relatively highbrow public, should be translated into many languages, as a testimonial to the fact that Christianity means sanity, and especially so in the American Scene." Eric von Kuehnelt-Leddihn

+ Cath World 175:236 Je '52 420w

Reviewed by C. P. Nettels

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 13 '52 450w

"Niebuhr's pages are filled with penetrating analyses of many aspects of modern civilization and its present tensions. . . . At certain points the issues are, as it seems to me, rather concealed than clarified by the repeated characterization of American culture as 'bourgeois'—a word which, in my judgment, has no legitimate use in relation to present conditions anywhere, and least of all in America. As to world government and other proposed methods of organizing the world against disaster, I urgently recommend the reading and study of pages 134-40, which contain more condensed wisdom on this topic than can easily be found elsewhere in such space." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:590 My 14 '52
1450w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24
'52 850w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 166:17 N 1 '52 120w
Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 30w

"Despite the rash of reviews in the Saturday and Sunday press, this is not a book written in a more popular style than we are accustomed to expect from its author's pen. Incisive and penetrating in analysis of current history, it will stand however as an authentic addition to that body of thought which bears the name Niebuhrian." Paul Ramsey
+ J Religion 32:226 J1 '52 1000w

Kirkus 20:175 Mr 1 '52 90w

"Christian ethic, with its faith that life has a center and source of meaning beyond the natural, is cogently applied, and the hope expressed that a consciousness of our involvement in the ironic situation will tend towards its dissolution. Recommended." R. W. Hendersson

+ Library J 77:718 Ap 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Manchester Guardian p10 N 28 '52
370w

Reviewed by Francis Biddle
Nation 175:74 J1 26 '52 1300w

Reviewed by Morton White
New Repub 126:18 My 5 '52 1200w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 6
'52 1250w

"In this book the Professor of Applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary bridges the split not only in his followers but in his own ideas. On the surface, his book is merely one more survey of American history, though a fresh and convincing one. But on a profounder level it is a brilliant philosophical synthesis of his social conscience with his other-worldly conscience." Peter Viereck
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 6 '52 1200w

"It appears to be a mildly critical essay on the moral attitudes behind our foreign policy, written from a Christian point of view, but it is in fact a veiled attack on some concepts that are essential to democratic ideas, the chief of them man's trust in reason. . . . What Dr. Niebuhr is saying, beneath it all, is that history can be understood in the light of faith and not in the light of reason. This approach to the record of human experience is not a promising one, and when one discovers what Dr. Niebuhr's faith tells him about American history, one's suspicions of it are confirmed." Anthony West

New Yorker 28:130 My 3 '52 2300w

"Dr. Niebuhr's philosophical convictions about human nature enable him to make repeated thrusts at the social scientists. . . . This is an attitude which is tenable only for those who are convinced they have access to a higher truth. Dr. Niebuhr's assurance on this score is apparent. This makes his book really an exercise in applying a set of fixed dogmatic beliefs to the contemporary human predicament. Since his dogmatism is roomier and subtler than most, it produces a number of interesting and worthwhile pronouncements." Frederick Burkhardt
Sat R 35:11 Ap 5 '52 900w

Sat R 35:20 My 17 '52 160w

Reviewed by Herbert Agar
Spec 189:819 D 12 '52 750w

"U.S. Protestantism's foremost theologian, Reinhold Niebuhr, has written a thoughtful and hardheaded essay on his country's political philosophy."

+ Time 59:84 Ap 7 '52 1350w

"A richly packed little book, if not a very tidy one."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:286 S '52 240w

NIELSEN, HELEN. Obit delayed. 219p $2.50
Washburn

52-10659

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:331 Je 1 '52 60w

"This is a well wound tale, well paced and set down with useful acerbities." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 22 '52
140w

"Helen Nielsen, who has been sharply improving book by book, hits a high professional level in her latest." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p22 Je 23 '52 60w

"Slower, more diffuse and less unusual than Miss Nielsen's first two novels, this is still fair and readable." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 6 '52
40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:39 J1 19 '52 30w

NIJINSKY, MME ROMOLA (DE PULSZKY).
Last years of Nijinsky; by his wife. 260p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Nijinsky, Vaslav. Dancers 52-10206

In this volume the wife of Nijinsky takes up the story of their lives where she left off in the earlier volume, Nijinsky (Book Review Digest 1934). Covers their experiences during the war years, and ends with his death in 1950. Index.

Booklist 48:337 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 1 '52
330w

Kirkus 20:218 Mr 15 '52 180w

"Recommended for paid circulations as well as theatre, dance and ballet departments." George Freedley

Library J 77:1208 J1 '52 30w

Manchester Guardian p8 O 10 '52 160w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin
Nation 175:198 S 6 '52 600w

"This sequel to the almost tragic Nijinsky is only touching and plaintive. At best it deals in pathos. The earlier volume overflowed with the materials of Nijinsky's personality and art. Here Mme. Nijinsky offers an elusively passive and autumnal symbol of that great figure." Theodore Hoffman

New Repub 126:22 Je 9 '52 260w

"All this is well told and has considerable historic interest. One is left marvelling at Mme Nijinsky." Stephen Spender

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:554 N 8
'52 550w

"There are many irritating aspects to the book other than those caused by uneasy or overblown sentences. Mme. Nijinsky fights for her husband's genius too violently and unnecessarily. The mere fact that in his brief dancing career of ten years duration he established himself as a deathless theatrical figure, both as dancer and choreographer, is all the proof Mme. Nijinsky and any one else needs of his greatness. Yet she labors the point and finds it necessary to report 'a tremendous decline in the choreographic art.' This is, of course, untrue." Walter Terry

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 1 '52
800w

"It is a tragic story, but the compassionate, unbiased telling remains to be written, and will never be, cannot be, by any who acted in it. The gauge of grief and torture, however, may be seen in the pictures of the current

NIJINSKY, R. D.—Continued
volume—and the reader must pause in pitying wonder to note the change between the sharp, clean-faced youth of the first photograph and the soft, boneless old man of the last bending over a typewriter while behind and above hovers his mother-wife." Agnes De Mille
N Y Times p7 Je 8 '52 1500w

New Yorker 28:87 J1 12 '52 160w

"Madame Nijinsky tells the story simply, even awkwardly at times, though the occasional amateur clumsiness of the book is more than balanced by the sincerity and drive with which she writes." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 20 '52 700w

"The narrative is simple, direct, and sometimes moving. . . This is not the time to go into the whole Diaghilev-Nijinsky controversy, with its Balkan spy story atmosphere. If Diaghilev did in fact treat Nijinsky badly and plot against him no one has carried on the vendetta. It is absurd to suggest, as Madame Nijinsky does on more than one occasion, that if anyone fails to agree with her that her husband was less than a genius, not merely as a dancer but as a choreographer and dance philosopher, then that person is actuated by some kind of retrospective malice." A. L. Haskell
+ Sat R 35:20 My 31 '52 450w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 290w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Theatre Arts 36:4 J1 '52 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p655 O 10 '52 380w

NIKOLSKY, ALEXANDER A. Helicopter analysis. 340p $7.50 Wiley
629.1335 Helicopters 51-14329

"A professional-grade treatise by an outstanding authority. It is based upon lectures given to graduate students at Princeton University where the author is professor in the department of aeronautical engineering. The chapters on the theory and analysis of dynamic stability and control are of potential interest to any aeronautical engineer concerned with the design of helicopters. They include some generalized equations that have not appeared elsewhere. Throughout the book, the exposition is largely mathematical." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:363 F 15 '52 80w

"A valuable book for engineers concerned with helicopter design and for advanced students of aeronautical engineering who are preparing for work in this field."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:7 Ja '52

"Professor Nikolsky has included the results of his own excellent work on the dynamic stability and control of helicopters, organized in such a way as to be readily applied by designers. . . In view of the current great expansion of the helicopter industry, the book is very timely."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:101 Mr '52 160w

NINETEENTH-CENTURY English books; some problems in bibliography. 88p $3 Univ. of Ill. press

094 English literature—Bibliography. Copy-right 52-5891

"For the addresses designed to constitute the third series of Windsor Lectures in Librarianship at the University of Illinois Library School, the sponsors selected a member of the university faculty, the head of the English department at Colby College, and the co-author of 'An Enquiry into the Nature of Certain Nineteenth-Century Pamphlets.' . . Mr. Ray discusses 'The Importance of Original Editions.' Mr. Weber details numerous engrossing instances of 'American Editions of English Authors,' and Mr. Carter presents 'Some Bibliographical Agenda' with enlightened criticism of contemporary techniques." Sat R

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 15 '52 80w

"The three authorities (no one of whom confuses ponderosity with scholarship) provide an agreeable and balanced blend of bookfare, and the papers are as profitably enjoyable in print as they must have been viva voce to the primary audience." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R 35:61 Je 14 '52 250w

Reviewed by Michael Sadleir
Spec 189:36 J1 4 '52 380w

"A work of unusual and permanent value."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Je 20 '52 650w

NININGER, HARVEY HARLOW. Out of the sky; an introduction to meteoritics. 336p il $5 Univ. of Denver press

523.1 Meteorites 52-9127

"In this book one of the world's outstanding authorities on meteors has assembled a variety of information, ranging from eyewitness accounts of noted fireballs to discussions of the cosmic origins of meteorites." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:354 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 14 '52 130w

"So much information is included that the book will serve well as a reference book on the subject for a long time to come." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:905 My 15 '52 40w

"There is fact here and there is theory—sound theory that might well open up new fields of study—and there are over 170 helpful photographs, maps and charts." A. K.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '52 100w

"Dr. Nininger has told his story simply and vividly." John Pfeiffer
+ Sat R 35:53 Je 14 '52 250w

"Although clearly written and typographically attractive, this is primarily a textbook for those in the fields of astrology or geology." J. C. C.
Springf'd Republican p8D My 11 '52 30w

"His results are evaluated and blended with those of scores of other investigators, so that the book presents the best picture available today of the meteoritic constituents of the earth."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:328 S '52 200w

NOLAN, WILLIAM A. Communism versus the Negro. 276p $3.50 Regnery

325.26 Negroes. Communism 51-13806
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The book has dealt in typical 'propagandist fashion with the superficial vicissitudes of Communist-party action and, consequently, to this reviewer at least, does not establish any vital implication between race relations and communism." O. C. Cox
+ Am Soc R 17:519 Ag '52 700w

"Mr. Nolan has done a commendable job with the facts available. But I am afraid a few innocent persons and institutions are badly mangled as he attempts to flush out the Reds in Negro organizations." Roi Otley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 27 '52 360w

Foreign Affairs 31:157 O '52 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Moon
Sat R 35:40 F 16 '52 800w

"The nature and effectiveness of Communist activities among Negroes in the United States are carefully analyzed in this thorough and well-documented book. No group, publication, event, or individual which has been active in Communist-Negro relations since 1919 is omitted."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:80 Mr '52 300w

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS) and NORLING, ERNEST RALPH. First book of water; il. by [the authors]. 45p $1.75 Watts, F.

551.4 Water—Juvenile literature 52-13277

Describes the sources of water: from clouds; melting snows and ice; rivers and oceans; and the work done by water, and various types of fun on the water. For ages 8 to 10.

Booklist 49:161 Ja 1 '53

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 22 '52 40w

"A valuable addition to this series. . . Recommended for all libraries." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 77:2077 D 1 '52 20w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 20w

"Here is another 'First Book' that promises to be as instructive as previous titles in the series have been. . . The illustrations add immeasurably to the attractiveness of the book." B. D. Hurley

+ N Y Times pt2, p42 N 16 '52 90w

NORMAN, ALBERT. Operation Overlord; design and reality; the Allied invasion of western Europe. 230p il maps $3.75 Military service

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 52-9983

"A concise account based primarily on the files of Headquarters 12th Army Group, of which the author was wartime historian." (Foreign Affairs) "The emphasis is on the various phases of planning and preparation, but attention is also given to the execution of the plan, with due credit to all services and nations involved in the tremendous task which guaranteed victory in World War II." (Current Hist)

"To the layman who has searched for a comprehensive, over-all picture of the invasion of Europe, this volume should provide the answer. Objectively and lucidly, 'Operation Overlord' is analyzed."

+ Current Hist 23:63 Jl '52 40w

Foreign Affairs 31:154 O '52 20w

"The cross-Channel invasion of 1944, its planning and execution, is the subject of this concise account for the general reader. The author, former historian of the 12th Army Group, had access to some papers of higher headquarters and to official reports of the major field commands, but he relies largely on memoirs, official and semi-official histories, and the voluminous secondary sources now available on the war in the European theater. . . In general, this account is informed and competent; its effect is somewhat impaired, however, by the apparent acceptance of several commonly held misconceptions."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:286 S '52 210w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Hunch, Munch and Crunch; more about the Jonquils; pictures by Margaret Bloy Graham. 46p $2 Harper 51-13012

Another story about Jane Jonquil and her father and mother. This tells a little about the childhood days of Mr and Mrs Jonquil, and about Jane's trip to Central Park where she met the squirrels called, Hunch, Munch and Crunch.

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 110w

Horn Bk 28:170 Je '52 120w

Kirkus 20:154 Mr 1 '52 130w

"Recommended for public libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 80w

"It is slight and very talkative, and occasionally a touch too deliberate for the look and listen age. But the combination of days recalled and days lived now is clever, and the family of three is a very happy one." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 290w

"Margaret Bloy Graham's drawings are blithe, free and full of well-observed detail of cafeteria, animal and child life. The book has a Preface for Parents, moral and even sentimental in tone; children will skip this and get on with the fun, and just as well, too." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 16 '52 140w

"The drawings of the Zoo and the Park, with a background of the New York skyline, are even better than those in the first two books. Mr. Jonquil breaks into verse about the animals, the ones that describe the baboon, the lion, and the leopard being particularly good."

+ Sat R 35:47 Mr 22 '52 90w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Shepherd of the ocean: Sir Walter Raleigh: a biography for young people; il. by Bruno Frost. 179p $2.75 McKay B or 92 Raleigh, Sir Walter—Juvenile literature 52-12741

A biography of "the last of the Elizabethans, the perfect example of the English Renaissance genius." Written for young people.

Booklist 49:158 Ja 1 '53

"Those who have read 'The Player of Avon' know how deeply the author is steeped in this period of English history. Certainly his biography of Raleigh compares favorably with others. In many ways it is the most mature, allowing frequent quotations from documents to chronicle Raleigh's life with little fictionalizing. Possibly this makes the style and the characters seem less vivid—with the exception of the opening and closing chapters." A. B. M.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 16 '52 110w

"The material is handled with zest, clarity, topnotch reportage, and conveys a sense of excitement in the telling."

+ Kirkus 20:662 O 1 '52 120w

"An excellent biography of a charming, gifted, far-sighted statesman 'one of the architects of the New World.' For more advanced reading than the biographies by Baker and Trease." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:2014 N 15 '52 50w

"A splendid biography for teen-agers, which pays them the compliment of assuming them to be literate."

+ New Yorker 28:206 D 6 '52 40w

NORTH, STERLING. Birthday of little Jesus; il. by Valenti Angelo. [56p] $2.50 Grosset 52-4667

"An imaginary account of the Christ Child's seventh birthday told with a quiet dignity." Library J

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 176:203 D '52 20w

"Woven into the narrative is considerable detail on everyday surroundings in biblical times—surroundings that were to have a strong influence on Jesus as a teacher. The attractive appearance of the book will appeal to children." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 16 '52 70w

Kirkus 20:550 S 1 '52 100w

"Recommended for ages 5-9." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 77:2011 N 15 '52 50w

"Mr. North has written a gentle, touching story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 30 '52 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Euell

N Y Times p50 D 7 '52 30w

NORTH, STERLING. Reunion on the Wabash.
313p $3.50 Doubleday

52-10403

"At the Sycamores, the Wabash river bottom-land home of the late Sen. Ed Bigelow, the members of the family have gathered for the first reunion since the senator's death a few months before. Among them are the writer, James Whitcomb Riley Bigelow; the wild boy, Clarence; the actress, Natalie Carter; bibulous Aunt Millicent; sentimental Aunt Sophy; mute Aunt Hester; and a host of family skeletons. The Wabash river is also having itself a time; it is rising steadily to a point where, every reader will guess, it will burst the levee in time to bring the book to its climax." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:314 Ja '53 170w

"Mr. North's disappointing performance in this novel is to be regretted. 'Reunion on the Wabash' seems more like an exercise in fiction than a novel; despite some entertaining and touching scenes, as well as some colorfully melodramatic events, the book is a minor performance." August Derleth

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 28 '52
350w

Kirkus 20:424 J1 15 '52 250w

"Sentiment, romance, melodrama—it's all here." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 28
'52 650w

Reviewed by Charles Lee

N Y Times p46 N 30 '52 250w

"Inside Indiana, Sterling North's readers may have difficulty believing in an Old Guard Republican Senator from Posey County, one spot in the state where Republicans do not flourish. . . . At the risk of laboring a minor point and being charged with a finicky provincialism, I might remind all novelists contemplating the Indiana setting that the noble theme of simpleton-loves-pig was a fugitive from Faulkner and should not be regarded as indigenous to our sycamore shores. Outside Indiana, where the foregoing objections will not arise, 'Reunion on the Wabash' can be read with no pain—in fact, with pleasure." W. E. Wilson

+ Sat R 35:18 S 27 '52 550w

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52
80w

Wis Lib Bul 48:215 S '52

NORTHROP, FILMER STUART CUCKOW.
Taming of the nations; a study of the cultural bases of international policy. 362p maps $5 Macmillan

901 Civilization, Modern. World politics
52-13928

"An examination of the spiritual and philosophical foundations on which the predominant modern civilizations—Western, traditional Asiatic, and Communist—base their values, and in the light of which they judge each other's goals and behavior. Only when peoples of different cultural backgrounds understand the bases of their own as well as other cultures will the nations be able to arrive at peaceable and workable solutions of differences, the author suggests." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 49:123 D 1 '52

"This is a very learned book on a very important subject. . . . The subject of this new book is the formulation of the principles of a foreign policy which will allow nations with different cultures to live peaceably side by side. It must, however, be open to serious question whether the author has discovered such principles. For his basic assumptions of foreign policy are muddled and at variance with historic fact." H. J. Morgenthau

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 9 '52
330w

Kirkus 20:589 S 1 '52 200w

"I believe Northrop is least happy in estimating the failure of the West to give more than lip service to the United Nations' attempts to abolish the most disgraceful scandal of our times: mass starvation and disease among most of mankind. . . . I wish Northrop had pointed out more forcefully why our Korean policy not only horrifies the Asian non-Communist Nehru, but so many West-European non-Communists too. I make these criticisms because the book is so worth criticizing. I hope every American who has discovered that our foreign policy is a matter of life-and-death importance to us and to all men, will read and reflect on what Northrop has written." Stringfellow Barr

+ — New Repub 127:28 N 17 '52 300w

"The work of a distinguished scholar who realizes—and has long before this penetratingly set forth—the differences between Eastern and Western culture." Dexter Perkins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 7 '52
900w

"Let me not conclude by presuming to say that this book is a 'must.' But let me, rather, bear grateful witness to the fact that I have lived some of my greatest moments between the bold lines of Mr. Northrop's books, this one no less than previous volumes." T. V. Smith

+ N Y Times p5 N 9 '52 1100w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 30 '52
220w

School & Society 76:352 N 29 '52 10w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Star man's son, 2250 A.D. by André Norton; il. by Nicolas Mordvinoff. 248p $2.75 Harcourt

52-6906

Science-fiction novel for ages 12 to 16.

"Good grade science fiction carried by a thought provoking theme."

+ Kirkus 20:455 Ag 1 '52 150w

"Nightmarish, but recommended for 7th grade up." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 77:1669 O 1 '52 40w

"Although 'Star Man's Son: 2250 A.D.' is not science fiction in the strict sense (no space suits or other alluring gadgets) it ought to interest any young reader who has cast a speculative eye upon the future." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '52 180w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 12 '52
160w

"This is an extraordinary story . . . illustrated with vigorous, original drawings by the winner of the Caldecott Medal for 1951."

+ Sat R 35:60 N 15 '52 270w

"An excellent science fiction novel."

+ Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 50w

NORTON, ANDRE, pseud. See Norton, A. M.

NORTON, DANIEL SILAS, and RUSHTON, PETERS. Classical myths in English literature; with an introd. by Charles Grosvenor Osgood. 444p $5.50; text ed $4.50 Rinehart

292 Mythology, Classical. Classical dictionaries. Literature, Comparative 52-5597

"Alphabetically arranged handbook with numerous helpful cross references, showing typical ways in which each myth has been used by English and American writers. Map on end papers. Key to pronunciation, genealogical tables, literary references." Bookmark

Booklist 48:371 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:182 My '52 30w

"A useful reference." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 11 '52
200w

"For research in classical myth one will still turn to the Oxford, Harper or Smith dictionaries and their more scholarly European counterparts. But this little book has genuine merit and utility and should be available in school and public libraries." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1013 Je 1 '52 130w

"This new volume, by two University of Virginia professors, is the best guide to the classic myths that has appeared in many years." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52
160w

NORTON, FREDERICK HARWOOD. Elements of ceramics. 246p il $6.50 Addison-Wesley

666.3 Pottery 51-12186

Textbook on elements of ceramics. Partial contents: Clay minerals; Properties of clays; Silica and feldspar; Magnesite, lime, dolomite, and chromite; Other nonclay minerals; Mining and treatment of the raw materials; Plastic masses; Casting slips; Drying of ceramic ware; Types of ceramic bodies; Glassy state; Glasses; Glazes; Enamels on metal; Color formation in glasses and glazes. Index.

Reviewed by L. I. Shaw

Chem & Eng N 30:2646 Je 23 '52 360w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:826 My 15 '52 20w

"An introductory book but a substantial one. The author's style is concise but easy to read. The book is well organized in short chapters that are supplemented by excellent illustrations and well-chosen references. The work is suitable for use in introductory college courses, as a desk reference book in the libraries of potteries, and as a source of information for advanced amateurs."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:18 Mr '52

NORTON, PAUL ROBINSON COLEMAN. See Coleman-Norton, P. R.

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Far country. 343p $3.50 Morrow

52-9696

A love story, the scenes of which are present-day Australia, and England. A London doctor's daughter on a visit to cousins in Australia, meets a Czech surgeon, who is not yet an accredited doctor in his new country. The two become friends, and when Jennifer is summoned back to London, Carl finds a way to join her.

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:10 O '52 40w

"Technical considerations will be of little moment to most readers of this sincere, generous, and clean tasting book. There are scenes in England as well as in Australia, and powerful contrasts are implied." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 7 '52 300w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52 170w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:341 O '52 90w

"Here is a fresh and new portrait of a country, still unknown territory for most readers. Here [is] a story that follows more or less predictable lines for a warm and heartening tale."

+ Kirkus 20:332 Jl 1 '52 200w

"Good, pleasant reading for the general public." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Shute at his best is a superb story teller; in 'The Far Country' he is not at his best, but his narrative skill almost disguises the thinness of some of the material." James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 7 '52 600w

"Australia's lavish plenty in food and easy-going, careless freedom of living, are contrasted with the conditions Jennifer leaves behind. She falls in love with Australia's beauty and grandeur and climate even before she falls in love with Carl, whose background is more moving and more tragic. Both are fine people. What happens to them when their hope is denied makes a brave book." Evelyn Eaton

+ N Y Times p4 S 7 '52 480w

"The homey, flat self-satisfaction of Mr. Shute's style does nothing for either his characters or the places he describes with such enthusiasm."

New Yorker 28:116 S 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 31 '52

750w

"Although Mr. Shute obviously had his personal reasons for writing a story like this, it is by no means a propaganda novel. Rather, it is an absorbing tale about convincing and sympathetic people first, and only secondarily a persuasive picture of Mr. Shute's new home—and love." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R 35:39 S 13 '52 330w

"It is usual to say that Mr. Shute is a consummate story-teller, but when propaganda settles in, art usually moves out, and The Far Country is tedious and trite with every development guessable long before it takes place."

Spec 189:170 Ag 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 260w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

"Shute is a master of the popular novel, so that very competent plot and characters provide the framework for his reporting, but I suspect that many readers will read the book chiefly for the picture it gives of a fascinating country at a fascinating stage in its development." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:18 autumn '52 120w

NOWELL, CHARLES EDWARD. History of Portugal. 259p $4.50 Van Nostrand

946.9 Portugal—History 52-6387

A fairly popular, yet scholarly, one-volume history of a country which once ranked high as a world power, and, the author believes, may yet be of importance to Americans and others in Western civilization. The author is professor of history at the University of Illinois. Bibliography. Index.

"Literature on Portuguese history is very inadequate in English; comprehensive work by H. V. Livemore, a British scholar, is only acceptable recent (1947) treatment we have. Professor Nowell, historian at University of Illinois, presents much briefer and less ambitious survey, which, however, has advantage of greater readability. . . . Selected bibliography is fairly good, except for last decades. Recommended for college and public libraries which aim at well-rounded collection in international relations." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1811 O 15 '52 100w

"If the book makes no claim to being the best history of Portugal in English (the author makes his bow to older experts) it has virtues that should win it a place in the luggage of all interested visitors to that land." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p39 N 16 '52 280w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Sat R 35:15 D 13 '52 80w

School & Society 76:123 Ag 23 '52 20w

NUESSE, CELESTINE JOSEPH, and HARTE, THOMAS JOSEPH, eds. Sociology of the parish; an introductory symposium. 354p il $4.50 Bruce pub.

262.2 Parishes 52-86

"In this collection of articles dealing with various aspects of the parish, the historical development, the types of urban and rural, racial and national parishes, and parochial social structure are among the topics discussed. The result is a useful volume for the sociologist, the parish priest and anyone interested in the solid substructure of the Catholic Church in the United States." Commonweal

"The reviewer feels that all of the contributors have done a most creditable job." M. J. Williams

+ Am Soc R 17:516 Ag '52 460w

"The practical value of the book lies not only in the description of parish census techniques and realistic appraisal of parochial societies, but in things like fostering of insights into the structure and functioning of the parish and its demonstration of the application of scientific methods to the study of everyday parish problems. The book should help to create a favorable climate for further research in parish sociology." Charles O'Reilly

+ Commonweal 55:623 Mr 28 '52 200w

NUESSE, C. J.—Continued

"Should prove valuable to those few pastors who may be motivated to read, apply these techniques, and perhaps learn with some surprise the true nature of their respective parishes." V. J. Parenton
Social Forces 31:89 O '52 400w

NURNBERG, MAXWELL W., and ROSENBLUM, MORRIS. Your baby's name [the parents' guide to choosing baby's name]. 240p il $2.95 World pub.

929.4 Names, Personal 51-12741
"In addition to listing names of boys and girls with their pronunciations and meanings, this attractive, up-to-date volume contains anecdotes, humorous verses, illustrations and cartoons, a calendar of saints and other pertinent information." Bookmark

Booklist 48:64 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 40w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 21 '51 50w

Kirkus 19:513 S 1 '51 110w

NYARADI, MIKLOS. My ringside seat in Moscow. 307p $3.75 Crowell

947.085 [947.084] Russia. Communism—Russia. 52-6917

"A report on a most melancholy mission to Moscow, written by the last non-Communist Finance Minister of Hungary. Mr. Nyaradi went to Russia in 1947 to negotiate with the Kremlin a two-hundred-million-dollar Russian claim against his government. . . He got it reduced, but it took him seven months to do so, and by that time the Communists had infested his government at home and the claim had become academic." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian
Ann Am Acad 282:173 J1 '52 480w

Booklist 48:211 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 9 '52 280w

Reviewed by El. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p9 F 23 '52 450w

Foreign Affairs 30:679 J1 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:65 Ja 15 '52 180w

"It is astonishing that Mr. Nyaradi can write about his grisly ordeals with the Kremlin with so much poise, humor and charm." Marcus Duffield
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 3 '52 1250w

"From one point of view this book can be read as a rollicking account of Moscow life, with its strange contrasts between the abysmal poverty of the many and the sybaritic life of the rulers. . . More important, however, Nyaradi gives us a glimpse of some key figures in the Politburo and near Politburo levels of Soviet life." Harry Schwartz
+ N Y Times p10 F 24 '52 470w

"It is well written, it abounds in colorful detail about life on high and low levels in the U.S.S.R.—the author's descriptions of upper-crust diversions in Moscow would make Kublai Khan weak with envy—and it is also a handy guide to the labyrinthine ways of dirty politics. The author is now a refugee in this country." + New Yorker 28:110 F 23 '52 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 30 '52 360w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
Sat R 35:29 F 9 '52 750w

Wis Lib Bul 48:90 Mr '52

O

OAKLEY, W. R. Boy's workshop companion; with il. by the author. 218p $2.75 Greenberg
680 Workshops. Woodwork. Metal work 52-5622

Information on the setting up of a home workshop, on buying, using, and caring for woodworking and metalworking tools. Index.

Booklist 48:323 Je 1 '52

"A fine addition to the how-to books in any library." M. K. Walraven
+ Library J 77:1213 J1 '52 80w

"A fine, practical, interesting book." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 1 '52 120w

"The illustrations are accompanied by explanations that will help young craftsmen use their tools economically and efficiently. The material, both pictures and text, however, sometimes seems too elemental, sometimes too complicated or selective to be of greatest usefulness. The book is planned for those whose work must be carried on in a city apartment as well as for those whose space is not so limited." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p16 Je 22 '52 90w

OBERJOHANN, HEINRICH. Komoon! capturing the Chad elephant; tr. by Rhoda De Terra. 219p il $3 Pantheon bks.

799.2 Elephants 52-9673

"A thrilling account of the four years Oberjohann spent at Lake Chad capturing elephants for Hagenbeck. All about the way of life of elephants, which is so little known, and, besides, hair raising adventures." Commonweal

Booklist 49:100 N 15 '52

"An adult book which will captivate older boys."

+ Commonweal 57:173 N 21 '52 30w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 78:65 Ja 1 '53 20w

"Mr. Oberjohann's story is one tale after another of almost incredible adventures with elephant herds and, best of all, days and nights with elephants as few, if any, men have seen and known them." Margaret Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 7 '52 340w

"Remarkable photographs and line drawings help bring the author's experiences to life. Certainly no reader will close this book without sharing the author's admiration for these majestic, intelligent beasts." Hassoldt Davis
+ N Y Times p4 D 28 '52 360w

"This book, by a German wild-animal collector who was a protégé of Hagenbeck's, doesn't do for the elephant what Melville did for the whale, but it comes surprisingly close. . . This is a startling and fascinating book of adventure."

+ New Yorker 28:189 N 29 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p13C D 14 '52 80w

"Author Oberjohann is no scientist; some of his conclusions about the big animals will strain the faith of stay-at-homes. But he has written one of the most absorbing adventure stories in many a week."

+ Time 60:125 N 17 '52 800w

O'BRIAN, PATRICK. Testimonies [Eng title: Three bear witness]. 252p $3 Harcourt

52-9854

Story of a tragic love, of a quiet, unassuming ex-don from Oxford, and the lovely wife of a Welsh farmer. The story is told in first person narrative by the two principals and one other.

Booklist 49:48 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:34 N '52 40w

"In its quiet, fresh way this little novel tells an ironic story and throws some revealing side-lights on human nature." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 28 '52 240w

"In this haunting and poetic first novel, the story is related by several characters. After each has spoken, a microcosm has been subtly, economically disclosed; there is a dénouement so inevitably the result of the interaction of characters that the feeling is not only that this was the way events occurred, it was the only way they could have happened." Norah Piper

+ Commonweal 56:564 S 12 '52 300w

"A chaste and disciplined prose lend purity to a quiet, tragic idyll, for the discriminating reader."

+ Kirkus 20:469 Ag 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by M. H. Zipprich

Library J 77:1405 S 1 '52 60w

"So many 'love stories' are written; so little is told about love. Mr. O'Brien has set a text to learn from; he has also written one of the finest books to come along for some time." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 24 '52 450w

"This is Patrick O'Brien's first work to be published in this country, a rare and beautiful novel, deceptively modest in tone, never faltering in the unobtrusive skill of its poetry and dramatic dimensions. O'Brien writes of the farmlands of North Wales, and of the rough, parochial people in that remote valley-world, with intense knowledge and feeling." Pearl Kazin

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 24 '52 900w

"The climax of the story is unlikely and is apt to arouse more impatience than anything else. Mr. O'Brien writes as though the weight of the world were on his shoulders."

New Yorker 28:117 S 6 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 110w

"The various characters affect each other. The involvement of the Englishman and his rustic Welsh neighbors in each others' lives develops reasonably. Out of the interaction of the characters of a number of persons and the character of the community Mr. O'Brien has made a story that moves to its end with the rightness and inevitability we think of as Greek." Oliver La Farge

+ Sat R 35:14 Ag 23 '52 550w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 16 '52 100w

"Much of the charm of this book lies in its picture of the Welsh landscape and Welsh farm life, and the author's accomplished style. The design of the narrative is less successful." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:16 autumn '52 120w

O'BRIEN, GEORGE A. How to waterproof your basement for as little as ten dollars. 116p il $2 Greenberg

693 Waterproofing 52-5623

"A brief presentation of the causes of a damp basement and the necessary corrective measures; exact and practical information set forth in clear, simple fashion." Booklist

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 30 '52 50w

"The best that can be said for this book is that it contains a number of ideas that are obviously based on experience. Some standard methods are not mentioned, however. The ten-dollar phrase in the title is only a come-on." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:723 Ap 15 '52 50w

O'BRIEN, KATE. Teresa of Avila. (Personal portraits ser) 96p il $2 Sheed

B or 92 Teresa of Jesus, Saint 51-13840

A character study of St Teresa of Avila. The author says in her introduction: "I write of Teresa of Avila by choice which is passionate, arbitrary, personal. No one need agree with anything I have to say—but they must not, either, be hurt thereby. I am free here to speak freely about a great woman. But I am not writing of the canonized saint. I propose to examine Teresa, not by the rules of canonization, but for what she was—saint or not—a woman of genius."

"A readable, small book with an undeniable claim on the attention of both the pious and the worldly."

+ Cath World 175:79 Ap '52 80w

"The reader may not always agree, but he will not be bored. If he has not read Teresa's great works, he will be driven to read them. If he has read them, he will be charmed with this personal portrait in which the highlights do justice to Teresa's transcendent spirituality and the warm colors do equal justice to her witty, willful, gay, gifted, tender, passionate, suffering and courageous human personality." Sister Mariella Gable

+ Commonweal 55:238 D 7 '51 400w

"Miss O'Brien's book is a tribute of great insight and grace."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52 60w

Reviewed by J. W. Chase

N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '52 180w

"Many of the facets of this remarkable personality Miss O'Brien has certainly caught, and she illustrates her character-study with aptly chosen quotations. Here and there she may be thought by some readers to slip—notably in the reference to St. Teresa's 'measured, not to say casual, appreciation of John of the Cross.' Miss O'Brien can surely not have read the many letters in which she heaps eulogies upon the first friar of her reform, the other great saint of Carmel." E. A. Peers

+ Spec 187:892 D 28 '51 460w

Springf'd Republican- p28A N 25 '51 50w

O'BRIEN, ROBERT. California called them; a saga of golden days and roaring camps; il. by Antonio Sotomayor. 251p $4 McGraw

979.4 California—Gold discoveries. Frontier and pioneer life—California 51-12557

Celebrates the history of seven small California towns, all of which have some claim to Gold Rush heritage. The author, a newspaper columnist, describes some present-day Gold Rush celebrations, and recalls legends and anecdotes handed down by old settlers.

Booklist 48:142 D 15 '51

"Despite the vast literature that has grown up around the gold rush and the raw magnificence of northern California, the book adds to the panorama. It is this reportorial technique of on-the-scene interviews and color coupled to a sure knowledge of the history that went before that make the book delightful." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 5 '52 490w

"The style may be a bit fancy but this is red meat for devotees of this period."

+ Kirkus 19:552 S 15 '51 150w

"Mr. O'Brien, whose column on early-day events in 'The San Francisco Chronicle' is closely followed by the history-conscious northern Californians, here writes with an easy discursiveness that renders unobtrusive but by no means conceals the solid research that underlies his rambling narrative. Antonio Sotomayor's informal line drawings admirably catch the spirit of the text." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 23 '51 360w

"Throughout these chapters you will find hundreds upon hundreds of stories, from tall tale to historical fact, from familiar legend to brand-new contributions dug up by Mr. O'Brien and fitted neatly into the mosaic of California's past. At the same time the book contributes far more to the larger picture than most such books have in the past. For the author per-

O'BRIEN, ROBERT—Continued
celves that these towns, this mountain, do reflect more than their mere region." J. H.
Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 12 '51
950w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Rose and crown. 323p $4.75
Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences 52-4597

This fifth volume of the Irish playwright's autobiography includes accounts of visits in London and New York, and of friendships—and enmities—with great and small people in England, Ireland and America.

Atlantic 190:99 D '52 120w

Booklist 49:140 D 15 '52

Reviewed by F. E. Faverly

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 2 '52
290w

"It is a picture painted by a man of genius deeply sympathetic to communism, envious of the security and riches around him, yet fundamentally generous and amiable. It glows with color and vigor and malice and is altogether enthralling." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 28
'52 450w

Reviewed by R. M. Hammond

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 6 '52
550w

Kirkus 20:528 Ag 15 '52 70w

"The fifth volume of his autobiography has the same vigour of style as the earlier volumes but is thinner in content. . . Even the insistence on the deadly third person—O'Casey's greatest mistake in these books—cannot muffle the sharp melody of the writing. Sean himself can, though, and often does, either by descending into affectation or by doggedly searching for the least important things to write about.
But try as he will Sean cannot avoid sometimes writing the most exciting English now used by any Irishman." Gerard Fay

— + Manchester Guardian p4 J1 15 '52 330w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley

New Repub 127:17 O 13 '52 1300w

New Statesman & Nation 44:114 J1 26
'52 260w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 2 '52
650w

"This last volume, like its predecessors, shines with light, color and song. It is perhaps not so varied a volume as the preceding four, but it is an integral part of a magnificent whole, and it is as a whole that O'Casey's autobiography must ultimately be judged."
Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 N 2 '52 1150w

New Yorker 28:172 N 8 '52 200w

"'Rose and Crown' will not find a place, I think, among the great works of self-revelation, nor even among the great works of Sean O'Casey, but I think it will be read with interest and wonder now and in the years to come.
For out of this opulent prose emerges a truly unforgettable portrait, which superposed upon the sketches of the preceding volumes, rounds out a personality which will certainly not please everyone, but is almost poignantly of our time." Maurice Valency

+ Sat R 35:25 N 15 '52 650w

"The self-pity is naive; as a consequence, although it is often irritating, it is rarely a bore. The frustration is real. . . When Sean was a young writer struggling for recognition, and again, later, when he was striving to break out of the commercial theatre's lethal chamber, his cruel rages could be accepted, even admired. That they still possess him means that he forfeits our sympathy; rarely, in Rose and Crown; does he regain it." Brian Ingilis

Spec 189:166 Ag 1 '52 600w

"O'Casey is taken for granted nowadays; he is called a classic and forgotten, almost as though he were dead. He is far from dead and has seldom been livelier than in Rose and Crown, the continuation of that remarkable series he began with I Knock at the Door," Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:6 D '52 1100w

Time 60:126 N 10 '52 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 1 '52
800w

O'CONNELL, ALICE LOUISE. Pamela and the blue mare [il. by Paul Brown]. 217p $2.50 Little

Horses—Legends and stories 52-6784

Story of Pamela Paget, from the time she was nine until she was thirteen. During that time she learned to overcome her fear of horses so thoroly that she trained her own horse and rode in a horse show.

Booklist 49:20 S 1 '52

"The author, an experienced horsewoman, writes with authority." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 7 '52
140w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21
'52 90w

Horn Bk 28:325 O '52 80w

Kirkus 20:300 My 15 '52 170w

"Attractive book with many very nice examples of Paul Brown's best." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 77:1412 S 1 '52 40w

"The details given will be fascinating to true horse lovers, and the end, while expected, is satisfying." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 20 '52
130w

"Instruction is more important than entertainment in Alice O'Connell's first story, but young readers, to whom every scrap of information about horse-training has fascination, will not complain of the artless narrative.
Where an adult may raise eyebrows at the time (four years) devoted by Pam to nothing but stable activities, your true little horse thief will find no fault or flaw in this fictionalized handbook. Illustrations are by that established favorite, Paul Brown." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 130w

O'CONNOR, FLANNERY. Wise blood. 232p $3
Harcourt

52-6453

A novel of religious fanaticism. It centers around Hazel Motes, a young war veteran, who attempts to found a new religion, the Church Without Christ. Only when he blinds himself with quicklime and dies a slow death does he find his own salvation. The scene is a Tennessee mountain town.

"This is the first novel of a twenty-six-year-old Georgia woman. It is a remarkably accomplished, remarkably precocious beginning.
Written in a taut, dry, economical and objective prose, it is an important addition to the grotesque literature of Southern decadence.
It is also a kind of Southern-Baptist version of 'The Hound of Heaven.'" J. W. Simons

+ Commonweal 56:297 Je 27 '52 850w

Kirkus 20:285 My 1 '52 180w

"Though there is very little actual life going on the people live and speak authentically. A good solid work more concerned with people and moods than story. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 77:894 My 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 127:19 J1 7 '52 330w

"Flannery O'Connor, in her first novel, has taken on the difficult subject of religious mania, and succeeds in telling a tale at once delicate and grotesque. For it fulfills the first and most important requirement of any work of the imagination, which is to convince the spectator of the total reality of something outside his experience." Sylvia Stallings

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 18
'52 340w

"Written by a Southerner from Georgia, this first novel, whose language is Tennessee-Georgia dialect expertly wrought into a clipped, elliptic and blunt style, introduces its author as a writer of power." William Goyen
+ N Y Times p4 My 18 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:118 Je 14 '52 40w

"A gloomy tale. The author tries to lighten it with humor, but unfortunately her idea of humor is almost exclusively variations on the pratfall. If a character carries an umbrella, the umbrella collapses; if he walks in the aisle of a train, he falls over someone. Neither satire nor humor is achieved." Oliver LaFarge
— Sat R 35:22 My 24 '52 350w

Time 59:108 Je 9 '52 220w

"This first novel is unusually mature, perceptive, and imaginative."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:256 S '52 200w

O'CONNOR, FRANK, originally MICHAEL O'DONOVAN. Stories. 367p $4 Knopf

52-10153

In this collection, ten stories have never before been published in volume form in the United States. Of the other seventeen (taken from Crab Apple Jelly, The Common Chord, and Traveller's Samples), most have been rewritten since their earlier appearances. Contents: My Oedipus complex; Old fellows; The drunkard; Christmas morning; The idealist; First confession; My da; The pretender; First love; Freedom; News for the church; Don Juan's temptation; The long road to Ummerra; The bridal night; Legal aid; Peasants; In the train; The majesty of the law; Song without words; Uprooted; The babes in the wood; The miser; The house that Johnny built; The cheap-jack; The masculine principle; The Luceys; The Holy door.

"There are a number of writers whose work, though first-rate, could not properly be described as attractive. But the notable thing about Frank O'Connor is that he is one of the most attractive living writers of short stories in addition to being one of the world's best." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:104 O '52 150w

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:82 Ja '53 20w

"In his preface Mr. O'Connor speaks of 'rewriting' these stories many times. A check against the first American editions shows but minor changes: punctuation, sharpened dialogue, a word stricken here and there. But the changes are additional proof, if it were needed, that the author is a perfectionist. Anyone coming upon these beautifully wrought stories for the first time will be aware of that." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:151 N '52 220w

"Long or short, every tale in this book is a treasure, a joy in its subject, in its characters, in their colorful language, and in the manner in which, without a seeming mite of effort, the author holds your most attentive interest." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 17 '52 400w

"If there is anything to be said against this collection, it might come in the form of a suggestion to the reader. There is too much life and wisdom in these stories to make for easy assimilation. They have to be read in small lots or you may need the aspirin bottle. Read 'em and laugh; read 'em and weep!" Joe Dever

+ Commonweal 56:538 S 5 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:352 Je 15 '52 190w

"Highly recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 77:1193 J1 '52 60w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 175:177 Ag 30 '52 1050w

"One of the best of recent story tellers is Frank O'Connor; his prose is tuned to the rhythms of speech rather than of the type-writer; it is never too neatly tailored and at its best it is irresistible; it breaks down literary prejudices and disarms the reader, who, when he reads O'Connor, scarcely reads at all, but listens." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 17 '52 1150w

"For some years now those who follow Anglo-Irish letters have realized that when Frank O'Connor saw fit to issue a selection from his best work it would make a book worthy to stand beside George Moore's 'Untilled Field,' which founded the Irish short story, and Joyce's 'Dubliners,' which perfected it. What we are saluting here, then, in these twenty-seven stories is a new landmark in Anglo-Irish fiction." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 17 '52 950w

Reviewed by W. B. Ready

San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 5 '52 700w

"Frank O'Connor's Ireland, as his readers know and as his compatriots gladly acknowledge, is both different from and as vivid as the better known Ireland of Joyce and Yeats. Probably Mr. O'Connor is not quite the peer of the two others. Joyce is more moving, Yeats more profound; yet any reader should remember that Yeats, the greater, said that his younger contemporary 'is doing for Ireland what Chekhov did for Russia' and that he said this long before Mr. O'Connor reached the careful command of his medium every page of 'The Stories' shows." H. C. Webster
+ Sat R 35:14 Ag 16 '52 500w

"No one can read these 27 stories, 10 of which have not before appeared in America, without the realization that here is a writer who counts his talent as a blessing and loves and reverences his fellowmen, in spite of and because of their inadequacies, and that here also is a master-writer, with the warmth and discipline to mould his stories to the heart of perfect simplicity." L. S. Munn

+ Springfield Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 340w

O'CONNOR, RICHARD J., and others. Enjoy your driving. 144p il $2 Oceana

629.28 Automobiles—Driving

51-14022

"Subtitled: 'A Textbook for Driver Safety Education,' this was written in collaboration with Theodore Mattern and Anne J. Mathes. O'Connor is supervisor of Driver Safety Education for the New York City vocational high schools. Complete, accurate information is given simply and graphically through text, charts, maps, pictures on such topics as getting a license, equipment, traffic rules, signs and markings, registration. Also included are lists of films on safe driving and instructional aids. Indexed." Library J

Booklist 48:173 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by M. K. Walraven

Library J 77:215 F 1 '52 90w

O'CONNOR, WILLIAM VAN. Age of criticism: 1900-1950. (Twentieth-century literature in America) 182p $3 Regnery

801 Literary criticism

52-12476

A review of the chief trends in modern criticism during the last fifty years. The author is associate professor of English literature at the University of Minnesota. Short bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:45 O 1 '52

"On the whole this is one of the most successful members of the series." Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 9 '52 40w

"Prof. O'Connor comes to grips with the New Criticism, but is not particularly awed by it, having a mind of his own. He is rather severe with Farrington and Edmund Wilson." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:1074 Je 15 '52 80w

O'DONNELL, BERNARD. Cavalcade of justice. 264p $3 Macmillan

347.97 Courts—Great Britain. Justice, Administration of 52-11587

"An experienced English court reporter of long standing takes up one by one the various

O'DONNELL, BERNARD—Continued

English courts—Assize Courts, Coroner's Court, King's Bench Court, House of Lords, etc. Each description starts with a sketch of the court's historical background and then dwells mainly on old and contemporary cases." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

"Mr. O'Donnell's history of English courts and trials from Saxon days to the present is a journalistic treatment of material that is chosen primarily for human interest. In consequence, the volume makes reading that is virtually all good and often fascinating, but that leaves the questions of the lawyer and social scientist largely unanswered." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 24 '52 50w

"Probably it is Mr. O'Donnell's training as a journalist which accounts for the two greatest defects of the book. First, the author emerges as an incurable romantic. . . . More serious than this sugar coating is the book's second short-coming—Mr. O'Donnell's failure to give the movements in court evolution any place in the broader pattern of English constitutional history. Somehow, things just 'happen' in this volume. . . . Step by step, Mr. O'Donnell has traced the growth of the English law courts, and most readers will agree that substantial justice has been done by his account." A. F. Westin

+ — Harvard Law R 66:560 Ja '53 1250w

Kirkus 20:336 Je 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by H. H. Bernt

Library J 77:1188 Jl '52 60w

"The reader is taken for a rather jolting ride through judicial history without gaining any coherent idea of how or why the various courts and procedures were born. Nor is the reader left with any too clear a notion of the present organization of the English judicial system." Eugene Gressman

New Repub 127:19 S 15 '52 550w

"The author is in better control of his anecdotal method than in his earlier book on the Old Bailey; causes come to life, if briefly, in these courts of law, and order is brought to bear that justice may be done."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 31 '52 500w

"It is a book that can be unreservedly recommended for lovers of true-crime stories, lawyers, students of English history, or indeed anyone interested in justice." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 110w

"It is an excellent and entertaining book throughout and while possibly better for lawyers than laymen it is still good fare for any reader." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 190w

O'DONNELL, DONAT. Maria Cross; imaginative patterns in a group of modern Catholic writers. 267p $5 Oxford

809 Catholic literature. Literature, Modern 52-6169

"Many students of literature are puzzled by the seemingly paradoxical writings of certain Catholic authors, particularly their absorption with the theme of carnal love and the love of God at one and the same time. This is a series of critical essays wherein Mr. O'Donnell tries to explain the philosophical formula and mystical promptings that guide the imaginations of such writers as: François Mauriac, George Bernanos, Graham Greene, Seán O'Faoláin, Evelyn Waugh, Charles Péguy, Paul Claudel and Leon Bloy." Library J

"Mr. O'Donnell is a penetrating critic who has something acute to say about each of the eight Catholic writers he discusses. But his subterranean journeys into their psyches seem pretty dark to this unilluminated reader; and his development of the main theme is not clear." R. M. Ames

+ — Cath World 175:477 S '52 320w

"The author's project was self-defeating. He does not give even a provisional definition of Catholicism, so that the relationships which he establishes are always to elements within Catholicism—sometimes to elements which are only temporal, racial, or national; sometimes to elements which are purely accidental to Catholicism. . . . It was self-defeating, too, because the author committed himself to an impossible labor." J. W. Simons

Commonweal 56:203 My 30 '52 900w

"Not for the general reader, but rather for those scholars who wish to probe deeply into the spiritual struggles as well as the creative ability of these eight writers." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by S. M. Fitzgerald

New Repub 126:26 My 12 '52 800w

"A volume of brilliant critical studies of eight well-known writers who are Catholics." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 25 '52 500w

Reviewed by John Cogley

N Y Times p4 Je 15 '52 900w

O'DONNELL, PAUL D. Production control. 304p $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

658.5 Industrial management 52-6615

"A simplified, practical introduction. It deals with such matters as product development, plant layout materials handling, scheduling, follow-up and statistical quality control. Not much is said on any topic but the reader gets a fair idea of what production control is and how it operates in a variety of manufacturing establishments. The book is particularly suited for home study and for use as a text in extension courses." Library J

Booklist 48:354 Jl 1 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 14 '52 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:363 F 15 '52 40w

"An introductory work designed for college courses. As it is written in a simple style and is not very long, readers not enrolled in colleges who want a quick view of the subject may find it useful."

N Y New Tech Bks 37:23 Mr '52

O'DONOVAN, MICHAEL. See O'Connor, F.

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON. American sociology; the story of sociology in the United States through 1950. 501p il $5 Longmans

301 Sociology 51-12390

"A comprehensive account of the work of American sociologists given in part in their own words and concluding with an overview of the problems now awaiting further study." School & Society

"In the judgment of this reviewer, one of the defects of this book is lack of precision and skill in using sociological concepts. This has reduced his effectiveness in presenting the nature and scope of sociology. As a result, too, this treatise suffers somewhat from lack of integration of its materials, duplication, and redundancy. Nevertheless, this book is worthy of the respect and careful reading by all sociologists and social scientists." C. A. Dawson

+ — Am J Soc 58:105 Jl '52 850w

"A mature, vastly informative, and pre-eminently generous book." H. E. Barnes

+ Am Soc R 16:873 D '51 1150w

Reviewed by Howard Becker

Ann Am Acad 280:204 Mr '52 750w

School & Society 74:128 Ag 25 '51 20w

"This volume is a labor of love and a fine workmanlike and scholarly job. Odum has lived through most of the period he describes and probably has known personally or by correspondence almost all the men with whom he deals. Perhaps this is what makes the material 'come alive.'" Read Bain

+ Social Forces 30:232 D '51 2200w

"The period which Dr. Odum has treated will no doubt be reappraised again and again. Meanwhile his book is a noteworthy contribution to information and interpretation in the field." Louise Ware

+ Survey 87:550 D '51 600w

"The plan of this book and its author's predilections unfortunately preclude a balanced treatment of the subject. Professor Odum has, for example, omitted mention of some of the major sociological contributions; he has in other instances noted a textbook but overlooked its author's original research. Too much is said of the presidents of the American Sociological Society, while scant attention is paid equally important sociologists who have not been association executives. This work is, nevertheless, the only one of its kind and will be profitable to professional sociologists and advanced students of sociology."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:402 D '51 300w

OESTERREICHER, JOHN M. Walls are crumbling [seven Jewish philosophers discover Christ; foreword by Jacques Maritain]. 233p $5 Devin-Adair

922 Catholic church—Converts. Philosophers. Jews—Biography 52-9554

Studies of seven modern Jewish philosophical thinkers who have turned to the Catholic faith. Contents: Henri Bergson; Edmund Husserl; Adolf Reinach; Max Scheler; Paul Landsberg; Max Picard; Edith Stein.

Reviewed by M. R. Simon

Cath World 176:156 N '52 190w

"Where philosophical knowledge ends and religious wisdom begins in the heart of man is still a mystery. And Israel is still a mystery; the walls between Jews and Christ may indeed be crumbling. But I do not believe this book, for all its other virtues, demonstrates the destruction of the walls or penetrates the mystery." Donald McDonald

Commonweal 56:150 My 16 '52 650w

"Despite a preface by Maritain the book is so tendentious as to be alien to the spirit of philosophy. It is completely unreliable because of its lack of objectivity, and must be classed as propaganda aimed at converting Jews to Catholicism. Not recommended." A. D. Osborn

— Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 80w

"The more strictly metaphysical writing quite naturally makes hard reading, and it is not everywhere clear. Further, the author and six of his subjects have German as their mother tongue, so the style remains somewhat foreign, and despite a very good job of editing, denser and heavier than non-technical Americans ordinarily face. But the biographical and theological content of the book, the religious life and insight and meaning which this sensitive, cultured and charitable appreciation relay to us, give a warmth and spontaneous interest to the whole work." Philip Burnham

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 22 '52 750w

O'FAOLAIN, SEAN. Newman's way; the odyssey of John Henry Newman. 355p il $4.50 Devin-Adair

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal 52-12280

"The story of Newman's spiritual journey from the Calvinism of his childhood through the Anglicanism of his youth to the Roman Catholicism of his maturity was originally planned by the biographer as a family portrait. Although he dropped this project to follow Newman alone up to his conversion, the intent lingers in the fully realized portraiture of his relatives. The author foreshortens the rest of the Cardinal's long and illustrious life into an epilog." Booklist

Booklist 49:47 O 1 '52

"Both by reason of the author's reputation and because of his particular approach to the subject, this book is unique. . . Patient research has enabled the author to provide us with knowledge of many small details and to correct certain minor inaccuracies with regard to the Newman family history."

+ Cath World 176:158 N '52 190w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 14 '52 300w

"This work, with a rare combination of original scholarship, imagination, sensitivity and humor, indicates why, in a certain sense, Newman's odyssey never ended, until, after ninety years of life, he finally passed from those 'shadows and images' which were his constant present into that Truth which only eternity could fully reveal." W. P. Clancy

+ Commonweal 57:75 O 24 '52 700w

Reviewed by Roger Lloyd

Manchester Guardian p4 D 5 '52 250w

"O'Faolain has made valuable new researches and writes with a novelist's craft and understanding." S. M. Fitzgerald

+ New Repub 127:20 O 27 '52 800w

"Newman's course led away from his family, and his personality provided no means or expression for his love and sense of duty to keep union with them, and to prevent a continued and more complicated isolation. Sean O'Faolain writes it well, in his excellent, cultured, rather complicated, and slightly antique style. His admiration and sympathy are subdued to the very objective by the urbanity of his approach." Philip Burnham

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 19 '52 1050w

"Using much fresh material (including unpublished letters and memoranda), Sean O'Faolain provides what is neither a complete biography nor a systematic appraisal, but rather a well written collection of significant and coherent data." J. A. Pike

+ N Y Times p39 O 19 '52 650w

"A wholly human chronicle, more interesting and more dramatic than most of the fiction to which we are treated today."

+ New Yorker 28:145 S 13 '52 150w

Wis Lib Bul 48:214 S '52

Reviewed by A. D. Culler

Yale R n s 42:316 winter '53 390w

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. Grow young and die. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

52-6364

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 15 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:170 Mr 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 18 '52 50w

"Smooth, but surprisingly empty. . . The whole effect is that of a crude first draft for one of the striking melodramas of which the author is capable." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p37 My 25 '52 50w

"Easier to read and on the whole more sensible than Mr. O'Farrell's recent works."

New Yorker 28:148 My 17 '52 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p28 My 25 '52 50w

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. Snakes of St Cyr. 256p $2.50 Duell; Little 51-10421

"This narrative concerns an American in the south of France, tangled up with a set of rogues and a couple of girls." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 19:623 O 15 '51 60w

"It is a strange agglutinate of false cynicism, unwitting dishonesty and maudlin sentimentality. . . And I can't remember when a story has frightened me more thoroughly or inadvertently." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 2 '51 170w

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM—Continued

"What O'Farrell offers here is essentially the story of a weaker Bunny enslaved by a more dangerous Raffles; and despite an over-optimistic ending, he has managed an extraordinarily adroit job of fusing a complex psychological study with an elaborate and exciting yarn of smuggling and other rackets in and near Marseilles." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 9 '51
50w

"Not a pulse-pusher." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 40w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Scandinavia: Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, and Iceland [tr. by Paddy O'Hanlon and H. Iredale Nelson]. (World in color ser) 438p il col il maps $6.50
McGraw

948 Scandinavia—Description and travel
52-10537

After two introductory chapters on art and literature in the Scandinavian countries the volume contains separate sections on Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, and Iceland. Contains more than 400 illustrations in black and white and color.

Booklist 48:358 J1 1 '52

"The art work has both vitality and integrity. . . Pictorial maps highlight both history and the present scene. Color is used profusely and produces a gay and enticing book. . . The overabundance of detail may be too much for the casual reader to absorb, yet a reading of these chapters will make museums and church art more meaningful." F. D. Scott

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 29 '52
220w

New Yorker 28:87 J1 12 '52 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 17 '52
260w

"Illustrations are lavish and mainly in colour. Maps are rather too pretty to be useful. For good measure a little dictionary of the Northern countries, on a light note, brings the work to a close, but does not compensate for the lack of an index, a serious omission in a work of this sort."

Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 3 '52
110w

O'HARA, JOHN. Pal Joey [libretto and lyrics] lyrics by Lorenz Hart; music by Richard Rodgers. 135p il $2.50 Random house

812 Musical comedies 52-10675

The libretto and lyrics of Pal Joey which was presented for the first time in December, 1940. The revival was presented in New Haven in December 1951 and in New York in January, 1952.

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 24 '52
10w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1514 S 15 '52 20w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 D 12 '52 110w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 44:647 N 29
'52 60w

"Character study is something still rare and surprising in musical comedy. The so called 'lyrics' by the late Lorenz Hart fit nicely into the night-club atmosphere, also, but to read them in cold print is pretty painful."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 7 '52
90w

Sat R 35:28 N 29 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec 189:792 D 5 '52 70w

"Joey makes no concessions to the folderol of romanticism; its characters are low-lifers with little to redeem them. Its author stayed true to the character he created in his New Yorker short stories. That is praiseworthy. But somehow on paper the reality becomes a little mechanical and not so very real, after all." Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:7 O '52 200w

"Pal Joey's letters are perhaps more effective in small doses than in a whole book. Nevertheless, slight and frolicking as these letters are, they have the sharp immediacy and pointed social observation of Mr. O'Hara's best novels."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 5 '52
200w

O'HARA, MARY, pseud. See Sture-Vasa, M. A.

O'HEGARTY, PATRICK SARSFIELD. History of Ireland under the Union, 1801 to 1922; with an epilogue carrying the story down to the acceptance in 1927 by de Valera of the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921. 811p $9.50 British bk. centre

941.5 Ireland—History

[52-10517]

"Students of the Irish Revolutionary period know Mr. O'Hegarty as author of 'The Victory of Sinn Féin.' A member of the Executive Council of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, he wrote with special knowledge and as a participant in the events which he reported. . . Now thirty years later, still as a Separatist, he tells the story of Irish Separatism from 'Tone to De Valera. It is not a history of Ireland but an authoritative exposition of that state of mind and emotion which Mr. O'Hegarty frankly admits was, until its last phase, a minority view finally imposed by a 'willed' insurrection and martyrdoms calculated to serve the ends of propaganda." (N Y Times) Index.

"Mr O'Hegarty himself played an active part in the movement during its most critical years, and this must always be remembered in assessing his interpretation of the nineteenth century. But if this colours his narrative it does not distort it, and his account of earlier movements displays both sympathy and insight. . . It is, however, unfortunate that—given the title of his book—the author should have decided to exclude economic considerations from his survey, for not everyone will agree with him in thinking them of secondary importance." F. S. L. Lyons

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 22 '52
200w

"The author's skill in selection produces a swiftly moving narrative in tune with his own swift and lucid style. From any viewpoint this is a notable book. But it is regrettable that it should close with the Treaty of 1921, leaving us in the dark as to the author's impressions of 'Separatism Achieved,' a republic dedicated to isolationism in a jungle world, yet defenseless and economically dependent upon the neighboring island."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '52 700w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Sat R 35:15 D 13 '52 100w

"Mr. O'Hegarty has written a highly illuminating and a superbly extravagant period piece. . . Despite elaboration of details the theme is presented in broad, uncompromising terms, which in themselves virtually preclude refinement of judgement. Yet this history of the Irish nationalist revolt against the Union—for such is the theme of the book—gains as well as loses from being written in the romantic style of nineteenth-century nationalist historians. . . Where Mr. O'Hegarty is pre-eminently successful is in the recapture of the simple and single-minded emotional intensity which inspired and, at the price of unity, brought at the last to a successful conclusion the Irish struggle for independence." Nicholas Mansergh

+ Spec 189:108 J1 18 '52 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p283 Ap 25 '52
600w

OLDHAM, JAMES BASIL. English blind-stamped bindings. 1td ed 72p 61pl $27.50 Cambridge

095 Bookbinding

[A52-9808]

"Mr. J. B. Oldham, librarian of Shrewsbury School, devoted his lectures in 1949 as Sanders Reader in Bibliography at the University of Cambridge, to a study of English blind-stamped bindings. In this field Mr. Oldham has become a recognized authority. . . In the present work Mr. Oldham devotes himself solely to blind-stamped bindings (whether decorated by stamps or rolls) of the fifteenth to seventeenth centuries, omitting entirely any treatment of panel stamps which G. D. Hobson has already discussed in Blind-Stamped Panels in the English Book-Trade." (Library J) Copiously illustrated. Index.

"Mr. Oldham has examined bindings of his chosen period in all the major collections in England and Scotland, and the results of his researches constitute a major contribution to the literature of English binders and bindings." L. M. Stark

+ Library J 77:1508 S 15 '52 350w

"A splendidly produced volume with sixty-one plates which will indubitably stand as the authoritative reference book for anybody curious to discover whether any particular bookbinding belongs to a group of which specimens have been recorded and of whose origin, period and localisation something more or less definite is known." E. P. Goldschmidt

+ Spec 189:196 Ag 8 '52 800w

"This is the most important book yet published on the earlier English bookbindings, and is the foundation on which any further research should be based. . . Mr. Oldham may rest assured that in his particular field he has made a valuable and very acceptable contribution to the sum of bibliographical knowledge."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p620 S 19 '52 1050w

OLDRIN, JOHN. Round meadow; il. by Kurt Wiese. 80p $2.50 Viking

51-13387

The story of a motherless fawn who began his life in a barn, but was later transferred to a round meadow where he learned to adapt himself to his normal realm.

Booklist 48:175 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

"Poetic prose, fine illustrations and bookmaking distinguish this unusually sensitive account of a baby deer's growth to maturity." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:30 F '52 80w

"Recommended." Grace Shakin

+ Library J 77:67 Ja 1 '52 70w

"An unusually good nature book. It has incident and action, but is chiefly a detailed report on Dasher's growing-up, his learning about the seasons, his friendship with children, his contacts with other creatures and, at last, his finding a mate. Beautifully written, the true tale avoids sentiment, yet fully involves our feelings for Dasher." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 21 '51 180w

"If the story is told to children or read aloud expertly it should reach a wide audience of varied ages. Unfortunately, the occasional difficult words and the consistently long sentences and paragraphs may act as a barrier for youngsters who would themselves enjoy reading the book to themselves." Lavinia Davis

+ N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 140w

OLDS, MRS HELEN (DIEHL). Christmas-tree Sam; il. by Lee Ames. 62p $1.50 Messner

52-13601

Story of a ten-year-old boy who helps an older brother drive a truck load of Christmas trees from Vermont and sell them in the New York market. For grades 3 to 5.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:502 Ag 15 '52 120w

"A very good and useful book." Phyllis Fennner

+ Library J 77:2077 D 1 '52 40w

OLIVER, CHAD. Mists of dawn; jacket and endpaper designs by Alex Schomburg. 208p $2 Winston

52-8974

"Mark Nye, while inspecting his scientist-uncle's time machine, is accidentally carried 50,000 years back through time. He narrowly escapes death at the hands of the Neanderthal men, but makes friends with the Cro-Magnons. He joins the latter in their hunts, their magic ceremonies, helps them beat off a vicious Neanderthal attack, and returns eventually to the present time." N Y Times

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:561 S 1 '52 70w

"The story is reasonable and the excitement real. An answer to the question, 'What do you have about early man?' For the better 12-16-year-old reader." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 77:2015 N 15 '52 60w

"It's hard to imagine a better introduction to the ever-provocative time theme." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52 50w

"This tale of a boy's growth to manhood is perhaps the best of the series." Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times pt2, p28 N 16 '52 80w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 16 '52 60w

OLIVER, ROBERT TARBELL. Verdict in Korea. 207p $4 Bald Eagle press

951.9 Korean war, 1950-

52-13854

Study of the Korean war by the chairman of the Department of speech at the Pennsylvania State College, based on his long service to the government of Korea and his personal knowledge of President Rhee.

Cath World 176:239 D '52 100w

"This is the fourth full-length book on Korea by Robert Oliver, and it is by all odds the best of the lot. It is in some respects the most informative and the most moving of any of the analyses of the Korean conflict that have come to this reviewer's attention. . .

There is an abundance of scholarship in this book and ample documentation, both statistical and otherwise. In that sense it is a technical work and a commendable one. But to many persons the warmth of its human approach will overshadow this technical excellence." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p10 N 23 '52 500w

OLMSTED, JAMES MONTROSE DUNCAN, and OLMSTED, EVANGELINE HARRIS. Claude Bernard and the experimental method in medicine. (Life of science lib) 277p $4 Schuman

B or 92 Bernard, Claude. Medicine, Experimental 52-12430

A biography of a French scientist, regarded as the founder of experimental medicine. J. M. D. Olmsted is professor of physiology at the University of California.

"No padding, no drama, not highlighted, rather an austere, contained but very real pen portrait."

+ Kirkus 20:397 Jl 1 '52 110w

"Recommended without reservation for the B-B (926.12) shelf." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1302 Ag '52 110w

"Well written and thoughtfully produced, this picture of Bernard seen against the distant

OLMSTED, J. M. D.—Continued

drop of nineteenth-century European science can be recommended to lay and medical readers alike." T. H. Maren

+ N Y Times p6 O 26 '52 400w

"A charming and lucid biography. . . Although this biography makes no pretense of being a definitive work, it certainly provides a superb outline for one. Professor and Mrs. Olmsted have performed a real service in sketching, vividly and surely, this figure of an overlooked titan." W. H. Baker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 5 '52 850w

"This is the most careful and detailed biography in English of Claude Bernard." Ralph Colp

+ Sat R 35:41 N 8 '52 420w

OLSEN, MRS DOLORES (BIRK). See Hitchens, D. B.

OLSON, HARRY FERDINAND. Musical engineering; an engineering treatment of the interrelated subjects of speech, music, musical instruments, acoustics, sound reproduction, and hearing. 369p il $6.50 McGraw

781.1 Music—Acoustics and physics. Musical instruments 51-12635

"Musical scales, musical instruments, studio and auditorium acoustics, sound reproducing systems treated from the standpoint of acoustical engineering." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:356 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:822 My 15 '52 10w

"Mr. Olson is director of RCA's Acoustical Laboratory and is President-Elect of the Acoustical Society of America. Almost encyclopedic in its scope, his book is an ambitious attempt to cover the 'interrelated subjects of speech, music, musical instruments, acoustics, sound reproduction, and hearing.' It has over 300 figures and tables, and is a handsome example of the printer's art. Of the subjects included, speech and hearing are discussed only briefly. . . On the other hand, Chapter 5, on musical instruments, has an excellent, broad, and clear coverage, aided by 86 diagrams, of instruments and their parts." J. M. Barbour

Music Lib Assn Notes 10:107 D '52 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:33 My '52

O'MALLEY, MARY DOLLING (SANDERS). See Bridge, A., pseud.

O'MEARA, WALTER. Tales of the two borders. 197p $2.75 Bobbs

52-5812

"Walter O'Meara was reared on the Minnesota-Ontario border and now lives in extreme southern Arizona. Of the seven short stories in this volume, four are of the north country, one of southern Arizona, one of colonial New Mexico, and the last of Charleston, S.C." N Y Times

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 2 '52 420w

"The only story which doesn't measure up to the author's fine best work is the first one, La Porcelaine Claire. That could have taken one more writing-through by its author who usually needs no clichés, no slick or blurring phrases. The rest of the book is very close to perfection in the telling." L. T. Nicholl

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 10 '52 450w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p32 F 17 '52 190w

"Those who have read with pleasure—as did this reader—Mr. O'Meara's former novels of life on the Canadian border country may be a little disappointed with this collection of seven short stories. There is still here the same ability to evoke a natural setting—a swirling stream, an untracked wilderness, a quietly primitive village—but the stories seem thin and contrived, frail scaffoldings on which to hang Mr. O'Meara's unquestionable affection for a life that is comfortably far from the maddening stream." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:27 Mr 1 '52 170w

OMMANNEY, FRANCIS DOWNES. Shoals of Capricorn. 322p il $4 Harcourt

969.6 Islands of the Indian ocean 52-11062

An account of a marine expedition to the Indian ocean, especially to the Seychelles Islands off the east coast of Africa. The object was to determine the prospects of supplementing the food fish supply of the world, which is dwindling in Europe and Newfoundland.

Booklist 49:10 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:7 O '52 30w

"For summer reading it is doubtful if a more satisfying book than 'The Shoals of Capricorn' can be found. It is a pleasant time passer, but not a time waster, for the reader adds to his store of knowledge without effort. Dr. Ommannney's style is smooth, easy, and lulling—almost soporific, but one is kept awake and alert by sly, shy, gentle humor." Mason Warner

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 24 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:393 Jl 1 '52 140w

"A thoroughly delightful yarn." Lawrence Griswold

+ New Repub 127:19 S 1 '52 150w

"A well-written and informative book. It has not the sensibility and feeling for place of Mr. Michael Malim's Island of the Swan, indeed, Mr. Ommannney on land is a brusque, testy and indignant writer. The fantasy of the architecture strikes him as folly in an island subject to frightful cyclones; others might see elegance and nostalgia where he sees stupidity. But he is observant and though his pursuits were scientific, he is neither wooden, hearty nor conventional." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:648 My 31 '52 1700w

"Dr. Ommannney is a British naturalist and also a popular writer who won golden spurs with his first book, 'South Latitude,' a stirring and beautiful Antarctic tale. . . The first eight chapters, dealing in part with Mauritius and the Seychelles in aspect, retrospect, and prospect, are worthy of the attention of all statesmen and present valuable educational diet for any literate person. . . But in the later chapters, the narrative of travel and the discussion of the technique of sampler fishery, Mr. Ommannney's text falls to a pedestrian plane." R. C. Murphy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 10 '52 950w

"Mr. Ommannney does very well. He has a most beguiling modesty, a gift of understatement, and a refreshing humor. His information is painless, even enjoyable, and his account of the piscatorial possibilities of the shoals around the Seychelles (by shoals he means a depth of less than forty fathoms) is full of adventure." William McPee

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '52 550w

"'The Shoals of Capricorn' is more than first rate; it is one of the most fascinating books of its kind I've ever come across." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '52 650w

Reviewed by T. E. Cooney

Sat R 35:42 N 1 '52 190w

Reviewed by G. P. Griggs

Spec 189:74 Jl 11 '52 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p358 My 30 '52 1000w

O'MORAN, MABEL, pseud. See Moran, M. O.

O'NEAL, COTHBURN. Master. of the world.
405p $3.75 Crown

Timur, the Great—Fiction 52-10775

Novel based on the life of Tamerlane, stressing his conquests of the fourteenth century, and his prowess as master of many women.

"Master of the World" is, I believe, the best historical novel of the year. At least, it is the hardest to put down." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 30 '52 550w

"Full blooded, sword-slashing, sexy, yet dignified, a biographical novel about Tamerlane, the fourteenth century ruler of Samarkand and near conqueror of Europe and Asia. . . In color, stature and feeling for a culture and an era, a good candidate for the Suleiman the Magnificent market."

+ Kirkus 20:521 Ag 15 '52 240w

"The characterization is flat and the whole is not as adequate or satisfying as Lamb's Tamerlane. For libraries whose readers demand sex and adventure." K. A. Shorey

Library J 77:1656 O 1 '52 70w

"In place of novelistic structure the author provides an ersatz all too prevalent in the contemporary historical novel: vast quantities of female flesh. . . The prodigious virility of the hero recalls an adolescent's wish-dream; and when the possibilities of sheer eroticism have been exhausted, the shock element of wanton cruelty is exploited. In spite of this concession to a possibly imaginary level of public taste, the book is in two respects better than the run of historical novels. It has a coherent point of view, and is backed by sound research." Richard Winston

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 2 '52 430w

"In honesty, Mr. O'Neal's Timur is not likely to be remembered as long as Marlow's or Milton's. But as heroes go in contemporary historical fiction, he is certainly more memorable and quotable than most. Mr O'Neal vows that he hasn't twisted history to make Timur's political pronouncements sound (as they do) like Machiavelli, Goebbels and Pravda rolled into one. That most dangerous of men, half cynic, half mystic, he is the grim central figure of a story unrelievedly grim except for its scorching sex interludes." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p52 N 23 '52 350w

Springfld Republican p5C D 21 '52 120w

O'NEILL, EUGENE GLADSTONE. Moon for the misbegotten; a play in four acts. 177p $2.75 Random house

812

52-6668

The first play by Eugene O'Neill since The Iceman Cometh (1946).

"The play is full of action and argument. The mutual confidence of Tyrone and Josie is brought about by a thoroughly interesting plot. The raucous humors of Hogan pere, who would be maddening in real life, are amusing in print; and the play is on the whole rather more readable than most of O'Neill's works, designed, as they should be, essentially for the stage and not the armchair." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 190:76 S '52 650w

Booklist 49:9 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 3 '52 350w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1307 Ag '52 50w

"A Moon for the Misbegotten will change no one's opinion of O'Neill. It is neither one of his worst, nor one of his very best efforts. If it is more serious or in some ways more meritorious than most recent plays, so much the worse for most recent plays. I rather think its central image—that of a giant virgin holding in her arms a dipsomaniac lecher with a heart of gold—may stand in all minds as O'Neill's monument, for admirers will find it characteristic in grandeur and poetry while others will find in it, clinically speaking, neurotic fantasy indulged rather than exploited and, critically speaking, poetry strained after rather than achieved." Eric Bentley

+ New Repub 127:17 Ag 4 '52 1250w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 3 '52 410w

"The crudity of the technique makes it hard to descry intention. Nevertheless, despite this, despite the tone of barbershop harmony that enters into all O'Neill's work, this play exacts homage for its mythic powers, for the element of transcendence jutting up in it like a great wooden Trojan horse." Mary McCarthy

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '52 850w

"It is to be hoped that A Moon for the Misbegotten will be the occasion for scholars of the theatre to take a new look at Eugene O'Neill. He is entitled to one, and the playgoing public is entitled to its results. . . Now and again a playwright like Lillian Hellman or Arthur Miller or Tennessee Williams may approach his best and surpass his lesser work; but in volume of achievement he stands alone. . . Such as he is, he is just about all we have." Joseph Carroll

+ Theatre Arts 36:6 S '52 1600w

"Though it is scarcely the play to add to O'Neill's lofty prestige of the '20s and '30s, Moon does read better than The Iceman Cometh. Iceman hacked at its one point—that man cannot live without illusions—with an iecpick. Moon switches from the disenchanted mind to the undernourished heart. At core, its lament for the loveless is a gentle and moving one."

Time 60:80 Ag 4 '52 450w

O'NEILL, HESTER. Picture story of Denmark; pictures by Ursula Koering. [50p] $2.50 McKay

948.9 Denmark—Juvenile literature

52-13032

Presents in text and pictures the highlights of the history, culture, and daily life of Denmark. For grades 5 to 8.

Kirkus 20:682 O 15 '52 110w

"A comprehensive and accurate picture of Denmark. . . The numerous delightful illustrations by Ursula Koering are as much a part of the book as the text itself." Inger Boye

+ Library J 77:2078 D 1 '52 60w

"This sunny, tiny country has drawn forth the best efforts of this team. It should send even more visitors flocking to see not only Andersen's birthplace, and Elsinore, but the many other interesting places here described." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p7 N 16 '52 40w

O'NEILL, HESTER. Picture story of Norway; pictures by Ursula Koering. [48p] $2.50 McKay

948.1 Norway—Juvenile literature 51-14526

An informal introduction to the land and people of Norway. Illustrated with colored marginal drawings. For grades 4-7.

Booklist 48:162 Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

Kirkus 19:678 D 1 '51 180w

"Ursula Koering's illustrations, completely authentic, are an integral part of the book. Useful in school curriculum. Can be read by fifth-graders, some fourth-graders, as well as older children." Inger Boye

+ Library J 76:2019 D 1 '51 80w

"It seems unbelievable that author and artist were sent to Norway to do it, when the result is so slight that it sounds and looks like a travel folder. It does, in a short space, present many aspects of Norwegian life of today, and one has to admit that it is better as information than the many slight storybooks given elementary age children. Perhaps it has a real use in elementary geography classes." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 27 '52 110w

O'NEILL, JAMES MILTON. Catholicism and American freedom. 287p $3.50 Harper

232 Catholic church in the U.S. Church and state in the U.S. Blanshard, Paul 51-11945

An answer to the charges brought against the Catholic Church by Paul Blanshard. Author is a Catholic layman, chairman of the Department of speech, Brooklyn College, and author of Religion and Education Under the Constitution. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. G. Hays

Ann Am Acad 282:168 J1 '52 550w

Booklist 48:310 Je 1 '52

"Though the main emphasis of O'Neill's work is defensive and apologetic, it is also valuable as a storehouse of precisely documented information on the major controversial religious issues of the day... It is to be regretted that Dr. O'Neill's work was so slow in appearing. The delay was of course due partly to the tedious requirements of accurate scholarship but also to the fact that after having somehow procured a copy of the proof sheets, Blanshard threatened a libel suit. Publication was delayed until Harper's suit reassurance on this score." J. J. Maguire

+ Cath World 175:235 Je '52 380w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:828 J1 16 '52 2000w

Reviewed by Tully Nettleton

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 18 '52 700w

Reviewed by W. S. Rycroft

Churchman 166:2 S '52 1100w

Reviewed by B. I. Bell

Commonweal 56:179 My 23 '52 550w

Foreign Affairs 30:676 J1 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:141 F 15 '52 280w

"O'Neill, who served as chairman of Committee on Academic Freedom of American Civil Liberties Union, cannot be dismissed as a 'reactionary.' His counter-attack against Blanshard is, however, often very sharp in its language, this possibly might help to clarify the issues, even though frequent use of words like 'nonsense' does not make for enjoyable reading. Libraries which have Blanshard's books (O'Neill deals with Communism, Democracy and Catholic Power only in a book review printed in the Appendix), should buy this Catholic reply for fairness' sake." F. E. Hirsch

Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by W. H. Kilpatrick

Nation 175:34 J1 12 '52 500w

"Certainly every person who is making use of Mr. Blanshard's book owes it to himself and those he seeks to influence to lay Mr. O'Neill's reply, as Mr. Sugrue says, 'on the same table alongside it.'" F. E. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 6 '52 1300w

"It is with distaste that I write anything that may seem to be in the nature of religious controversy, especially as I know that, try as hard as I may to be objective and fair, I probably will not seem to be so in the eyes of Paul Blanshard and his friends. But if a rebuttal must be made of the charges brought by Mr. Blanshard against the Roman Catholic Church in two recent best-selling books, nobody can be imagined making it with more moderation, more ample and exact documentation or more literary skill than James M. O'Neill exhibits." Theodore Maynard

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '52 1000w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p10D Je 22 '52 250w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:143 Je '52 180w

Wis Lib Bul 48:166 J1 '52

ONIAN, RICHARD BROXTON. Origins of European thought about the body, the mind, the soul, the world, time, and fate; new interpretations of Greek, Roman and kindred evidence, also of some basic Jewish and Christian beliefs. 547p $9 Cambridge

110 Philosophy—History. Mind and body. Soul, fate and fatalism 51-14792

"On the basis of the linguistic, literary, and archaeological evidence, the author undertakes to discover the underlying patterns of early European thought on certain fundamental problems which eternally concern mankind: the nature and functionings of human consciousness, the soul and its relation to the body, and, on a larger canvas, the role of Fate and the manner of its influence." (J Philos) Index.

Reviewed by William Sacksteder

Ethics 62:232 Ap '52 50w

"A learned, fascinating, and challenging book... Some sections carry greater conviction than others, and perhaps few readers will give the work their wholehearted assent. It is none the less an important work, original, controversial, and stimulating, and no one who takes it up will do so without feeling amply repaid." F. R. Walton

+ J Philos 49:708 O 23 '52 1000w

"A prodigious amount of research has gone into it (its preparation took almost thirty years), and the work poses important questions for philologists, anthropologists, philosophers, and students of religion. While it is a work for specialists, the reader who remembers some of his Greek and Latin will find it fascinating, for here are traced the embodied remains of prehistoric thinking about the central human concerns." J. H. Cotton

+ J Religion 32:279 O '52 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Mr 21 '52 2500w

OPIE, IONA (ARCHIBALD), and OPIE, PETER, eds. Oxford dictionary of nursery rhymes. 467p il $8 Oxford

398.8 Nursery rimes 51-14126

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by Northrop Frye

Canadian Forum 31:258 F '52 1100w

"An indispensable reference book for libraries. After hours of browsing in my personal copy I think it also indispensable for thoughtful parents, writers, illustrators and critics of children's books." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:21 F '52 650w

"Fascinating as the text of the Dictionary is, it is made even richer by the many illustrations drawn from the early toy books as well as a selection of pictures by Caldecott and Crane, Kate Greenaway and Leslie Brooke. It is not a children's book. Practically all general libraries will find many occasions to use such a definitive and valuable anthology; and not a few adults will find fun in dipping into one section after another of the inviting volume." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 28:44 F '52 420w

New Yorker 27:111 F 9 '52 180w

"For almost everyone, of course, save for specialists in the field, this will be a book for dipping, and its readers will pull from it enough plums for a thousand curious Jack Horners." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:41 F 9 '52 500w

OPIE, REDVERS, and others. Search for peace settlements. 366p maps $4 Brookings 940.531 World war, 1939-1945—Peace. World politics 51-5387

"Beginning with a discussion of postwar settlements as they appeared to the signatories of the Declaration by the United Nations of 1942, [the book] analyzes Soviet diplomacy before and after the German invasion of 1941 and then recounts in detail the diplomacy of the major powers in their relation to their enemies to the beginning of 1951. The thesis is that the making of various and necessary peace treaties between the United Nations and their enemies of 1939-45 was rendered difficult if not impossible because 'unity among the Great Powers, as allies in war and partners in peace, was at first made uneasy, then progressively threatened, and finally destroyed by Soviet action.'" U S Quarterly Bk R

"The Brookings volume provides an entirely admirable aid to the study of this sad period in American diplomacy, but it should be supplemented by a reading of the Kennan book." P. B. Potter

+ Am Pol Sci R 45:1186 D '51 550w

"The purpose is well accomplished. Though the various chapters are the work of six or seven researchers and writers, the result is a composite of very even quality so well organized as to give a unified impression of the varied endeavors to reassemble an exploded world." Tully Nettleton

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '51 550w

Foreign Affairs 30:494 Ap '52 20w

"Mr. Ople and his co-authors have prepared, chapter by chapter, a careful, powerful, and usually dispassionate indictment of the Soviet Union. . . . However effective as a scholarly indictment of Soviet policy, this book is not yet a scholarly judgment." M. Bronfenbrenner

+ J Pol Econ 60:78 F '52 650w

"Exhaustive in coverage of high-level international maneuverings during the last decade, this volume should be of value as a reference work for scholars, teachers and studious people who want to know the details of the train of events that has taken the world to its present precarious situation." H. H.

+ Springfield Republican p5D J1 22 '51 190w

"Mr. Ople and his associates have produced an astonishingly informative and readable book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:384 D '51 180w

ORDWAY, PETER. Face in the shadows. 224p $2.75 Wyn

52-11700

"Newsman ticketed as Commie trails Red agent over half U.S., Canada, to prove hero is good security risk." Sat R

"Mr. Ordway crams most of the clichés into this tale, but he introduces a number of fresh elements as well, with the consequence that this is one of the more readable thrillers in a day of frequent and fairly haggard ones." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52 140w

"About three-fourths of a first-rate spy-suspense novel. The writing is clear and sharp; the characters are few and striking; and the plot-premise is unusual and good. . . . The outcome is neither credible (in the fantastic nature of the plot which he finally unearths) nor effective." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p51 O 19 '52 80w

"Denouement seems hurried and too easy, but for the rest, love and adventure pile up in satisfying profusion." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 50w

"Soft in spots, but has moments of tension as trail takes in Wisconsin, Chicago, Montreal, etc." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 20w

O'REILLY, JOHN. The glob; pictures by Walt Kelly. 63p $1.50 Viking

52-7745

The story of evolution as the author told it to his children upon his return from the war. The glob was a "shapeless thing" that floated in the ocean eons ago. His growth thru the milleniums is traced briefly up to the first faint beginnings of civilization.

Kirkus 20:71 F 1 '52 160w

"Author and artist have pooled their considerable talents to produce an original and entertaining version of evolution, scientifically acceptable in basic assumptions, but enlivened with highly unorthodox details. Recommended for all ages." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:730 Ap 15 '52 90w

"The Glob takes a long time to work things out but he does succeed and he has fun; and whether still globby or approaching the odd shape of primitive man, he is very likable. He is the sort of Character who belongs to a whole family, fun to know together. Those over twelve will realize that we all more or less discovered our world as he discovered his." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 2 '52 270w

"Far from being a savage caveman, the Glob is a homey, comfortable sort of character. In fact he is sometimes just a little too cute. I suspect that adults will enjoy him on the whole rather more than the youngsters, but the latter will find him entertaining, especially since Walt Kelly of 'Pogo' fame has drawn him with a suitably comic touch." E. L. B.

N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '52 200w

"Told for anyone from seven to seventy who wants to read it and to enjoy the drawings. Children will think of it as a fascinating adventure story. Their elders will wonder, as they chuckle over it, if it does not tell the story of every child who ever grew up—including themselves. . . . This is a wise and amusing book."

+ Sat R 35:46 Mr 22 '52 350w

ORLOW, DAMON L. Red wedding. 244p $3 Regnery

B or 92 Ukraine—Social life and customs 52-9562

Memories of the author's youth in pre-Soviet Kiev in the Ukraine. There are tales of weddings, Saint Nicholas, the church, the school, and of peasant life and customs in that region around the year 1900.

Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 20w

Reviewed by Marge Lyon

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 18 '52

Kirkus 20:251 Ap 1 '52 140w

"A useful manners-and-customs book for the small library's travel section. Recommended." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 80w

"The stories are skillfully told, with humor and the perspective of time and distance. This informal memoir has both substance and charm." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 21 '52 340w

"Every once in a while a book is born out of such compelling personal experience that the story of the person becomes the epitome of his people. Damon Orlow's 'Red Wedding' is like an operatic drama of pre-Soviet peasantry, filled with the songs that rise out of the hearts of an oppressed people. It is a cavalcade in words so alive that the reader is swept into the emotion of the characters." Anzia Yezierska

+ N Y Times p10 My 4 '52 350w

"He writes in a lecturer's style, with a touch of urbane condescension. Yet a man's love and hunger for the ways of his youth-time comes through. There is a comforting, if dubious, atmosphere of stability in the semi-primitive culture he describes; even those old days can still appear as good old days." Meyer Levin

Sat R 35:30 S 27 '52 220w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

+ Springfield Republican p9C Je 8 '52 350w

"These stories of Xendzovka are warm with affection for the village and its people; extremely well told, they provide in microcosm much of the spirit and the folklore of the old Ukraine, the old Russia."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:238 S '52 170w

ORMES, ROBERT M., ed. Guide to the Colorado mountains. 239p 11 maps $3.50 Sage

978.8 Colorado—Description and travel. Rocky mountains

"The longest section is a guide to the mountains by foot, but information is also given for seeing the mountains by car, rail, trail, and skis, and for rope climbing; a bibliography is included. The information is compactly arranged and maps are small but legible. The guide will be useful to both tourists and mountain climbers." Booklist

Booklist 49:46 O 1 '52

ORMES, R. M.—Continued

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
Library J 77:2181 D 15 '52 40w

"Simple outline maps and a most complete index add greatly to the usefulness of the volume." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 23 '52 30w

ORMSBEE, THOMAS HAMILTON. Field guide to American Victorian furniture; drawings by Ernst Halberstadt. 428p $4 Little

749.21 Furniture 52-9095

"Provides identification of any Victorian piece produced in this country between 1840 and 1880, telling what it is, what its distinguishing characteristics are, what its approximate value is today." Publisher's note

Booklist 49:45 O 1 '52

"A handy, authoritative, collectors' aid."
+ Bookmark 12:6 O '52 20w

"This information crammed volume is intended for collectors who want on-the-spot information while attending auctions or visiting antique shops. . . It also gives the approximate value of each piece, a very helpful detail." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 26 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:580 S 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 78:58 Ja 1 '53 70w

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). Football gravy train. 182p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

51-13353

"Jim Delaney was trapped. He needed the $100 a week he received for playing college football to get through school, but the games and practice sessions robbed him of time to study. Of course the 'system' saw that his grades were passing; when Jim—an All-American fullback—realized this and tried to buck the 'system,' he found it unyielding and vicious. The story reveals how Jim finally broke into the clear." N Y Times

Booklist 48:160 Ja 1 '52

"Vigorous, forthright treatment of a difficult problem." E. C. Ince
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 25 '51 100w

Kirkus 19:487 S 1 '51 120w

"The whole pressing problem of alumni subsidization is well presented, the characterization is good, and O'Rourke's writing has its usual holding power without the oversentimentalization one sometimes finds in his baseball books." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 76:2126 D 15 '51 70w

"A timely, knowing and dramatic book by one of sports-writing's top practitioners." W. C. F.

+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '51 110w

O'ROURKE, FRANK (FRANK O'MALLEY, pseud). Nine good men. 215p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

52-8303

Baseball story for older boys.

Booklist 49:49 O 1 '52

"Mediocre for adults. Teenagers may like it." R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:1408 S 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by W. H. Baker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52 30w

ORR, MYRON DAVID. Citadel of the Lakes. 287p $3 Dodd

52-6501

"Mr. Orr, exploring records and legends of his native Michigan, has here drawn on them in an historical romance of Mackinac Island, a little patch of less than four square miles of land in the straits that form a hinge between the state's upper and lower peninsulas. The time is the period of the War of 1812 and the villain of the piece, John Jacob Astor's American Fur Company, whose rapacious efforts to corner the fur trade extended to gangsterism and treason." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:229 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 3 '52 290w

"Varied enough to suit many tastes. Good entertainment." R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:210 F 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Orr gives an impressive sense of the remoteness of the frontier and the individual fortitude and acumen it took to survive everyday living in the Michigan of less than a century and a half ago. . . 'The Citadel of the Lakes' is an easily read romance, but its greater interest lies in the actualities of the life earlier generations of Americans knew."

Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 10 '52 460w

"According to his publishers, Mr. Orr has put a quarter-century of research into this novel. . . Mr. Orr's historical footnotes are incorporated, neatly enough, into the body of his narrative. They are, unfortunately, only refreshing incidentals to an otherwise standard romance." Edward Fitzgerald

N Y Times p22 F 3 '52 360w

"For the author the writing of this book was apparently a labor of love. Reading it is labor. In scene after scene the reader is baited into believing some genuine excitement will appear on the very next page, but he remains an anticipant to the end." J. M. Grant

Sat R 35:44 F 23 '52 210w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Mystery in the old red barn; il. by Robert Doremus. 115p $1.75 Lippincott

52-7461

Mystery story for ages 7 to 11.

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 10w

"There is a ready market for the glowing personalities and warm happenings of which the author writes, but we are growing weary of their abundance of virtue, their good looks and the stilted language with which they convey their mild thoughts."

Kirkus 20:369 J1 1 '52 150w

"The shivers produced are just right for about eight to ten years olds, and the old horse Tom will please them particularly." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p38 N 16 '52 20w

School & Society 76:159 S 6 '52 20w

ORWELL, GEORGE, pseud. (ERIC BLAIR). Homage to Catalonia. 232p $3.50 Harcourt 946.081 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939. Spain—Politics and government

52-6442

In 1936 the author went to Spain to write about Barcelona and Spain's civil war. Instead he stayed to fight and was badly wounded. On his return to England he wrote this account of the war and his experiences, which was published in England in 1938. This is the first American edition.

Reviewed by H. J. Parry

Ann Am Acad 284:219 N '52 330w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:85 J1 '52 220w

Booklist 48:318 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 40w

"Fortunately, there is nothing primitive about Orwell's style. Characters, story, and history come alive in what may well be a fearfully accurate miniature of the world-wide revolution, from first fervor to final terror."

R. M. Ames

+ Cath World 175:318 J1 '52 230w

"A pathetic and wise book, one that once read will never be forgotten." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 18 '52 270w

Christian Century 69:878 J1 30 '52 90w

"This is a book which is sad, revealing, and helpful at one and the same time. It is sad because of the betrayed hopes of the Spanish people. It is revealing as to Communist cynicism and treachery. It is helpful because it gives a better insight into the mistakes which democracy must avoid if it is to compete successfully with totalitarianism of both the Right and the Left." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 21 '52 500w

"This is an observant, courageous, honest record, leftist in spirit yet exceedingly embarrassing for the Left. . . His straight reporting is splendid." Geoffrey Ashe

+ Commonweal 56:277 Je 20 '52 480w

"Orwell's report is as exciting as it is meditative. With his quiet exactitude the midnight skirmishes, the political issues, and the utter futility of war come clearly into focus. Perhaps not a book to create sensation in a day when much of what happened at Barcelona has been realized, but one enlightening in terms of showing the war way toward mutual understanding and fair play."

+ Kirkus 20:293 My 1 '52 250w

"This soldier's account is more than that of just another eyewitness. It is a classic in its interpretation of totalitarianism—left or right—and in its warm appreciation of men at war. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:891 My 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 126:21 Je 23 '52 850w

"In 'Homage to Catalonia' Orwell succeeded in producing a work that is at once history and a moral and imaginative experience. Thus the 'raw material' becomes no less a work of art than its fictional elaboration in '1984.' Moreover, its moral impact is more direct than that of the novel." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 18 '52 550w

"Because of what Orwell was, 'Homage to Catalonia,' his account of his experiences in the Spanish civil war, is worth reading today, fifteen years after it was written. . . It is alive, whereas most of the books about Spain that were published in this country in the late Thirties and were read are dead." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p1 My 18 '52 1550w

"One of Orwell's very best books and perhaps the best book that exists on the Spanish Civil War."

+ New Yorker 28:142 My 17 '52 150w

"'Homage to Catalonia' tells us a great deal about the kind of man George Orwell was personally; it is a highly readable account of the experiences of a man of courage and ideals—with a highly practical man—caught in a baffling hour of history. It is indeed, as Lionel Trilling says in his admirable introduction, 'a testimony to the nature of modern political life.'" Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 8 '52 1150w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Sat R 35:17 J1 12 '52 550w

Springf'd Republican p9C Je 8 '52 350w

Time 59:112 My 19 '52 450w

OSBORN, ALEXANDER FAICKNEY. Wake up your mind; 101 ways to develop creativeness. 277p $3 Scribner

155 Creation (literary, artistic, etc.) Imagination 52-7127

A successful advertising man is the author of this book of suggestions on how to use one's mind creatively in reading, playing games, living with children, hobbies, human relationships, etc. Index.

Booklist 48:222 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by D. W. Fiske

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 9 '52 200w

"In spite of its tendency to coerce people into creative activity rather than to free them for it, this is the kind of book that tries to search out and heal sore spots in many lives, with no assured success."

Kirkus 20:21 Ja 1 '52 230w

Management R 41:556 Ag '52 60w

Reviewed by James Parton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 27 '52 280w

OSBORN, PAUL. Point of no return [a play] based on the novel by John P. Marquand [photographs by John Swope]. 182p $2.50 Random house

812 Marquand, John Phillips—Point of no return 52-6930

"Smooth-reading adaptation of Marquand's novel about a bank assistant who almost breaks from the pattern of striving for success that he has been blindly following for 20 years." Booklist

Booklist 48:278 My 1 '52

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 77:721 Ap 15 '52 20w

"Paul Osborn's stage version of John Marquand's novel, 'Point of No Return,' stands up remarkably well in its own right, requiring no previous acquaintance with the book to make it understandable."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 25 '52 110w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '52 70w

OSBORNE, ERNEST GLENN. Family scrapbook. 457p il $3.95 Assn. press

649.1 Family. Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Management 51-13731

"An expert on child development and guidance and family living presents a new approach in a parent's handbook which stresses shared problem solving and shared fun—an album of experiences that show how to be a modern old fashioned family." School & Society

"The approach is informal and practical and touched with humor." F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p36 D 2 '51 100w

"The advice is sound and simple. It should be a fine book to give as a gift. The approach is best summed up in the phrase: How parents and children can enjoy each other all the time." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Ag 30 '52 120w

"In his The Family Scrapbook, Dr. Osborne presents the generally accepted theories and ideas of today regarding the relationships of children to their parents and other family members. His book is different in that it is written for parents in a simple, homey style with each page having a title and a new topic. Therefore, parents can open the book at most any place and get a complete idea." C. A. Ridder

+ J Home Econ 44:222 Mr '52 150w

Kirkus 19:426 Ag 1 '51 120w

School & Society 74:272 O 27 '51 30w

Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 20 '52 280w

"The author manages to infuse his short paragraphs with a warmth of understanding helpfulness. There is a tacit assurance that the troubled parent is not alone with his problems, because other parents have them too, and that with patience and humor and a willingness to be honest about themselves and each other parents and children will come out all right. . . This is a disarming book for it is much more profound in its implications than its brief, friendly, and informal style might suggest." C. S. Littledale

OSBORNE, E. G.—Continued

 + Survey 88:90 F '52 390w

OSBORNE, HAROLD. Indians of the Andes, Aymaras and Quechuas. 266p il maps $4.50 Harvard univ. press

980.1 [980.3] Kechua Indians, Aymara Indians A52-9834

"This volume is devoted to a survey of the Andean Indians. The general approach is historical and covers a chapter, mostly conjectural, on origins, a study of the pre-Inca days, adequately entitled 'Myth and Archaeology,' and chapters on the Inca days, the Spanish days and the present and future." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 76:144 Ag 30 '52 30w

"The author seems well acquainted with, and even to possess personal experience of, the present ways of Quechaus and Aymaras as well as with those of the Cholos, or half-castes. He has borrowed widely from present-day scholars and more so, perhaps, from the old Spanish chroniclers. His good will and honesty are transparent and his desire to attain an objective and impartial treatment is obvious. Whether he has succeeded is another matter. . . On the whole it is a disappointing book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 9 '52 1200w

OSTOVIC, P. D. Truth about Yugoslavia; with an introd. by Ivan Mestrovic. 300p maps $3.50 Roy pubs.

949.7 Yugoslavia—History 52-9196

Study of Yugoslavia which begins with the twelfth century and comes down to our own days. Contains many little-known but significant facts about the people, their characteristics and their tribal feuds. Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 284:217 N '52 210w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

"The author, who took an active part in the foundation of the first Yugoslavia—in 1918—has added a number of valuable footnotes to history." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 23 '52 40w

Foreign Affairs 31:163 O '52 50w

"The Truth About Yugoslavia" will be a disappointment to readers who turn to it expecting to find the 'inside story' of present-day Yugoslavia. . . But any one who wants to understand more fully the complex background from which Tito's regime has emerged can learn a great deal from Mr. Ostovic's book, to which the illustrious Croatian sculptor, Ivan Mestrovic, has provided a thoughtful foreword." P. E. Mosely

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 3 '52 490w

Reviewed by H. C. Wolfe

N Y Times p10 J1 27 '52 290w

OTTE, FRED. Simplified dog behavior for home, car and street; with a professional's viewpoint by Billy Lang. 189p il $2 World pub.

636.7 Dogs Agr52-416

"This is a textbook to help any man, woman, or teen-age boy or girl teach his dog proper behavior for the home, car, or street." (Pref) Book contains chapters on Fundamentals of dog training; Fundamentals of conditioning, and on Obedience trials. Nearly half the book is given to a "glossary" which in alphabetical arrangement includes most of the directions and suggestions of the main text plus fuller explanations of some terms and methods.

Booklist 48:209 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 30w

Reviewed by E. K. West

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 13 '52 30w

"An excellent how-to book for new dog owners as well as for those serious about having, their dogs respected as well as admired."

+ Kirkus 19:717 D 15 '51 160w

"A practical authoritative textbook." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:441 Mr 1 '52 30w

Sat R 35:62 My 10 '52 40w

OTTEMILLER, JOHN HENRY. Index to plays in collections; an author and title index to plays appearing in collections published between 1900-1950; pref. by George Freedley. 2d ed rev & enl 386p $6.50 Scarecrow press

016.8082 Drama—Indexes 51-12165

"An enlarged edition of a 1943 book [Book Review Digest 1943] with additional titles of 1900-1942 and titles published between 1943 and 1950, a total of 4933 plays by 984 authors." Booklist

Booklist 48:145 D 15 '51

"It is an excellent index to anthologies, 1900-1950 with author and title index. I've used this library tool (in the 1943 edition) for eight years with great effectiveness. Would recommend adding anthology title index in next edition. Preface by George Freedley but nonetheless highly recommended for drama and theatre collections. It is a great saving in cataloguing expense." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:147 Ja 15 '52 80w

"Mr. Ottemiller's Index is likely to be well and widely used, wherever there are libraries with active drama collections." H. D. Tilly

+ Library J 77:704 Ap 15 '52 500w

"The purposes of this work are to locate and identify plays, and both are admirably fulfilled, the same care and thoroughness distinguishing the second as did the first edition. . . The title index is exhaustive, and the collections index in this edition has been strengthened by the addition of cross-references from compilers to title and vice versa where needed. . . Physically, the second edition is shorter but bulkier than the first (386 pages compared to 130). The book does not open and remain open so well. On the other hand, there is more room for notes. The order of the indexes has been changed from collection-author-title to author-collection-title, placing the key in the middle instead of at the beginning, which seems awkward and obliges one to change a habit. . . As in any work of this kind, errors occur, but they are few, and corrections are easily entered." Mary Grahn

+ Library Q 22:161 Ap '52 750w

OTTLEY, ROI. No green pastures. 234p $3 Scribner

323.1 Negroes in Europe 51-7318

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Foreign Affairs 30:501 Ap '52 40w

"This would have been a better book if the author had devoted all of it to his own experiences, contemporary first-hand accounts, and the immediate background of the race problem. He deemed it necessary, however, to provide a rather extensive historical background of the problem in the various countries. Much of this history, especially the brief biographies of eminent Negroes, makes fascinating reading for those not familiar with the careers of Molineaux, Aldridge, Ignattus Sancho, Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, Browning, Pushkin, the three Dumas, Eugene Chen, Tanner, and others. How much this historical treatment leads to an understanding of Europe today is debatable." R. W. Logan

+ Nation 174:137 F 9 '52 900w

Reviewed by William Worthy

New Statesman & Nation 44:356 S 27 '52 490w

"Roi Otley in No Green Pastures has employed his skills as a reporter and historian to produce here a somewhat impressionistic but very readable and informative account of anti-Negro prejudice in contemporary Europe. In view of the paucity of materials on the subject this is an especially welcome volume. One hopes, however, that it will be supplemented by more sustained and systematic inquiries that will fill an important gap in the literature on race and answer many of the questions which the author treats in a hurried, once-over fashion." Wilson Record

+ — Social Forces 30:353 Mr '52 310w

"While this work is not a systematic study and does not develop any particular thesis or theory, it provides many insights which contribute to basic understanding. The tone is generally objective and indicates that comparative analysis is producing a mature and essentially hopeful philosophy among some Negro intellectuals."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:66 Mr '52 160w

OURSLEER, FULTON, ed. Reader's digest murder case; a tragedy in parole. 412p $3.95 Farrar, Straus

343.1 Trials. Petrini, Andrew. Cooper, Calman 52-5800

A transcript of the trial of the four gangsters who held up a Reader's Digest truck near the company plant in April, 1950. Includes also a description of the crime, and how the police traced the criminals. No index.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 13 '52 250w

Kirkus 20:245 Ap 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:793 My 1 '52 130w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 3 '52 160w

"Students of the law, penologists and social workers who have the patience to wade through the detailed transcript of the proceeding may find the book a valuable source material for their specialized fields. The layman will find it heavy reading." Emanuel Perlmutter

N Y Times p19 J1 27 '52 410w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p15 J1 10 '52 750w

Reviewed by R. B. Morris
Sat R 35:15 Ag 30 '52 600w

OURSLEER, WILLIAM CHARLES, and SMITH, LAURENCE DWIGHT. Narcotics: America's peril. 284p $3.50 Doubleday

364.1 [178.8] Narcotics. Crime and criminals—U.S. 52-8751

"A detailed history of the use of the most popular and insidious drugs—chiefly marijuana, and opium and its derivatives; tales of the extensive operations of Chinese American gangs and of the Mafia, vast killer organizations that, apparently, have called the signals on the drug traffic pretty much their own way and for their own whopping profit." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

Kirkus 20:312 My 15 '52 150w

"The authors spent 3 years in close collaboration with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics: their reportorial book is highly informative. . . Excellent acquisition." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1010 Je 1 '52 130w

"For any one willing to overlook pedestrian writing and sloppy organization, all the facts are here. . . The authors, it should be stated with some satisfaction, are on the side of the angels, viewing the spread of drug addiction with alarm, and examining what is being done about it with the honest righteousness of men who realize what a real evil the whole thing is." David Hulburd

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 13 '52 900w

"If this book has a weakness it is its shrill pitch. It opens with the one-line 'It was after midnight when the knock came' and the chapter ends in upper-register note, too: 'The stakes in the unsung war were high.' The reader who can withstand this strident literary style should find the book fascinating." Meyer Berger

+ — N Y Times p39 S 28 '52 210w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 4 '52 50w

Reviewed by Bernard Kalb
Sat R 35:32 D 27 '52 230w

"'Narcotics: America's Peril' is a startling revelation of terror whose authenticity is backed by the files of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. It contains a message which will open the eyes of the complacent to an awareness of a malignant cancer which is flourishing in the boroughs of the nation." B. F. K.

+ Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 17 '52 170w

Wis Lib Bul 48:211 S '52

OUTERBRIDGE, LEONARD MALLORY. Lost churches of China. 237p $3.50 Westminster press

275.1 Missions—China. China—Church history 52-8859

"In this book the historical record is traced to discover why the Christian Church has again suffered catastrophic loss in China, and to ascertain what are the recurring factors that contribute to these recurring losses. The value of such a quest is important to those who are still interested in the continuity of the Christian Church in China. Our concern in the present work is only with those pertinent events that are here recorded, in order to exhibit their significance and not merely their occurrence. This analysis attempts to evaluate these historical events in order to ascertain the truth that lies in the cause, but that has too often been obscured in the results." (Intro) No index.

"The author has been associated with the missionary movement in China for years, but many of his colleagues will disagree with his thesis. This book will also furnish ammunition for the debate brewing on U.S. foreign policy in the Orient, particularly the latter part of the book. The early part deals with the historical background of Christianity in China. Violent attack from various sources may well stimulate demand for the book."

Kirkus 20:635 S 15 '52 300w

"A valuable study which should interest religious leaders especially." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 77:1807 O 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by K. A. Latourette
N Y Times p16 N 2 '52 170w

OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB OF AMERICA. Off the record. See Hartwell, D. J., and Rooney, A. A., eds.

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN. Great enterprise; relating ourselves to our world. 332p $3.50 Norton

136.2 Psychology 52-11403

"In the Mature Mind [Book Review Digest 1949] Overstreet wrote of the development of the individual and here he goes on to explore more fully the growth of the individual and his relation to society. The nature of our 'over' and 'under' relations—the creation of environments that will make personalities generous and constructive, are the two themes emphasized as the self in the world is studied." Library J

Booklist 49:3 S 1 '52

"Wise suggestive volume."

+ Bookmark 12:7 O '52 30w

"The author of this book may disapprove of the Church, but he is certainly no Paul Blanchard. He is far too tolerant not to tolerate any religion even though, one knows, the Catholic religion irks him. Further, what he has to say about the evils that compass us about is always eminently sensible, humane and often wise. As with many of our secular prophets, there is compassion and understanding here.

OVERSTREET, H. A.—Continued

Indeed, the fact that so much goodness abounds among non-Christians and so much pettiness and pride among us who profess belief in Christ, should give us pause." H. N. Hart

+ Cath World 175:478 S '52 320w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 10 '52 370w

"Perhaps because I agreed with it, I very much enjoyed The Great Enterprise. Everyone who liked The Mature Mind will rejoice in this successor." W. J. McKeachie

+ Christian Century 69:1097 S 24 '52 700w

Kirkus 20:391 J1 1 '52 230w

"A valuable book for all collections." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1188 J1 '52 100w

Reviewed by Albert Hofstadter

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 10 '52 2200w

"A brief summary cannot adequately reflect the profundity of some parts of the book or the superficiality of other parts. The work is very uneven. In a good many places illuminating sentences share the page with clichés and platitudes (often made more conspicuous by their italicization); otherwise felicitous English is sprinkled with a sort of jargon (such as 'reality disorientation,' 'againstness,' 'hate-patterned,' 'better-goingness') which says no more than could simple prose; well-knit chapters stand beside ones prolix and turgid." J. A. Pike

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '52 800w

"The book itself will give you the author's views best. Read particularly his final chapter, in which it is clear that he is not discouraged, that he believes humanity can and will pull itself out of its present confusions, that new skills will be developed in the art of agreeing, rather than, as up to now, in the techniques of disagreement, and that these skills will guide us better. Perhaps Dr. Overstreet would shun the easy word 'optimist' but it fits him nevertheless." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 13 '52 750w

"This is a book which will delight the thousands of readers of Harry Overstreet's 'The Mature Mind.' He has garnered and presents in simple language some of the advances and new techniques developed in the fields of psychology and psychiatry for dealing with the interrelationship of individuals—between children, adults, groups, and nations. He fills in the interstices with wise, temperate, and calm observations. Once more he gives evidence of his talent for treating complicated material with pleasant observations. Some leaders of the new sciences which he calls upon for evidence may feel that he has often been guilty of oversimplification." M. L. Ernst

+ — Sat R 35:13 Ag 9 '52 1100w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 17 '52 400w

"Nearly half a million Americans bought The Mature Mind. Its psychological nostrums and all-too-truisms gave its readers the heady sensation of doing mental push-ups by the dozen. In The Great Enterprise, the self-help school is back in session. Even sleepy students will recognize the first half of the book as a rehash of The Mature Mind."

— Time 60:98 Ag 11 '52 470w

Wis Lib Bul 48:211 S '52

OWEN, DERWYN RANDOLPH GRIER. Scientism, man, and religion. 208p $3.50 Westminster press

215 Religion and science 52-8226

This book contains the material of a series of lectures in Religious Knowledge given to first year students at Trinity College, Toronto. "The author sees abroad in the world today a pseudo-science which he calls scientism. Already it has spawned Nazism and Communism and there are no limits to its evil consequences. Dr. Owen does not discredit genuine science, but totalitarian science which claims to have a solution for all man's problems. He believes that the cure for this disease lies in restoration of all principles of science to rightful positions where they will work for instead against man's good." (Library J)

"This is a timely and important book, which should be widely read." W. S. Taylor

+ Canadian Forum 32:141 S '52 370w

Reviewed by C. D. Bennett

Christian Century 69:1286 N 5 '52 1250w

"A very readable book which should not by any means be confined to scholars or any single religious group."

+ Kirkus 20:277 Ap 15 '52 130w

"Recommended for large public libraries and college libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:594 Ap 1 '52 90w

OWEN, RUSSELL. Conquest of the North and South poles; adventures of the Peary and Byrd expeditions; II. by Lynd Ward [Eng title: Conquest of the Poles]. 181p $1.50 Random house

998 [919.8] Arctic regions. Antarctic regions. Peary, Robert Edwin. Byrd, Richard Evelyn 52-7228

Outlines the explorations of the regions of the North and South poles by Peary, Bartlett, Scott, Amundsen, Byrd, and others. For grades 5 to 6.

Booklist 49:161 Ja 1 '53

"Readers will be entranced with this tale of brave adventure in our own century. Excellent drawings by Lynd Ward add to the charm of this book." C. I. Judson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 16 '52 70w

"A sense of American destiny and heroism inclines to over-sentimentalize both stories but the facts are there in readable texts."

+ Kirkus 20:458 Ag 1 '52 160w

"There are some descriptive and exciting passages which should arouse interest in more detailed stories of the polar explorations. Another good, inexpensive 'Landmark Book.'" L. R. Markey

+ Library J 77:1666 O 1 '52 50w

"It is fortunate that he finished this book before his death. The pictures here, by Lynd Ward are especially generous in number, and very striking; the little maps are most effective." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 40w

OXFORD junior encyclopedia; general editors: Laura E. Salt and Robert Sinclair; II. editor: Helen Mary Petter. 12v col pl ea $8.50 Oxford

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries (49-1381)

"This review is based upon examination of the available volumes of the Oxford Junior Encyclopaedia: volume 1, published in 1948 and reprinted with corrections in 1949; volumes 2 and 3, 1949; and volume 9, 1950. When complete, the set will consist of twelve volumes and a general index. . . . As planned, each of the twelve volumes of text is to deal with a specific subject area. The Plan of Volumes, appearing at the front of each book, shows the scope of each as follows: v.1, Mankind; v.2, Natural History; v.3, The Universe; v.4, Communications; v.5, Great Lives; v.6, Farming and Fisheries; v.7, Industry and Commerce; v.8, Engineering; v.9, Recreations; v.10, Law and Order; v.11, The Home; v.12, The Arts; and a General Index Volume, covering entries in all twelve volumes." Subscription Bks Bul

"The style of the work is generally concise, clear, and direct, although some articles begin with an introductory paragraph which does not contribute any appreciable amount of information. Each of the four volumes published to date contains numerous illustrations. . . . The departmental organization of the set, varying dates of publication, the availability of only four out of twelve volumes, and the lack of an index at present, make invalid any conclusions that might be drawn as to the recency and completeness of information and over-all quality of the work. Final conclusions and recommendation for American readers must await the publication of the remaining eight volumes and general index."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:74 O '51 1250w

P

PADGETT, LEWIS, pseud. See Kuttner, H.

PAGE, MARCO, pseud. See Kurnitz, H.

PAINTER, GEORGE DUNCAN, André Gide; a critical and biographical study. (Modern European novelists ser) 192p $2.50 Roy publs.

B or 92 Gide, André Paul Guillaume

[51-7005]

A biographical and critical study of André Gide. The author is an assistant keeper in the department of printed books at the British Museum. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 41:711 Je 23 '51 1000w

"On the biographical side, Mr. Painter's short study is excellent. But, notwithstanding its lucid summaries of Gide's books, it is less successful as criticism. For the most illuminating introduction to Gide's work, readers should consult Mr. Guerard's recent volume." Lloyd Morris

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 3 '52 900w

"Mr. Painter's excellent little book should rekindle, even in Gide's oldest and most faithful admirers, as much enthusiasm as it will certainly arouse in those who approach his work for the first time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p482 Ag 3 '51 300w

PAISH, FRANK WALTER. Post-war financial problem, and other essays. 263p $3 Macmillan

332 Finance—Great Britain. Economics [51-9547]

"In twelve essays Mr. Paish discusses some vexing general economic problems and various aspects of Great Britain's difficulties in restoring her economy. Essays on monetary policy, gold supply, British floating debt policy and the balance of international payments are included. The author is a firm believer in the superiority of the price system—working within a framework of law and order—over government controls as a basis for an economic system. He criticizes the effect of rationing and taxation on economic incentive." Current Hist

Current Hist 21:354 D '51 80w

"Able and illuminating essays."

+ Foreign Affairs 30:506 Ap '52 20w

"Altogether, the essays in this volume are stimulating and lucidly written and are likely to be of interest to a broad audience of economists." A. I. Bloomfield

+ J Pol Econ 59:457 O '51 1100w

"The publication of this collection of papers will establish Mr. Paish's reputation as one of our most distinguished writers on financial topics. It is, perhaps, a pity that this volume, which in other respects has been arranged to woo the general reader, opens with a rather dry statistical computation. The matter is important enough, for it is no less than an attempt to estimate the capital requirements of the nation, but it remains an essay in arithmetic and thereby not a good appetizer."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Mr 23 '51 550w

PALAZZO, TONY. Great Othello; the story of a seal [pictures by the author]. 48p $2 Viking 52-12508

Picture story book for ages 4 to 7. It's hero is Othello the performing seal, who was so happy to join the other seals on Seal Island.

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:11 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 50w

"Irresistible."

+ Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 10w

"The inventive Mr. Palazzo adds to his list of clever animals a hero that will fill little circus-goers with delight." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:315 O '52 60w

Kirkus 20:401 J1 15 '52 70w

"Stunning illustrations, but to this reviewer the story lacks the spark of Timothy Turtle and Charley the Horse. For large collections." M. A. Herr

+ — Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 40w

"Tony Palazzo's soft seals are humanized just enough to make them expressive, and, like his previous animal pictures, will catch the fancy of even the youngest children. Unfortunately, the story is too slight for that 6- or 7-year-old who can follow the big words and the words are too big for the 4- and 5-year-olds who might be satisfied with the slim story." Miriam James

+ — N Y Times p40 O 5 '52 130w

Sat R 35:47 N 15 '52 50w

PALMER, CECIL. British socialist ill-fare state; an examination of its political, social, moral, and economic consequences. 618p $6 Caxton prs.

320.942 Socialism in Great Britain. 52-5776

A study of the short-comings of the British welfare state, which examines the State's challenge to individual liberties, nationalized medicine, and the nationalization of industries and utilities. The author was a former British publisher, lecturer, and was the organizer of the Society of Individualists. He died in January, 1952. Index.

"This is a long-winded, repetitious, bad-tempered diatribe against the social-welfare institutions established in Britain by the Labor government from 1945 to 1951. . . The kind of mind that would be impressed by the violent vituperation of this volume would hardly have the capacity or endurance to plough through six hundred pages." F. H. U.

— Canadian Forum 32:189 N '52 110w

"From the American market angle, this book seems ill-timed, and the facts used to illustrate his theses, which would certainly deserve some attention in themselves, become clouded over by the violence of his attack."

— Kirkus 20:250 Ap 1 '52 20w

"The anecdotes Palmer uses—culled widely from the press, parliamentary speeches, pamphlets, and other ephemera—are often very much to the point. He does show up the sillier aspects of the National Health Service and of coal and rail nationalization. Palmer insists that capitalism, if it means to survive, must organize a positive program of education. . . Agreed. One may doubt, however, if this kind of book—so well-intentioned, so filled with moral fervor—will be of much help in such a cause." L. M. Hacker

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 16 '52 480w

Reviewed by Paul Ucker

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 10 '52 390w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 17 '52 160w

PALMER, ROBIN (MRS DOUGLAS S. RIGGS). Wise House; pictures by Decie Merwin. 138p $2 Harper

51-13614

Story about three orphan children, Michael, Mary Ann and Allan, and their guardians, Skio,

PALMER, ROBIN—Continued

the wise old crow, Mrs Purkins, the Persian cat-housekeeper, and the dog, Abou. The story relates how when the site of their home is taken over for an airport, they moved it to a more satisfactory place.

Kirkus 19:387 Ag 1 '51 160w

"There are humor and reality as well as fantasy in this talking-animal-tale. Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 60w

"This is a good-natured and entertaining book, although Skio would be less charming as a parent than as a crow, since he is always right. Like the author, the illustrator takes the fantasy for granted and the result is pleasant." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p48 N 18 '51 150w

"It is a wonderful story to read aloud to boys and girls. It is, in fact, a wonderful story to read to one's self."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:58 N 10 '51 320w

PANKHURST, ESTELLE SYLVIA. Ex-Italian Somaliland; with a foreword by Peter Freeman. 460p 11 maps $7.50 Philosophical lib.

963.5 [1967.73] Somaliland, Italian 51-14793

"The advisability of the reassignment of Somaliland to Italian trusteeship under the United Nations is the subject of this detailed and fully documented history of the colony. . . In view of the scarcity of resources in Somaliland and the lack of capital in Italy, the author feels that the conditions of trusteeship cannot be fulfilled and that the present situation is to the detriment of Italy's former colony." Current Hist

"Miss Pankhurst, editor of the New Times and Ethiopia News, makes a strong case for Ethiopia, or at least non-Italian, control of the territory, but many people who may agree with her conclusions will find her argument disorganized and emotional. Politics or not, Ex-Italian Somaliland is an indispensable source for students of eastern Africa and for those concerned with the pros and cons of U.N. trusteeships." E. S. Munger

Ann Am Acad 279:244 Ja '52 230w

Christian Century 69:249 F 27 '52 130w

Current Hist 22:103 F '52 100w

Foreign Affairs 30:685 J1 '52 20w

"Unfortunately, the format is too reminiscent of a textbook, and college libraries will probably prove the chief market. But the text is inspired by Miss Pankhurst's feeling for the people, her sense of the area as a whole, her conviction that there is still a challenge there. It deserves a wider audience than it is likely to get."

Kirkus 19:557 S 15 '51 190w

"It is fair to state that this is the most exhaustive and systematic survey of the problems of Somaliland available in the English language. It is true that this is hardly a book to be read, since it is loaded with statistics, excerpts from official correspondence and reports, and reprints of treaties. Hence it is really a reference book to be consulted by those interested in the colonial problems in Africa and their influence on international relations." J. S. Roucek

+ Social Studies 43:308 N '52 260w

"Miss Pankhurst has rendered a service in gathering and bringing up to date the history of a little-known part of the world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 18 '51 1000w

PARADIS, MRS MARJORIE (BARTHOLOMEW). Timmy and the tiger; pictures by Marc Simont. 246p $2.50 Harper

52-5898

How a timid ten-year-old boy became a hero thru perseverance and the help of understanding elders. For ages 10 to 12.

"Just as exciting as many a comic book to which I have been exposed. And the sharp note of courage and honesty that young Tim sounds is something that will make a positive and lasting impression on ten-year-olds." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 70w

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

"Timmy's fears—those of a sensitive, imaginative child—are understandingly portrayed, and many a young reader will enthusiastically identify himself with his silent but very real struggles to overcome them." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 J1 6 '52 220w

"A rather unusual story, sympathetically written and lively with everyday happenings among interesting children and grownups." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:241 Ag '52 130w

Kirkus 20:189 Mr 15 '52 100w

"This plot is not so unusual. . . The book, however, is well written with understanding and warmth; the people, though typed, are believable in their New York suburban setting, the conversation is natural and convincing." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 77:909 My 15 '52 80w

"Very able observation of boys under twelve lies back of this realistic, everyday, up-to-date story. . . One hesitates to recommend such a book for all small boys for several reasons. One is, it is too long unless the particular boy has the same timidity as that of the book. Another is that it seems to us the moral is more the concern of parents and others helping such a child, that fears cannot be helped much by a book. However, it is well written." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 27 '52 180w

"A story which is both amusing and exciting. . . Skeptics may question Timmy's single-handed pursuit of a tiger in a suburban reservation but young readers who have identified themselves with Timmy's troubles and triumphs will love it all." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p16 Je 1 '52 140w

"There are very well-drawn characters in Timothy's story, and a good deal of a gentle, discerning humor. It is very modern, with a touch of satire on television programs and a very progressive lady big-game hunter who keeps a baby tiger in her guest room."

+ Sat R 35:38 Ag 16 '52 110w

PARADISE, VIOLA ISABEL. Tomorrow the harvest. 316p $3.50 Morrow

52-9700

A story of a small Maine community in the 1780s. It is particularly the story of two women, Dorcas Willett, heiress and spinster, eating her heart out for the wrong man, and Melissa Sawyer, pauper, whom Dorcas befriends and who, in the end, gives Dorcas back more than has been given.

Booklist 49:81; 105 N 1 '52; N 15 '52

"A woman's story, with a quiet, steady attraction."

+ Kirkus 20:427 J1 15 '52 250w

"Satisfying, vigorous, authentic period novel. . . Recommended with enthusiasm." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1505 S 15 '52 70w

"Miss Paradise sees Dorcas and Melissa as proponents of a startlingly modern child psychology. In her treatment of her characters she does not allow for the patterns of thought or education of the times, however authentically their background has been detailed. Miss Paradise has obviously done careful research, but she has not been able to bring life to it."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 9 '52 200w

"How authentic this item from post-Revolution days may be is something for scholars to consider, but Dorcas surely makes pleasant reading as she struggles with things of the flesh and things of the spirit and things of the mind. The introduction of twentieth-century psychiatric probing into the 1785 Cape Elizabeth scene is probably ahead of its time, but the author carries it off beautifully." John Gould

+ N Y Times p50 N 9 '52 300w

PARDUE, AUSTIN, bp. Create and make new 128p $1.50 Harper

242.3 Lent. Christian life 51-11947

"Written especially for Lenten reading, this book reflects the experience which the Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Pittsburgh has had with radio broadcasting. . . Bishop Pardue is careful to spell out a suggested technique for Lenten self-examination and recreation. The theme of the book is based on the author's study of the use of the word 'heart' in Scripture and in the Book of Common Prayer and calls upon Christians to 'create and make new' contrite hearts." Sat R

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 30w

"An excellent book for Lent." C. L. Willard
+ Churchman 166:16 Ap 1 '52 80w

"Refreshingly practical is the way in which the author spells out a suggested technique for Lenten self-examination and re-creation. Too many devotional books are long in exhortation and short on definite and specific counselling as to how spiritual aims may be realized. A good book to display for Lenten reading. Will naturally be of especial interest to Episcopalians, but should appeal to Protestants of all denominations."

+ Kirkus 20:119 F 15 '52 190w

Reviewed by K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 35:39 Mr 1 '52 130w

PARK, CHARLES EDWARDS. Creative faith; foreword by Palfrey Perkins. 250p $3.50 Beacon press

252 Sermons 52-6265

Collection of sermons by the former pastor of The First Church, Boston (Unitarian).

Booklist 48:371 J1 15 '52

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher

Churchman 166:16 Ap 15 '52 110w

PARK, ROBERT EZRA. Human communities;
the city and human ecology. 278p il $4.50 Free press

301.36 Cities and towns. Ecology, Social 52-8155

"The second of three volumes which will contain the sociologist's collected articles, prefaces, and reviews. The papers have been grouped according to content; the first volume was descriptively titled Race and culture [Book Review Digest 1950]; the third has the tentative title Collective behavior and the moral order; and this present volume includes those papers that describe Park's ecological studies of cities. In these articles, ecological order is studied in order to understand the moral order better; Park felt that the city, where every man is on his own, is a challenge rather than a danger." Booklist

"Park's work will remain a monument in American sociology, testifying to his contagious enthusiasm for concrete, empirical research which has inspired his students and succeeding generations. His engaging style, colorful illustrations, succinct phraseology, incisive terminology, coupled with a cosmopolitan, scholarly vision, have won for Park a pre-eminence in the study of urban life." R. C. Hinkle

+ Ann Am Acad 284:195 N '52 500w

Booklist 48:352 J1 1 '52

"The content of this very comprehensive and interest-sustaining volume on the city and human ecology should prove to be of great value to the student of the social sciences. The classic chapters on community organization, the Gang, the Ghetto, and particularly the concluding chapter, Symbiosis and Socialization, wherein Park presents a frame of reference for the study of society, are especially well written." P. M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ag 17 '52
220w

PARKER, ARTHUR CASWELL. Red Jacket:
last of the Seneca; drawings by Jack Moment. (They made America) 228p $3 McGraw

B or 92 Red Jacket, Seneca chief 52-9764

"Red Jacket, the great leader and orator of the Seneca, was born in 1750, when the Iroquois controlled all the land south of Lake Ontario, and lived to see his people restricted to a few small reservations. Mr. Parker, himself part Indian, has written, in Red Jacket's life, the story of the decline of a great people." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 49:91 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

"Not fictionized but packed with accurate facts and quotations. For adults and older teen-agers." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 77:1910 N 1 '52 70w

+ Sat R 35:70 N 15 '52 140w

School & Society 76:192 S 20 '52 20w

PARKER, MRS CORNELIA (STRATTON).
Your child can be happy in bed; over 200 ways children can entertain themselves; il.
by Heda Teitcher. 275p $2.95 Crowell

793.7 Amusements. Children—Care and hygiene 52-8856

A comprehensive manual for the mother of a sick or convalescent child. In addition to general chapters on how and when amusements are desirable, there are chapters on modeling, music, dolls and more dolls, sewing, knitting, crocheting, weaving, collecting stamps, religion, etc. Index.

Booklist 49:100 N 15 '52

"If Junior ever catches on to the delightful possibilities of this book, his health may suddenly decline." F. D. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 9 '52
70w

"Unusually complete handbook is practical. . . A 'must' for public libraries and urge parents to buy, also." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 77:2070 D 1 '52 100w

PARKER, ELINOR MILNOR. Entertaining singlehanded; a book of easy dinners. 120p il $2 Crowell

642.4 Entertaining. Cookery. Menus 52-8854

Menus, directions, and recipes for the woman "living alone" who wants to entertain at small dinners or larger buffets, without any help and in limited quarters.

"A must cookbook for the girl who lives alone and likes it, but wants to vary the monotony by having guests and proving her kitchen prowess."

+ Kirkus 20:627 S 15 '52 130w

"A useful addition for library and, as usual a delightful gift for the woman living alone—but owning a kitchenette at least." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:2073 D 1 '52 30w

"With explicit directions for planning, for shopping, for equipping kitchen and table with proper utensils and for menus, Miss Parker has presented her case clearly. If her recipes lack originality or flair, they are nevertheless sound and easy to follow." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p40 N 30 '52 40w

PARKER, MAUDE (MRS EDMUND WILLIAM PAVENSTEDT). The intriguer. 248p $2.50 Rinehart

51-14908

Detective story.

Reviewed by E. Fowke

Canadian Forum 31:286 Mr '52 60w

Kirkus 19:713 D 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 3 '52
140w

PARKER, MAUDE—Continued

"It's an agreeable novel; and if [the author] can rid herself of the Rinehartian mannerisms Miss Parker may well produce first-rate work in a fresh vein of her own." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '52 150w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52 60w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R 35:59 Ja 19 '52 40w

PARKER, RALPH HALSTEAD. Library applications of punched cards; a description of mechanical systems. 80p il pa $2.75 A.L.A.

025.078 Punched card systems—Libraries
51-12779

"A brief explanation of the nature of punched card machines and of their possible applications to libraries in book stock administration, borrower registration records, circulation records, bibliographic services, personnel administration, and financial administration. The study also includes an outline of administering punched card installations in the library. It is not intended as a manual for installing a punched card system." Booklist

Booklist 48:291 My 15 '52

"The library profession has awaited with interest the contribution by the outstanding library expert in machine-sorted card systems. Dr. Parker's contribution finally provides us with a simplified and authoritative introduction to the Remington Rand and I.B.M. systems. . . Codes and coding are well covered, basic equipment is described, and necessary planning is indicated. . . Dr. Parker has made a real contribution to library administration in this brief, simplified introduction to the uses of mechanical systems." Foster Mohrhardt
+ Library J 77:1284 Ag '52 270w

PARKER, WILLARD EAGLESON, and KLEEMEIER, ROBERT WATSON. Human relations in supervision; leadership in management. 472p il $4.50 McGraw

658.312 Employment management. Foremen
51-7276

"In plain and forthright terms the authors outline the problems that a supervisor can expect to meet. Using case studies and examples, they point out how pitfalls can be avoided and how the supervisor, this forgotten man of management, can increase his stature as a leader." Management R

"Simply written, with examples well selected to illustrate the points made. A helpful book." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:54 Ja 1 '52 70w

"This is a book that can be read and studied with profit by all echelons of management. . . Messrs. Parker and Kleemeier have made a constructive contribution to the growing mass of literature on human relations in industry. . . I like the flavor of this book. It is full without being wordy. The authors have done an intelligent job." F. J. Bell

+ Management R 41:406 Je '52 460w

PARKINSON, THOMAS FRANCIS. W. B. Yeats, self-critic; a study of his early verse. 202p $2.75 Univ. of Calif. press

821 Yeats, William Butler
51-62701

"In [this] study of Yeats's revisions of his early poems, Mr. Parkinson tries to show how new techniques allow and indeed require new meanings. Perhaps the most interesting section of his book is the treatment of Yeats's failure to create new poems through partial revisions. The incompatibility of the old way of seeing with the new prevents the poems from being good as either early or late Yeats. The central thesis of the book is that writing for the stage 'forced' Yeats to achieve a more concrete and dramatic style." (Yale R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 12 '52 230w

"We have in this volume an astute interpretation, in the best manner of modern scholarship, of how William Butler Yeats continually reformed his early poetry (in the smithy of self-criticism) and brought it to a modern temper." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 6 '52 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p582 S 5 '52 420w

"Yeats' increased usage of a more conversational style was inseparable, Mr. Parkinson insists, from some change in the substance of his poetry, yet no attempt is made here to define the novelty with any clarity. Indeed, the treatment of this subject, and of Yeats' final revisions, suffers from a certain lack of critical perceptiveness, an apparent refusal to come to grips with the problem of characterizing and evaluating the poetic expression. . . Mr. Parkinson does, on the other hand, muster some useful information, and citations which are not readily accessible elsewhere."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:28 Mr '52 350w

"Mr. Parkinson has made a good case for 'technique as discovery,' but in his desire to stress the influence of technique on attitudes, he tends to slight the other side of the interaction. He fails to consider any factors but the stage in Yeats's shift of style; his thesis is attractive enough, but it is hardly tested against alternative possibilities. One is inclined, moreover, to wonder if he has not assigned the poet too passive a role." Martin Price

Yale R n s 41:459 spring '52 360w

PARKS, AILEEN WELLS. Bedford Forrest, boy on horseback; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 192p $1.75 Bobbs

Forrest, Nathan Bedford—Juvenile literature
52-5818

A fifteen-year old boy, who later became a famous Confederate general, is the hero of this tale of pioneer life in Tennessee more than a hundred years ago.

"Reading level is grades 4-5 and interest level, grades 4-8. Recommended." Averil Randall

+ Library J 77:730 Ap 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p18 Jl 13 '52 20w

PARR, JOHN. How I cured my ulcer [Eng title: How I cured my duodenal ulcer]. 155p $2.75 Little

616.3 Duodenum—Ulcers
52-5515

"This Englishman minutely describes his excessive suffering for 25 years from a conventionally-treated peptic ulcer (today's common illness). Finally, he reveals that Dr. J. J. Spira speedily cured him through a nonconventional low-fat (milkless) diet." Library J

Booklist 48:277 My 1 '52

"For fellow sufferers of what is a fairly common complaint, particularly in this country, this has a definite destination."

Kirkus 20:143 F 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:590 Ap 1 '52 90w

"The book is not an epitaph on the profession, but a bouquet for Dr. Spira. It is a bouquet, however, though Mr. Parr means it well, which any doctor would run several miles to avoid. . . Meanwhile we will all be glad that Mr. Parr's pain has gone. Medical students might well read his book. Much can go on behind the patient's powder-swallowing facade of fortitude of which they ought to be aware. They should also be alive to the risks inherent in gratitude." Alex Comfort

New Statesman & Nation 42:22 Jl 7 '51 550w

PARSONS, EDWARD ALEXANDER. Alexandrian library; glory of the Hellenic world; its maps, antiquities, and destructions. 468p il mps $7.50 Elsevier

027.032 Alexandria, Egypt. Libraries 52-5648

History of the famous ancient Alexandrian library from its beginnings to its destruction.

"While the author has perhaps, over-zealously, taken too many and too lengthy quotations, from previous writers, rather than his own observation and deduction, he has given us a most incredibly composite picture of the library and its period. His scholarship is all the more astounding when one considers that original sources are scant in comparison to the many, and often erroneous, recorders of 'fact' who have felt compelled to write about the subject." Karl Kup

+ Library J 77:1795 O 15 '52 280w

"Mr. Parsons has amassed a large body of material, but his rather ponderous presentation of it will not, I fear, attract the layman nor will the scholar applaud his uncritical methods. Ten pages are devoted to Caesar and Cleopatra—to cite a typical example of discursiveness—on the excuse that the library was damaged during Caesar's visit to Alexandria. Mr. Parsons lists hundreds upon hundreds of books in his bibliography, though most of them have no particular connection with his subject." C. A. Robinson

Sat R 35:21 Ag 16 '52 650w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 10w

"The present volume, by an American bibliographer and scholar of standing on the ancient Mediterranean cultures, is the first comprehensive history of the Alexandrian in English. It presents the results of many years' research on the origin, organization and development, and destruction of this institution. Mr. Parsons ably extricates himself from the bewildering maze created by ancient and modern scholars."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p288 Ap 25 '52 1000w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:249 S '52 180w

PARSONS, JOHN E. Henry Deringer's pocket pistol. 255p il $5 Morrow

623.44 Deringer, Henry. Pistols 52-5897

"Brings to light new and interesting facts about the invention and the man whose name has 'become a word in the language.' Profusely illustrated. Notes, bibliography, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:230 Jl '52 20w

"This should be of value to collectors and serious followers of Western lore."

+ Kirkus 20:176 Mr 1 '52 80w

"'Pepperbox Firearms' and 'Henry Deringer's Pocket Pistol' are notable contributions to firearms history. The true gun crank would not be able to choose between them—he'd buy them both. So should every collector, historian, or student." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '52 240w

"Engaging and interesting study of the deadly little pistol that the Gold Rush Californian carried." Robert O'Brien

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '52 480w

Springf'd Republican p4C Jl 6 '52 170w

PARSONS, TALCOTT. Social system. 575p $6 Free press

301 Sociology 51-13850

"Intended as a theoretical work in a strict sense, this volume presents and illustrates a conceptual scheme for the analysis of social systems in an action frame of reference." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by S. D. Clark

Am J Soc 58:103 Jl '52 900w

Am Pol Sci R 46:603 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by R. C. Hinkle

Ann Am Acad 280:205 Mr '52 650w

"An important book. It is very hard to read. . . All in all, the reviewer feels that a large proportion of American sociologists—and here he includes himself—can learn a great deal from Parsons' The Social System. It is not in the strict sense a pioneer work, in spite of the jacket blurb, but it marks a long step forward on a dim trail that is well worth following." Howard Becker

+ Social Forces 30:463 My '52 1000w

"This highly technical and not easily readable essay is a thorough, rigorously developed, and profoundly brilliant contribution to systematic analytical sociological theory. Its ultimate value will have to be tested by the fruitfulness of the empirical research it inspires."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:81 Mr '52 220w

PARSONS, TALCOTT, and SHILS, EDWARD ALBERT, eds. Toward a general theory of action [by] Edward C. Tolman [and others]. 506p $7.50 Harvard univ. press

301 Sociology 51-14629

"Results of intensive efforts to take stock of the theoretical resources of the field of social relations are presented in this volume. The product of nine social scientists—four psychologists, three sociologists, and two anthropologists, it represents a convergence of recent developments in the anthropological study of culture, the theory of learning, the psychoanalytical theory of personality, economic theory, and the study of modern social structure. The purpose of the book is to contribute to the establishment of a general theory of social behavior by a synthesis of current movements of interdisciplinary social science thinking." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Its shortcomings are those of contemporary social science, and its tremendous virtue is in its frank—yet comprehensive and optimistic—efforts to reduce these shortcomings. The tedious labor involved in systematizing the concepts of social science cannot be wasted, and the book will help every reader to make progress in his own thinking. The issues it raises are crucial, and when solved, social science will have become truly systematic." Clarence Schrag

+ Am Soc R 17:247 Ap '52 2200w

"Despite the authors' masterly analytical skills and despite their heroic pertinacity, this collaborative treatise by sociologists and psychologists, entering boldly upon a terrain where philosophers have made some magnificent but forgotten explorations, has deeply stirred but not persuaded this reader." H. A. Finch

Ann Am Acad 281:218 My '52 750w

Reviewed by Howard Becker

Social Forces 30:463 My '52 1000w

"The general intent of the book is analytical and theoretical. Its style and content limit its appeal to specialists concerned with the theoretical bases and philosophical aspects of social relations research."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:81 Mr '52 290w

PARTINGTON, JAMES RIDDICK. Advanced treatise on physical chemistry; 3v; v2, The properties of liquids. 448p $10 Longmans

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Liquids (49-50157)

"In the present volume there is presented an advanced, fairly detailed treatment of the theory and properties of liquids. Such aspects of liquids, as density, compressibility, viscosity, thermoconductivity, surface tension, latent heats of evaporation, and the critical state are considered. A good part of the discussion is in mathematical terms. The text is heavily documented. The author did not attempt an index of authors of cited papers, but according to a statement that accompanies the list of literature abbreviations, there are 11,758 literature references." (N Y New Tech Bks) For volume one of this work see Book Review Digest 1950.

"Any person who is seriously engaged in the theoretical or experimental study of liquids can find out, by using this treatise,

PARTINGTON, J. R.—Continued
virtually everything that has been accomplished in this field. I pay tribute to Dr. Partington's inexhaustible energy and scientific skill." F. H. MacDougall
+ Am Chem Soc J 74:1874 Ap 5 '52 220w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:85 N '51

PARTRIDGE, BASIL. The Penningtons. 284p
$3 Westminster press

52-7257

A family chronicle dealing with the affairs of the large family of an Episcopalian minister living in a Canadian town in the early years of the twentieth century.

Booklist 48:215 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:185 My '52 60w

"Basil Partridge has the ability to construct a good workmanlike plot, and now and again to give it life. Anne Crone comes to mind at this point, because in 'Bridie Steen' she did with intensity and beauty exactly what Mr. Partridge fails to do at any point in the relationship between Philip and Fernande. He lets the tension die a-borning and leaves the reader that much less satisfied." Chad Walsh

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 2 '52 450w

"Loaded with household incident and personality sparks, this is comfortable contentment in the conservative field."

+ Kirkus 19:712 D 15 '51 180w

"Some characters are stereotypes, others are refreshing, but the general theme is all too familiar. Recommended as pleasant but unimportant reading." Ruth Tubby

+ Library J 77:437 Mr 1 '52 80w

"Author Partridge is at his best in describing the amiable camaraderie of the French Canadian home, the pathetic eagerness of each 'faction' to like each other. If his motivation is at times a little obscure, his writing discursive, he summons up a pleasant picture of the day when a long-distance telephone call and an automobile ride were events of major importance." Stuart Keate

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '52 320w

"Mr. Partridge develops and resolves his various situations and the accompanying conflicts within the family circle at a leisurely pace. The mood is quiet and the emotional developments somewhat lacking in intensity; the general effect—if not quite real—is comfortably pleasant." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:65 Ap 12 '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:94 Mr '52

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. Fill 'er up! the story of fifty years of motoring. 235p il $4.50 McGraw

629.2 Automobile touring 52-10850

A history of the automobile in American life from the point of view of the man behind the wheel. Chronology of the motor car. Index.

Booklist 49:62 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Hal Foust

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 5 '52 300w

"A rare combination of textbook history and novel entertainment." W. C. Harvey
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 22 '52 700w

Kirkus 20:440 Jl 15 '52 160w

Library J 77:2189 D 15 '52 30w

"The tale is chatty, and amiable, just what is to be expected from the pioneer who lived through it all. It is first-hand social history; not learned or solemn, but a pleasant mixture of reminiscence and research in the odd corners." L. L. Engelking

+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p8 S 28 '52 800w

"It is to Mr. Partridge's credit that, title aside, he has compiled a history of American motoring that is neither gushing nor cute. One of his advantages is that he has observed the facts at first hand."

+ New Yorker 28:191 N 15 '52 80w

"'Fill 'er Up!' is one of those rare books which holds elements of knowledge and delight for everyone. Both the 'hot-rodder' and the conservative driver are certain to be pleased with Mr. Partridge's blending of the scholarly and the humorous in one of the most interesting books yet compiled around what in the hands of a mediocre author could be a dull technical subject." B. F. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 270w

PARTRIDGE, ERIC. From Sanskrit to Brazil: vignettes and essays upon languages. 156p $2.50 British bk. centre

420.4 Language and languages

"Mr. Partridge is a serious and sober philologist, one of whose amusements in the aridity of research is to show the comic masks assumed by words as they drift about in time and space from their base in the Sanskrit. His new book is a companion to Here, There and Everywhere [Book Review Digest 1950] and consists of essays and sketches of linguistic instruction and scholarly jests." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Delightful little catch-all." M. A. Pei

+ N Y Times p27 S 21 '52 300w

"Eric Partridge's new book of vignettes and essays on language is the kind of vintage Partridge one wants to recommend to anyone who speaks, reads, writes or listens in any language." I. E.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 19 '52 90w

"A charming, occasionally irritating, but nearly always readable series of essays. The essay on 'The Fortunate Isles' is delightful indeed, most happily combining scholarship and poetry." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 188:816 Je 20 '52 550w

"Mr. Partridge possesses a bright dexterity of word and comment. He can be very severe on dealers in verbal narcotics; and in the varied entertainment he provides as a sleuth in many tongues he seldom loses the scent and is always honest in telling the reader when he is guessing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Jl 18 '52 250w

PASCHAL, JOEL FRANCIS. Mr Justice Sutherland; a man against the state. 267p $4 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Sutherland, George 51-12258

"A serious, sympathetic study of a leading conservative jurist, this biography fills a large need in the scholarship of recent American history. For George Sutherland was significant, not only because he typifies a vanishing breed of Americans, but also because he was in a position to give effect to his opinions. Sutherland was no obscure politician when President Harding appointed him to the Supreme Court in 1922; he had long since emerged as a conservative thinker of intelligence, depth, and perception. Mr. Paschal supplies amply the essential biographical details, but he properly emphasizes the development of Sutherland's political thought." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by L. G. Vander Velde

+ Am Hist R 57:756 Ap '52 400w

"This biography of George Sutherland, the workhorse of the Old Guard on the Supreme Court of the 1920's and 1930's, is more than another chapter in the growing volume of American judicial biography. It comes as a welcome addition to the literature that seeks to illuminate, rather than to damn or deify, these prophets of a losing cause. Mr. Paschal treats the ideas of Sutherland with respect and sympathy. . . . Neither, however, is he wilfully uncritical or unaware of the stringent limitations of Sutherland's constitutional universe. . . . Some important questions remain unanswered in Mr. Paschal's treatment; some insights might profitably have been developed at greater length." R. G. McCloskey

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:245 Mr '52 900w

"Mr. Paschal has given us a most revealing book. On only two scores do I wish that he had given more. His work is almost wholly confined to the public life of Sutherland for which documentation was available. Personal qualities of tolerance and graciousness are incompletely portrayed. . . . Another matter that Mr. Paschal slights is the interstitial supporting arguments in the Sutherland opinions." T. R. Powell

+ — Harvard Law R 65:894 Mr '52 1550w

"Mr. Paschal has written a book that is critical, penetrating and judicious—something of an achievement with a man like Sutherland. The study can hardly be called comprehensive, but it is comprehensive for its purpose." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ja 27 '52 1400w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:341 D '51 200w

PASLEY, MRS VIRGINIA (SCHMITZ). Holiday candy book; drawings by Barbara Corrigan. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 123p $3 Little

641.85 Confectionery 52-9097

A book for the amateur cook adding carefully detailed instructions and warnings as to possible causes of failure. Recipes are grouped under seasons and holidays when various candies are traditionally or seasonally appropriate.

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

"With candy making a favorite hobby for some who aren't too diet conscious, and a gift item and part time money maker for others, this should be popular."

+ Kirkus 20:621 S 15 '52 170w

"Recommended for home and public and school libraries."

+ Library J 77:1761 O 15 '52 40w

"Accurate, good and workable."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 23 '52 10w

PATON, WILLIAM ANDREW. Shirtsleeve economics; a commonsense survey. 460p $4 Appleton

330 Economics. Economic policy 52-9628

"In view of the trend toward increasing governmental control of economic life, and of what is now happening to our economy, the time has come for critical survey. Author proposes more straight thinking on basic problems of production, distribution, exchange, money and the price system, corporations, governmental function and finance, social security, labor, agriculture, public utilities, and cycles, rather than emotionalizing or theorizing about them." (Library J) No index.

"Dr. Paton, a University of Michigan economics professor, herewith plugs a gaping hole in the nation's bookshelf. He has managed admirably to present the economic facts of life in a fashion that is at once comprehensive and comprehensible—and entertaining to boot. 'Shirtsleeve Economics' not only is fit for popular consumption; it needs to be popularly consumed." William Clark

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 25 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:211 Mr 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 77:891 My 15 '52 60w

"Many of its alleged facts are questionable, to say the least. . . . Many will hesitate to accept his conclusion that public parks and playgrounds are 'trimmings' rather than necessities and ought not to be provided at public expense. And a great majority will probably reject his contention that compulsory education at public expense is not fully in keeping with the American tradition of individual initiative and personal freedom." L. V. C.

N Y Times p11 Ag 10 '52 270w

PATRICK, CLARENCE HODGES. Alcohol, culture, and society. 176p $3 Duke univ. press 301.46 [178] Liquor problem 52-8702

The author discusses the problem of alcoholism from a sociological point of view presenting the thesis that the use of intoxicating beverages is largely determined by cultural environment.

"Alcohol, Culture and Society starts as a sociological study. Professor Patrick insists on the necessity of a cultural orientation if drinking behavior, attitudes and problems are to be viewed effectively. Except for this, however, there is little in the book which lives up to the promise of the title. Indeed, despite continued reference to functionalism and Malinowski, it is eminently clear that Professor Patrick is more a teleological rationalist than a behavioral scientist." S. D. Bacon

Am Soc R 17:651 O '52 850w

"In his last suggestion, Mr. Patrick strikes me as vulnerable; to achieve even a minimum of Government control removed from politics and the spoils system is like distilling 90-proof whisky which does not contain a drop of alcohol. This captiousness should not throw out of focus the over-all judgment that the author is thoughtful and thorough and pretty well hides personal prejudice in a subject where fanatics can work themselves into blind intoxication without the lift of so much as a bottle of beer." S. T. Williamson

+ — N Y Times p30 My 25 '52 370w

PATTERSON, HOMER LA FERNE, ed. American educational directory [1951] for use in public schools, colleges and universities, public libraries and special libraries, educational and other associations, and by various inst. and business organizations. (V48) 814p thumb indexed $10 Field enterprises

370 Education—U.S.—Directories

"This directory of school systems with their educational and business officers and librarians was published annually from 1904 to 1949 under Homer L. Patterson's copyright which was assigned in 1949 to the present publisher. The year 1950 saw the latter's first edition. The 1946 issue was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1948 [Book Review Digest 1948]. A table of contents lists the following main categories of information in the book: School Systems (438 pages); Diocesan Superintendents (4 pages); Schools Classified (152 pages); School Announcements (10 supplementary pages of advertising); Schools Indexed (27 pages); Public Libraries (68 pages); Educational Associations and Societies (8 pages); Instructional Materials and Equipment (44 pages); Trade Index and Buyers' Guide (64 pages).", Subscription Bks Bul

"While the current edition of Patterson's is typographically 'new from cover to cover,' its content does not prove it to be 'completely revised' to the date it bears, nor does the new arrangement of special schools and institutions of higher education make it 'easier' for the reference librarian to use. It falls considerably short of its goal and a gigantic revision job is still required. Patterson's American Educational Directory, 1951, therefore cannot be recommended without qualification. It will, with the aid of U.S. Office of Education Directory and local listings, serve those who are aware of its limitations, namely inaccuracies, omissions, and superseded information."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 22:76 O '51 1750w

PATTERSON, JOHN C. Association management; with special reference to trade associations; foreword by William J. Donald. 230p $3 Harper

060 Association and associations. Trade and professional associations 52-5727

"A handbook for those engaged in running trade associations or in organizing them. After a brief description of what trade associations consist of and their purposes, the author who has had wide experience in the field, gives some very practical advice. This includes information on legal precautions, fund raising, public relations, relations with staff." Library J

Reviewed by H. M. Gray

Ann Am Acad 283:204 S '52 400w

Booklist 48:330 Je 15 '52

PATTERSON, J. C.—Continued

"A clear useful book for anyone in this field." D. K. Oko
 + Library J 77:1204 J1 '52 80w
 San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '52 280w

PATTERSON, ROBERT, and others, comps.
 On our way. 372p il $3.50 Holiday
 920 U.S.—Biography 52-13988

An anthology composed of short selections from the autobiographies of some Americans, adapted for young readers. Partial contents: Sherwood Anderson; Mary Antin; P. T. Barnum; William O. Douglas; Frederick Douglass; Bob Feller; William C. Handy; Langston Hughes; Gladys Hurlbut; Burl Ives; Will James; Helen Keller; Emily Kimbrough; Mary Roberts Rinehart; Mark Twain.

Booklist 49:143 D 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 16 '52 140w

"A well-designed book, good to own." J. D. L.
 + Horn Bk 28:421 D '52 100w
 Kirkus 20:508 Ag 15 '52 120w

"The rich variety of background which sets off these twenty-seven persons, the humor, drama, the appeal of youth make these pages read like good fiction and should go far to overcome the reluctance of many young people to read biography."

+ Library J 77:1750 O 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 140w

"All have the common factor of being highly readable, and will undoubtedly lead to further exploration in the books from which these selections were made." Eugenia Garson
 + N Y Times pt2, p22 N 16 '52 110w

PATTERSON, ROBERT LEET, Philosophy of William Ellery Channing. 298p $4.50 Bookman associates

230 Channing, William Ellery 52-12088

"The New England preacher whose famous Baltimore sermon, in 1819, opened the floodgates of revolt against religious dogmatism and made him leader of the Unitarian movement, has been widely revered, not only as preacher and prophet but for his powerful impact on the social issues of his time. He has not, however, even by disciples, been regarded as a systematic theologian. Robert Leet Patterson, who occupies the Chair of Philosophy at Duke University, has undertaken to supply this omission." (N Y Times) Index.

Cath World 176:240 D '52 140w

"The result is a theological opus which is certain to be the definitive work in its field. It is not a book that can be quickly read." A. P. Davies

+ N Y Times p42 S 28 '52 400w

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD. Black Gardenia.
 306p $2.50 Random house

52-5135

Detective story.

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

Kirkus 19:650 N 1 '51 60w

"Recommended, though not to the Los Angeles police force. They won't like it." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:49 Ja 1 '52 90w

"The element of farce which fixed Elliot Paul as a rather unusual performer on the detective story in 'The Mysterious Mickey Finn' (1939) is not apparent here except incidentally. What one does get is unstinting verbiage which fills space without doing much to fill characters or plot. This is a fairly astonishing feat and you're welcome to examine it if you like." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 20 '52 150w

"Elliot Paul is less satisfactory than usual." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '52 110w

"In spite of three murders, this is a dull book, and a confusing and pretentious one as well, especially after the gaiety of 'Murder on the Left Bank'."

— New Yorker 27:112 F 16 '52 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 60w

"He's done better." Sergeant Cuff
 Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 30w

PAUL, SHERMAN. Emerson's angle of vision; man and nature in American experience.
 268p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

814 Emerson, Ralph Waldo 52-5039

"This essay is a study of a way of thinking about the relatedness of man and the universe. . . . To bridge the gap between man and nature, Emerson created a structure of thought, of which 'correspondence' was the most essential part. What he meant by 'correspondence' and how it entered his thought and permeated his vision is the theme of this essay." Intro

"This is not for the hit-run reader, it requires close attention and a degree of meditation. A certain energetic calmness (if these words be not contradictory) comes through the book, which in our fragmented and uncertain life seems to come from another world and another time. The chief value of the book seems to me to be on this tone." E. W. Harris
 + Churchman 166:12 Ag '52 150w

"His book is sound, scholarly, and carefully worked out, but it may be heavy going for the general reader. It is Emerson the philosopher, not the poet and maker of bons mots. Recommended for large libraries and philosophy collections." Shirley Barker
 + Library J 77:794 My 1 '52 120w

"Well-conceived study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:250 S '52 180w

PAULI, HERTHA ERNESTINE. Lincoln's little correspondent; il. by Fritz Kredel. 127p $2.50 Doubleday

Lincoln, Abraham—Juvenile literature

52-5221

In story form for young readers this tells how a little girl wrote to Lincoln while he was campaigning for the presidency urging him to grow whiskers so "the ladies will all tease their husbands to vote for you." The story comes to a climax when Mr Lincoln visits Westfield, N.Y. and meets and greets his little correspondent.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 189:87 Je '52 80w

Booklist 48:325 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

"This charmingly told story, emphasizing Lincoln's love for children and his great appeal for them, will endear him anew to readers 8 to 12, who'll wish they'd been in Grace's shoes when her dream came true. Fine illustrations help the times and the characters come alive." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 F 17 '52 150w

"Written simply, with large type and numerous drawings, it will delight children, who will find themselves looking forward to Lincoln's reply and then to his visit to Westfield, the little New York town where Grace lived." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:105 Ap '52 110w

Kirkus 19:703 D 15 '51 100w

"This charming bit of history has been authenticated from several angles and woven into a pleasant story, printed in large type for boys and girls under twelve." L. S. Bechtel
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 25 '52 190w

"A nice addition to the Americana shelf." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 F 10 '52 140w

PAYNE, MRS JOSEPHINE BALFOUR. Stable that stayed; pictures by Joan Balfour Payne. [46p] $2 Pellegrini & Cudahy

52-5922

Picture-story book about a Victorian stable which was left to become derelict when automobiles came in. But after a few years when dogs and cats and owls and mice were its tenants, along came a jolly artist and his family, and settled right in. Then the stable was happy again.

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

"The ups and downs of this picturesque Victorian stable are charmingly told in an original, warmhearted story that the kindergarten age will love. And the pictures are as Red and Beautiful and Fine as the old stable itself." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 My 25 '52 160w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 30w

"There is a quiet charm about this story, full of action though it is, that makes it fine for reading aloud." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:170 Je '52 60w

"The mood of come, live and be happy is captivating and carried out to a fine degree in the softly toned black and brown pictures by Joan Balfour Payne."

+ Kirkus 20:187 Mr 15 '52 100w

"Attractive book for preschool and kindergarten children." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 77:798 My 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 11 '52 230w

"An unusual, imaginative story. It has a genuine emotional quality." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '52 100w

+ New Yorker 28:188 D 6 '52 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:48 My 10 '52 150w

Wis Lib Bul 48:174 J1 '52

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Blood royal. 312p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

52-9541

A historical novel of India during the reign of Shah Jehan in the seventeenth century. The narrator is one Stephen Taverner, an Englishman who had settled in India and married a Persian princess.

Booklist 49:49 O 1 '52

Kirkus 20:469 Ag 1 '52 150w

"While it concerns itself principally with the dreadful struggle between brothers for power, it gives, as all Robert Payne's novels seem to do, a rich-colored and intensely interesting picture of the setting and its characters."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 28 '52 130w

"In Payne's handling, historical fiction becomes a fashioning of absorbing incident along with historical eventfulness on the fictional framework of the plotting. As a result, the shimmering fantasies of an earlier, more colorful day come alive with a convincing sense of reality. 'Blood Royal' is, indeed, a worthy successor of, and fitting companion piece to, the earlier account of Shah Jehan's rise." Henry Cavendish

+ N Y Times p31 S 21 '52 330w

"Whether it accurately portrays the time when the teeming subcontinent was ruled by the line sprung from Timur and Genghiz, I will have to leave to those more deeply studied in the period. But to the lay reader, it is convincing for all its—to Western eyes—improbabilities." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 35:41 S 20 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 160w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Fathers of the Western Church. 312p il $5 Viking 922 Christian biography

51-13882

Contents: The forerunners; The whisperer and thunderer; Ambrose: the patrician; Jerome: the hermit; Augustine: the sensualist; Benedict: the schoolmaster; Gregory: the proud warrior; Bernard: the singer; Francis: the lover; Thomas Aquinas: the angelic doctor. Index.

"His facility in jumping from one world to another (Forever China, Red Storm Over Asia) is not as happy as his readers would wish, when he is discovered swashbuckling through Christian origins and landing in the midst of the thirteenth century. There is even a suspicion in the mind of one of his readers that his competence in translating and proof-reading Latin is not all it should be." F. X. Murphy
Cath World 174:474 Mr '52 320w

"A series of well studied and vividly written biographies. . . The book is as readable as it is informative." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:401 Ap 2 '52 180w

"Since Mr. Payne is a working journalist his studies of the early Fathers offer a fresh and unusual treatment. From the historian's point of view his work may appear to be a little too indifferent to the context of the Fathers' views (their cultural and social environment), and often the reader would prefer to have some bibliography or reference provided even though the author's purpose is to avoid pedantry." Joseph Fletcher

Churchman 166:13 Ja 15 '52 170w

"The particular essays which make up this book are not very plunging, and the unified effect of the whole work not very deep nor very clear. Nevertheless, the writer chose a good, if limited, objective, and capably surrounded it." Philip Burnham

Commonweal 55:428 F 1 '52 750w

"There is no theological or ecclesiastical bias, and, in view of the involved matters of doctrine with which many of these worthies were concerned, the author has succeeded well in his effort to popularize them for the general reader."

+ Kirkus 19:565 S 15 '51 150w

Reviewed by R. P. Breaden

Library J 76:1331 S 1 '51 120w

"Church scholars alone can determine the adequacy of the author's treatment of Augustine's theology and that of Thomas Aquinas. Essentially Mr. Payne has been writing for the general reader who should welcome a book well conceived and written with intense inner excitement." John Hewing

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Mr 9 '52 420w

"Payne deliberately has chosen to say very little about theology. . . The church fathers without dogma—the effect is curiously as though we saw a man engaged in a furious wrestling match with an invisible opponent. . . However, Payne's study should whet the curiosity of many readers, who will then go on to examine what the church fathers themselves have to say." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p6 D 23 '51 600w

"The author has a strong feeling for modern parallels. . . Despite this preoccupation, and a long and unnecessary introduction defending the Fathers as men very like ourselves—a comparison for which few of these great saints would be apt to thank him—the book is not only readable but fascinating, and may serve to bring names like St. Ambrose and St. Francis back into general conversation."

+ New Yorker 27:79 D 22 '51 180w

Reviewed by Rose Macaulay

Spec 189:509 O 17 '52 650w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas

Springf'd Republican p3D D 23 '51 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p601 S 12 '52 180w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Great god Pan: a biography of the tramp played by Charles Chaplin [Eng title: Great Charlie]. 301p il $3.75 Hermitage

B or 92 Chaplin, Charles Spencer 52-9130
An appreciation of Charlie Chaplin, treating him as the inheritor of the art of the great clowns. Traces the development of the films from Kid Auto Races at Venice to Monsieur Verdoux. No index.

Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 10w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 27 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:143 F 15 '52 200w

"One of the best of the forty-five books of which this assiduous young man is the author." Nation 174:436 My 3 '52 60w

Reviewed by Theodore Hoffman
New Repub 126:22 My 26 '52 160w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 44:516 N 1 '52 500w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 22 '52 600w

"In 'The Great God Pan,' Robert Payne has produced a fascinating book, an intellectual treat for those who have been entranced by the character of Charlie for almost forty years." Charles Jackson

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '52 900w

"This is an account, often brilliant and never less than entertaining, of Charlie the Clown, whom the author is careful to distinguish from Charles Spencer Chaplin, his avatar." + New Yorker 28:139 My 10 '52 160w

Reviewed by Arthur Knight

Sat R 35:14 Ap 26 '52 450w

"This book touches only briefly on Chaplin's life. But as a study of his screen personality, rooted in the dim past and flowering for our joy today, it is a notable achievement." Virginia Graham

+ Spec 189:644 N 14 '52 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 14 '52 240w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Journey to Persia. 256p il $3.75 Dutton
955 [915.5] Persia—Description and travel 52-6645

"This volume describes a trip to Persia made under the auspices of the Asia Institute. The author is interested particularly in the ancient cities and archeology of Persia. He visited Persepolis, Isfahan, Meshad, Rhages as well as Teheran, and interweaves many reflections on Persian art and history into his narrative." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 20:180 Mr 1 '52 210w

"Written with grace, skill, and imagination, the book affords quite a contrast to the usual travel book. Not intended for the reader looking for information on the current British-Iranian controversy, it will appeal to the reader interested in Persia's ancient and glorious past." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 127:19 J1 28 '52 290w

"His imaginative reconstructions of the past derive quality from his familiarity with early travellers' tales, and his appreciation of Persian art, which, if romantic rather than discriminating, is distinguished by his awareness of the sources of its inspiration in the colours and forms of the landscape." Dorothy Carrington

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:310 Mr 17 '51 180w

"This is a book to dawdle over. To read for a while and then put down and let the mind wander to those days of splendor when Persia was 'the center of the world.'" Ralph Chapman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 My 4 '52 550w

"When Mr. Payne describes his stay in the great centers of Persian civilization he has no difficulty in seeing the immediate as well as what no longer exists, the beauty of what remains and the meaning of what must have been; the wretched poverty of the people and their surviving dignity, maturity and decorum. Above all, he is able to establish firmly the relationship, now grown tenuous but in no sense less real, between the civilization and the people who fathered it." Hasan Ozbekkan

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 22 '52 350w

"This is a romantic book about Iran, written beautifully—almost as beautifully as the Iranian language is spoken. To one who has been there and knows its villages, cities, bazaars, and mosques, it stirs exciting memories." W. O. Douglas

+ Sat R 35:13 My 10 '52 1200w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 17 '52 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Mr 30 '51 500w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. The Marshall story [Eng title: General Marshall, a study in loyalties]. 344p il $5 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Marshall, George Catlett 52-6159

A biography of George Catlett Marshall which stresses his military and political career. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:184 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 30 '51 480w

"Marshall's life certainly deserves a more careful examination and balanced evaluation than Payne has given it. The Marshall Story is frequently pretentious and high-flown and shows internal evidence either of ineptitude or of great haste. In view of Mr. Payne's yearly output it seems likely that the latter is largely responsible for its defects." James O'Gara
— Commonweal 55:450 F 8 '52 1350w

"A highly readable and authoritative story of George Marshall."

+ Current Hist 22:228 Ap '52 140w

Foreign Affairs 30:674 J1 '52 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

Library J 77:145 Ja 15 '52 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 8 '52 240w

"Written in haste, as all Payne's books must be, and without first-hand knowledge of its subject, it is nevertheless a lucid, readable, and objective study of General Marshall's life, character, and accomplishments, with an especially interesting section on how and why the General was tripped up in trying to solve the Chinese problem."

Nation 174:114 F 2 '52 100w

Reviewed by H. F. Pringle

New Repub 126:22 My 5 '52 750w

"The Marshall Story' cannot be accepted as a final judgment on its subject's stature as a soldier and a statesman, and it is sometimes inaccurate and frequently opinionated, but it is a well-written and extremely interesting book." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 30 '51 1800w

"Mr. Truman has publicly called the General 'the greatest living American.' The author of 'The Marshall Story' comes close to sharing the President's admiration for the General. But despite Mr. Payne's admiration, he is unable in the course of his book to show the real George Marshall. . . As a reviewer who has a slight personal acquaintance with General Marshall, I must especially consider Mr. Payne's failures to refer to the General's warm and customary thoughtfulness and his sense of humor. He may be a cold character in Mr. Payne's book but not in mine." J. I. Greene

N Y Times p7 D 30 '51 1300w

New Yorker 27:85 Ja 19 '52 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52 230w

"A good deal of information, new to most of us, is here provided on General Marshall's family background and his early life. . . On the unhappy China mission Mr. Payne writes with more familiarity than most; yet here, where his criticisms of Marshall are sharpest, he touches on the realm of the might-have-been with a confidence difficult to justify." M. S. Watson

Sat R 35:19 Mr 8 '52 700w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p4D F 24 '52 380w

Time 58:63 D 31 '51 750w

PAYNE, WILLIAM LYTTON, ed. See Defoe, D. Best of Defoe's Review

PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT. Power of positive thinking. 276p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

248 Psychology, Applied 52-10833

"How to unlearn a negative pattern of living and how to establish a positive one is the subject of the 17 chapters that made up this book. You'll find Dr. Peale's method for breaking the worry habit, his formula for attaining peace of mind and his suggestions for ways of maintaining constant energy. Here are ten rules that Dr. Peale says will make people like you and the seven steps that will release your creative mind." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 49:82 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 30w

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 12 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:632 S 15 '52 220w

"All libraries will want this timely book."

L. R. Miller

+ Library J 77:1651 O 1 '52 120w

"Mr. Peale says that he does not ignore or minimize hardships and tragedies. In spite of this statement, these problems seem too easily solved, the success a bit too automatic and immediate, the answers a little too pat, and the underlying theology a share too utilitarian." G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p36 O 26 '52 210w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '52 50w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 23 '52 80w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Stephen Foster, his life; il. by Margaret Ayer. 87p $2 Holt

B or 92 Foster, Stephen Collins—Juvenile literature 52-9037

A biography of Stephen Foster, covering his life from boyhood to his death in New York at the age of thirty-eight. Grades 4 to 7.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

"Within the limitations necessary for her new audience, [the author] tells a brief but revealing story of this gentle genius, laying stress on his life long attachment for and dependence on his family, his boyhood love of music—especially that of the Negroes—which inspired his best work." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 9 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:408 J1 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by K. N. Dill

Library J 77:2078 D 1 '52 80w

"Miss Peare offers a short, easy-reading book for those under twelve. The early chapters sound much like 'Stephen Foster: Boy Minstrel' in the Childhood of Great Americans Series. But as it progresses, and words of his songs are used it proves a better complete biography." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 9 '52 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '52 190w

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. Sportsman's country [with il. by Henry B. Kane]. 180p $3 Houghton

799 Natural history—U.S. Hunting—U.S. Fishing—U.S. 52-9592

Essays by an American naturalist on game birds, and fish and animal life in various parts of the country.

"Mr. Peattie has written a refreshing animal book, skillfully illustrated by Henry B. Kane." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:100 N '52 330w

Booklist 49:85 N 1 '52

"Peattie's syntax is a little wild at times. He does some rather remarkable things with sentence structure. But he does manage to turn out vivid prose. His descriptions of the canniness of foxes, of the clownishness of jack rabbits, and of the beauty of valley quail are memorable." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 120w

Kirkus 20:533 Ag 15 '52 290w

"A joy for nature lovers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1905 N 1 '52 30w

"If there is any writer about nature who can appeal simultaneously to those who go as pilgrims and those who go to make a catch or a kill, it is probably Donald C. Peattie. He has virtually unique equipment. A scientist, he can offer both kinds of reader a great deal of welcome instruction about the world they both find exciting, and he can do it with such smooth skill that a talk about (for example) 'lotic' and 'lenitic' waters becomes absorbingly interesting whether to a trout-fisherman or a brookside contemplative who wouldn't know a dry fly from a creel." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 16 '52 360w

"'Sportsman's Country' is a threnody for the America that has been and might be again. It is written by a naturalist, who is at heart a poet, to the land that bore him: the rich and fair and desecrated land. The author presents each area whole, geographically and biologically, but his understanding fervor gives every chapter memorable beauty that mere description never could bestow. More scrupulously than most men, Mr. Peattie follows the Ancient Mariner's prescription for efficacious prayer." F. F. Van De Water

+ N Y Times p40 N 16 '52 330w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 7 '52 600w

PEATTIE, RODERICK, ed. Black Hills; contributors, Leland D. Case [and others]. (American mountain ser) 320p il $5 Vanguard

978.3 Black Hills, South Dakota 52-6780

A symposium made up of papers on the history and legends of the Black Hills region. Index.

Booklist 48:358 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 480w

Kirkus 20:249 Ap 1 '52 220w

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon

Library J 77:891 My 15 '52 100w

"This is one of the most interesting I have seen of the American Mountains Series. Mr. Peattie has selected his authors with good judgment and they have done him and themselves proud. There is nothing unusual about the book's photographs and old prints." Stewart Holbrook

PEATTIE, RODERICK—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 15 '52 490w

"Nearly half a million Americans visit the Black Hills each summer. This book will prove an invaluable guide for any or all of them." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p12 My 25 '52 360w

"For a full story of this unique and interesting range, Roderick Peattie's book is a must." R. H. Dillon

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 29 '52 220w

PEATTIE, RODERICK ELIA, and PEATTIE, LISA (REDFIELD). The city; il. by Bunji Tagawa. (Man and his world ser) 108p $2.50 Schuman

301.36 [323.352] Cities and towns—Juvenile literature 52-7777

"In five short chapters we see the transformation of civilization as mirrored in and made possible by the development of the city. First the village of no variety, choice, individualism; then the early city where some differentiation of activity was possible, then the city of the middle ages which meant freedom from feudal bondage, next the manufacturing city with its extremes of poverty and (sometimes benevolent) wealth, and finally the city of today, with its problems, its influence and its gifts of freedom and price of loneliness." Bookmark

Booklist 48:269 Ap 15 '52

"It is refreshing to find an acknowledgment of the attractions and benefits of the city after the prevalent lip-service to the idea that only the dwellers in the country can be truly happy and worthy. Illustrations are accurate, but too often appear after the reference in the text."

+ Bookmark 11:162 Ap '52 120w

Kirkus 19:532 S 15 '51 140w

"Excellent for social studies classes but will have limited appeal, because style and interest level do not coincide. Recommended for supplementary reading in upper-grade social studies classes." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 8 '52 70w

"The sociological approach to an important subject and simplicity of treatment make this an absorbing book." Nina Chasteen

+ N Y Times p16 J1 20 '52 110w

PEI, MARIO ANDREW. Story of English. 381p $5 Lippincott

420.9 English language—History 52-8784

An account of the development of the English language from the small Anglo-Saxon beginnings to its present cosmopolitan state. The author is associate professor of romance philology at Columbia University. Bibliography. Selected list of words and expressions. Index.

Booklist 49:99 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 30w

"The language, in Pei's judgment, is a noble one. 'English spelling is the world's most awesome mess,' he admits. But the vocabulary, grammar, and widespread use of English more than offset the spelling. The vast body of literary and scientific achievement expressed in English moves Pei, as it must move us all, to thanksgiving for our linguistic heritage." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 2 '52 350w

"A scholar's study, which is free of pedantry and flexible in its interpretation and investigation, and a basic book for schools and colleges and public libraries."

+ Kirkus 20:492 Ag 1 '52 130w

"Mr. Pei analyzes the situation objectively and he carefully avoids dogmatism but he is obviously well aware of the fact that though languages die under a dictatorship they degenerate when all feeling for a norm is lost. Perhaps the conclusion which he reaches can be best summarized in the understatement which begins his last paragraph: 'It is not one of the functions of the teacher of English to abolish his own subject.'" J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 16 '52 600w

"Another brilliant popular book on language." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p20 N 16 '52 400w

PENDLE, GEORGE. Uruguay, South America's first welfare state. 100p $2.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

989.506 Uruguay

52-9131

"This compact work contains a wealth of information on the history, geography, economics and politics of South America's smallest country. The principal features of the Uruguayan welfare state are examined: the constitution, social legislation, state-owned corporations, education and finances. A chapter on foreign affairs points up the nation's position as a buffer state between Argentina and Brazil. The complex nature of Uruguayan politics is described." (Current Hist) Index.

"This book is a timely addition to the relatively scarce literature regarding Uruguay. . . The author has not attempted much by way of interpretation or comment, and as a result his book is slightly heavy reading in spots. Nevertheless, the flaming spirit of an intensely democratic and aggressive people is evident behind every fact and figure." W. L. Mitchell

+ Ann Am Acad 232:185 J1 '52 420w

Current Hist 22:379 Je '52 90w

Foreign Affairs 30:685 J1 '52 10w

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 14 '52 70w

"Mr. Pendle's book is up-to-date enough to contain the latest experiment in government by executive council, which started last winter. There has been a new surge of interest in the United States in Latin American affairs, but it happens to be the British who are providing us with this important undertaking in contemporary history. More power to them!" H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 17 '52 170w

PENNANT, EDMUND. I, too, Jehovah. 67p $2.50 Scribner

811

52-6998

First book of poems by a young American writer. Certain of the poems have previously been published in The Saturday Review of Literature, Voices, Yank, The Best From Yank.

"Now and then it is difficult to follow the progression of thought in the poems: The development of his ideas can be more capricious than inevitable. But there is much to admire in his work—brilliance of image, vigor, intensity, and sincerity." R. L. Lowe

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 9 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:27 Ja 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 77:1206 J1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Francis Golfing

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 8 '52 210w

"This is neither outstandingly literate nor of any great strength. There is plenty of imagery, but little of it has that high compression and synthesis of language which should distinguish poetic utterance. Although there are poems here of love and war in our time, there is a kind of weak prayerfulness about them. Not that we should object to a really strong religious stand. But this hardly seems to be the voice of a man speaking to men." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 120w

"The poems in this first volume of verse appear youthful in both their virtues and their defects. Some of them display a certain sterile bounciness. The better, more emotionally committed ones are, in a number of instances, derivative in the understandable and attractive way in which the work of promising younger writers is apt to be derivative."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:257 S '52 170w

PENNANT, GUY. Young sailor; with 19 photographs and 61 line illustrations. (Young sportsman's lib) 2d ed 216p $3 Dodd

797.1 Sailing. Boats and boating 52-10816

"This manual on sailing covers the subject fully, including everything from stowing sails and gear to what to wear and building your own boat. The 'Young' in the title refers not so much to age as to experience in the sport, for the book is not written down in any way. Originally published in England, it contains a few English terms but not enough to affect its value to Americans. Photos, drawings, glossary." Library J

Booklist 48:382 J1 15 '52

Reviewed by Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 77:1312 Ag '52 50w

"Imported from England, this is a guide to sailing that will be as valuable to grown-ups as it will to older boys and girls. Directed toward the beginner, it has many valuable hints from the experienced sailor."

+ Sat R 35:70 N 15 '52 50w

PENROSE, BOIES. Travel and discovery in the renaissance, 1420-1620. 369p il maps $5 Harvard univ. press

910.9 Discoveries (in geography) 52-5403

A history of travel, discovery and colonization during the period between 1420 and 1620. Bibliography. Index.

"The scholarship is of a high order, but it is never permitted to dull the portrayal of the spirit of such men as Drake, to name only one of the heroes." John Randolph

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p46 D 7 '52 100w

"A factually sound and clearly written record of the period. . . The monotonous sameness of many of the travels and explorations lends a dullness which will be the only deterrent to its use by all libraries with literate publics. Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ — Library J 77:1501 S 15 '52 120w

"Very ample bibliographies add to the value and usefulness of Mr. Penrose's book, and it is excellently and appropriately illustrated." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 4 '53 360w

"The book is not entirely without faults, one being Mr. Penrose's scholarly reluctance to attach any importance to the Viking discoveries. . . This reviewer liked best the chapters dealing with India and the Portuguese, but probably only because he knew less about them. Yet every chapter is worth reading. Even the one on 'Geographical literature' will appeal to the student if it does not to the general reader." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p50 N 30 '52 400w

"His book is skilfully organized and densely packed with fact. It makes remarkably coherent sense out of a story that most of us know only piecemeal, and in text and supplementary bibliographies opens a clear path into the literature of the voyages. But it does more. Its narratives, condensed as they must be, speak to our love of the marvelous and our admiration for human endurance and daring almost in the tones of the voyagers themselves." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R 36:15 Ja 3 '53 430w

School & Society 76:222 O 4 '52 20w

PENROSE, MRS EDITH TILTON. See Denhardt, E. T.

PERCIVAL, LLOYD. Hockey handbook, 320p il $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.96 Ice hockey 51-14721

"A former coach, player, and referee has put together a textbook on hockey which should have wide use for those playing or watching the game. Skating, how to carry and shoot the puck, offensive and defensive maneuvers [with diagrams], goal-keeping, proper methods of practice and coaching, and advice on training and diet are included." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:141 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ja 13 '52 70w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:59 Ja 1 '52 30w

PERELMAN, SIDNEY JOSEPH. Ill-tempered clavichord. 244p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

817 52-13671

A collection of Perelman's quietly mad, humorous essays, on many subjects, except of course the clavichord.

Kirkus 20:536 Ag 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by J. M. Brinnin

New Repub 127:26 D 8 '52 330w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 26 '52 500w

"To people who haven't read Perelman it is impossible to explain what he does. Some writers are best when they are talking about virtually nothing and some when they have plenty of good, hard, dense material on hand. Perelman does fine either way." Ted Robinson

+ N Y Times p44 N 9 '52 400w

"Perhaps a few other writers can go pleasantly mad, each in his own way, but no one does it as Perelman does it. You can't mistake his touch. That special flavor pervades the new collection, as of course it would, and you won't want to miss it—not if Perelman's your cup of tee-hee." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 30 '52 550w

Reviewed by Bernard Kalb

Sat R 36:59 Ja 3 '53 240w

"Perelman is one of the few magazine funny men who can stand rereading, and often seem funnier the second time." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p7C N 23 '52 90w

PEREZ GALDOS, BENITO. Spendthrifts; with il. by Charles Mozley; introd. by Gerald Brenan [tr. by Gamel Woolsey]. 282p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

52-9058

"This comic novel takes place during 1868, just before an uprising against a corrupt government, and relates the trials of the Bringas family. Francisco Bringas, a government employee residing in the Royal Palace, has a wife, Rosalia, who is so fond of good clothes that she cannot help borrowing money to satisfy her desires. How she finds herself being dragged down by the whirlpool of debt, how she endeavors to keep knowledge of her condition from Francisco, and how she finally rescues herself from a perilous situation form the central story." Library J

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 31 '52 160w

"Eminently readable." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 77:794 My 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 D 14 '51 380w

"It is the best and the most amusing novel I have read in months. . . Everywhere in 'The Spendthrifts' is a feeling for the beauty of life, even in the most dreary circumstances, even in the Royal Palace in Madrid in 1868. Light and shade, gaiety and joy infuse writing which might easily be no more than a careful history of ruinous conduct, dull court

PEREZ GALDOS, BENITO—Continued
intrigue, and commonplace worries about money. A sense of wonder is never absent from the account of daily life." Ernest Jones
+ Nation 174:582 Je 14 '52 800w

New Repub 126:21 My 26 '52 50w

"A brilliant, well constructed comic story, blooming absurdly out of the political realities of its time. The translation preserves the tone of the period and flows simply and naturally along." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:710 D 15 '51 2350w

Reviewed by Angel Flores

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 24 '52 270w

"Humor distinguishes all the work of Galdós. His satire without gall has the same tone with the duchess as with popular heroes. Faithful to Spanish literary tradition, the author looks at his characters from above as a god surveys his poor creatures, although it is true that this god is not severe and belongs to the kindly heaven of Cervantes. . . . Entitled 'La de Bringas' in Spanish, the book has been excellently translated by Gamel Woolsey and the drawings by Charles Mozley are good reminiscences of the period. Gerald Brennan, familiar to readers of Spanish literature, has written a vivacious and expressive introduction." Ramon Sender

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '52 700w

New Yorker 28:83 J1 19 '52 80w

Reviewed by Laurence LeSage

Sat R 35:23 Je 7 '52 430w

"The story is told lightly, with a nice sense of comedy and a wonderfully sympathetic insight into the characters." Tangye Lean

+ Spec 187:832 D 14 '51 600w

"A novel to be recommended with enthusiasm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p833 D 28 '51 550w

PERKERSON, MEDORA (FIELD). White columns in Georgia. 367p $7.95 Rinehart 975.8 [917.58] Georgia—Historic houses, etc.
52-5572

History and legends of the ante-bellum mansions of Georgia, copiously illustrated with photographs. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:358 J1 1 '52

"A profusion of excellent illustrations helps set the scene. Few persons besides specialists will be interested in reading in their entirety the detailed chronicles which Mrs. Perkeron supplies, but the book is highly recommended to anyone contemplating a leisurely trip thru the state." Edward Barry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 15 '52 120w

"The author, who has two successful mystery books to her credit, is obviously a competent researcher for she has done an outstanding piece of work in amassing the data about the various houses which she lists." C. W. E. Morris

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 17 '52 470w

Kirkus 20:272 Ap 15 '52 160w

"Mrs. Perkeron's historical and ghost stories are so entertaining, and her descriptions of the great houses she visited so interesting, that one can recommend the book." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 77:891 My 15 '52 90w

"Medora Field Perkeron is an admirable guide to the old houses of Georgia. She has an eye for their present beauty, an ear for the legends that through the years have clustered around them." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 31 '52 250w

"If there is on the one hand an over-abundant supply of ghosts, and tediously repeated tales of old china, old silver, old servants, the book is perfectly redeemed by the author's awareness of the ageless utility and beauty of these spacious and civilized dwellings and the traditions of work binding Old South and New South. It is a fine piece of irony that the unifying thread of much of this volume is the route of march followed by Gen. W. T. Sherman's troops." Anthony Harrigan

+ N Y Times p16 My 25 '52 290w

"Mrs. Perkeron's choice is rich and varied, her approach fresh and spontaneous. You'll find that the story of Georgia's white columns as she tells it is pretty much the social history of the State itself." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 8 '52 600w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Sat R 35:20 J1 12 '52 260w

PERKINS, DEXTER. American approach to foreign policy. 195p $3.25 Harvard univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy A52-9256

"Mr. Perkins, who has written a number of books on American foreign policy and is chairman of the history department at the University of Rochester, presented the material of this book in the Gottesman Lectures at Uppsala University, Sweden. Instead of the usual chronological treatment, this study does a much more adequate job in topical treatment and with reference to broad areas of thought. . . . After a brief summary of American diplomatic history and an examination of the situation today (especially the present struggle between Russia and the United States), the book gives evidence for concluding that no country is less imperialistic than the United States today and that our foreign policy is extremely responsive to public opinion." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by P. A. Varg

Am Hist R 58:125 O '52 460w

Reviewed by D. C. Poole

Ann Am Acad 282:119 J1 '52 550w

Current Hist 23:128 Ag '52 120w

"Designed to explain the United States to a foreign audience, but well worth American attention."

+ Foreign Affairs 31:155 O '52 20w

"This is a wise, urbane and mellow book. It is also a cautious book, especially when it ventures to develop hypotheses and to state general principles." H. J. Morgenthau

New Repub 126:20 My 19 '52 1150w

"Because of its origins, Dexter Perkins' book is in a class by itself. He has turned lectures given at the University of Uppsala in Sweden into a series of readable and informing essays." Lindsay Rogers

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '52 650w

"The American Approach to Foreign Policy is a provocative and thoughtful survey of the main forces in American diplomatic history. Not everyone will agree with the author's answers to the questions that he has raised, but no one can deny that he has asked the right questions." H. C. Syrett

+ Pol Sci Q 67:622 D '52 650w

"It may be that the author at times overstates his case for a rather conservative position. However, his book is well written and on the whole well documented in refuting some of the frequent charges made against America's foreign policies." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '52 260w

Reviewed by R. W. Van Alstyne

Sat R 35:43 Je 14 '52 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:301 S '52 180w

PERRAULT, CHARLES. Puss in boots [a free translation from the French] with pictures by Marcia Brown. [28p] $2 Scribner

398.2 Fairy tales 52-12026

A new translation of the famous French fairy tale, with illustrations in color.

Booklist 49:38 S 15 '52

"One of the year's most distinguished picture story books. Marcia Brown, an artist of a varied, always original talent, has outdone herself in the freshness and sparkle of these

O, so French illustrations in four colors for her new translation of the old fairy tale favorite by Charles Perrault." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 19 '52 100w

"Truly enchanting pictorial interpretation of Master Cat, and a better translation than any other I know so far."

+ Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

"Miss Brown's 'free translation from the French,' and the pictures in four colors—her best, so far, I think,—make this a distinguished book for storytellers and children alike."

J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:315 O '52 80w

"Marcia Brown has never repeated herself. Each of her books has integrity, a direct appeal to children born of her own familiar relation to children, and Puss in Boots is I think her masterpiece. I like everything about it from her fine, free and unpretentious translation from Perrault to the colorful pages I delight to dwell upon as I turn them again and again." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:393 D '52 240w

Kirkus 20:548 S 1 '52 40w

"Highly recommended for children from 6-9." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 77:1519 S 15 '52 70w

"A beautiful, gay, very French picture book. Miss Brown has made her own free translation, which is humorous and spirited. She has created such a Master Slyboots as never before has helped to turn a youngest son into a marquis."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt 2, p4 N

16 '52 170w

"The colors, chiefly coral pink, yellow and gray, are brilliantly handled, lush without being in the least vulgar. This effect is one of gaiety and wit. Puss is wily and dashing, according to mood, and the king is as impressive, if not as corpulent, as Louis XIV. The prose, freely translated from Perrault, is flexible, easy-flowing, as lighthearted as the pictures." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p48 O 19 '52 130w

"Exquisite crayon-and-ink illustrations that make use of unusual color harmonies run all over the pages, and the storytelling couldn't be better."

+ New Yorker 28:191 D 6 '52 40w

"It is graceful, clear, and touched with humor. But it is the drawings and their reproduction that make this a memorable picture book. Children who get their first impression of the famous French fairy tale from this artist's work are lucky little people."

+ Sat R 35:47 N 15 '52 140w

Time 60:109 D 8 '52 20w

PERROY, EDOUARD M. J. Hundred years war; tr. by W. B. Wells; with an introd. to the English ed. by David C. Douglas. 376p maps $6 Oxford

944.02 Hundred years' war 52-7078

"The Hundred Years war was a relatively barren stretch of history that produced pageantry and plumed knighthood and romantic figures like Joan of Arc, Henry V and Richard II—and little besides. . . . Professor Perroy is a past-master in sorting out pedigrees, claims to territory, marriage alliances and dynastic feuds. Not being on the periphery, like the English historians, but in the very thick of the feudal turmoil, he has accumulated an amazing amount of detailed material and amply satisfies our modern eagerness to know just what happened in the past. With true French thoroughness he breaks through the feudal facade and reduces events to terms of statistics, logistics, net results and cold finance." Christian Science Monitor

"For teachers and students in American universities a book such as this should excite enthusiasm. It offers in readable form a synthesis of a half century of scholarship with corrections for the older, conventional stereotypes adequately noted. We may hope that from such an attractive presentation as this these corrections will get into future textbooks. . . . We should be grateful to the translator for making this work available to American readers, and to Professor Douglas for his stimulating, interpretive introduction." R. A. Newhall

+ Am Hist R 57:950 J1 '52 650w

"This is in every way a fine book, readable, informing, and fresh in its approach to an old problem." G. C. Boyce

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 29 '52 300w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 3 '52 550w

"More remarkable than the freshness of the detail is the economy and clarity of the whole account. It is extremely difficult in handling such complicated material to keep the focus sharp, to maintain the movement of the narrative and to relate the vicissitudes of war and politics to the slowly changing social and administrative structures of the two countries. M. Perroy has not been completely successful: he is less sure in dealing with the English evidence than with the French and he raises more questions than he can solve. But it is worth considering why he has so largely succeeded. In part it is explained by the admirable firmness and conciseness of his writing, and much of this survives in translation. But it is largely due to the care which he has given to the planning of his book." J. O. Prestwich

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:540 N 10 '51 850w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Story of Texas A and M. 264p il $4 McGraw

378 Texas. Agricultural and mechanical college, College Station 51-12665

"An official history of one of the country's leading agricultural and engineering colleges. . . . An abundance of anecdotes and illustrations keeps the book from being dull. The author has not omitted reference features. The appendix includes a chronology, lists of administrative officers, statistics on enrollment and degrees granted, names of class presidents, valedictorians, football captains, coaches, etc." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 48:166 Ja 15 '52

Kirkus 19:625 O 15 '51 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:13 Ja '52

"Perry has cut a fine pattern for the handling of this sort of work. Except to the researcher or one fanatically interested, the subject could be as dull as an explanation for higher taxes. Yet Perry has told his informal tale in almost uproarious prose, making deft use of anecdotes and color." Lewis Nordyke

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 20 '52 280w

PERTCHIK, BERNARD, il. Flowering trees of the Caribbean. See Flowering trees of the Caribbean

PETERS, ARTHUR ANDERSON. The descent, by Fritz Peters [pseud]. 249p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-13856

This novel opens with a scene in a hospital where doctors and nurses are waiting for the victims of a highway accident. Thereafter the story is concerned with the psychological and emotional reasons which brought each of the eleven to La Bajada (the Descent) on Route 85 in New Mexico on that stormy winter night.

"A morbid sort of tale, leaving an unpleasant taste in the mouth."

Kirkus 20:611 S 15 '52 190w

"The characters are well delineated and are a cross section of the many types of unhappy people to be found in this country. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1810 O 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

New Repub 127:22 D 15 '52 80w

"What 'The Descent' lacks is spontaneous motivation. Without exception the figures of the story are clockwork creatures of the plot.

PETERS, A. A.—Continued

Their insights, however shrewd, sound pre-rehearsed. Their conversational idiom seems too much alike, their stream of consciousness too coldly and too precisely analytic. Mr. Peters manipulates rather than creates his novel, but—it must be admitted—his manipulation can be wonderfully clever. He forges his theme not out of living truths but out of a remarkable intellectual resourcefulness." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 9 '52 800w

"Despite the disjointed presentation, the novel is well worth the reader's patience. There is enough suspense and brilliant analysis here to satisfy anyone familiar with Mr. Peters' earlier outstanding novels, 'The World Next Door' and 'Finistere.'" Siegfried Mandel

+ — N Y Times p50 N 9 '52 350w

"Mr. Peters tries very hard to make this road accident into a moment of blinding revelation for all his characters, but he is not a good writer, and his book is a poor excuse for a novel."

— New Yorker 28:199 N 22 '52 80w

"It must be admitted that 'The Descent' is a shocking experience for the reader, who has to follow the engines of destruction carrying Fritz Peters's characters on the highways to destruction. His terse and often bitter capsule analyses of their natures and their past are not entirely satisfying. . . But aside from these reflections, this is a disturbing and frightening novel. It may, at least, persuade its readers not to drive 'two tons of glass and steel' at seventy miles an hour." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R 35:19 N 22 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 80w

PETERS, FRITZ, pseud. See Peters, A. A.

PETERS, WILLIAM. Blondes die young. 240p $2.50 Dodd

Detective story.

52-12457

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 O 26 '52 140w

"Sole credit in Bill Peters' Blondes Die Young goes to the simplicity, brevity and fast tempo of the telling. Otherwise this museum of banalities (dope, nightclubs, blondes, beds) is chiefly distinguished by a private eye who out-Hammers Hammer by literally praying for opportunities to kill his enemies before they can be arrested." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p27 N 2 '52 30w

"It all seems utterly wearisome, but apparently thousands of readers find their heart's desire in this stuff." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 9 '52 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:43 N 1 '52 20w

PETERSEN, HERMAN. The road. 277p $3 Crowell

52-8849

"A boy, a girl and a buried chest of gold pieces; a swamp with quick sands where fugitives can hide; rustlers and hard work; ingredients enough for a fast moving story. The scene is upstate New York and the time the 1860's." Library J

Kirkus 20:425 J1 15 '52 120w

"The characters are well drawn and the story moves swiftly and easily. It is unfortunate that the author used so many melodramatic incidents to tell his story." M. P. McKay

+ — Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 80w

"In terms of plot this gets impossibly melodramatic. The horrible Hugginses are never given any motivation and, since much of the plot depends upon them, things get pretty preposterous. Hannah has some dimensions as a character and the rural scene is occasionally evoked effectively. Generally in the writing

Mr. Petersen gives indications of capacities far beyond the requirements of this mechanical contrivance in which he has entangled himself."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 5 '52 250w

"'The Road' is a good tale, written with breezy competence. It is consistently interesting and, though seldom truly moving, often gripping." Raymond Holden

+ — N Y Times p12 D 21 '52 240w

Reviewed by S. N. Neal

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 140w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, Miska, ils. Bird in the hand. See Franklin, B.

PETERSON, FLORENCE. American labor unions; what they are and how they work. rev ed 270p il $3.50 Harper

331.88 Trade unions—U.S.

51-11948

"A revised edition of a very valuable work. The history of the labor movement is traced and includes much recent material. The internal organization of the major groups is described, as are the programs of the unions and their relationships with employers. This latter edition includes two new chapters on the international relations of American labor. For reference, there is a complete glossary of labor terms and a valuable directory of all unions, their affiliation and their membership." (Current Hist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1945.

Booklist 48:198 F 15 '52

+ Current Hist 22:229 Ap '52 60w

"A clear and coordinated picture of one of the most important aspects of modern economic life."

+ Kirkus 19:653 N 1 '51 120w

"The new edition of Florence Peterson's book on the American labor movement will fill a large gap in labor literature. . . Recommended for the layman of high school age or above and for the trade unionist." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:439 Mr 1 '52 80w

Management R 41:559 Ag '52 70w

"Impartial and definitive."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:87 Mr '52

PETERSON, SIR MAURICE DRUMMOND.

Both sides of the curtain; an autobiography. 314p il $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs

"Diplomatic memoirs—frank ones for the British tradition—of particular interest for Sir Maurice's observations as Ambassador to Spain (1939-40) and the Soviet Union (1946-49)." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by George Bennet

Canadian Forum 31:44 My '51 490w

"Sir Maurice, to his credit, never attempts to cover up his own mistakes or exaggerate his successes or his influence at the chancelleries. Nor does he conceal his irritation when unceremoniously moved on to make room for a more imposing figure. . . Whether his political wisdom is secure enough to warrant serious attention to his concluding advice—that the Foreign Office must be made over to bring the permanent officials level with the secretary—is again another matter." Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 30 '51 350w

Foreign Affairs 30:165 O '51 20w

"Sir Maurice's last post, from which he retired last year, was Ambassador in Moscow. He gives some interesting sketches of the Soviet leaders, of whom he clearly found Molotov the least sympathetic of an unsympathetic bunch. . . Sir Maurice Peterson has a healthy disrespect for the Foreign Office, which is refreshing and rare in British diplomats." R. F. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 24 '50 500w

"Surely, one says, surely his memoirs cannot fail to be interesting. And, of course, one is right. But no thanks to Sir Maurice. If ever a man tried to write a dull book it is he. Dull, yet not unreadable. For the cold, cliché-ridden style has an atrocious clarity, like stagnant water. . . As one reads on, one's ear seems to catch the faint creak of a boiled shirt against the edge of a writing table. The atmosphere remains strongly Edwardian, but with the charm studiously removed. . . He gives an at times almost lively account of Egypt in the Lloyd George era, and Iraq during the last months of the reign of the crazy young King Ghazi. In both these countries he seems to have had the situation at his finger tips." Maurice Richardson

New Statesman & Nation 40:554 D 2 '50 600w

"All this is narrated agreeably enough with touches of caustic humour, some good anecdotes, and a vivid sense of personal satisfaction. Of the political side of his activities the author does not tell us much, even allowing for the restrictions under which he necessarily laboured. His account of his experiences in Spain and Russia further illustrates the difficulties of doing business in a totalitarian country, where the dictator is inaccessible and the Press under rigid control. There are some interesting sidelights, but no startling revelations." Harold Butler

+ Spec 184:520 N 17 '50 800w

"In the past, memoirs of British ambassadors were sometimes amusing, often insipid, and always cautious. The veil of discretion was seldom lifted. In this respect Sir Maurice Peterson's Both Sides of the Curtain is a departure from tradition, for, while it contains some excellent pen-portraits and does not lack humorous passages, it is critical both of prominent persons and of the past conduct of foreign affairs. As a critic Sir Maurice has impressive qualifications."

Times [London] Lit Sup p704 N 10 '50 800w

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. Wildlife in color; sponsored by the National wildlife federation, Washington, D.C. 191p col il $3 Houghton

574 Natural history—U.S. Natural history—Pictorial works 51-8391

"The gallery of wildlife miniatures started in 1938 by the National Wildlife Federation has become a national institution. Each year thirty-six new paintings of birds, fish, mammals, flowers, and trees are added to this growing collection which is published as poster stamps and distributed by the Federation to support its work. The pictures in this book were painted between the years of 1939 and 1951 by some of America's finest wildlife artists. Here for the first time all of these portraits are gathered together in an integrated volume which presents the magnificent pageantry of outdoor America and tells the story of wildlife conservation." (p. iv) Index.

Booklist 48:140 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 30 '51 140w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:59 Ja 1 '52 50w

"'Wildlife in Color' is designed essentially as a picture book. But it is a great deal more than that. It is an introduction to the outdoors on a broad scale. Because his field guide to the birds has become the bible of the amateur ornithologists, Roger Tory Peterson is associated in the popular mind almost exclusively with birds. He is, in fact, a naturalist of all-around interests and knowledge. Here his scope and background have full play. The nearly 50,000 words of text comprise a trip afield, ranging over the whole continent, with an interesting, pleasant, thoughtful guide." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 13 '52 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 F 17 '52 140w

"Taken as a whole, the pictures and the text combine to provide an excellent approach to the study of natural history and should awaken in every reader an awareness of the interdependence of all forms of wildlife, as well as an appreciation of the need to conserve their habitats. No nature lover can afford to pass it by." L. D. Otis

+ Springfield Republican p6D D 30 '51 330w
Wis Lib Bul 48:30 Ja '52

PETERSON, VIRGIL WALLACE. Barbarians in our midst; a history of Chicago crime and politics; foreword by Estes Kefauver. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 395p $4.50 Little 364.9773 Crime and criminals—Chicago. Corruption (in politics) 52-5871

"The author sums up the incredible history of crime in Chicago. He shows how the growth of crime has kept pace with the phenomenal growth of the city itself, and how politics and crime have meshed in an almost unbelievable web of corruption." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:352 Jl 1 '52

"This book ought to be must reading for every responsible citizen." Lloyd Wendt

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 8 '52 600w

Reviewed by M. K. Gilstrap

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 1 '52 800w

Current Hist 23:128 Ag '52 150w

"Exhaustive, explicit coverage which is serious rather than sensation-mongering in its approach."

+ Kirkus 20:253 Ap 1 '52 160w

"Though crowded with names and events, the book merits careful reading. Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 77:1195 Jl '52 140w

Nation 175:218 S 13 '52 50w

Reviewed by Luke Carroll

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 30 '52 200w

"The consistent readability of this volume by the operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission is matched by its forthrightness. But the whole leaves this reader unable to share either the author's concept of the underworld as a kingdom alien to our own, or his unflinching faith in the uses of a plain-clothes-detail philosophy toward its conquest." Nelson Algren

N Y Times p19 Jl 27 '52 460w

"This book is the best on its subject. Here, boiled down, are the thirty-year files of the Crime Commission. In one sense, the book is a monument to the Commission's work. It will be useful for years to come to students of the subject. There is little new information in it—but the information takes on new meaning because Mr. Peterson has knit together the multitudinous scattered facts." J. B. Martin

+ Sat R 35:13 Je 28 '52 700w

PETRACCA, JOSEPH. Come back to Sorrento. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 220p $3 Little

52-9781

"Tells the story of the Espositos. Papa works on the Brooklyn docks and saves his money in a boot so he can go back to Sorrento and buy land for an olive grove . . . that is, before he meets Mama and falls a victim to her lasagna and her eloquent desire to stay in America. His chances of returning to Italy become slimmer after their marriage for first there is Mama's father, Nonno, to be taken care of and then the babies begin coming, five of them, one at a time. Papa ends by taking out his first citizenship papers in order to vote for Al Smith, a fellow Catholic." Kirkus

Booklist 49:105 N 15 '52

"Full of homey, and homely, little incidents and domestic chaos, this mirrors believable people in all their excitements, adjustments, early loneliness and eventual adoption in pleasant fashion."

+ Kirkus 20:569 S 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by C. J. Roth

Library J 77:1656 O 1 '52 70w

PETRACCA, JOSEPH—Continued

"This is a series of stories without much continuity. The theme of Papa's reluctant Americanization might have been the thread on which the stories could be strung. But it is neglected in the miscellaneous, pleasant but extremely minor memories which the author recalls."

+ N Y Herald Tribune p36 O 12 '52 300w

"Of the numerous 'Mama and Papa' reminiscences that have appeared recently in novel form, this, surely, is one of the liveliest. Mr. Petracca has obviously contributed much to the fun by dipping liberally in his own imagination, by his skillful use of the garlic-flavored Italian-American vernacular, and his ability to wrap up an incident in a neat little package."

Robert Knittel

+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '52 210w

"Mr. Petracca, a clattering and not very good writer, tells of the marriage of the Espositos. . . The story consists mainly of a series of anecdotes stretched to their utmost and too strained to be genuinely funny."

— New Yorker 28:188 N 29 '52 60w

"These well-made anecdotes of Patsy Esposito . . . are always touching or mildly amusing. . . In his search for a folksy charm, too often the author has converted his people into comic opera Italians. Only occasionally is something less stock allowed to break through."

No doubt the approach Joseph Petracca has taken seemed to him the safe and well-trodden way, but it has played him false if he wanted to do more than add to the comic patronizing literature of first-generation families before Americanization has gone very far." D. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 9 '52 230w

PETRE, DIANA. Portrait of Mellie. 246p $2.75
Pantheon bks.

52-9278

Character study of a completely selfish English woman. Brought up by a doting artist father, she grows to hate him and her mother too. She marries the first man she meets, a wealthy young man whose portrait her father had been painting. The husband, whom she did not love, was killed in the first World war, and Mellie, abandoning her two children to a paid housekeeper, wandered about Europe, enjoying her beautiful clothes and little else.

"Embedded in this melange are some arresting character sketches of minor figures. . . There are also some interesting observations. . . Miss Petre is advertised as dedicated to her writing and enabled to devote herself to it 'through the generosity of one of her co-workers.' This is her first novel. If not precisely Jamesian, it seems at least a sound investment for the anonymous co-worker, and we should like to see what further endorsement brings forth. When the author gets a tighter rein on her talent, she may produce something of importance." Jean Holzhauer

Commonweal 56:515 Ag 29 '52 450w

"The penny dreadful for lower class rentals only."

— Kirkus 20:421 JI 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 175:215 S 13 '52 120w

"Mellie is the epitome of the brainless, self-obsessed woman whose every thought is for her own looks and ease. Diana Petre builds up her portrait with many subtle and telling strokes, but the final product is too much of a piece to be wholly convincing. . . Miss Petre writes with distinction and this, her first novel, is in its way a tour de force. She seems clearly a serious writer whose further work will be worth watching, with the hope that it will be more deeply rooted in common experience."

Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 24 '52 650w

"Neither Miss Petre's deft prose nor her detached and impartial attitude toward her personages is able to rescue a well-delivered first novel from its inevitable hackneyed outcome."

L. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 S 14 '52 250w

"This is one of those tight, taut, and intense little studies in improbable psychological horror that recurrently appears on the literary scene. As usual it is so well done that you wonder why the author didn't find better employment for time and talents."

— + Sat R 35:12 Ag 30 '52 160w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p11C O 12 '52 140w

PEVSNER, NIKOLAUS. High Victorian design; a study of the exhibits of 1851. 162p il $2.75 British bk. centre

745 Art industries and trade, London. Great exhibition of the works of industry of all nations, 1851. Crystal palace, Hyde Park [51-14251]

"A retrospective, nostalgic view of fads and follies brought together under the high glass dome of the Crystal Palace just a hundred years ago. Gutta percha, papier maché canopies, a double grand piano, a patent omnibus with all the seats dos a dos, furniture of strange tortured shapes, objects made of zinc, of silver, of iron, toast racks, and textiles admired then—amusing and amazing now." Library J

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:596 Ap 1 '52 90w

"Many will find this an interesting but oversimplified and, in the absence of Teutonic parallels, an over-anglicised explanation."

Lawrence Haward

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 31 '51 320w

"Well written and presented, without undue irony."

+ New Repub 125:20 D 10 '51 50w

Reviewed by R. L. Howell

Sat R 35:34 My 3 '52 380w

"Dr. Pevsner does not write a very confident English, but his critical and explanatory observations are just and illuminating. He shows perspicacity in describing the significance of the mid-Victorian bulge, though an analysis of style is not the same thing as an analysis of taste." C. E. V.

Spec 187:488 O 12 '51 350w

"It is a valuable though inconclusive book, copiously illustrated and very pleasingly bound."

Times [London] Lit Sup p496 Ag 10 '51 1050w

PHARES, ROSS. Cavalier in the wilderness; the story of the explorer and trader Louis Juchereau de St Denis. 276p il $3.50 La. state univ. press

B or 92 St Denis, Louis Juchereau de. Louisiana—History 52-7747

Biography of a French business man who was an influential figure in the life of the Texas-Louisiana frontier in the early years of the eighteenth century. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:377 JI 15 '52

"Beautiful writing, sound research, and skillful, unobtrusive documentation will make this a satisfying volume to scholar and layman. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R 35:55 O 4 '52 140w

"Based on nearly two decades of research, this well-written book is likely to appeal more to the general reader than to the scholar because, in the interest of saving space, specific references to the manuscript and printed sources have been omitted."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:238 S '52 200w

PHASE transformations in solids; symposium held at Cornell university, August 23-26, 1948; editorial committee, R. Smoluchowski, chairman; sponsored by the Committee on solids, Division of physical sciences, the National research council. 660p il $9.50 Wiley

541.36 Phase rule and equilibrium. Solids. 51-13368

"The purpose of the symposium reported here was to bring together scientists who had a common interest in the fundamental phenomena of phase changes in solids, particularly as these are evidenced in their various fields of specialization, including chemistry, physics, metallurgy, crystallography, ceramics, and glass." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Although the book was three years in press, it is still the most recent and authoritative book in the field. The book is stimulating because it clearly shows that present phase transformation theory is in its infancy; hence, much more work, both theoretical and guided experimental, remains to be done. The great diversity of the backgrounds of those participating makes the book difficult to read, for it is hard to find the common outlook which ought to hold these papers together. . . In summary, the papers are individually good and well written but there is little coherence about the work as a whole. The book conveys accurately the present status of this field." J. S. Koehler

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:1873 Ap 5 '52 480w

"This book is a boon to scientists in various fields who have not had time to follow recent developments in the field of phase transformations." W. L. Fink

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1232 Mr 24 '52 290w

"One announced objective of the symposium was to stimulate progress toward an understanding of the transformations by bringing together outstanding people from the diverse fields of chemistry, physics, metallurgy and crystallography. As such it was eminently successful, and a tangible result is this outstanding publication." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem Eng 59:334 Ja '52 170w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:827 My 15 '52 30w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:427 D '51 200w

PHILBRICK, HERBERT ARTHUR. I led 3 lives; citizen, communist, counterspy. 323p il $3.50 McGraw

335.4 Communism—U.S. 52-5944

"The now-it-can-be told story of Herbert Philbrick, 'Citizen, Communist, Counterspy', who testified before Judge Medina against The Eleven after nine years of conspiracy, uncertainty, and deliberate penetration into the Communist Party." (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 189:83 Mr '52 320w

Booklist 48:208 Mr 1 '52

+ Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 40w

Reviewed by A. Andras

Canadian Forum 32:20 Ap '52 290w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 17 '52 550w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 7 '52 900w

"The country owes a deep debt of gratitude to Herbert A. Philbrick and others like him, men who volunteered their services, energy, time and intelligence to the government in its efforts to contain a tough and dangerous enemy." Donald McDonald

+ Commonweal 55:524 F 29 '52 480w

Foreign Affairs 30:676 J1 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:20 Ja 1 '52 240w

"An extremely important exposé of Communist strategy. Should be featured by every library." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:209 F 1 '52 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 8 '52 50w

Reviewed by Michael Straight

New Repub 126:22 Mr 24 '52 200w

"The full measure of Mr. Philbrick's contribution can only be appreciated by a thoughtful study of his absorbingly interesting book. The adventure-story part is all very well: it is fascinating to read. But the real significance lies in the clarification it brings to Communist purposes and achievements through indirect infiltration." E. B. Canham

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 F 3 '52 1600w

"It is a dour tale, and the pedestrian, unrelieved style in which it is written is appropriate. There are no bright moments in a Communist's existence, the reader would judge, so that no brightness can be employed in writing about it. The author is always in deadly earnest. He regards the Communist party as a lively menace to our national life. . . . As a handbook of danger signals and means of recognition, this volume has its value." H. B. Hinton

N Y Times p6 F 3 '52 650w

"One of the most remarkable aspects of the book is the underlying fact, never actually discussed, that the author was able to endure an assignment that would have split a lesser man's personality, as well as his waking hours, three ways."

+ New Yorker 28:93 Mr 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Oliver Pilat

Sat R 35:22 F 16 '52 750w

Time 59:102 F 11 '52 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:239 S '52 140w

PHILBROOK, CLEMENT E. Hickory wings. 177p $2.50 Macmillan

51-13735

Story of two boys, Steve and Vic, who vie for head of the Ski Patrol at Timberline Academy. Steve is the captain of the team and a good sportsman; Vic is more used to buying his way. Good sportsmanship finally wins over Vic too.

Booklist 48:200 F 15 '52

Kirkus 19:443 Ag 15 '51 90w

"For skiing enthusiasts." R. M. McEvoy

Library J 77:67 Ja 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 17 '52 90w

"To some readers Steve may seem too nearly perfect, but he is always likeable and he brings about a change in Vic's attitude quite realistically." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p11 D 23 '51 120w

Springf'd Republican p8C D 16 '51 70w

PHILBY, HARRY ST JOHN BRIDGER. Arabian highlands; published for the Middle East inst, Washington, D.C. 771p il maps $8.50 Cornell univ. press

953 Arabia—Description and travel 52-7239

"Author is a well known British explorer. A friend and adviser of King Ibn Saud, as well as a convert to Islam, he had many opportunities for travel and exploration in a land seldom visited by Europeans in the last 1,400 years. This book is concerned with his march of 700 miles from the Rub'al Khali across the Wadi Dawasir district to Mecca." (Library J) Index.

Foreign Affairs 30:682 J1 '52 20w

"Philby is a geographer and a naturalist, and writes brilliantly. His work will appeal to the specialist and to the general reader with a special interest in Arabian travel and exploration." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 76:2001 D 1 '51 180w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 14 '52 130w

"The narrative of such a journey must perforce, if it is accurate and sincere, partake of something of the harsh monotony of the actual experience, the more so because this was no casual adventure of an eccentric Englishman but an official expedition with political and scientific objectives. Brevity is sacrificed to exactness, and if the reader sometimes tires he will the more sympathize with the courageous explorer who was often weary. The book was finished so long ago as 1944; footnotes bring it up to date where crucial changes have since occurred." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 6 '52 1250w

PHILBY, H. S. B.—Continued

Reviewed by Farnsworth Fowle

N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '52 450w

"Not all of Philby's incidental judgments can be accepted without challenge. His belief that the Phoenicians were cradled in the south-western cities of ancient Arabia has little sound evidence to support it. On the other hand, when he asserts that good Syrian cooking is the best in the world, he is on safer ground, inasmuch as a point of taste is not normally open to dispute. Its inherent merits aside, the book before us commends itself for two further reasons. One is that it constitutes a record which was taken down on the eve of the penetration of the country by the motorcar. The land will not change appreciably, to be sure, but the people are not likely to remain the same much longer. The other reason is intimately related to the author. For all his own robustness, Philby stands for a type that would seem to be nearing extinction." E. A. Speiser

+ Yale R n s 41:620 summer '52 700w

PHILIPSON, WILLIAM RAYMOND. Immaculate forest. 223p il maps $4.50 Philosophical lib.

986.1 [918.61] Colombia—Description and travel [52-2970]

An account of the adventures of two British scientists who set out to explore a range of mountains, unexplored and uninhabited even by Indians, in the remote jungles of Central Colombia at the headwaters of the Amazon.

"The story of the travels is simply and modestly told; and the book will interest those who enjoy travel literature. It will help its readers to understand some of the purposes of exploration, and it makes clear the limitations of aerial mapping." T. W. Freeman

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 3 '52 250w

"The descriptions are vivid and precise, with interesting asides on many animals that are never seen in inhabited areas. Though the writing is sober we are taken from our seemingly safe brickland habitat and realise that we are men living in a natural order."

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:168 Ag 9 '52 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Ag 1 '52 700w

PHILLIPS, ALEXANDRA. Blessing of the hounds. 316p $3.50 Dutton

52-7793

A story of a small, isolated community in the Virginia hills, noted for its three Hunt Clubs. The chief characters are a girl belonging to the hunting, poverty-stricken native aristocrats, and a northern journalist who visits the town and falls in love with it and the girl.

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 4 '52 160w

Kirkus 20:329 Je 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 77:1193 Jl '52 100w

"Her melodramatic flash flood ending emphasizes the contrived character of her efforts to concern us with the fate of some fairly superficial people. The smooth grace of her writing and her undoubted skill in depicting secondary characters do not quite make up for this serious flaw." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 28 '52 150w

"The author knows her regional background but her characters are glib performers who fail to make their problems matter or their emotions seem real." Andrea Farke

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '52 160w

"The part that High Meadows plays in the solution of Fritz's conflict is told with perception. For many readers, Miss Phillips' well-stored mind and her understanding of the process of individual growth will more than compensate for the lagging of the romantic interest in her novel." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 21 '52 200w

Sat R 35:30 Ag 30 '52 190w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 110w

PHILLIPS, JAMES ATLEE. Pagoda. 165p $2.75 Macmillan

51-14185

"A thriller set in Hong Kong and Rangoon and concerned with the operations of a commercial air firm under contract to the Siamese government." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 19:498 S 1 '51 150w

"Mr. Phillips hasn't so much plotted [the story] as thrown it at the reader, but the tempo is so swift, the prose so serviceable and the incidents so electric that this doesn't seem to matter. The same qualities make passing clichés of character and situation more effective than they've been in some time. For a crate punched full of holes this one stays in the air amazingly. Good pilot, Mr. P." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 18 '51 180w

"I find the [book] as coldly uninteresting as it is objectively skillful." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p50 N 18 '51 90w

"Smooth job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 30w

Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 80w

PHILLIPS, THOMAS HAL. Search for a hero. 312p $3 Rinehart

52-6805

Story of a young boy's search for self-realization. The youngest of three brothers, his childhood is overshadowed by the greater acclaim accorded the football prowess of his older brothers, until finally he enlists in the navy, and after training and a brief service, is wounded and returns to his small home town in Mississippi, "a kind of a hero".

Booklist 48:298 My 15 '52

"Dullish."

Kirkus 19:709 D 15 '51 180w

"There is little humor in this study of values and perhaps too much truth of the kind that makes one wonder what is really worth while. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:210 F 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 N 7 '52 110w

"Search for a Hero is an odd, serious and enjoyable novel which gives off a strong smell of talent. The author is at his best when his characters are at home, but his account of Navy life rings true, is unassuming, sometimes funny and occasionally moving. And Don's girl, Meb, who is half-French, and who in the end kills herself when Don is wrongly reported dead, gives a strong impression of personality, the personality of an unusual and talented girl." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:582 N 15 '52 320w

"In each of his three very accomplished novels Mr. Phillips has moved steadily toward more basic and universal concerns. The theme of his first novel, though handled with restraint, was a sensational one. His second drew much of its special interest from its consideration of the impact of primitive religion. In 'Search for a Hero' Mr. Phillips essays the timeless subject of a young man's journey into self-knowledge. . . Mr. Phillips is a young novelist whose achievement is already substantial. But one has the feeling that even with this excellent third novel he is yet only on the threshold of what will be a very notable career." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 17 '52 600w

"A crafty sense of timing, a sure ear for dialogue, and a mastery of human motives fly like triple ensigns from the mast of Phillips' fine novel. If, toward the end, the ghosts of the lost, likable characters who walked through Don's childhood sometimes trouble the book as much as they do him, that is a minor failing in a story that sees its South through the eyes of a tender enlightenment and its heroism without toughness or tears." Robert Lowry

+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '52 700w

New Yorker 28:118 Mr 15 '52 50w

"This is Hal Phillips's best written and most expertly constructed novel. The scenes in the Navy have flavor without filth, an ironic humor without bitterness. His writing is subtle, yet contains none of the mannerisms to which many young writers are prone." C. N. Govan

+ Sat R 35:31 Mr 29 '52 330w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 189:710 N 21 '52 400w

Spring'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 100w

"At 29, Author Phillips knows how to work a vein of quiet realism for sense rather than sensation. Search for a Hero is his third novel, and though it may not be as engrossing as The Golden Lie, it shows an unusual gift for entering the lives of ordinary people. It is clearly the work of a writer who couldn't fake if he tried."

+ Time 59:102 F 25 '52 170w

PHILPOT, OLIVER L. S. Stolen journey: line drawings by Ronald Searle; maps by A. Spark. 448p $4.50 Dutton

940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German 52-10061

"Mr. Philpot, an R.A.F. pilot during the war, was shot down in Norwegian waters in 1941 and spent two years in various oflags and stalags in Germany before he broke free. This book tells how he got away. He was one of the three men at Stalag Luft III who concealed the hatch of an escape tunnel under an innocent-looking wooden vaulting horse. (Eric Williams, who commemorated the event in 'The Wooden Horse' and 'The Tunnel,' was another.)" New Yorker

Bookmark 12:51 D '52 30w

Kirkus 20:442 Jl 15 '52 200w

"This book jars and grates and harrasses, all for different reasons, yet for all that it is a good book and worth the buying." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 70w

Nation 175:500 N 29 '52 90w

"Oliver Philpot's chronicle is, if anything, even more exciting than its predecessor." L. L. Engelking

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 5 '52 420w

"This is one of the most exciting tales of the war, and an excellent manual on deception, dissembling, and forgery. It suggests that when honest, intelligent men conspire to deceive, they are far more efficient at it than crooks."

+ New Yorker 28:154 O 25 '52 100w

"Though the details of prison-camp life are fascinating, and though the story of the tunneling itself will keep the most blasé reader interested, what will really make you hold your breath is the picture Philpot gives you of himself, disguised as a foreigner, making his way through Germany to the neutral ship. You'd go a long way to find any suspense fiction that could touch this narrative of simple fact." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 12 '52 800w

PICARD, MAX. Flight from God; with a note on Max Picard by Gabriel Marcel and an introd. by J. M. Cameron [tr. by Marianne Kuschnitzky and J. M. Cameron]. (Humanist lib) 185p $2.50 Regnery

201 God. Faith 52-6245

"The 'flight' is simply the falling away of mankind from God. Yet God, like Francis Thompson's 'Hound of Heaven,' is the Pursuer, and if a man stumbles in the flight, God is likely to pick him up. But the flight is so attractive and compelling in a myriad of ways pictured in these brief chapters, that man really does not want to be saved. The flight is described in highly imaginative language, and perhaps the reader will be helped if he reads the chapter entitled 'Language' before he tries to understand the opening chapter." Christian Century

"Most of the book is meaningless to [the reviewer]. Picard may be a genius who suffers in translation, but it is the poetic and impressionistic writing which leaves most passages in obscurity." R. C. Miller

Christian Century 69:557 My 7 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. M. Oesterreicher

+ Commonweal 56:51 Ap 18 '52 1050w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 19 '51 70w

PICTURE encyclopedia; 24,000 illustrations arranged in special groups for ready reference [ed. by William Sunners]. 162p $25 Res. bk.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 50-58260

"According to the publisher's advertising, the Picture Encyclopedia is the 'largest work of its kind ever published in the United States. Over 24,000 pictures arranged by subjects. A companion piece to the Unabridged Dictionary.' . . . That the volume under review is intended for the puzzle contestant is obvious from the advertising. . . . The work is made up of 162 pages of small pictures, arranged in 24 classifications. . . . The sources of the pictures are not indicated." Subscription Bks Bul

"Practically a must for the army of puzzle contestants."

+ Kirkus 19:150 Mr 1 '51 90w

"The Picture Encyclopedia appears to have been put together in a hasty and illogical manner. Although there is a table of contents, the classifications listed there do not appear as running heads nor at the beginning of sections in the work. . . . Not only are the classifications confused, but there is no apparent order within them; like objects are often widely separated within the same section. . . . The Picture Encyclopedia will undoubtedly be in demand by puzzle fans, and its use might spare the unabridged dictionary some wear. However, because of its poor organization, poor reproductions, weak format and binding, and excessive price, it is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 22:80 O '51 1050w

PIEPER, JOSEF. Leisure, the basis of culture: tr. by Alexander Dru, with an introd. by T. S. Eliot. 169p $2.75 Pantheon bks.

179 Leisure, Cultus 52-6702

Contains two essays: Leisure, the basis of culture, and The philosophical act. "These two essays were published separately in Germany, the second having been originally written in the form of lectures, given in Bonn in the summer of 1947. They are intimately connected and properly belong together. This is not only true in the sense that they were both written in the same summer, in a single breath, so to say; they both spring from the same thought. Their common origin or foundation might be stated in the following words: Culture depends for its very existence on leisure, and leisure, in its turn, is not possible unless it has a durable and consequently living link with the cultus, with divine worship." (Author's pref) The author is a German Catholic philosopher.

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 13 '52 320w

"A profound and rich book." W. P. Clancy

+ Commonweal 56:18 Ap 11 '52 1450w

"The book leaves the reader both stimulated and unsatisfied, for while the author is often an excellent critic when pointing out the cultural failures of modern society in the West, he is less happy in his ideas about the dependence of culture and philosophy upon religion and theology—at least to a reader who does not share his religious convictions." C. F. Hovde

+ — Nation 175:362 O 18 '52 750w

PIEPER, JOSEF—Continued

Reviewed by Guy Hunter

New Statesman & Nation 43:410 Ap 5 '52 650w

"Small but profound book." Allen Tate
N Y Times p12 F 24 '52 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 16 '52 80w

"These two short essays by a contemporary German philosopher go a long way towards a lucid explanation of the present crisis in civilization. . . . The first essay in this little book should be read by anyone—and young people in particular—anxious to come to some conclusions about the nature of society." J. M. C.
+ Spec 188:726 My 30 '52 230w

"[The essays] are written with a winning simplicity and clarity which Dr. Dru has ably reproduced, so that, by the unprejudiced at least, they will not be denied a hearing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p85 F 1 '52 800w

PIERCY, MRS CAROLINE BEHLEN. Valley of God's pleasure. 247p il $3.75 Stratford house

289.8 Shakers. Shaker Heights, Ohio 51-13140

The history of the North Union Shaker community of Cleveland, Ohio. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder

Churchman 166:17 Mr 1 '52 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

"Mrs. Piercy pictures the life of these people, whose belief that the millennium had already begun filled the life of the spirit with the fullness of earth. Indeed, her style and mode of presentation have something of the unpretentiousness and simplicity which so typically characterized the lives of the Shakers."

+ J Religion 32:147 Ap '52 270w

PIERSON, GEORGE WILSON. Yale college; an educational history, 1871-1921 [a publication issued on the occasion of Yale's 250th anniversary]. (Yale: College and university, 1871-1937, v 1) 773p il $6 Yale univ. press

378 Yale university 52-5356

The first volume of a projected history intended to illuminate the whole field of American higher education in its most critical years. The years covered in this study of Yale are from 1871 to 1921, during which the college became a modern self-governing university. Index.

"Mr. Pierson, who has taught history at Yale since his undergraduate days and now holds the Larned Professorship, plans eventually to extend his 'educational history' to the eve of World War II. He writes with candor and charm and a modicum of professorial repetitiveness. In a branch of letters abounding in apocrypha, his chronicle well merits the canon." J. K. Bettersworth

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 20 '52 450w

"For its abundance of lore and anecdotes about the college and campus immortals of another era, Professor Pierson's book will afford hours of delightful reading to any Yale man, from the oldest living graduate to the member of the class of '52. In a less personal sense, educators everywhere will find it an illuminating and rewarding study of the evolution of one of the world's greatest universities." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '52 180w

"Accepting his task in high seriousness, Professor Pierson has made in his history of Yale College a most notable contribution to the literature of American culture." H. N. MacCracken

+ Sat R 35:18 J1 26 '52 1000w

School & Society 75:173 Mr 15 '52 60w

"Both comprehensive and scholarly history, the volume is enlivened with many anecdotes and sketches of personalities. The text is supported by a bibliography, chapter notes, and tables. Students of higher education interested in the development of high standards in the undergraduate college in curriculum reform, honors programs, and in teachers and teaching will find the volume indispensable."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:150 Je '52 230w

"To the alumnus who knew and loved the Yale College of President Dwight, with her solidarity of life and thought and the devout figures of her faculty, this book records a sorry deterioration. To see profound scholars and brilliant teachers, like Thomas Day Seymour and Bernadotte Perrin, battling against an intrusive arrogant barbarism insistent that the rich strain of culture to which they had devoted themselves was useless in the America of that day and the next, is a tragic spectacle. But set the story Professor Pierson tells against the backdrop of the raucous and opulent society outside Yale's walls, and it becomes a noble struggle for the maintenance of a spiritual education in the face of a devouring materialism." H. S. Coffin

+ Yale R n s 41:614 summer '52 750w

PIGORS, PAUL JOHN WILLIAM, and MYERS, CHARLES ANDREW, eds. Readings in personnel administration. 483p $4.50 McGraw

658.3 Employment management 51-12639

"A selection of 47 writings by 43 authors which have appeared within the last few years, reprinted mainly from business and personnel magazines, some few abstracted from books or pamphlets. The selections are each sufficiently substantial to fairly develop a point of view, and are woven into a line of thinking roughly corresponding to that of the authors' book Personnel Administration [Book Review Digest 1948]." Library J

"A useful compilation that should be generally welcomed by personnel men as well as by students and teachers." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:600 Ap 1 '52 110w

"This is a book which the active personnel executive would do well to read thoroughly and then keep available for reference and thought stimulation. The general executive can select much from the book that is genuinely helpful in the development of executive talent. In selecting the best writings from the field of personnel administration, the authors employ an approach that might well be more widely used in other fields of management." Marvin Bower

+ Management R 41:545 Ag '52 550w

Sat R 35:53 Ja 19 '52 20w

PIKE, JAMES ALBERT, and PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN. Faith of the church; with the editorial collaboration of Arthur C. Lichtenberger, and with the assistance of the authors' committee of the Department of Christian education. (Church's teaching, v3) 214p $1.50 Nat. council Protestant Episcopal church, Church Missions House, 281 4th av, N.Y. 10

230.3 Theology. Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A. 51-13489

"This third volume in a series on 'The Church's Teaching' brings to members of the Episcopal Church and others a clear statement of the content, the meaning and the method of the Christian faith as summarized in the historic Christian Creeds. In explaining the sections of the Creed, the authors are guided by four underlying principles of Anglican theology: the primacy of 'The saving acts of God recorded in the Holy Scriptures,' the interpretations of the ancient fathers or tradition, the contribution of individual religious experience and the use and value of human reason." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"Exceedingly important and significant book. . . [It] will make it possible for Episcopalians to be Episcopalian in their thinking as well as in their ways of worship, and will enable them as well as their non-Episcopalian brethren to evaluate Episcopalianism with greater theological assurance than has been possible heretofore." J. M. Malloch

+ Christian Century 68:1410 D 5 '51 750w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p29 Ja 13 '52 190w

PILAT, OLIVER RAMSAY. Atom spies. 312p
$3.50 Putnam

364.13 [351.74] Spies 52-5280

"An exhaustive account of how the Communist spy network succeeded, with disturbing ease, in relieving the United States of the biggest military secret in history. It is a complicated story, dealing not only with the machinations of the spies but also with their motives. . . . Mr. Pilat focusses attention on this ideological aspect of the case, and on the clear and continuing danger of having among us an amorphous group of people who can be persuaded at any time to betray their country for what they are told are super-patriotic reasons." New Yorker

Reviewed by T. L. Rettger
Chem & Eng N 30:3764 S 8 '52 200w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 25 '52
360w

Foreign Affairs 31:151 O '52 30w
Nation 175:76 J1 26 '52 90w

"The story of atomic spying in the United States is an enormously intricate one. Mr. Pilat has struggled bravely, but not entirely successfully to organize it. His book opens with the Greenglass-Rosenberg story, then leaves it in suspension until the closing chapters, when he finishes it. In the middle chapters Mr. Pilat sometimes bogs the reader down in the morass of strange names and strange deeds." Marcus Duffield

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 22 '52
550w

New Yorker 28:140 My 10 '52 120w

"Mr. Pilat's book deserves praise, not only for the research which obviously went into it, but for the care and understanding with which it describes the background and motivation of the various agents, consisting usually of poverty, frustration, and misfortune, and the ultimate finding in Communism of a sense of psychological fulfillment. I commend this book to the attention of the junior Senator from Wisconsin and his supporters." H. C. Hinton

+ Sat R 35:39 Je 21 '52 550w
Springf'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52
150w

PILCHIK, ELY EMANUEL. Hillel; the book against the sword; wood engravings by Ilya
Schor. 127p $2.50 Schuman

B or 92 Hillel, the elder 51-6986

Rabbi Hillel, one of the greatest of the interpreters of the Torah, was a contemporary of Jesus of Nazareth. This is the first biographical study of Hillel in English. The text is a mixture of fiction and fact.

"The author has produced a biographical novel of historical realism and appealing romanticism. The 126 pages will fascinate young and old, Christian and Jew." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 166:14 My 15 '52 50w
Kirkus 19:419 Ag 1 '51 90w

"Written in an easy style, his little book is well suited for young readers as well as adults." Philip Rubin

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 6 '52 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p34 N 4 '51
150w

"The writing is generally stilted, and, as usual in such cases, one doesn't know where legend ends and fact begins. The wood engravings by Ilya Schor are in his now-familiar style enhancing the attractiveness of the book." H. U. Ribalow

Sat R 35:50 Ap 12 '52 270w

PILPEL, HARRIET F., and ZAVIN, THEODORA. Your marriage and the law. 358p
$3.95; text ed $3 Rinehart

301.422 [392.5] Marriage law. Divorce
52-5565

"In a nonlegalistic style, two prominent Portias review the various American State and Federal laws regarding marriage and family relationships, but do not intend that their book should substitute for legal advice. The 21 chapters encompass engagement, personal and property sides of marriage, illegitimacy, artificial insemination, parents and children, adoption, wills, birth control, abortion, sterilization, sex and criminal law, separation, annulment, and divorce." Library J

Booklist 49:60 O 15 '52

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 5 '52
50w

"There's some fascinating material here, from authentic records, which is sobering too." + Kirkus 20:443 J1 15 '52 110w

"Fascinating reading for civic-minded laymen and vital information for all categories of marriage counselors. Closed-shelf circulation." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 120w
+ Nation 175:365 O 18 '52 30w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO (ALBERTO MORAVIA, pseud). Fancy dress party; tr. by Angus Davidson. 299p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-11469

A novel of satire and intrigue, the scene of which is an unnamed fascist state. Among the characters are the dictator of the country, a member of the aristocracy who gives a fancy dress party, and the beautiful but faithless woman whom the dictator is, at the moment, pursuing.

"This novel is one of Moravia's minor works—but a minor work by one of Europe's best novelists. Within the operatic story, a keen eye and a shrewd mind are at work." C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:86 Ag '52 320w

"One effervescent critic once called Moravia 'one of the best writers in the world today,' a dictum with which this reviewer is not sure she agrees. That he is an unusually skilled one there is no question, but many readers who are less interested in how a book is written than in what it is about will find the people and the actions he writes about uncongenial. 'The Fancy Dress Party' over-lays lasciviousness with satire." Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 27 '52
400w

"For my money it was too bad the bombs weren't real and the whole household disposed of. Bedroom scenes and rolls in the hay embroder the phoney politics. Definitely not for Public Libraries."

— Kirkus 20:327 Je 1 '52 230w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

Library J 77:1012 Je 1 '52 90w

"Tragicomedy or comic tragedy, 'The Fancy Dress Party' is rewarding regardless for the mature and Moravia writes for no other class of reader. The translation by Angus Davidson reads very smoothly." T. G. Bergin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 J1 27 '52
750w

"Except as entertainment, as a mocking comment on loutishness, rascality and corruption, 'The Fancy Dress Party' is no match for the later works of the mature Moravia which reached this country first. Nevertheless, the gift for incandescent description and untroubled ironic utterances are well in hand, and in the midst of all the malevolence and the fury, there are many sharp, shapely, acid asides." A. S. Morris

+ — N Y Times p5 J1 27 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 4 '52
500w

"In 'The Fancy Dress Party' confusion is twice confounded; if it hints at some meaning concealed beneath its ambiguity, this reader, after seeking for it diligently, has failed to discover it. It is difficult to know whether it is fantasy, political satire, or ironic entertainment or what was the author's purpose in inventing the complex conspiracy around which his char-

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO—Continued
 actors revolved against a background as unreal and rococo as a seventeenth-century comedy." Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:9 J1 26 '52 550w

"As opéra bouffe, the novel is first-rate. Tereso swaggers in appropriate blockhead style; Fausta's romances, high and low, are drawn with Moravia's usual skill for capturing the flavors of sensuality. . . . As satire, the book fails. The true satirist's fierce involvement seems to be missing. Stendhal, despite his air of urbane weariness, kept scoring points against Bourbonism. Moravia seems to write from no particular point of view at all."

+ — Time 60:100 J1 14 '52 350w

PINCHOT, BEN, and PINCHOT, ANN. Hagar.
 345p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

52-11741

The Connecticut town of Belpot was about to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the founding of its one industry: the Blair clock firm. Interest was centered in Constant Blair, great-granddaughter of the patrician Blairs, and Hagar, descendant of the no-good side of the family. The odds seemed against Constant, until tragedy opened the way for a peaceful settlement of old scores.

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 24 '52
 230w

"The story has great possibilities latent in the personalities and situations involved. But the devious and oblique way of telling the story, starting with today, and the centennial of the Clockworks, and picking up the pieces of the past in a kind of counterpoint, until it comes full circle, I found difficult and frequently annoying. Nonetheless, many readers will overlook this defect for the sake of a story that strikes many familiar chords."

+ — Kirkus 20:285 My 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by H. R. Forbes

Library J 77:1074 Je 15 '52 50w

"The rather clumsy construction and the uniformity with which vice and virtue are ranged on the respective sides of the contest keep the novel from having an appeal it might have had as the story of a conflict between individuals or of the relation of a family to a one-industry town. On the other hand, the Pinchots are interested and acute observers of the southwestern tip of Connecticut, in which they also make their home. 'Hagar' has more interest as a picture of a place and time than as a portrait of the unscrupulous baggage who provides its title." David Tilden

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 3 '52
 500w

"Maybe if the authors had chosen to stay close to Hagar all the way, they'd have written a more readable novel. Instead they trot all over town sketching in just about everybody's life, and musing over the slow death of Connecticut's peaceful one-factory, one-family towns. Constant Cousin Connie turns up now and then to mope through her role as heroine. But frankly, reader, she's a bore." Robert Lowry

+ — N Y Times p29 S 7 '52 310w

"Connie is as fair a heroine as Hagar is an unfair villain. She is also, due to requirements of the plot, somewhat vapid if not downright stupid. . . . The Pinchots are more successful with the details of Connecticut small-city life and with the period touches which recall the Thirties and Forties. They didn't have to stack their cards quite so much in favor of the good."

+ — Sat R 35:37 Ag 23 '52 120w

PINCKNEY, JOSEPHINE. My son and foe.
 250p $3 Viking

52-6018

An American engineer on vacation visits an isolated Caribbean island and becomes involved with one of the leading families. There is friction among the members of the family, which seems to smooth out at first. Then tragedy strikes and the remaining members of the family turn against the stranger.

Booklist 48:185 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:133 Mr '52 50w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:73 Ap '52 210w

"Miss Pinckney develops her situation sympathetically and with a high degree of competence and at the end achieves considerable tension. The enervating atmosphere of the Caribbean furnishes a rich background." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 20 '52
 370w

"Miss Pinckney sees with the sharp clarity of a camera and records with remarkable accuracy, atmosphere, characters, contrast, action and the lack of it. Yet like the storm which provides flash but little illumination, or the camera which does not capture the third dimension so necessary to reality, 'My Son and Foe' fails to grasp those essential values which challenge the acceptance of 'tragedy as the climate of life.'" Ruth Wales

— Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 24 '52 160w

"There's an eerie sort of fascination in the setting, a sophistication and subtlety in the dialogue, an elusive emotionalism flecked by hidden tensions. All in all, what might be a tour de force remains in the consciousness as an artistic achievement."

+ Kirkus 19:664 N 15 '51 200w

"The difficulty is that the characters, all of whom reveal a striking fondness for speaking in clichés, are unconvincing; their sudden friendship with the stranger is improbable; and the tragedy itself rather unnecessary. The bones of the story are sound enough, but Miss Pinckney's fancy prose adds little." A. L. G.

+ New Repub 126:23 Ap 7 '52 130w

"My Son and Foe is distinctive in setting and characterization, and, in particular, in the unassuming artistry with which Miss Pinckney tells the story." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 13 '52
 500w

"'My Son and Foe' is a bewitching book, to be recommended for sheer enjoyment, in spite of a creeping sense of frustration because of the capriciousness of the characters and the futility of their lives." Nancie Matthews

+ — N Y Times p26 Ja 13 '52 370w

"At times you'll be reminded of passages in Conrad in this story, except that Miss Pinckney writes in the compact modern manner and uses many of the new words that are coming into general usage. She probes into human motives without using any of the Freudian tags. In this third novel, Miss Pinckney has been even more successful than she was in her others in making her readers aware of a different emotional climate and 'taking them on an excursion into worlds unrealized.'" Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 27 '52
 600w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:17 Ja 19 '52 600w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 29 '52
 130w

"Unfortunately, all the characters are too tenuous to make much impression, and Miss Pinckney, though clearly intelligent and sensitive, is an awkward writer, given to mixed metaphors, too many adverbs and obscurantist nuances."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p705 O 31 '52
 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:37 Ja '52

PINNER, MAX, and MILLER, BENJAMIN FRANK, eds. When doctors are patients.
 364p $3.95 Norton

616 Diseases. Physicians

52-8725

Thirty-three physicians discuss in autobiographical sketches the effects of disease upon themselves. Among the illnesses are heart disease, blindness, deafness, polio, multiple sclerosis.

sis, hypertension, cancer, arthritis, epilepsy, etc. Index.

Booklist 48:291 My 15 '52

Reviewed by T. R. Van Dellen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 8 '52
160w

Kirkus 20:221 Mr 15 '52 190w

"Some medical language inevitably enters into the book, and probably its greatest value will be to help physicians and others concerned with sick people to see them as whole human beings, not merely sets of symptoms or diagnostic riddles. . . For both doctors and laymen, the greatest contribution of the book is the evidence it marshals that the will to live and work can draw much of the sting from pain and terrible actual illness." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 29 '52 340w

"This book touches on fundamental human problems and therefore concerns every intelligent reader. Physicians will find a wealth of information essential for practicing medicine. There are subtleties here which are not taught in medical schools nor properly considered in textbooks—but nevertheless make, at times, the difference between life and death." Hermann Vollmer

+ N Y Times p12 My 4 '52 360w

"The study offers valuable insight, both to doctors and to laymen, into the effect of disease and the treatment of it. . . [The doctors] write frankly and well and speak with humility of the lessons learned from their experiences. Those who have met illness, and those who have fears of it will find much of interest in the courage, philosophy and understanding each physician found and here shares with the reader." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 4 '52
200w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52
180w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:195 Je '52 210w

PINTO, ORESTE. Spy-catcher. 213p $2.75
Harper

364.13 [351.74] Spies. Lindemans, Christian
52-12125

An account of the war activities of the Dutch counter-intelligence officer who was called by Eisenhower "the greatest living authority on security."

"Colonel Pinto begins with a warning against putting one's faith in the movie version of this business which, he insists, is a dull job devoid of auto chases, champagne, and traditional excitements in general. He then unrolls a tale quite as absorbing in its champagneless way as Hitchcock's gaudiest thriller." P. L. Adams

+ Atlantic 190:101 O '52 550w

Booklist 49:27 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 30w

"This is a book for which the much abused word, 'fascinating,' is an accurate description." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 24 '52 180w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 15 '52
550w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:427 D '52 40w

"No literary veneer, but a more than usually interesting demonstration of the finer points of a precision game."

+ Kirkus 20:335 Je 1 '52 180w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1188 Jl '52 90w

"Colonel Pinto has produced, together in one volume, a fascinating memoir of World War II, and a superior treatise on military counter-intelligence. Further, in writing directly to his points, he reveals such an attractive literary personality that we hope for more books on these, or any other of his interests—shooting, boxing and zoology." Sidney Kramer

+ New Repub 127:21 S 29 '52 300w

"Spycatcher is a very readable and exciting book, and its author warns us not to forget the importance of Counter-Intelligence moves at all times." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:624 My 24 '52 170w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 24 '52
390w

"In some respects Pinto has written a little textbook on counter-espionage for junior G-men (and their elders); but his tales of mystery and adventure will doubtless be of interest to many a reader who has no intention of ever becoming a spy-catcher." J. E. Oakes

N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '52 420w

"A book of admirably down-to-earth reminiscences by a Counter-Intelligence officer."

+ New Yorker 28:76 Ag 9 '52 70w

"On the level of entertainment, 'Spy-Catcher' deserves a high rating. Pinto provides some humor, quite a bit of colorful detail, and considerable suspense." Oliver Pilat

+ Sat R 35:35 N 22 '52 450w

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 340w

Time 60:78 S 1 '52 650w

"Moral issues are not the primary concern of the book, which is singularly factual and objective, in its account of the stratagems employed by both sides. Colonel Pinto takes an almost sporting attitude towards his victims. . . Prospective agents might do well to read this book, but they would be prudent to reflect that Colonel Pinto undoubtedly has several cards in his hand which he has not exposed here."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p472 Jl 18 '52 390w

PIRONE, PASCAL POMPEY. Modern gardening; comp. under the editorial supervision of Maron J. Simon. 371p $3.50 Simon & Schuster 630.24 Agricultural chemistry. Gardening.

Agr 52-425

A complete guide to the agricultural uses of modern chemistry's miracle drugs. Author is plant pathologist at the New York Botanical Garden.

Booklist 48:277 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 20w

"The importance of defining the scope of this book cannot be overemphasized. . . There is nothing about planning a garden, selecting of plants for the garden, color, seasonal bloom, annuals, perennials, etc. etc. except as incidental to their enemies, their growth, their handling. But in its specific field, it is a must for every advanced amateur, aspiring scientific gardener, professional."

+ Kirkus 20:110 F 1 '52 220w

"Any book by Dr. 'Pat' Pirone is bound to be good, but this one will prove to be a veritable godsend to every gardener who is floundering among the endless sprays and dusts, foods and fertilizers, theories and counter-theories, fads and downright rackets which have currently turned a once homespun hobby into an experimental maze." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 22 '52 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 6 '52
100w

Reviewed by C. H. Woodward

Sat R 35:20 Ag 2 '52 100w

PITTENGER, BENJAMIN FLOYD. Local public school administration. 512p $4.75 McGraw 371.2 School administration and organization
51-12576

"This book is offered as an introduction to the study of the administration of public education on the local level in the United States. Its first purpose is to introduce students to the very extensive literature of the subject. Its second purpose is to assist both prospective and active local school administrators to acquire a better understanding of their professional problems and to develop better techniques for handling them. In the third place,

PITTENGER, B. F.—Continued
by trying to orient local school administration within the larger background of state and Federal activities, the book seeks to provide an introduction to the entire field." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

School & Society 74:416 D 22 '51 20w

PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN. Christian sacrifice; a study of the eucharist in the life of the Christian church. 205p $3 Oxford

265.3 Lord's supper 51-12527

"This book is a study of the significance of the Holy Communion in the life of the Church. Dr. Pittenger, extremely popular writer on religion, summarizes the results of learned study and criticism over many years by many scholars. He stresses the essential importance of the rite, as the central action of the Christian Church, in historic Christendom and in our own day. . . . Written especially for laymen." Publisher's note

"Any solution of the problems presented in this able book clearly awaits an acceptable definition of the nature of the church. Every argument here stems from a specific understanding of the church as the body of Christ. . . . There is a great deal to be praised here, among all bodies of Christians. . . . A more careful checking of references would have located Paul's famous triple trinity in Galatians rather than in Philipians." A. T. DeGroot
+ Christian Century 69:15 Ja 2 '52 1200w

"In 200 pages on eucharistic theology we have Norman Pittenger at his best; urbane, calmly asseverative, dealing with technical questions in non-technical terms in large part. His standpoint is, as always, that of the convinced but irenic Anglo-Catholic. His style is layman and the book is written for the interested laymen." Joseph Fletcher
+ Churchman 166:16 F 1 '52 370w

"Written in a beautiful style, with many delicate allusions, Dr. Pittenger's volume should prove to be a valuable devotional guide to Anglican communicants and an admirable source of homiletic material for Anglican clerics." Allen Cabaniss
+ J Religion 32:211 Jl '52 400w

PLAMENATZ, JOHN PETROV. Revolutionary movement in France, 1815-71. 184p $3.25 Longmans

944.04 France—History—19th century. Revolutions 52-10311

"This book is a history of the various groups active in France between 1815 and 1871 and inspired by republican and socialist doctrines. The author is primarily interested in political and social theory, and he attempts to estimate the importance and to trace the development of the radical groups, whether revolutionary or allied to the revolutionaries, whose joint action destroyed three French monarchies." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr Plamenatz has and deserves to have a high reputation as an expositor and critic of political theory seen from the point of view of a professional philosopher. His new book has the merits of the old combination of acuteness and wit that we have come to expect." D. W. Brogan
+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 13 '52 450w

"The author brings to the story an acute mind, and a refusal to accept the doctrine that class-struggles are necessarily conflicts of irreconcilable interests. . . . If he is at times betrayed into incisive generalisations which are too sweeping, or virtually unverifiable, he also formulates others which throw cross-beams of light on the nature of French development. He generalises about the origins of the Third Republic beyond the point at which his evidence justifies such generalisations. But here is a most useful book for the student both of nineteenth-century France and of political science, which fills more than one gap in the books about the subject in English." David Thomson
+ Spec 189:76 Jl 11 '52 550w

"Mr. Plamenatz modestly points out that his book is 'not the product of meticulous research,' but 'relies entirely on the discoveries of other people.' This is true enough, but there is a need for works of this kind which give a synoptic view of a long process that may get overlaid or overlooked by other books, distorted by hastily accepted assumptions about it, or merely neglected in England because all the good books about it happen to be in French. The only serious complaint which can be brought against it is that it leaves the story unfinished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p362 My 30 '52 800w

PLATT, RUTHERFORD. American trees; a book of discovery; with drawings by Margaret L. Cosgrove; photographs and color plates by the author. 256p $3.50 Dodd

582.16 Trees—U.S. 52-7207

Guide to quick identification of the trees of all regions of this country. Photographs, some in color, and drawings. Index.

Booklist 48:333 Je 15 '52

"Delightfully readable volume."

+ Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 20w

"The photography is typical of Mr. Platt. From majestic silhouettes of forest giants to extreme closeups of buds and leaf scars, each one is a story in itself. The pen drawings are authentic, well executed, and artfully used to supplement the text. This should prove to be a stimulating manual for the casual nature lover, the amateur naturalist, or even the seasoned outdoors man." W. H. Farr
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 29 '52 200w

"'American Trees' is a new type of tree book and should command a wide and enthusiastic audience. . . . Perhaps the text lacks some of the fluency found in Mr. Platt's earlier works, but that is immaterial in the face of the explicit and genuinely important information that is packed into every page." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p5 Jl 6 '52 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 27 '52 140w

Reviewed by C. H. Woodward
Sat R 35:21 Ag 2 '52 110w

PLOSCOWE, MORRIS. Sex and the law. 310p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

301.42 [176] Sex and law 51-6999

"Experienced New York judge describes attitudes of law to marriage, divorce, illegitimacy, prostitution and related problems. Few spheres of law are in greater need of revision, but also few spheres of life more affected by emotion and taboos. Thorough knowledge of pertinent law coupled with deep understanding of human problems has enabled author to present well a balanced plea for modernization of the law which often not only fails to achieve its ends, but also leads to very unfair results." Library J

"The book is admirably suited for its purpose. . . . [It] is well organized, adequately documented. . . . The book is highly recommended for general reading by those interested in public welfare and for the reference shelves of courses in the family and criminology." R. S. Cavan
+ Am Soc R 17:511 Ag '52 500w

"The book is interestingly written with a wealth of documentation by case material which, however, is never presented in such a manner as to leave doubt about the abstract principle involved. It deserves welcome as an important and socially significant piece of work whether one is in agreement with the author or not." Otto Pollak
+ Ann Am Acad 280:211 Mr '52 440w

"The author's choice of subject matter has no exact boundaries. Sometimes the reader wonders about the exclusions as well as the inclusions. There is no discussion of birth control, for instance; and the word abortion is not even mentioned: both subjects are certainly dependent on sex, and there is a large volume of law relating to them. There is only one sentence about incest. On the other hand, there is considerable discussion of indecent exposure, a subject that is no more logically a matter of sex and no closer in its contact with the law. Notwithstanding this logical inconsistency, the book does add up to a reasonably rounded discussion of the subject matter. The author generally shows sound judgment in his eclecticism. And a careful selection of pertinent cases helps to give cohesion to the treatment, which might otherwise seem broader or narrower than the title suggests." Geoffrey May

Harvard Law R 65:897 Mr '52 1400w

"A lawyer's book, at a layman's level, and the inevitably flamboyant nature of the material may attract a general audience."

Kirkus 19:342 J1 1 '51 120w

"Strongly recommended for collections with emphasis on sociological and legal problems." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 76:1331 S 1 '51 120w

"A fascinating study . . . with suggestions that would lead toward more uniform and national policies."

+ Nation 173:507 D 8 '51 30w

"This volume is full of ordinarily uncollected tidbits of our social history. . . In each chapter the author forces us to face up to our legal and social hypocrisy and the lack of reality of laws in relation to how we live in our culture. He pleads for a reappraisal of all our present laws on marriage and divorce. He feels strongly that patchwork modification of our laws will be of no avail. . . I would be less than frank, however, if I did not add that it will take another book by a more audacious crusader to point to the answers in more precise and hence more valuable terms." M. L. Ernst

N Y Times p24 D 9 '51 800w

"A highly informed and civilized discussion."

+ New Yorker 27:170 N 24 '51 150w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 23 '51 170w

School & Society 75:111 F 16 '52 30w

Social Forces 30:483 My '52 80w

POHL, FREDERICK JULIUS. Lost discovery; uncovering the track of the Vikings in America; il. and maps by J. Warren Sheppard. 346p $3.75 Norton

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration. 52-12464

Following up clues and records the author has pictured the pre-Columbian explorers of the American continent. He concludes that a company of Irish monks were the first discoverers, altho he gives most space to Leif Ericson and his son. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:154 Ja 1 '53

Bookmark 12:32 N '52 30w

"Result is a good argument that the Norse were the first real settlers of the New World, and that at a date nearly 500 years before Columbus they settled on the northeastern shores of North America." W. M. Krogman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 28 '52 350w

"The Lost Discovery' is, like 'Robinson Crusoe,' a tale of castaways and savages, but it is also history written vividly. I enjoyed most of all the close-ups of the Norse, who were not always pillagers and troublemakers of the sea, but homemakers, farmers, and fond parents, quick welcomers of Christianity. I smiled at the jacket's talk of Mr. Pohl 'rearranging' history, thinking that extreme word mere blurb-writer's license, but it is exact. Mr. Pohl dredges up history from the deep and makes centuries of forgotten endeavor live." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:486 Ag 1 '52 110w

"Mr. Pohl writes with authority about the whole series of expeditions that did not end until the fourteenth century. . . [He] writes with conviction about the great pioneers who crossed the ocean in their small undecked vessels to find lands beyond. He uses the saga, those sombre narratives of voyages into the unknown, for his skillful historical detective work." W. S. Carlson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 28 '52 600w

Reviewed by T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p22 S 28 '52 370w

"An excitingly written book."

+ New Yorker 28:134 O 4 '52 150w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p11C O 12 '52 400w

POIRIER, LOUIS (JULIEN GRACQ, pseud). Castle of Argol; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 145p $1.50 New directions

51-14938

"A Gothic philosophical romance by an avant-garde French writer. . . What M. Gracq has been concerned to write is, as he puts it, a demoniac version of the 'Parsifal' story." New Yorker

Reviewed by Robert Finch

Canadian Forum 32:94 J1 '52 300w

"The Castle of Argol is a Gothic novel, a pastiche, and as a judgment of its literary value I should say that its overheated pretentiousness is only equalled by its chilling vapidity." J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 42:468 O 27 '51 70w

"Gracq's extraordinarily conscious art has already been likened more to the painter's than to that of the writer. And, indeed, Heide and Albert walking down the geometrically traced avenue of trees that closes behind them give one the illusion of an animated Dali." Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p5 Ja 20 '52 550w

"One might, if one were amiably disposed, meet [M. Gracq] halfway, and, taking him at his own valuation, attack his ideas as shocking or wicked, but the truth is that they are much worse than that—they are silly. The silliness might be interesting if it could be considered evidence of a new, disturbing direction in which French culture is moving. But it is not. It is a dated, old-fashioned silliness." Anthony West

— New Yorker 27:75 Ja 12 '52 950w

"Julien Gracq's impressionistic style is a marriage of the sublime and grotesque, and he is so preoccupied with it that the reader has the feeling of eavesdropping rather than being spoken to. Here, though, as an impressionistic painting, it is the manner of execution that is the thing, never the subject." J. A.

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 16 '52 270w

"The author relies for his effects on the italicizing of key words, as in the letters of Queen Victoria. He has a number of profound ideas, but has difficulty in communicating them to the reader."

Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 16 '51 60w

POLGAR, FRANZ JULIUS. Story of a hypnotist, by [the author] with Kurt Singer. 222p il $3 Hermitage

B or 92 Hypnotism 51-13883

"This makes fascinating reading from the first page in which Polgar is almost buried alive down to the end in which he is in a position to be of great use to the U.S.A. in any future war as a hypnotist. In the years between he studied with Freud, cooperated with doctors, dentists, police, appeared as an entertainer in speakies, night clubs, the lecture platform." Library J

"Recommended for psychology and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:147 Ja 15 '52 70w

"Polgar, it strikes this reviewer, is neither a prophet nor an innovator; he seems just a good, professional entertainer. None the less, he insists on passing a weary interpretation of Christ as arch-hypnotist, quite reverently, to be sure, and he slyly hints to 'backward' medical men that he and other serious inves-

POLGAR, F. J.—Continued
tigators may some day make hypnotism the potent and respected tool that analysis is today. Such pretentiousness may perhaps be excused as an excess committed in the spirit of self-promotion." Charles Simmons
N Y Times p32 F 24 '52 210w
Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 80w

POLK, JAMES KNOX. Diary of a president, 1845-1849, covering the Mexican war, the acquisition of Oregon, and the conquest of California and the Southwest; ed. by Allan Nevins. 412p $6 Longmans

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—1815-1861. Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-8933

The diary kept by James K. Polk during his four years in the White House as president. Index.

"In spite of the difficulties involved in condensing a four-volume diary to one of reasonable size, Professor Nevins has on the whole been very successful. This fine edition should appeal to a large number of readers who are interested in seeing events in an important period of American history through the eyes of an active participant." E. B. Coddington
+ Am Hist R 58:193 O '52 240w

"The 'Diary' has much to offer on the growing sectional conflict. Polk saw the grave danger in the Wilmot Proviso, and his eagerness to get the territories organized and admitted as states was nearly as great as that of his successor, Zachary Taylor. . . . The greater value of the 'Diary,' however, lies in what it reveals about its author. Here the reader will agree with George Bancroft that it shows a 'prudent, farsighted bold' man 'excelling any Democrat of his day in undeviating correct exposition of his democratic principles.'" Avery Craven
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 22 '52 900w

"Californians will be especially interested in the diary entries concerning the Fremont-Kearny episode, and in following the progress of the Mexican war and the trouble Polk had with such temperamental generals as Winfield Scott and Zachary Taylor. . . . But anyone who has a taste for American history will find the 'Diary' good reading." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 10 '52 700w

POLLAK, OTTO, and others. Social science and psychotherapy for children. 242p $4 Russell Sage

618.9 Psychotherapy. Psychonanalysis. Children—Management 52-5925

"A study undertaken jointly by the Russell Sage Foundation and the Jewish Board of Guardians in which are reported the contributions of the behavior sciences to practice in a psychoanalytically oriented child-guidance clinic." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by Anselm Strauss
Am Soc R 17:653 O '52 550w

"This book describes an interesting and valuable instance of successful collaboration between social science and practice in child guidance. It should be widely read." J. McV. Hunt

+ Ann Am Acad 282:155 J1 '52 700w
School & Society 76:48 J1 19 '52 20w

"One can only admire the careful and fruitful efforts of Dr. Pollak as evidenced in this volume, but one is somewhat saddened as a social worker that social casework itself could not be closer to making this contribution." Muriel McLaughlin
+ Social Forces 31:183 D '52 400w

POLLOCK, JAMES KERR, and THOMAS, HOMER LEONARD. Germany in power and eclipse; the background of German development; with the assistance and collaboration of Willett F. Ramsdell [and others]. 661p maps $10 Van Nostrand

943 Germany—History. Germany—Politics and government 52-10482

"This volume, abundantly provided with maps and charts, grew out of the war time needs for reliable information on Germany. A group of scholars, headed by Prof. Pollock of the University of Michigan, wrote a number of memoranda on the basic historic and contemporary aspects of Germany to be used by officials of the state and war departments. The present volume owes its existence to the re-writing and condensation of these memoranda." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Chapter bibliographies. Glossary. Index.

"A second volume will deal with Germany at war and under occupation. In view of what Prof. Pollock and his collaborators offer here we look forward to this additional contribution to our understanding of the German problem." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 2 '52 160w

"Many clearly drawn maps and charts enhance the value of this almost encyclopedic work for the student of German affairs and, above all, for the American official concerned with the conditions and structure of the country." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p24 O 26 '52 250w

PONSONBY, FREDERICK EDWARD GREY, 1st baron SYSONBY. See Sysonby, F. E. G. P.

POOL, DAVID DE SOLA. Portraits etched in stone; early Jewish settlers, 1682-1831. 543p $10 Columbia univ. press

296 Jews in New York (city). New York (city). Chatham square cemetery 52-14151

In 1681 the first Jewish graveyard was planned in New York city. This volume is a history of that second oldest burial ground in the city. The first section of the book "is a narrative account of the cemetery's history, from the acquiring of the ground in 1682, until the last burial to be recorded, that of a child named Brandilla Isaacs on Feb. 4, 1833. The second portion, comprising almost two-thirds of the whole, is devoted to short biographies of the 179 individuals known to have been buried in this hallowed ground." (N Y Times) Maps, charts, genealogical tables, a glossary of Hebrew words, and a bibliography. Index.

"For central branches of public-library systems." J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:1895 N 1 '52 100w

"A truly interesting bit of Americana. It goes without saying that the volume will be a collector's item in the library of every New Yorker with a genuine interest in the history and origins of Manhattan. But it will be particularly prized by descendants of those persons who were laid to rest in this 'house of eternity,' as well as by genealogists in quest of information." F. S. Ronalds

+ N Y Times p24 N 16 '52 480w

POOLE, BERNARD L. Caribbean commission; background of cooperation in the West Indies. 303p il $5.50 Univ. of S.C. press

972.9 Caribbean commission, Caribbean sea 51-14097

"Another experiment in international cooperation, the Caribbean Commission has dealt with the economic and social problems of the colonial dependencies which comprise the West Indies. This volume presents a brief study of each colony, covering economic, political, social, educational and other aspects. It also discusses the long-range program of cooperation planned by the United States, Great Britain, France and the Netherlands for the improvement of these under-developed areas." Current Hist

"This study, by a former Air Force instructor, should rightfully have been titled 'The Caribbean Problem,' for the first 143 pages are devoted to a somewhat pedestrian 'handbook' survey of Antillean realities area by area, based upon a limited number of documents, secondary works, and the Statesman's Year-Book while only 99 pages are devoted to the inception of the commission, its organization and achievements, and these are followed by a general summary. Such proportion is difficult to explain. Much interesting information is, however, presented, the data is factually correct, and the book is very readable." Lowell Ragatz
+ — Am Hist R 58:79 O '52 400w

Am Pol Sci R 46:267 Mr '52 30w

"The nearer Professor Poole advances to the creation of the Commission the more satisfactorily he accomplishes his task. His chapter dealing with the unilateral action of the home governments in regard to their Caribbean colonies following World War I is valuable. When he deals with Anglo-American co-operation in the area during World War II he is at his best and presents his story in such a way that the creation of the four-power Caribbean Commission in 1946 seemed the only logical step." J. J. Johnson

+ Ann Am Acad 280:241 Mr '52 450w

Current Hist 22:37 Ja '52 60w

Foreign Affairs 30:685 Jl '52 30w

POOLE, LYNN. Today's science and you; il. by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey House publication) 208p $2.75 McGraw 500 Science 52-6012

"A book form presentation of the author's television program, 'The John Hopkins Science Review' . . . Each chapter, the subjects of which range from the development of the X-ray, characteristics of isotopes, the cycle of the disease, schistosomiasis, rocket ships, to forecast for the future, is presented in as visual a manner as possible, starting historically, ending with a surmise about possible work and going through descriptions of mechanisms, their uses, connections with other fields, and so forth." (Kirkus) Index.

"At the risk of having young spaceship designers pooh-pooh my choice, I will say that I enjoyed Today's Science and You." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 189:87 Je '52 90w

Booklist 48:283 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Horn Bk 28:247 Ag '52 90w

"The book is excitingly written and interestingly selective. . . The illustrations by Jeanne Bendick are a little awkward but clear enough. The author cultivates attitudes of excitement towards discovery, the thrill of science and corresponding fields. Excellent for the Highschool supplementary reading list."

+ Kirkus 20:130 F 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:905 My 15 '52 80w

"An excellent addition to junior's science book shelf." G. O. Blough

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 23 '52 100w

"It is an exciting book for anyone who is in the least interested in the fight against the natural enemies of man. One finishes it with a feeling of warm admiration for scientists today."

+ Sat R 35:70 N 15 '52 80w

POPE, MRS ANTOINETTE, and POPE, FRANCOIS. Cook's quiz. 188p il $2.50 Macmillan

641.5 Cookery 52-6616

"As the title suggests, this book is made up in the question and answer style. Some 35 sections, each one devoted to different foods, together with a section on temperatures, one on miscellaneous subjects, and one on definition of cooking terms comprise the book." J Home Econ

"The questions concerning each subject are short and simply put. The answers, so far as this reviewer could check, conform to current scientific facts for the most part and evidently have been gleaned from a variety of source materials. At times the questions do not seem to be fully answered and often after reading an answer one feels unsatisfied and has the impulse to ask a further question or two concerning the subject. The book may be found useful to that foods person who is too busy to read or to the one who lacks a formal type of education." Una Vermillion

+ J Home Econ 44:460 Je '52 160w

"There is much here that the general cook book mistakenly assumes you may know, and this should help to obviate fiascos with its additional advice."

+ Kirkus 19:669 N 15 '51 60w

"All of the information is good for the cook. . . A useful reference book." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1203 Jl '52 50w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52 90w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Auto album, by Edward L. Throm and James S. Crenshaw; picture captions by George Uskali. 160p $3 Pop. mechanics 629.209 Automobiles—History 52-7516

"A lighthearted chronicle of the progress of the automobile from 1769 to 1952. It is mainly concerned with American cars." New Yorker

Reviewed by Hal Foust

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 27 '52 170w

New Yorker 28:99 My 31 '52 100w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Build-it-yourself ranch-type house, by Tom Riley; il. by Ralph Linnenburger and others. 132p il $3.50 Pop. mechanics 690 Building 52-172

"To the amazement of professional builders, a good many amateurs—guided mainly by books—have built their own houses in recent years. Here is another book that will undoubtedly inspire hundreds if not thousands more self-built homes. All of the operations, including wiring, plumbing and heating, in the building of a generously-sized 'ranch' house are described in a clear text and an abundance of pictures. Some variations in the basic plan and techniques are provided for." Library J

"The author actually built the house he describes. The plan is carefully designed by an architect to give the most living space for the least amount of money. The cost of building would vary in relation to climate and location of site. The design of the house is adaptable to modern living and suggests early American or modernistic interior decoration. The plan incorporates 'open planning,' which gives a feeling of spaciousness in a small house." V. Y. Trotter

+ J Home Econ 44:670 O '52 350w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:723 Ap 15 '52 60w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Fifty years of Popular mechanics, 1902-1952; ed. by Edward L. Throm. 308p $5 Simon & Schuster

605 Technology. Inventions 51-14693

Popular Mechanics was first published in 1902. This selection from its pages is "an album of American progress containing the most fascinating articles, predictions, pictures, and inventions that have appeared since the first issue." (Subtitle)

Booklist 48:154 Ja 1 '52

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE—Cont.

"Like Popular Mechanics, the book is a pot-pourri, but, again like its prototype, an almost always fascinating one." Russell MacFall
 + Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 6 '52
 190w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
 Library J 77:906 My 15 '52 100w

"Here is a real triumph of picture and prose about the era [1902-1952]; nostalgic, instructive and surprising. . . The value of this volume as history has come, of course, from the selective care of the editor and the abundant editorial comment. . . Altogether the book is fun to read for old and young and valuable in the library of the historian and the hobbyist for frequent reference." Roger Burlingame
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 30 '51
 700w

Reviewed by D. L. Cohn
 N Y Times p3 D 16 '51 900w
 New Yorker 27:87 Ja 19 '52 120w
 Time 58:82 D 10 '51 550w
 Wis Lib Bul 48:86 Mr '52

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Guide to home repairs. 192p il $2.50
 Pop. mechanics

643.7 Building—Repair and reconstruction

"A simple manual for home owners seeking practical methods for doing their own handiwork. Plentifully supplied with diagrams, pictures, and concise instructions for procedure. Common troubles are shown, with methods for their correction, as well as preventive measures to keep repairs at a minimum." Booklist

Booklist 48:155 Ja 1 '52

"A slender but meaty guide stuffed with pictorial and verbal information. . . It even dispels the mysteries of fluorescent lighting." Harold Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 28 '51
 90w

"Even the least handy man with tools will have very little excuse for not attempting and mastering those aggravating repair jobs which pile up in any home, once this book is at hand." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 20 '52
 100w

PORTER, KATHERINE ANNE. Days before.
 273p $4 Harcourt

814 52-9858

"A collection of papers that have appeared in various periodicals and as book prefaces over the last thirty years. About a third of them are critical articles and reviews." New Yorker

"It is common knowledge that Miss Porter is a beautiful writer, but in the intervals between her books, one is apt to forget what an extraordinarily fine artist she is. In these articles, there is an intelligence that races along; there is sanity, charm, and a love of the world. I have read much of the book twice, and I expect to reread much of it again." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:97 D '52 440w

Booklist 49:86 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

"A fascinating and unwavering mind here shows thru the living, lovely prose. A strongly feminine mind, independent and honorable; a mind capable of great love and generosity." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 26 '52
 200w

"It is Willa Cather, so completely a contrast to herself, that Miss Porter loves best. . . And it is wonderfully right and just that the sensitive, filigree delicate Southern writer, should so admire the solid, homespun, and sensible Northern one. . . They make a perfect pair, these two who have produced the most excellent American short stories ever written by women." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 57:122 N 7 '52 700w

"Katherine Anne Porter is a discriminating writer, for a discriminating audience, and these pieces, fastidious in discernment, subtle in judgment, have a definite destination."

+ Kirkus 20:697 O 15 '52 180w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
 + Library J 77:1807 O 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by Edward Schwartz
 Nation 175:452 N 15 '52 600w

"Unlike her stories, most of these pieces were written at editorial request, with space limitations and a deadline, yet presumably the author prized them sufficiently to wish to see them in print again, and I should judge that her readers will be grateful to have at least about half of them." Mark Schorer

New Repub 127:18 N 10 '52 950w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stallings
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 2 '52
 500w

"It can be said immediately, and without equivocation, that these essays, the gathered intensities of thirty years of growing, bear the very signature that Miss Porter admires in others. Reading them through is as easy, as pleasant, and as rewarding as reading a fine novel." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 N 2 '52 700w

"Miss Porter discusses the formative years of Henry James in a fine-drawn essay from which the book gets its title; she writes of Willa Cather, and what that artist has meant to her, in an essay that is a model of tough-minded sensitivity, and, in 'The Wooden Umbrella,' she takes Gertrude Stein apart and reassembles the pieces in such a way that Miss Stein will never look the same again."

+ New Yorker 28:134 N 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller
 Sat R 36:12 Ja 10 '53 650w

POST, LEVI ARNOLD. From Homer to Menander; forces in Greek poetic fiction. 332p
 $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

880.9 Greek literature 51-62421

"This book contains the Sather Classical Lectures delivered at the University of California in the spring of 1948. . . The author treats the Homeric poems, the tragedies of Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides, and the comedies of Menander, as examples of a form of art whose wealth of resources for portraying human character and destiny and whose influence upon conduct and culture have seldom been as effectively conceived as here. Fiction is, of all the arts, 'the most capable of presenting to the imagination a representative model of human fate. It alone may hope to include in the imitation of life all the forces that move men from within or act upon them from without.' Thus fiction is a powerful force in history; and when it is great, as Greek poetic fiction certainly is, it 'fills men with wonder, introduces them to strange new aspects of life or new attitudes toward life, and so endows them with new interests and insights.'" Crozer Q

"The study has a modern vividness scarcely imagined before. Here is a sort of disclosure which only a scholar of enthusiastic approach and fluent address could make. This type of investigation, unpremeditated, perhaps, and half accidental, puts on Professor Post's volume, otherwise diffuse and rambling, the mark of achievement." W. P. Tryon

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 5 '52
 140w

"Will add new lustre to an already distinguished series. Such is the philosophy of fiction that underlies Post's treatment and gives it a singular unity of purpose and richness of content." G. E. Morrow

+ Crozer Q 29:213 Ap '52 1150w

"The result is a very pleasant account of the Greek authors mentioned, with cross-references particularly to Oriental literature and with admirable documentation in the notes at the end of the book: the best chapter deals with the comedy of Menander, on which Professor Post is an acknowledged expert. Some details may well evoke disagreement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 8 '52
300w

POST, MRS MARY BRINKER. Prescription for marriage. 232p $3 Messner

52-7408

A story of a marriage, recalled in retrospect by the wife twenty years after the brief, ecstatic courtship and wedding. When the boy, Gregory, gets into a scrape, his mother's knowledge of the true meaning of love and marriage gained thru her own bitter experience of ten years before, comes to the rescue.

Booklist 48:221; 248 Mr 15 '52; Ap 1 '52
"This is a smoothly textured treatment of a timeless theme."

+ Kirkus 20:131 F 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Anne Richards

N Y Times p31 Ap 6 '52 140w

"Relaxing as a cup of tea on an unhurried afternoon."

+ Sat R 35:46 My 24 '52 120w

POSTGATE RAYMOND WILLIAM. Life of George Lansbury. 332p il $4.75 Longmans

B or 92 Lansbury, George 52-1652

Biography of the English Labor leader, George Lansbury, by his son-in-law and co-worker. "Born in 1859, Mr. Lansbury, the popular member from Poplar, representing his constituency in Parliament for many years, held a Cabinet seat as Commissioner of Works in the second Labor Government and became Leader of the Opposition in 1931. When he died at the age of 80 he had witnessed, and participated in, some of the most important changes that have ever taken place in a nation in a like period." (N Y Times) Index.

"Mr. Postgate says he loved and respected George Lansbury as he never expects to love and respect a man again. In presence of such devotion a critical biography was not to be expected, but on the other hand it is no fulsome life. It is a warm and indulgent study yet halting well on this side of idolatry." H. B.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 23 '51 300w

"This admirable book by Mr. Postgate, who was Lansbury's aide as well as relative, may indeed err on the side of affectionate generosity, for Lansbury had faults, but it will do a great deal to correct the impression that 'Good George Lansbury' was a sentimental old dear who really did not understand the facts of political life." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:644 D 1 '51 500w

"This is an affectionately written yet frank biography of probably one of the most interesting men of the many unusual leaders who have come out of the British Labor party and the labor movement. . . The material is well organized and will repay reading by anyone interested in the British Labor movement and the Labor party, their policies and influence in British and world affairs." Louis Stark

+ N Y Times p38 N 16 '52 350w

"This is an admirable biography. Written with a narrative skill enriched by a genuine affection, . . . it succeeds equally in giving an authentic picture of a man and of the social age that shaped him." Francis Williams

+ Spec 187:744 N 30 '51 1000w

"An absorbing book which, particularly in its earlier chapters, does full justice to a tumultuous and essential English story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p776 D 7 '51
750w

POTTENGER, FRANCIS MARION. Fight against tuberculosis [introd. by Roy G. Hoskins]. 276p il $4 Schuman

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Tuberculosis 52-9629

Autobiography of an American physician, now eighty years of age. Early in his career the tragic death of his young wife turned his mind and work to tuberculosis, in which disease he has been a specialist for many years as head of a sanatorium in Monrovia, California.

"It is always a pleasure to read a well written and well rounded autobiography, especially if carefully documented as to time, persons, and places. The present volume qualifies in these particulars." R. A. Bolt

+ Am J Pub Health 42:1331 O '52 260w

Booklist 48:320 Je 1 '52

"A worthy record, professional in interest."

+ Kirkus 20:180 Mr 1 '52 150w

"First-choice purchase." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:590 Ap 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 9 '52
500w

Reviewed by Martin Gumpert

N Y Times p32 S 14 '52 360w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 30 '52
650w

"The simplicity and lack of affectation with which Dr. Pottenger writes about his notable career in themselves serve to characterize his personality. He is a man who, after eighty years of strenuous living, can honestly say: 'I have had a full life.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:239 S '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:171 J1 '52

POTTER, CHARLES FRANCIS. Preacher and I; an autobiography. 429p $4 Crown

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-12006

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Under a somewhat whimsical title, Dr. Potter has written his autobiography, and a good one it is, too. He writes with facility and interestingly. He is a good thinker and a scholar of a sort." H. H. Straton
+ Christian Century 69:567 My 7 '52
1250w

"The author's comments on the passing religious scene are interesting, although for the most part he proceeds on the assumption that everything that happened to him will be of interest to everyone else." K. D. Miller
Sat R 35:41 Mr 1 '52 200w

"Written in down-to-earth English, this is the vivid, straightforward, and in many places dramatic, autobiography of a distinguished, crusading humanist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:10 Mr '52 270w

POTTER, STEPHEN. One-upmanship; il. by Frank Wilson; being some account of the activities and teaching of the Lifemanship correspondence college of One-upness and gameslifemastery. 177p $2.75 Holt

827

52-11048

"'One-Upmanship' simply broadens the scope, so to speak, of Potter's earlier treatises. The subtitle of the previous issue, 'Lifemanship' was 'The Art of Getting Away With It Without Being an Absolute Plonk.' And the new work brings welcome news of a correspondence college devoted to teaching this basic code of Gameslifemanship and sundry tested techniques. As a handbook, its values are practical indeed. How to deal with the Natural One-Upness of the Doctor; Businessmanship [invaluable to the Committee Member]; Wellreadship; Christmasgiftmanship, which is perhaps the most useful part of all at this tide—these are but a few of the rewarding chapters. And of course there are the illustrations!" Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Mr. Potter seems to have overplayed his play—I mean overplayed his ploy. You will have to buy a copy in order to check this? Yes, yes, of course. This is absolutely necessary, in any case. Surely you would not wish to remain One-Down?" R. G. Peck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 19 '52
250w

POTTER, STEPHEN—Continued

"A call to the colors for every true exponent of the fine points of dis-ease."

+ Kirkus 20:530 Ag 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '52 50w

Reviewed by Robert Evett
New Repub 127:22 D 29 '52 360w

Reviewed by Frank Hauser
New Statesman & Nation 44:525 N 1 '52 100w

"If it occurred to this reviewer that the satire is a shade less sharp, here and there, in 'One-upmanship' than it was in the earlier treatises, the thought was swiftly put down. I have no wish to get one up on Potter—he might stop writing." Gerald Gottlieb

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 26 '52 500w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p14 O 12 '52 270w

"Admirers of Mr. Potter's two previous books may find that his methods and the point of view behind them don't seem as funny or as sharp as they once did, possibly because they are no longer surprising, or possibly because he is getting a little tired of his own joke."

New Yorker 28:175 N 8 '52 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 15 '52 650w

Reviewed by Lee Rogow
Sat R 36:18 Ja 3 '53 650w

"A man less witty than Mr. Potter might have worked his devices to death; it is far otherwise with the Master of Station Road, Yeovil. On he goes, continually scintillating, and rarely probing into his victim without a preliminary anaesthetic of good-humour." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 189:438 O 3 '52 380w

Spring'd Republican p11D O 26 '52 80w

"There is no doubt of the man Potter's ingenuity, and it is this which makes him so dangerous an influence in modern life. He has, within a very short space of time, given to the civilized world not a new word but what is, in essence, a new language. It would be bad enough if these subversive activities of his were known as Potterism, although Miss Rose Macaulay, meaning something else, has there forestalled him; but no, it is worse and more subtle than that. He has brought about a state of affairs which leaves no word free from the terror of having that ominous ending 'manship' tagged on to it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 10 '52 550w

POTTLE, FREDERICK ALBERT, ed. See Boswell, J. Boswell in Holland, 1763-1764

POULIN, CLARENCE. Tailoring suits the professional way. 192p il $4.50 Bennett 687.11 Tailoring

The fundamentals of tailoring suits from the drafting of the pattern to the fitting and finishing of both men's and women's suits. Intended for commercial use. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 49:7 S 1 '52

"Although not designed for women who sew at home, there is much information in it that will be helpful to ambitious home sewers, particularly in such chapters as that on skirt making. There are about 200 illustrations." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1816 O 15 '52 40w

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS, ed. & tr. See Con-fucius. Great digest

POWELL, DAWN (MRS JOSEPH R. GOUSHA). Sunday, Monday, and always. 213p $3 Houghton

52-5257

Collection of eighteen short stories, most of them about disillusioned or defeated people.

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 27 '52 390w

Kirkus 20:236 Ap 1 '52 200w

"Miss Powell ranges with equal knowingness from bobby soxers and movie stars to the professoriat and the avant-garde, but she is a little too concerned with the clever jape and the socko ending."

+ Nation 175:98 Ag 2 '52 80w

"The rich variety of personalities in Miss Powell's book offers rewards in reading for Sundays, Mondays and a long time, if not always." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 29 '52 650w

"A collection of short stories, her first, by the author of 'The Locusts Have No King' is likely to be something of a reading event. And so it is, it must be wryly noted, for these unusual stories, some of them no more than vignettes, reveal in Miss Powell the kind of demure and deceitful authority that, for example, Jane Austen knew a thing or two about." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p5 Je 29 '52 400w

"Most of the time, she does her work with economy, wit, and warmth. In a few of the pieces, though, she sifts out the weakness—or even viciousness—of her subjects, without making it quite clear why she selected them for such intense and disenchanting attention. Four of the stories originally appeared in this magazine."

+ New Yorker 28:90 Je 28 '52 70w

"Beneath their facades of boredom and suavity, her people are naive, provincial and essentially rather decent human beings. The author seldom flogs or flays them. She likes them, and is kind to them. This tolerant attitude toward human foibles is the basis of Miss Powell's humor. She has the saving ability of being entertaining without becoming trivial. Or she can develop a serious situation without being unduly solemn." William Peden

+ Sat R 35:10 J1 26 '52 370w

"A versatile writer for both the popular and the more sophisticated magazines, Miss Powell demonstrates her special gifts in these eighteen short stories. She has a talent for lively dialogue, and, as a consequence, her characterizations are shrewd; she can claim some vividness in describing milieu, especially middle-class family home, or boarding house, or office, and a habit of ironical themes, which remain humorous by refusing the characteristic modern notes of agony or violence."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:256 S '52 210w

POWELL, MIRIAM. Jareb; il. by Marc Simont. 241p $2.50 Crowell

52-7040

Jeb, a South Georgia boy, is the hero of this tale for grades seven to nine. Jeb's struggles, his troubles with his "no count" hound, Sawbuck; the family poverty partly due to the turpentine industry; and the planned reforestation to bring back the region's prosperity are the subjects of the story.

Booklist 48:285 My 1 '52

"Exceptionally fine story." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 11 '52 240w

"Distinguished bookmaking, fine illustrations and a story full of interest—Jareb has all these and more. It is an outstanding book in that it gives so genuine a picture of the loblolly pipe country in Georgia and of the Clark family." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:176 Je '52 80w

"A story, with atmosphere, pathos and happenings . . . Contrasts of moods and happenings are excellent, Miss Powell's prose is often the lyrical essence of the south Georgia talk of her characters whose lives and figures she etches well."

+ Kirkus 20:74 F 1 '52 130w

"Good realism and some conservation and forestry information blend in a warm, human narrative." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 60w

Reviewed by A. B. McCreary
Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 60w

"It is an absorbing, moving story, with its young hero, a focus for an adult world in which death, fear of starvation, and a hopeful beginning at modern forestry dominate a child's chances for happiness. The action and emotion will hold many readers of about eleven; but the length of the book and its social implications are for those over twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 11 '52 230w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
N Y Times p18 Je 15 '52 140w
New Yorker 28:197 D 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R 35:47 S 20 '52 150w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:261 S '52 80w
Wis Lib Bul 48:179 J1 '52

POWELL, PHILIP WAYNE. Soldiers, Indians and silver; the northward advance of New Spain, 1550-1600. 317p maps $4.50 Univ. of Calif. press

972.02 Mexico—History—Spanish colony, 1540-1810 52-62534

A history of the pacification of northwestern Mexico by the Spaniards during the half century, 1550 to 1600. Beginning with the discovery of silver at Zacatecas in 1546, the story tells of the advances of soldiers, adventurers, and miners, and the eventually more successful efforts of priests and missionaries.

Reviewed by R. H. Dillon
Library J 77:1073 Je 15 '52 100w

"Philip Powell, one of the more assiduous delvers into [this] phase of Spanish expansion, here recites the tale of fifty years of fighting. It is a fine lusty account, soundly and well told." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 7 '52 330w

"The author of this book has produced a really valuable description and analysis of the forces and counterforces that shaped the early history of Mexico. Based upon research in many archives, his work combines understanding of the Spanish administration and economics on the one hand and, on the other, the ethnology of the Indians."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:287 S '52 190w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. Shot in the dark. 247p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

52-6703

Detective story.

Booklist 48:302 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 J1 27 '52 90w

Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 80w

"An exceptionally adept mixture of excitement and relentless acerbity, as neatly packed as the back of a porcupine." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 10 '52 140w

"Johnny Edwards is more vigorous and aggressive than most Powell males, but still reassuringly less than superhuman. His adventures in breaking up an immigrant-smuggling racket to avenge a dead friend introduce a delightful heroine, a fine detailed study of the activities of the Border Patrol of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, and an unusually well-balanced handling of the theme of private execution—all in Powell's unfailingly charming blend of light wit and hard action." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p29 F 17 '52 130w

"Amusing dialogue in Powell's best vein, and with some wry humor in characterization point up the action. The professional background is fine. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 24 '52 90w

"Light-weight but fun." Kathleen Sproul
Sat R 35:47 F 23 '52 40w

POWERS, FRANCIS JOSEPH, ed. Papal pronouncements on the political order. 245p $3.50 Newman press

282 Catholic church. Pope 52-6807

"As stated in the Preface, 'The purpose of this compilation is to present, through the use of topically arranged selected excerpts from the documents, messages and allocutions of the Supreme Pontiffs from Leo XIII in 1878 to Pius XII in 1951, the principal teachings of the Church on the political order.' The editor has contributed brief introductions to each chapter, a table of documents, a selected bibliography of reference works in English, and a list of supplementary readings." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 46:602 Je '52 40w

"The compilation is extremely useful as a reference." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 6 '52 40w

Reviewed by F. H. Knight
J Pol Econ 60:343 Ag '52 1750w

POWERS, RICHARD. Double decker; pictures by the author. [32p] $2 Coward-McCann

52-13411

"This proves that boys and girls who haven't 'two-story beds' miss a lot of fun. Jackie and Joan here play out marvelous adventures when they wake up. The bed becomes a theater, a wild-west stage coach, a pirate ship, a space ship. But by breakfast time it is all neat, and mother can hardly believe that it has been to Mars." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

+ Kirkus 20:597 S 15 '52 100w

"Recommended." Grace Shakin
+ Library J 77:1818 O 15 '52 60w

"In a lively, sketchy style, touched with bright pink, the artist reports the doings of his own children, with brief text. Then he gives plans for a father to build such a double-decker." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52 100w

"Brimful of early-morning high spirits, Richard Powers' black and bright pink crayon drawings are done with nice imagination and just enough detail. The text is sparse and simple, a good one for first readers still proving their new skill." Miriam James

+ N Y Times pt2, p39 N 16 '52 100w

POWYS, JOHN COWPER. The inmates. 318p $4.50 Philosophical lib.

[52-36920]

"Story of insane inmates living communal life in English asylum, and the escape of young man (sex-obsessed) and young woman (homocidal), self-cured by falling in love." Library J

"Annoying. Dickensian-like personal names. Subtle, poised exposition and vivid, beautiful prose; no scientific jargon. This reviewer fails to find humor Powys' boasts of in admirable preface." Karl Brown

+ Library J 77:1656 O 1 '52 60w

"This is a good, solid, uncompromising book for the less lazy reader to have a crack at." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 4 '52 50w

"The Inmates breaks all the rules and reaches all the sources. I have relished no novel so intensely since the same writer's Porius." G. D. Painter

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:21 J1 5 '52 700w

"The Inmates' is not a novel for casual, relaxed or even comfortable reading, though it is indubitably unusual and offers a remarkable experience, perhaps enlightening to readers

POWYS, J. C.—Continued
of great perspicacity and perseverance." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 28 '52
380w

"The Innates" has the leisurely brilliance, the attuned and insightful grasp of the ineffable which characterized in part 'Wolf Solent.' There is a kind of warmth and understanding here, a Gothic irony, and beyond this, a comic and inverted point of view, which makes the book not only palatable but a delightful Sunday excursion in the monkey-gardens at Bedlam." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p13 D 21 '52 340w

New Yorker 28:117 D 20 '52 130w

"In his eightieth year John Cowper Powys has produced an astonishing and fascinating novel; it is difficult to decide whether it is his final comic jest at humanity, or a deliberately fantastic interpretation of his philosophy of life, which has always been colored by imaginative fears and superstition." Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:16 D 27 '52 650w

"Mr. Powys will be 80 in October, but this is certainly not the impression conveyed by The Innates. There is the same unmistakable style, perhaps a little more convoluted, the same choice of outlandish, memorable names, and the same fascinated horror of cruelty. . . . Once more, too, Mr. Powys exercises his gift of reading accurately the minds of two people who have just fallen in love."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p465 J1 18 '52
130w

POWYS, JOHN COWPER. Porius; a romance of the dark ages. 682p $5.75 Philosophical lib.

52-8709

A romance of fifth-century North Wales. The story takes place in eight October days in the year 499. "The Saxons are approaching the province; King Arthur sends a mission there to prepare for battle; and one of the Welsh tribes, invited by the Druid, revolts against the King. Inspired by Myrddin, the people finally unite to help Arthur's knights drive off the invaders. Supernatural acts, peculiar rites of worship, intrigue, bloodshed and romance contribute to the furious action." (N Y Times)

Booklist 48:298 My 15 '52

"What with the Beowulf-brags and complicated Welsh names and relationships, Porius is hard and unrewarding going." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:314 J1 '52 160w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 My 25 '52
300w

Kirkus 20:135 F 15 '52 240w

"In spite of occasional passages of drama and beauty, most readers will be overwhelmed by the complex strands of history, folklore, and legend and the unfamiliar Welsh names, and mystified by the allegory and symbolism. For Powys enthusiasts only." Beatrice Libaire

Library J 77:591 Ap 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 17 '51
200w

Reviewed by Ruthven Todd
Nation 175:18 J1 5 '52 90w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis
New Repub 126:22 Ap 28 '52 450w

"The many characters and places with odd Welsh names, the weird atmosphere, and the rather diffuse style offer some difficulties. Because the period was truly of the Dark Ages, the historical references are necessarily vague. 'Porius' is an effective legendary novel with telling satire; it fails, however, to suggest convincingly the present world problem. Those who find the dim past enchanting will read this honest book by a gifted scholar leisurely and with pleasure." F. G. Fellowes

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '52 450w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 187:224 Ag 17 '51 50w

"The story is too incoherent to be remembered. Nevertheless, many passages of description, both of natural scenery and of the complicated mind of the hero, are extremely well done. As a bedside book, to be dipped into rather than to be read consecutively, this procession of impossible but well-delineated characters will induce in the reader a pleasant sensation of controlled nightmare."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p577 S 14 '51
270w

PRATOLINI, VASCO. Naked streets; tr. from the Italian by Peter and Pamela Duncan [Eng title: Tale of Santa Croce]. 217p $3

Wyn 52-11576

"The novelist pilots us through the slums of Florence, amid those crowded and mephitic alleys for which the tourist has usually neither eyes nor nose. He tells us a story of adolescent loves against a background of indigence: short-lived pleasures, inevitable corrosion, naïve hopes—sickness, murder, death—and, finally, the young hero's redemption through love. The period is the middle Nineteen Thirties; the chronicle concludes with the ominous echo of the Ethiopian war." N Y Times

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 6 '52 30w

"The Naked Streets' is a beautiful book—the characters finely limned, the atmosphere exact, the development of the threads of story as inevitable as the course of individual life itself." Frances Keene

+ Nation 175:472 N 22 '52 440w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 43:748 Je 21
'52 180w

"Mr. Pratolini's forte is not the projection of single personalities. His figures talk, drink and love more or less alike. What he does achieve, with an almost blunt simplicity, is something else: the evocation of the togetherness shared by all the folk in Santa Croce as they support one another against the burden of their days. These people, one senses, will endure." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 16 '52
410w

"Though rich in character studies, the novel fails to achieve that choral quality so prominently effective in 'A Tale of Poor Lovers.' . . . In the Italian original of 'The Naked Streets,' the melodramatic tinge of some of its episodes is either softened or sustained by the Tuscan raciness of Mr. Pratolini's writing. In English, however, the verbal flavor vanishes." Paolo Milano

+ N Y Times p44 O 19 '52 480w

"The story has charm, warmth, and simplicity, but these qualities do not save it from being inescapably reminiscent of other tales that have been written about these budding young people—or others exactly like them."

+ New Yorker 28:185 N 15 '52 120w

"The simple and vividly dramatized lives of these young Italians veer as crazily as a barometer in a hurricane. For the first two-thirds of the book everything is both plausible and illuminating, restrained in both style and action as neither of his other novels is. Then, one regrets to say, everything becomes as unlikely as the prospect of Heaven on earth next Sunday." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 35:21 N 8 '52 500w

"[This book] about his own childhood in the slums of Florence, is said to be Pratolini's favourite among the novels he has written. This is extremely interesting, for while all his books are basically moral tracts, this particular one demonstrates a simple morality of goodness with exactly the same kind of punch as the moral Victorian novel." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 188:758 Je 6 '52 80w

Time 60:118 N 17 '52 420w

"The general tone is one of tough, posturing sentimentality, and some of the psychology is peculiar, to say the least."

Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 6 '52

80w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Double jeopardy. 214p
$2.75 Doubleday

52-8057

Science-fiction novel.

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

Kirkus 20:291 My 1 '52 90w

"Reasonable fiction, recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1012 Je 1 '52 60w

"The idea is an excellent one; the telling is fast and readable; and the indirect exposition of numerous facets of future life is almost Heinleinesque. But unfortunately both episodes are as detective stories, pretty badly loaded with inconsistencies and quite inadequate in characterization and motivation." H. H. Holmes

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 6 '52 170w

"Abandoning the usual themes of science fiction, Fletcher Pratt has attempted a detective story of the future. His effort is interesting, containing as it does some sound extrapolation of criminalistics, but the net effect is not quite believable." J. F. M.

+ — N Y Times p10 S 7 '52 160w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '52 30w

PRATT, THEODORE. Big bubble. 230p $3
Duell

51-10423

A novel about the Florida real-estate boom of the nineteen twenties.

Kirkus 19:622 O 15 '51 180w

"In 'The Big Bubble' Mr. Pratt goes once over lightly the surface of the Florida of the early '20s in a gay and amusing fashion." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 9 '51 600w

"It's evident once again that Mr. Pratt is a better reporter than novelist, but readers who have followed his Florida chronicle this far will want to be in on the hoopla finale." Melville Heath

N Y Times p52 D 2 '51 500w

New Yorker 27:78 D 22 '51 80w

"If you can get past the fact that the hero and heroine are called Adam and Eve you can then settle down to a fast moving popular tale." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R of Lit 34:46 D 1 '51 120w

PRAZ, MARIO. Romantic agony; tr. from the Italian by Angus Davidson. 2d ed 502p $7
Oxford

309 Romanticism. Sex in literature. Devil in literature. Sade, Donatien Alphonse Françoise, comte, called marquis de

51-14704

"The new edition of The Romantic Agony has sixty pages of additions and a few corrections, but basically hasn't changed much since the translation first appeared in 1933 [Book Review Digest 1933]. It is a reference book on sadism (theological, aesthetic, sexual, etc.) in the nineteenth century, illustrated from a wide variety of authors and literatures." Canadian Forum

"Nobody, I think, would want to read it straight through (after about fifty pages the effect is monotonous rather than fascinating), but as a reference book to be dipped into now and then it is invaluable." Milton Wilson

+ Canadian Forum 31:236 Ja '52 440w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 28 '51 40w

"This book is by way of becoming a classic. . . Except for a frontispiece, it does not have the illustrations of the splendid Italian editions, reproductions of paintings and photographs chosen brilliantly by Signor Praz as a sort of chamber of horrors of the mythology of the Romantic Movement; and the new material that the author has added to the successive Italian reprints has here, for the purpose of avoiding new plates, been awkwardly tacked on at the end instead of appearing where it belongs in the text. A new chapter—of considerable interest to students of Italian literature but not strictly relevant to the Romantic Agony—on the literary borrowings of D'Annunzio has not been included at all." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 28:146 O 11 '52 2000w

"Long out of print, highly praised by some critics, ridiculed by a few, this remarkable book has been reissued, with minor corrections and some supplementary material." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 34:77 N 17 '51 460w

PREECE, HAROLD. Living pioneers; the epic of the West by those who lived it [by Ira Aten and others]. 317p $3.75 World pub.

978 Frontier and pioneer life—West

52-5189

"For this volume of folk-history Harold Preece gathered the stories of fifteen old-timers who lived through the early days in Texas and neighboring areas. All fifteen of his tale-tellers were alive at the time he got their stories, but he says quite frankly that he did the 'actual writing of these tales' apparently from notes rather than from recordings." N Y Times

Booklist 48:245 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 20:140 F 15 '52 150w

Library J 77:1216 J1 '52 40w

"The plan for the book is fresh. The execution would be better if the people talked their own language." J. F. Dobie

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 18 '52 490w

"The idea is good. . . Because they were written from memory or notes rather than from transcription, the tales suffer from a monotony of language. The men all talk much alike, and even the women talk surprisingly like the men. Even beyond that, however, is the old dime-novel, Buffalo-Bill treatment of the tales." Hal Borland

N Y Times p21 My 18 '52 320w

"Preece is a popular purveyor of Western fact and fiction. These stories he has here are not documented nor need they be. They are direct reflections of what the people who tell them felt and thought and believed at the time and place they held in the frontier. As such they are valid Americana and good reading." W. H. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '52 280w

"My first reaction to the book was not favorable because the author has omitted those features which would have made it more useful to historians and history students, such as a biographical sketch of each of the narrators, a more careful pinning down of places and dates, an index, and some illustrations. These omissions detract from the authenticity which is always valuable in any work of historical intent. A closer examination of the sketches reveals real merit." W. P. Webb

+ — Sat R 35:17 My 24 '52 850w

La PRENSA (newspaper). Defense of freedom; by the editors of La Prensa. 315p $4 Day

079.82 La Prensa. Liberty of the press. 52-10857

Describes the founding of this famous Argentine newspaper in 1869; and its history under the editorship of the founder, his son, and his grandson, until its doors were closed by the Peron government in 1951. Typical index of the editorials in part II; no general index.

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Ann Am Acad 28:220 N '52 280w

Booklist 48:273; 350 My 1 '52; J1 1 '52

"This is a book which should be read by all who seek to understand the Argentine crisis. It reveals both the high ideals and the outstanding ability of Argentine journalists, even tho it may announce the end of Argentina's golden age of aristocratic culture." J. F. Rippey

La PRENSA—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 29 '52 450w

"The editors of La Prensa are to be commended for the objective, dispassionate manner in which they present their case, abstaining throughout from name-calling, which would be easily understandable. This is a significant, sobering volume, incontrovertible evidence against a political creed, or rather a political disease, generally fatal to its victims. Yet the book is never ponderous." Lulu Vargas-Vila

+ Commonweal 56:347 Jl 11 '52 550w

Foreign Affairs 31:168 O '52 20w

"A masterful study that will serve as a useful example to all who believe in press freedom and as a text for those who have never considered the value of a free press." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1009 Je 1 '52 140w

Nation 175:218 S 13 '52 70w

"The prose is stodgy, and, too often, the book reads like something that might have been produced by the newspaper's promotion rather than its editorial department. . . . However, cautious or not, the newspaper could not be saved. It had to be done away with because it represented the sweet breath of freedom. Defense of Freedom is a clear, documented handbook of the way its death was accomplished. It is a story of sheer terror, and it happened. It happened not far from here." Merle Miller

+ New Repub 127:21 Jl 14 '52 1250w

"The tale is told with eloquence and emotion, but with great dignity, by editors of La Prensa who here maintain their anonymity, as they did on the newspaper itself. A number of their editorials are reprinted—worthy lessons on the noble theme of press freedom and, incidentally, on how to write editorials. The translation is excellent and there are careful annotations wherever text references would not be clear to North American readers." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p3 Je 29 '52 700w

"The final section of the book is devoted to translations of La Prensa editorials on the general subject of freedom of the press. Some of this writing rivals the best of Thomas Jefferson, and proves to those who are unfamiliar with the paper, that it was indeed one of the world's finest."

+ New Yorker 28:67 Ag 2 '52 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '52 280w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman

Sat R 35:14 S 6 '52 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p774 N 28 '52 1300w

PRENTICE-HALL, INCORPORATED, NEW YORK. Successful employee benefit plans; prepared by the editorial staff. 561p $3.85; to schools $6.65 Prentice-Hall

658:3 Employees' benefit plans 52-8538

A review of employee benefit plans which covers the nature of the problems met in the designing, installation, and maintenance of each type of plan. Includes benefits that offer security and benefits that increase income. Index.

"A thorough presentation of a very live question that will serve as a text or guide for the specialist but will not interest the general reader. For the trade unionist there may be some pointers but the union as such does not receive much consideration." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:898 My 15 '52 140w

"Here is a well-organized, concisely written, factual review of many kinds of employee benefit plans. . . . Readers who have had experience with benefit plans will recognize some of the problems as old friends previously encountered under the trial-and-error method.

Needless to say, meeting these problems prior to plan installation will save many dollars and increase the plan's value to participants. The book can be of the greatest value to the employer who is planning a new employee benefit. If he will read carefully the facts given him, making sure that he does not undervalue their significance, he will be assisted to a sound installation." J. C. Staehle

+ Management R 41:553 Ag '52 450w

PRESCOTT, HILDA FRANCES MARGARET.

Man on a donkey; a chronicle. 631p $5 Macmillan

Aske, Robert—Fiction 52-12372

A long historical novel which chronicles the life of all classes in Tudor England between the years 1509 and 1537. The focal point of the book is the Pilgrimage of Grace, and Robert Aske, squire, one of its leaders.

Booklist 49:2; 14 S 1 '52

"Richly imagined, engrossing chronicle."

+ Bookmark 12:35 N '52 30w

"Powerful book. . . . From the few clues available, Miss Prescott, a leading English historian, has filled out a life of the Prioress of Marrick. Her prioress is a magnificent construction." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:150 N '52 330w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 14 '52 320w

"A profoundly moving chronicle, a beautifully executed piece of literature, and a massively impressive work of power, sensitivity, and drama. It has no peer in the historical novels of our age. Here is the happiest blend of artistry and history, of comedy and tragedy, of pathos and joy. It is magnificent in scope, breathtaking in its feeling, and truly grand in effect. By the time you have met the people and have fit into the period, the rest of the reading is a delight, an effortless and thoroughly enjoyable journey throughout the England of Henry VIII." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 56:562 S 12 '52 1350w

"A picture of England at the time of Henry VIII that is as vivid and real as one's own recollections. . . . Recommended." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 77:1401 S 1 '52 60w

"The book is a prodigy of research, of historical fact interwoven with skillful invention. Yet as a story the interest is dispersed over too wide a field and Miss Prescott's passion for material as well as historical detail at once enriches her chronicle and overloads her story. Historical fiction is always something of a tapestry, and although the chief characters here are carefully studied and a few live in the round many are but flat figures in the weaving. But those with leisure to take up and put down will find this a remarkable record of a past age in all its human and inhuman diversity." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 14 '52 200w

"Its theme is a fascinating one, but the novel itself cannot be compared to the best work of a true novelist any more than a tapestry scene, however fine, can be compared to a portrait by Goya. The Man on a Donkey is badly titled and occasionally falls into some literary excess. It is nevertheless a remarkably rich and well-wrought work and admirable for its own qualities." S. M. Fitzgerald

+ New Repub 127:21 S 29 '52 800w

"A unique achievement. It blends fine scholarship with great literary imagination and it has a sweep and a breadth that one had forgotten could belong to the historical novel. Miss Prescott has not shied at the highest fences. She has seized on a great theme and treated it magnificently. Years of reading and planning, let alone writing, must have gone into this book and if it is not a masterpiece, it is undoubtedly one of the finest historical novels written in this century." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:411 Ap 5 '52 850w

"At one point in the book the vision becomes actual and the Savior becomes a visible man, 'shaggy haired, in patched leather hosen,' who talks to the Prioress' cook. The ground is not well laid for anything quite so explicit, and the success of the book on a mystical level will depend somewhat on the point of view of the individual reader. On the historical side there is little to question, for Miss Prescott is a scholar and she has brought the crowded years to life as though she had lived in them herself." Marchette Chute

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 14 '52 700w

"The almost perfect historical novel," British critics have called H. F. M. Prescott's vast chronicle. . . The hosannas are so nearly deserved, the author's dedication and fine scholarship so apparent, that this abashed Yank reviewer feels a little ungrateful in admitting that he did not enjoy Miss Prescott's book as much as he might have." Richard Match

+ — N Y Times p29 S 14 '52 390w

"Miss Prescott describes the years of decision in England with force and imaginative power, translating the abstract issues of the conflict between medieval mysticism and the Renaissance spirit, and between political idealism and expediency, into convincing stories of ordinary lives. The length of the book is formidable, and it is an extremely serious piece of scholarship, but it is a most rewarding and unusual historical novel that is both moving and very much to the contemporary point."

Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:138 S 13 '52 1850w

"For the second time within a year, an Englishwoman has given us an historical novel that is so accurate in its evocation of the past and so penetrating and understanding in its delineation of an array of characters as to make it stand head and shoulders above the very best of 1952's in no way scant supply of good historical fiction. The first was Edith Simon's 'The Golden Hand.'" T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 35:22 S 13 '52 450w

"A beautiful book, beautifully written. And true into the bargain." Eustace Percy

+ Spec 188:337 Mr 14 '52 650w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p26A S 21 '52 600w

Time 60:116 S 22 '52 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p169 Mr 7 '52 480w

PRESCOTT, JOHN BREWSTER. Beautiful ship; a story of the Great Lakes; decorations by Allan Thomas. 182p $2.50 Longmans

52-5640

Story of commercial fishing in Lake Michigan written for older boys. The hero, Eric Jorgensen, against advice of friends and family, buys the trawler Good Hope, hires a crew of two, and has a series of adventures with men and elements before he finally wins success.

Booklist 49:17 S 1 '52

"An unusually good story." M. B. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 23 '52 130w

Kirkus 20:341 Je 15 '52 190w

"Well written, but appeal will be limited to lovers of the Great Lakes and those interested in fishing as an occupation. Recommended where needed." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 77:1669 O 1 '52 70w

"This fine story deserves high praise and a wide audience of older boys. The style has a manly, adult realism, and the action is conditioned by clear character development." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52 250w

"This unusual story of present-day commercial fishing carries the reader along at a fast clip. Characterization is excellent, the action is vigorous but not overdone—the over-all impression stimulating." M. P. Allen

+ N Y Times p24 D 14 '52 90w

"It is a dramatic, fast-moving story that reminds this reviewer of Rudyard Kipling's 'Captains Courageous.' One of the fishermen, old Otto, is drawn so convincingly that one could never forget him. On the whole, we consider this one of the best of the stories for older boys and girls of the season—so far." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:46 S 20 '52 160w

School & Society 76:112 Ag 16 '52 10w

Wis Lib Bul 48:221 S '52

PRESCOTT, ORVILLE. In my opinion. 259p $3 Bobbs

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism

52-5807

"Subtitled 'an inquiry into the contemporary novel,' this book is not, as some might suppose, a mere collection of Prescott's daily reviews in the New York Times, but a fairly systematic analysis, emphasizing American fiction." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:244 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 30w

"In My Opinion' is journalistic in the best sense; its judgments are lucidly expressed and the books treated are sufficiently described to make the discussion widely intelligible. . . Prescott admits having written a 'personal and opinionated' book. However, his concluding chapter throws the whole subject into broad and judicious perspective and even at his most controversial he is engaging because of his geniality, candor, and sincere regard for human values." Warren Beck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Mr 30 '52 430w

"Good talk about the contemporary novel but not to be confused with criticism in the best meaning of that word. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

Library J 77:718 Ap 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 29 '52 500w

"This reader found himself agreeing with many of Mr. Prescott's evaluations and this time with an understanding of the real reasons behind them, which he had never succeeded in deriving from a conscientious reading of the columns. He thinks many readers will profit likewise; and he thinks that readers coming to Mr. Prescott for the first time will find him a tonic commentator." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '52 500w

"Here is a book that provokes argument, which is exactly what it ought to do. And readers interested in modern fiction should not miss it, if only because Mr. Prescott has literary standards and ethical standards, too, and applies them firmly and courageously. Whether one agrees or disagrees with his opinions, this kind of approach is what we need in a world where standards are increasingly based on mere expediency." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 3 '52 950w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar

Sat R 35:17 Mr 29 '52 700w

Wis Lib Bul 48:169 Jl '52

PRESTON, GEORGE HEINRICHS. Should I retire? 181p $2.50 Rinehart

179 Retirement (from work)

51-8808

"Stressing the psychological approach and the factor of 'uneven aging,' Dr. Preston, former Commissioner of Mental Hygiene, Maryland, sensibly and provocatively considers many aspects of retirement." (Bookmark) No index.

Booklist 48:165 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

"The author gives some helpful hints as to how the superannuated may still be healthy, happy and useful." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 68:805 Jl 9 '52 220w

"This would be an excellent book for all who are facing retirement. Dr. Preston discusses the matter simply and clearly." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 166:17 My 1 '52 70w

Kirkus 19:671 N 15 '51 130w

PRESTON, G. H.—Continued

"A compendium of sane and practical facts, in case we plan to retire or have retired after a lifetime in the competitive arena. The book is in a chatty vein, non-technical, and with excellent advice on hobbies, leisure, social activities, suitable sports, health, and other adjustments to senility. High recommendation." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:47 Ja 1 '52 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 11 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52 300w

Wis Lib Bul 48:86 Mr '52

PREVITE-ORTON, CHARLES WILLIAM.
Shorter Cambridge medieval history. 2v 643;
645-1202p il maps $12.50 Cambridge

940.1 Middle ages—History [52-12272]

This condensation of the eight volumes of the Cambridge Medieval History is the work of one of the contributors to the larger work and one of its original editors. Mr. Philip Grierson, who saw the work thru the press, says in his Editorial note: "The manuscript was left complete at Professor Previté-Orton's death, and at the request of the Syndics I have revised it for the printer. The text itself required little attention. Professor Previté-Orton had endeavoured to take account of advances in knowledge since the earlier volumes of the Cambridge Medieval History were published, and had in many cases modified and corrected the statements of his authors. I have followed the same policy and have not hesitated to amend his text in places where more recent research seemed to me to require it."

Reviewed by G. C. Boyce

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 28 '52 330w

"Inevitably, something of the flavor of a scholarly work survives the editing and the use of subheads gives it a textbook appearance. But for reading purposes, as well as reference, it is easier to use than a solid text page."

+ Kirkus 20:626 S 15 '52 120w

"Unfortunately no bibliography. Magnificent set recommended without reservation." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1899 N 1 '52 110w

"The standard of accuracy is extremely high. The narrative of political events is as clear as may be, though at times in the effort of compression their significance seems to be squeezed out of sight. The sections on literature and the arts reveal the author's sensitive interest and understanding and catholic taste. . . The conception of this book as a distillation of the Cambridge Medieval History gives it a somewhat stiff and old-fashioned air. In the first place, economic conditions and changes which engage so much of the attention of modern historians occupy little space. . . Secondly, the work is so admirably lucid, so neatly articulated, that some of the more confusing aspects of medieval life are left outside its scheme. . . There are no notes to show the written or other sources, no bibliography to guide the curious reader to critical discussions. But that is a feature of this type of work, not a defect of the particular example. It is very, very good of its kind." C. R. Cheney

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 30 '52 650w

Reviewed by J. O. Prestwich

New Statesman & Nation 44:613 N 22 '52 600w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 26 '52 900w

Reviewed by L. V. Updegraff

N Y Times p50 N 30 '52 320w

"The reference value of this shorter history has been enhanced by numerous genealogical tables and lists of emperors and popes, as well as by helpful sketch-maps and a table of dates. One important omission is the absence of bibliographical aids to further reading, contained in the original work. Specialists will hardly be satisfied, as is to be expected, with the summary treatment which many important events have received in these volumes, but even such scholars will find much of value for them also in this shorter version of the Medieval History." A. C. Krey

+ — Sat R 35:15 N 22 '52 500w

"Now from the pen of one of the last editors of the original eight volumes, we have the Shorter Cambridge Medieval History—shorter, indeed, but in its 1,200 pages of text, illustrations, genealogical tables, lists of dates and maps, still a monumental work of compendious knowledge. . . The great advantage of Previté-Orton's two volumes is that, infused with a single vision, they make a coherent whole; and that vision expresses the mature reflection of a scholar whose sound knowledge and sure judgement—and, I would add, his singular unpretentiousness—gained him the widest respect. . . If what Previté-Orton gives us is, in essence, the structure of the Middle Ages, rather than the Middle Ages themselves, we may be sure that without knowledge of the structure of mediaeval (or of any other) society, we shall not penetrate to the core. There are no short cuts." G. Barraclough

+ Spec 189:400 S 26 '52 1000w

"There can be no question that as a work of concise and primary reference this book ranks high. . . Colour and individuality have often, and inevitably, been sacrificed, but a compressed and factual statement has been compiled covering a whole millennium of European growth. The factual accuracy of this account is throughout wholly admirable, and within the limitations of its space its detail is remarkable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 10 '52 4300w

PRIBRAM, ALFRED FRANCIS. Austria-Hungary and Great Britain, 1908-1914; with an introductory chapter on the diplomatic relations between Austria and England up to 1908; tr. by Ian F. D. Morrow. 328p $4.50 Oxford

327.436 Austria—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Austria. European war, 1914-1918—Diplomatic history 51-13963

"Years ago Pribram wrote an account of the diplomatic relations between the Austrian Empire and England from the earliest times until 1815. He had meant to complete the story to the outbreak of the First World War; but the opportunity never came, and he had to content himself in extreme old age with covering the last six years. His narrative is diplomatic history pure and simple. It is based almost entirely on the British and Austro-Hungarian documents which were published in the inter-war years. . . The three crises with which it principally deals [are] the Bosnian affair, the Balkan wars, and the outbreak of the world war." Manchester Guardian

"The diplomatic relations between Austria-Hungary and Great Britain are narrated in such detail that there is a good deal of rather tiresome repetition of each country's viewpoints. Furthermore, the narrative has an air of unreality because almost nothing is said of the activities of the other Great Powers. His book is useful as giving the carefully considered interpretation of a great scholar to a narrow segment of pre-1914 history, but for a well-rounded view, complete with all the actors speaking, one had best turn to the works of B. E. Schmitt, E. C. Helmreich, and others." S. E. Fay

Am Hist R 57:668 Ap '52 550w

"This posthumous work by a distinguished Austrian scholar is of an almost forbidding dryness. . . All the same, it is welcome to have a new examination, limited to Anglo-Austrian relations, by a historian of Pribram's distinction." A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '51 550w

"The study of the 1908-14 period is preceded by a highly competent chapter on 'Austria and England throughout seven centuries, 1200-1908,' and by some uninspired sketches of the chief actors in the scenes about to be described. The translation is unable to enliven the text very much, and there are a good many misprints." Elizabeth Wiskemann

Spec 187:714 N 23 '51 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p592 S 21 '51 1650w

PRICE, LIONEL DIGBY SHERLEY-. See Sherley-Price, L. D.

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. Amazing Amazon; with maps by the author. 306p $4 Day 981 [918.1] Amazon river. Amazon valley 52-9613

Story of the Amazon region, told in a series of chapters combining the personal experiences of the author and the facts about the people, the hunting of wild animals, the rubber plantations, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 49:46 O 1 '52

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 21 '52 240w

"Most of the book sparkles with lively reporting, fascinating storytelling, and gasp-evoking data. However, it gets off to a rather sluggish start and dwindles in interest near the end. And it is unfortunate that his chapter on Nelson Rockefeller's activities in Brazil and Venezuela is quite inaccurate." R. M. Hallett
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 7 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:482 Ag 1 '52 150w

"Highly recommended."

+ Library J 77:1761 O 15 '52 40w

"Mr. Price knows his Amazon both by travel and reading. He has a sharp and intelligent eye, and his peculiar charm is lack of prejudice. . . This is a cheerful, humane and informative travel book."

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:298 S 13 '52 240w

"Willard Price is that rare fellow among writers of travel books who makes his roving sound convincing, who says something and says it well. This, his latest of many books, is a highly readable and informative account of the most fabulous of all the rivers of earth."

Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 5 '52 440w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 17 '52 600w

"Though he quotes entertainingly from the old writers on the subject of Amazon women warriors, he comes to no conclusion as to their existence, and the Indians' magic he reports by hearsay. This would all be palatable if you only could get your teeth into it. . . Willard Price was not built to be a pundit. If you have not read his other books, nor those of other writers on the Amazon, you will find this one pleasant and informative." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R 35:31 O 4 '52 350w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p727 N 7 '52 370w

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. South Sea adventure; with maps by the author. 243p $2.75 Day 52-6179

Two brothers, sons of a dealer in wild animals, are sent to the South Pacific in search of such rarities as a giant octopus, a tiger shark, a flying gurnard, etc. They encounter a different kind of adventure than they expect, but are finally successful on all counts.

Reviewed by Mary Handy

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 120w

"A little Hardy-Boyish but interesting and exciting. Loaded with information—almost too much for one book but, nevertheless, the stuff boys thrive on. Warning: this is second of a series with last page anticipating another. Fine for slow readers. Recommended for junior high." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 77:731 Ap 15 '52 80w

"The author brings in a good deal of material about sea creatures of the Pacific and about pearls. . . To an adult, this realism does not balance the fantastic idea of boys this age being sent off alone, nor the poor style. But it is certainly 'packed with thrills.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 15 '52 140w

"The reader who is looking for thrills, hair-breadth escapes from disaster, and dangerous encounters with weird sea monsters, will get more than his money's worth from this sequel to 'Amazon Adventure.'" H. B. L.

+ N Y Times p10 J1 6 '52 150w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen

Sat R 35:57 My 10 '52 180w

PRISHVIN, MIKHAIL MIKHAILOVICH. Lake and the woods; or, Nature's calendar; tr. by W. L. Goodman; with wood-engravings by Brian Hope-Taylor. 258p $4.50 Pantheon bks. 891.78 Natural history—Russia 52-8822

"Mikhail Prishvin was born in 1873 and his first book appeared in 1907. He has specialized in descriptions of nature and of life in provincial Russia. This book of his is a collection of short pieces—from half a page to four or five pages long—which are sometimes purely descriptions of nature, but often have an element of story or essay in them." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 48:292 My 15 '52

"Prishvin is an exceedingly perceptive individual. He will make one see many of the phenomena of nature in a new and interesting light. Like the best of the nature writers, he is primarily a philosopher of nature rather than a cataloger of species. But for some reason his writing too frequently lacks sparkle." Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 16 '52 370w

"Anecdotes about his sporting dogs are particularly charming. These tales are graphically told and the reader will often forget that the book is a translation until a mistake in the English name of a bird comes to his notice." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 30 '51 240w

"Just as a nature book, this is an interesting one. For all its intense Russianness, it bears properly the mark of the universal. Brian Hope-Taylor's wood-engravings have impressive charm, and William Louis Goodman's translation makes excellent reading." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 18 '52 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Times p7 Je 15 '52 600w

"Prishvin combines a dry humor with the ability to tell a simple story effectively, and when this is added to his sympathetic interpretation of nature the result is worth reading." A. C. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 4 '52 160w

"No doubt, for a Russian reader, much of his detail has the evocative quality which is essential to the success of work of this kind, but for a reader without the necessary background the effect is too often trivial."

Times [London] Lit Sup p145 F 22 '52 220w

PRISHVIN, MIKHAIL MIKHAILOVICH. Treasure trove of the sun; tr. by Tatiana Balkoff-Drowne; ill. by Feodor Rojankovsky. 79p $2.75 Viking 52-12492

Picture storybook about two young Russian orphans, telling what happened on a day when they went gathering blackberries.

PRISHVIN, M. M.—Continued

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 21 '52
60w

"A book to own, read and treasure for years to come."

+ Commonweal 57:172 N 21 '52 50w

"The reader puts the book down knowing that he will come back to it many times. The illustrations are some of Rojankovsky's best with plenty of white space on the pages to make them effective. A book to share with children of all ages." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:325 O '52 120w

Kirkus 20:407 J1 15 '52 170w

"The mood created by the descriptions and the power of the pictures shot through with a blue that makes them come alive, is most effective."

+ Library J 77:1743 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by A. B. Martin

Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 80w

"Into this simple tale has gone emotional clarity that we associate with Chekhov, plus the powers of a skilled naturalist... The simplicity of Prishvin's art makes his writing appealing to grown-ups; one cannot be certain of its wide appeal to children. It is deeply moving, yet never sentimental." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p7 N 16 '52 320w

"The 'Treasure Trove of the Sun' is one of the handsomest juveniles to be published recently in this country." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times pt2, p34 N 16 '52 110w

"A rare and beautiful book by an eminent Russian naturalist."

+ New Yorker 28:201 D 6 '52 110w

"Beautiful drawings, printed in rich color, illustrate this distinguished story from Russia... This is a book for adults and for art lovers, as well as for children."

+ Sat R 35:54 N 15 '52 200w

PRITCHARD, JOHN WALLACE. Every crazy wind. 242p $3 Dodd

52-7346

Story of Lacy Corrigan, charming, well-to-do, who becomes, voluntarily, a patient in a psychiatric "rest home."

"This book is so unusual in its affectionate tomfoolery, perplexing love affair, and technical atmosphere, that it will be enjoyed mainly by a select reading group." J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:530 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Mr. Pritchard writes a relaxed and relaxing prose. He has made his central characters believably charming, which is no small feat, and he has only occasionally allowed his secondary characters to get out of hand."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 23 '52 180w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '52 360w

"Set this down as a good try which just avoids being in bad taste." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:34 Mr 15 '52 100w

PROCHNOW, HERBERT VICTOR. 1001 ways to improve your conversation and speeches. 341p $3.95 Harper

808.5 Conversation. Quotations 51-11951

"Of practical help in business or social relationships, this comprehensive handbook lists stories, literary quotations and many other valuable aids to effective conversation, public speaking and writing. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:182 F 1 '52

+ Bookmark 11:106 F '52 20w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 16 '52

"In spite of [some] shallowness the author does, through such mechanisms as lists of errors, literary quotations, vocabulary, technicalities of speech planning, and such conversational do's (sympathize with the other's viewpoint) and don'ts (never gossip) manage to say a few obvious truths."

Kirkus 19:654 N 1 '51 140w

"A volume which should be a help to anyone who has to speak in public." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:32 Ja '52

PROSKE, MRS BEATRICE IRENE (GIL-MAN). Castilian sculpture; Gothic to renaissance. 525p 328il $15 Hispanic soc.

734.2 Sculpture, Spanish 52-570

"Spain during the spectacular reign of Isabella the Catholic is the period to which Mrs. Proske has devoted this handsomely illustrated and encyclopedic volume. At no other time in Spain's history have works of art been produced in such abundance and with such luxuriance, the latter quality being explained both by the floridity of the Late Gothic style in general and by the taste for magnificence of the Spanish monarchs and aristocrats in particular. Mrs. Proske gives a vivid picture of the splendor of this Castilian society of which Burgos and Toledo were the principal artistic centers." Sat R

"Mrs. Proske's book, the fruit of many years of painstaking research, is the only comprehensive survey of the architectural and sepulchral sculpture of this rich and fascinating period. Although polychromed sculpture is less exhaustively treated, there is considerable data on architecture. The author has fully documented her study, and she has examined all of the original monuments. Her opinions are reached after thoughtful consideration, and she is never guilty of propounding irresponsible theories." H. E. Wetthey

+ Sat R 35:45 Ap 5 '52 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p592 S 12 '52 1100w

"The author, admirably thorough in her treatment of the subject, follows the Hispanic Society's tradition of conservative scholarship by generally avoiding hypotheses and the statement of personal attributions. Although her extremely painstaking inspection of so many monuments may daunt some readers, the distinction and importance of the architecture she discusses, and the fine quality of the 327 illustrations she has selected should assure Mrs. Proske an appreciative audience for her book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:125 Je '52 250w

PROUTY, MRS AMY. Mexico and I. 258p il $4 Dorrance

972 Mexico—Description and travel 51-8883

An account of a leisurely trip thru Mexico, containing descriptions of architecture, towns, native customs, and the many local festivals. Illustrated with over sixty photographs. No index.

"It is, on the whole, a book that would whet anyone's appetite for either a first trip or another trip to Mexico." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:434 Ap 9 '52 60w

"Actually, the author does include some historical facts, as one needs to in order to clarify some of the sights the tourist sees. But in the main this is a highly personal, friendly story, light-hearted and lively, of one woman's Mexico. I should say that the chief point about it is that the most casual reader can perceive why the author found the Mexican people friendly; that is bound to happen to anyone who approaches any foreign country in a frank and open way and ready to show friendliness." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 3 '52 150w

Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 20 '52 30w

PRUD'HOMMEAUX, RENE. Port of Missing Men; il. by Rataello Busoni. 192p $2.50 Viking 52-8710

Mystery story for teen-agers.

"The place and characters emerge clearly, unhampered by a complex and swift-moving plot. Lively sketches." V. H.
+ Horn Bk 28:179 Je '52 80w

Kirkus 20:130 F 15 '52 80w

"Mystery lovers over twelve who could cope with this and like it might as well read adult mysteries. It is not as good as 'The Sunken Forest' to which it is somewhat a sequel, a fact that complicates the story even more." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 20 '52 90w

"The plot is exciting, but over-complicated, especially in the early chapters which are closely tied to the author's first book. Dave is a pleasant young man and his dog, Miss Happy, is a delightful character, but the others never have enough vitality to make their actions convincing." L. R. Davis

N Y Times p24 My 18 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:55 My 10 '52 110w

PRYCHODKO, NICHOLAS. One of the fifteen million. 236p $3 Little

365.65 Convict Labor—Russia 52-6800

"This is a graphic picture of the operation of the Soviet secret police, or NKVD, during the years 1938-40, when the Soviet Union was engaged in building up its satellite strength. Author relates in detail his false arrest on trumped up charges, his imprisonment, merciless beatings to extract a false 'confession,' and ultimate deportation to slave camp in Siberia. . . . At the time of the invasion of the Germans, he escaped and made his way ultimately to Canada." Library J

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 10 '52 100w

Christian Century 69:1258 O 29 '52 110w

"Mr. Prychodko's book is marked by passionate bitterness, but maybe it is time for strong language in presenting the case of Soviet slave labor, which is one of the most important moral issues of our civilization—a crime against humanity itself." Jan Olechowski

Commonweal 56:445 Ag 8 '52 550w

Kirkus 20:310 My 15 '52 240w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 77:1010 Je 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 20 '52 460w

Reviewed by D. J. Dallin

N Y Times p14 S 7 '52 380w

New Yorker 28:155 O 11 '52 160w

"Perhaps everyone in this country is fully aware of all that goes on in the Soviet under the smoke-screen of talk about a 'people's democracy.' But I doubt it. I doubt that even a small fraction of Americans really understand what life can be like under the Soviet terror. They should know, in detail. Horrifying as it is, Prychodko's story will tell them and drive the conviction home." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 16 '52 900w

Reviewed by Martin Ebon

Sat R 35:31 O 4 '52 280w

"One of the Fifteen Million' might have enjoyed wide readership had it been published along with the first dozen books pertaining to the macabre subject of Russian imprisonment. As it is, however, it appears at a time when constant reiteration of a familiar theme no longer provokes such keen curiosity. It is, however, excellently written by a man who has not been obviously embittered by his tragic experiences." B. F. K.

+ Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 120w

PULSE, CHARLES K. John Bonwell. 436p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

52-6978

A novel of the Ohio Valley during the half-century when the Civil War was brewing.

Booklist 48:339 Je 15 '52

"In the background of his story Pulse has included a wealth of historic detail. Highways and taverns, river landings and market squares, camp meeting preachers and smugglers of run-away slaves—all these are taken direct from the vanished life of the Ohio valley. Few romantic novels have been written with so thoro a knowledge of the period and region." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 15 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:132 F 15 '52 150w

"After a hesitant start this first novel soon warms up to a nicely told, well rounded, interest holding story. . . . Excellent characterization, glimpses of historical figures, pictures of plantation life, Free Soil movement, underground railway, Mexican War and touch of Civil War. Deftly spiced with romance and unified by intriguing plot." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 100w

"Charles K. Pulse's 'John Bonwell,' a novel of the Ohio River valley during the first half of the nineteenth century, evokes that frontier with accuracy and vividness. . . . At peopling the Ohio valley with real and believable men and women the author is considerably less successful. No character, not even the titular hero, emerges as more than a one-dimensional cardboard creation." W. B. Bracke

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Jl 13 '52 410w

"Mr. Pulse's publishers inform us that he is a practicing attorney with a lifelong interest in the era and the country he describes. It is evident throughout that he has read deeply in Ohio history—and no reader will doubt for an instant that his love for the region is genuine. If he were as skilled as a novelist as he is as a historical researcher 'John Bonwell' would be a better book. It suffers considerably, particularly in the beginning, from stilted, sometimes preposterous, dialogue and melodramatic characterization, but it is an honest and rousing tale." Raymond Holden

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 8 '52 330w

Sat R 35:35 Ag 2 '52 180w

PURDOM, CHARLES BENJAMIN. Producing Shakespeare. 220p il $4.50 British bk. centre

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Stage presentation [61-4266]

"An exhaustive manual for the producer, which first admonishes him to put the play before his own desire for self-expression, and to keep in mind that Shakespeare wrote at a particular time and for a particular kind of stage. Discusses in turn the plays, the theaters, the stages, scenery, properties, costumes, music, actors, the plan of the production, and even the audience." Booklist

Booklist 48:262 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 77:534 Mr 15 '52 70w

"'Producing Shakespeare' is of immediate interest to the actor and director, but it has much to offer anyone interested in Shakespeare or the theatre." W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 23 '52 270w

Reviewed by Michael MacOwan

Spec 135:158 F 2 '51 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 12 '51 1000w

PURDY, KENNETH W. Kings of the road. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 246p il $5 Little 629.209 Automobiles—History. Automobile racing 52-5867

"Mr. Purdy, who is editor of True Magazine, shows in this book that he certainly knows

PURDY, K. W.—Continued
his automobiles. 'The Kings of the Road' traces the history of many of the most famous names in the sport and luxury car field: Bugatti, Rolls-Royce, Mercedes-Benz, Alfa Romeo, Hispano-Suiza, Isotta-Fraschini, Bentley, MG and a dozen others. It also describes some of the creative personalities who designed outstanding motor-cars and engines and those who drove them in the grueling road races of Europe." N Y Times

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:233 Jl '52 30w

Reviewed by Hal Foust

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 22 '52 180w

Reviewed by W. C. Harvey

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 15 '52 450w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:427 D '52 20w

Kirkus 20:217 Mr 15 '52 210w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:891 My 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Erwin Lessner

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 8 '52 750w

"Detroit will not like Mr. Purdy's book. He explodes too many claims of American priority and is inclined to sneer a bit at the marvelous everyday, quiet, dependable performance of our mass-produced cars. But the engineering section of the automobile industry will find 'Kings of the Road' immensely interesting." R. M. Cleveland
N Y Times p14 Je 8 '52 500w

"Along with many another pleasant fanatic, Mr. Purdy likes to look back at the good old days. A lot of others will enjoy doing the same with him in this book." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 20 '52 750w

"This book enshrines some of the most distinguished writing about the internal combustion engine since the Duryea brothers rambled along Maple Street in Springfield, Mass., in 1894 at a brisk seven miles an hour. Mr. Purdy is, as has been suggested, a zealot, but his enthusiasm never beclouds his factuality, his fluency, or his competence to produce entertaining reading. This book is by no means exclusively for the specialist; the most plodding bus-rider can read it with high enjoyment." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 16 '52 260w

Time 59:108 Je 16 '52 450w

Wis Lib Bul 48:168 Jl '52

PURYEAR, VERNON JOHN. Napoleon and the Dardanelles. 437p $5 Univ. of Calif. press 327.44 Napoleon I, emperor of the French. Turkey—Foreign relations—France. France —Foreign relations—Turkey 51-10924

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The style is succinct, orderly, clear, and precise. No one will read the volume consecutively, but historical students will frequently consult it with gratitude, for it is an outstanding contribution to the diplomatic history of the time." G. M. Dutcher
+ Am Hist R 57:426 Ja '52 750w

"I would recommend Dr. Puryear's Napoleon and the Dardanelles not only to those with a historical interest but to every one actively interested in current international affairs. The problems it deals with are timeless—until man learns to treat other peoples and countries as he would like to have his own people and country treated." Nuri Eren

+ Ann Am Acad 279:239 Ja '52 650w

"Professor Puryear's work cannot fairly be described as history with a preconceived thesis, but it does incur the suspicion of trying to prove too much. It is a remarkable piece of detailed research and patient reconstruction, based mainly upon the archives of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, but making use also of several other original sources."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 4 '52 1400w

PUSEY, MERLO JOHN. Charles Evans Hughes. 2v 829p il $15 Macmillan
B or 92 Hughes, Charles Evans 51-7851
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"As author of this biography, Mr. Pusey, an associate editor of the Washington Post, has ranged widely in his search for materials bearing directly upon the life of his subject and has organized those materials with skill and literary fluency. In the approximately eight hundred pages of his two volumes, he has not been able to tell all that needs to be told about the multiple activities of his subject. Some segments suffer greatly from brevity of treatment and particularly from want of background material and essay appraisal, but he has told a great deal and told it well." C. B. Swisher

+ — Am Hist R 58:147 O '52 850w

"This biography, excellent though it is in many respects, has important limitations that this reviewer cannot let pass without comment. Its chief fault stems from Mr. Pusey's complete lack of the critical faculty." A. S. Link
+ — Ann Am Acad 280:172 Mr '52 450w

"Lord Balfour, no mean judge of statesmen, said toward the end of his life, 'Charles Evans Hughes is the most dominating figure I have ever met in public life.' . . . This splendid American has found a masterly biographer." Herbert Elliston

+ Atlantic 189:73 Ap '52 2350w

Current Hist 22:38 Ja '52 70w

Foreign Affairs 30:674 Jl '52 70w

"With characteristic foresight and sagacity, Charles Evans Hughes employed the leisure of his retirement to prepare an extensive commentary on his life and career, for the use of a biographer. Merlo Pusey has had access to these notes, covering several hundred pages, and has quoted from them freely. They help enormously to make his account a lively and authentic chronicle, combining the virtues of biography and autobiography." P. A. Freund
+ New Repub 126:20 Mr 17 '52 650w

"One of the best of its kind, this work deserves a wide reading as an authoritative and valuable source of information."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:11 Mr '52 330w

Reviewed by Basil Rauch

Yale R n s 41:468 spring '52 450w

PUTNAM, PETER. Keep your head up, Mr Putnam! 171p $2.50 Harper
362.41 Blind. Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. 52-5468

The author almost lost his life in a shooting accident while he was a junior at Princeton. He recovered but was discovered to be totally blind. This is the account of his experiences at the Seeing Eye school at Morristown, New Jersey.

Booklist 48:242 Ap 1 '52

+ Bookmark 11:183 My '52 40w

"He is amusing and informative on the Seeing Eye course and brilliantly successful in presenting some of his fellow students and his first dog, Minerva." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 23 '52 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 26 '52 500w

Horn Bk 28:189 Je '52 30w

"Neither grim nor tragic but alive and interesting, this is the success story of an affliction."

+ Kirkus 20:103 F 1 '52 280w

"Absorbingly interesting is the author's unsentimental account of the four-week's course in a class of men and women at the Seeing Eye, Morristown, N.J. Each detail of the scientific—and decidedly strenuous—instruction by which the blind person learns to have 'the courage of his dog's convictions' is given with absolute clarity." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 13 '52 220w

"What by its very nature might have been an emotion jerker is here a rich and exciting story of the journey into light and manhood that one boy made, written with skillful directness, charm and humor. It is in fact so good a story that one wishes it might have been more inclusive." Gertrude Samuels

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 30 '52 500w

"The book has humor and is very nicely written."

+ New Yorker 28:146 My 17 '52 100w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe

Sat R 35:17 My 17 '52 280w

Wis Lib Bul 48:167 Jl '52

PUTNAM, PETER, ed. Seven Britons in imperial Russia, 1698-1812. 424p il maps $7.50 Princeton univ. press

947 [914.7] British in Russia. Russia—Description and travel 52-5827

"The years which saw the emergence of Russia as a Great Power also saw a period of close cooperation between Russia and Britain and many Britons traveled through that vast country on military and economic missions or for purely educational or social purposes. From among the copious diaries and other writings of these travelers, Mr. Putnam has chosen some of the more interesting and illuminating for inclusion in this volume to provide a commentary on the development of Russia's relations with the West." Current Hist

"The purpose of this volume is less to illustrate the transformation of Russia than to illuminate the development of Anglo-Russian relations in all their aspects, and this it accomplishes with great skill. . . While the extracts from the various writings form the heart of this anthology, their value is greatly enhanced by the interesting introductory essays of the editor. Incidentally, this volume deserves special mention as an example of fine publishing." C. E. Black

+ Ann Am Acad 283:223 S '52 330w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 17 '52 500w

Current Hist 22:377 Je '52 80w

"Most accounts are not only informative but interestingly written. Recommended." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 140w

"A book on Russia which furnishes more light than heat is especially welcome and valuable today in view of the long and cold war in progress. Such a book is this critical anthology selected from the accounts of seven British travelers in Russia between 1698 and 1812. . . A careful reading of this book will enlighten considerably the reader's understanding and comprehension of the mighty problem facing the world today in trying to live at peace with Russia, still Asiatic, still barbarous, and still unsympathetic and ignorant of our Western conception of liberty, freedom and democracy." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '52 1000w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 S 14 '52 270w

"A unique travel book on Russia that may serve both as fascinating matter for the curious who enjoy reading about foreign lands and as a valuable source book for the scholarly historian. . . [It is] a book which is an important contribution to our historical knowledge of eighteenth-century Russia." E. J. Simmons

+ Sat R 35:11 Ag 16 '52 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:239 S '52 190w

PYLES, THOMAS. Words and ways of American English. 310p $3.50 Random house

427.9 Americanisms. English language—History 52-5156

"The present book is an attempt to provide for the lay reader a brief yet adequate treatment of the English language as it has been and is spoken and written by Americans. The professional student of language will probably find little or nothing here with which he is not already familiar, although it is hoped that the presentation and interpretation of some of the material may strike him as fresh and perhaps controversial." (Pref) The author is professor of English at the University of Florida. Index of words and phrases.

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 17 '52 350w

"What Mr. Pyles is doing in these essays is expressing his nostalgia for a more conservative time and way of life through a criticism of the processes of language in America. His book will help clear the minds of many who think and write about the American language because they will recognize some of their own confusion in his. One leaves this new book on American and British English with the feeling that the subject is so vast and complex a field that you can prove almost anything in and by it, that to attempt to simplify a language with a theory is as presumptuous as to attempt to so simplify a nation." R. M. Hammond

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 7 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:334 Je 1 '52 220w

"This is a book for every library—and it should go on the shelf with the great books on words: Trench, the Fowlers, Mencken, Krapp, Weekley, Partridge, and Greenough and Kittredge." S. S. Smith

+ Library J 77:1404 S 1 '52 200w

"Mr. Pyles writes simply and agreeably, with a humor reminiscent of H. L. Mencken's, and he imparts the movement of narrative to what could easily be stagnant information. Despite a too insistent bias, the biographical chapter on Webster is a good essay, and indeed the book as a whole can be recommended, subject to caution on certain matters for which the author is in a sense not wholly responsible. For as he progresses Mr. Pyles betrays through his opinions that he speaks for the increasingly powerful guild of linguists." Jacques Barzun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 3 '52 1750w

"Mr. Pyles writes with authority, interest and wit. His accents will interest the general reader and perhaps stir some healthy controversy among the brethren." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '52 360w

New Yorker 28:179 O 18 '52 160w

"Given the merest shadow of interest in our American speech and how it has developed, the reader of this book will find himself fascinated throughout by the author's fresh and lively account of how the English used today in America came to its present form." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 31 '52 700w

"Since Mr. Pyles is writing for laymen, his aim has been to select from what has already been found out about the American language rather than to add to the sum total of what is known. . . He writes in a light and entertaining vein, eschewing such scholarly impedimenta as footnotes, bibliography, and phonetic symbols." M. M. Mathews

+ Sat R 35:8 Ag 2 '52 700w

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Calendar of crime. 248p $2.75 Little

52-5000

Twelve short detective stories.

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:648 N 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 30w

QUEEN, ELLERY—Continued

"All of the tales have appeared in print earlier, one of them three times; but as a sequence settled together here they have a special capacity to please. The reader dubious about the short story (and there are a good many of them) might very well find his objections evaporating in this congenial lot." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 20 '52 230w

"Queen's twenty-five novels have been a highly varied lot (doubtless one of the reasons for their enduring success); you'll find just about every aspect of the inexhaustible master in this calendar." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '52 230w

"The formalized pattern in which the Queens excel is carried one step further in this fascinating book of short stories. Each is good in its own right, each stems inevitably from a special event, and the events—one typical of each month of the calendar—form the neatest whole you'd want to see." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 13 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 30w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
Spec 189:48 Jl 4 '52 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p449 Jl 11 '52 80w

Wis Lib Bul 48:94 Mr '52

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. King is dead. 250p $2.75 Little 52-5529

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:236 Jl '52

Kirkus 20:170 Mr 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 44:526 N 1 '52 80w

"Ellery Queen's most entertaining novel in a number of years." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 11 '52 230w

"The name of Ellery Queen on a book conveys the solid assurance that here, at least, is a pure detective story in the great tradition, and Queen presents one of his noblest puzzles in The King is Dead." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 My 18 '52 150w

"A preposterous story, told with the wealth of detail and characterization that Mr. Queen's admirers have come to expect."

New Yorker 28:100 My 31 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p28 My 25 '52 80w

Reviewed by Esther Howard

Spec 189:712 N 21 '52 50w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 Jl '52

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards: seventh series; the winners of the seventh annual detective short-story contest; sponsored by Ellery Queen's mystery magazine. 263p $2.75 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

A collection of sixteen of the prize winning stories from the seventh annual contest of Ellery Queen's mystery magazine. Partial contents: The cold winds of Adesta, by Thomas Flanagan; Spring fever, by D. S. Davis; Tyger! Tyger! by A. H. Z. Carr; The house that Nella lived in, by Mabel Seeley; An episode at the Honeypot, by Mark Van Doren; Always trust a cop, by O. R. Cohen.

Kirkus 20:575 S 1 '52 80w

"This year's volume is slim in English contestants, but the stories demonstrate again that the contest is a remarkable lure for sound novelists and capable but infrequent short-story writers." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 2 '52 300w

"Among the pure detective stories, Queen has rarely found better specimens in any year than those by A. H. Z. Carr and Octavus Roy Cohen, and particularly in an unusual episode in detection among prehistoric cave-dwellers by Edgar Pangborn. In the straight fiction, Dorothy Salisbury Davis, Mark Van Doren and the perennial Stanley Ellin are outstanding. And perhaps the best story in the book is a powerful objective study in petty criminality and marijuana delusion by Howard Schoenfeld, who uses the technique of the hardboiled crime novel for serious psychological probing." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p58 N 9 '52 320w

"Whichever kind you prefer, it's here—and good." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 9 '52 40w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:43 N 1 '52 20w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Yellow cat mystery; with front. by Barbara Corrigan. 200p $2.50 Little

52-6791

Mystery story for boys and girls.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Kirkus 20:300 My 15 '52 120w

"It would prove to many eleven-year-olds a mild extension of the horrors they are accustomed to on TV. It is a sort of mystery we never have recommended." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p16 N 16 '52 30w

"Although the Queen touch is not so deft when handling the speech of the younger set, it is sure in constructing a mystery story. Should appeal to readers too young for adult 'who-dun-its' and too old for the simple mysterious story." Iris Vinton

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 3 '52 100w

"Fast-moving enough for any boy over 11." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '52 40w

QUEEN, STUART ALFRED, and ADAMS, JOHN B. Family in various cultures; a survey of eleven family systems in eleven cultural and historical settings throughout the world. 280p $4.50 Lippincott

301.42 [392] Family

52-812

"To provide the student with materials for the comparative study of the family within a single volume, Queen and Adams have written a series of sketches of the family in four non-Western cultures and also at various times in the long history of Western civilization. Adams has described the family among the Hopi, the Kwoma, the Alorese, and the Japanese and, in addition, has prepared a short concluding chapter. Queen has provided an introductory chapter and a description of the family in various periods and places in the history of Western man: among the ancient Hebrews, the ancient Romans, the early Christians, the Anglo-Saxons, the medieval English, in sixteenth- to eighteenth-century England, and among the English colonists in America." Am J Soc

"The simple and lucid style makes comparative materials available to undergraduate students who might have difficulty in digging the materials from the original sources." R. F. Winch

+ Am J Soc 58:116 Jl '52 240w

"Despite weaknesses this book would probably be useful in a course which attempts to cover a great deal in a relatively short time—a course, for example, which deals not only with the history and anthropology of the family but also with contemporary marriage and family problems. The book deals with eleven family forms in very brief compass, thus obviating the necessity for sending the students to a score or more separate references for comparable material." M. H. Kuhn

+ — Am Soc R 17:510 Ag '52 950w

"The Family in Various Cultures should be very useful in both functional and comparative courses in the family, whether or not library facilities are limited." O. N. Simpkins

+ Social Forces 30:469 My '52 260w

QUEFFELEC, HENRI. Island priest; tr. from the French by James Whitall. 248p $3 Dutton

52-8257

A novel from which the motion picture God Needs Men was made. The setting is a tiny island off the coast of Brittany. The inhabitants, fishermen and salvagers of the sea, long for a priest, but no priest wants to stay long on the barren island. At the departure of their last priest the people beg his sacristan to take over. The story is of the struggle of the untrained youth to help the people, and his final achievement of his dream—to become an ordained priest.

Booklist 49:68 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52 30w

"This is a skillfully written novel whose simplicity of incident and narrative serves to cloak a great many ambiguities and ironies." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 176:233 D '52 200w

"A simple story, written simply about simple people; yet it makes a book very much alive in both characterization and event, graceful in form and mysteriously moving in its implications." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 14 '52 340w

"Excellent novel, thoroughly modern in style, tone and audacity of theme." Frank Getlein

+ Commonweal 56:586 S 19 '52 950w

Kirkus 20:464 Ag 1 '52 120w

"Extremely well-written, dramatic, and true to life." L. R. Eitzkorn

+ Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 100w

"There is drama aplenty in 'Island Priest,' as any one will remember who saw the French moving picture of it shown in New York under the title 'God Needs Men.' But what the book gains over the picture is its imagery, lyricism, and precision of style which, thanks to the translator's skill and care, sound as authentic as though the book had originally been written in English." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 14 '52 750w

"Despite a little stiffness in the English it shows [the author] to be uncommonly good. He has the French love of metaphysical tidiness and brevity, and uses summary in place of scene more boldly than any of our novelists would. Yet we never feel that his characters obey any will or ideas outside themselves. Without allegorical stage whispers, he deals with hard doctrine and the invisible things that distinguish a church from a praying club." Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '52 490w

"The regional aspect of 'Island Priest,' although just the setting for a spiritual drama which is universal, is of high merit. No one since Pierre Loti has set more vividly before the eyes a Breton fishing village. With strokes even cleaner and bolder than his predecessor, Queffelec paints the struggle of half-civilized creatures to keep alive on a treeless rock." Laurence LeSage

+ Sat R 35:12 S 20 '52 550w

"The solution of this finely conceived and excellently translated story is worked out with a forceful simplicity in keeping with the rest of the tale."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p705 O 31 '52 240w

QUENTIN, PATRICK, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

QUINN, VERNON. Picture map geography of Africa; il. by Charles E. Pont. [new ed] 119p $2.75 Lippincott

916 Africa—Juvenile literature 52-7454

"This latest addition to Lippincott's picture map geography series follows, clockwise, the land sections of Africa, North Africa, Egypt and the Sudan, East Africa, etc., with short descriptions of each country within its section as to tribes, economy, terrain, history." Kirkus

Booklist 49:130 D 1 '52

"Solid, reliable information."

+ Kirkus 20:453 Ag 1 '52 110w

"Looking at the two small sections we happen to know, Morocco and Egypt, we found them too small on the maps to offer much picture illumination. But the text about them was more satisfactory. . . We found, however, that the effect of the whole was a new sense of the size and physical features of this enormous continent, well worth having as a background to further reading." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12, p7 N 16 '52 90w

"Though it can no longer be labeled the Dark Continent, Africa remains a mystery for many readers today, regardless of age groups. This picture-geography will do a great deal to dispel that mystery. . . The thoughtful reader will search in vain for any awareness of the problems that now beset Tunisia, Egypt and South Africa; in this department, Mr. Quinn gives the impression of talking about a day-before-yesterday Africa rather than the Africa of 1952." Lucille Terry

+ — N Y Times p12, p32 N 16 '52 120w

QUIRKE, TERENCE THOMAS. Canoes the world over; il. by C. Earl Bradbury. 137p $4.50 Univ. of Ill. press

623.821 Canoes and canoeing 52-10745

"Concise description of canoes—not the pleasure craft—but as used by primitive peoples all over the world; simple dug-outs of America, Australia and New Zealand, Indian birchbark, Egyptian reed canoes, kayaks, sailing canoes, outriggers, etc. Glossary. Bibliography. Index." Library J

Reviewed by J. A. Menaugh

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ag 10 '52 120w

"Delightfully printed. . . Extremely interesting. Valuable reference." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1408 S 1 '52 30w

R

RABINOWITZ, SHALOM (SHOLOM ALEICHEM, pseud). Wandering star; tr. by Frances Butwin. 314p $3 Crown

52-5685

Slightly picaresque novel about two groups of wandering Yiddish actors in Europe some fifty or sixty years ago. The two central characters are Reizel and Leibel, who ran away from the same Bessarabian village when they were very young.

Booklist 49:125 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:82 Ja '53 40w

"The weakness of the novel, for all its charm and interest, is [its] intense contrivance. We can minimize the defect by recognizing that it is a distinct and conscious convention, a story type, as pronouncedly as, in its way, is 'La Boheme.' 'Wandering Star' almost has the life plotted out of it. Sholem Aleichem is too ebullient, too gracious, for this reality to happen." Edmund Fuller

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 20 '52 290w

Kirkus 20:357 Je 15 '52 240w

"Recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1074 Je 15 '52 140w

RABINOWITZ, SHALOM—Continued

"Although he was neither another Dickens nor another Mark Twain—his idolaters notwithstanding—it is easy to understand Sholem Aleichem's great popular appeal. The spirit of such a book as 'Wandering Star' is blithe, the characters pungent, the tale a blend of romance, comedy and pathos and the author is always at one's elbow with his shrewd comment on men and their ways. . . . At the risk of blasphemy I confess I found 'Wandering Star' sometimes held together by hasty basting and at other times too close to the tintype modes of half a century ago. But for those who like their summer reading as bright and weightless as summer clothes, it will seem well tailored indeed." Milton Rugoff

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 3 '52 550w

"One of Sholom Aleichem's minor works, light and amusing and peppered with the celebrated wit of the humorist, but not memorable for the delineation of character or even good plot construction." Philip Rubin

+ N Y Times p17 J1 13 '52 470w

"An extremely warm and human picture of life of the small-town Jews of Europe . . . is given in this story which was written primarily to amuse the women and the 'prosteh' (plain folk) the author was eager to reach when he was not writing 'serious' literature under his own name for the intellectuals. Sholom Aleichem's fame as a satirist and as a major contributor to the very rich Yiddish literature rests on these popular entertainments." Irving Babow

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 25 '52 650w

"'Wandering Star,' in all truth, is not top-drawer Sholom Aleichem. . . . Sholom Aleichem was not altogether at home in the novel form; short fiction seems to have been his forte. Still, there are sketches in 'Wandering Star' which are magnificent." Charles Angoff

+ — Sat R 35:16 Ag 16 '52 450w

"Aleichem wrote best in the story form, but Wandering Star, for all its meandering pace, is often a funny and touching novel."

+ Time 60:102 J1 14 '52 500w

RADIN, EDWARD D. Headline crimes of the year. 179p $2.75 Little

364.1 Crime and criminals—U.S. Murder 52-5006

Factual accounts of the sensational doings of assorted murderers and criminals who made the headlines in 1950. Contents: Phantom of the Riviera; Hell bent; The dutiful son; Murder comes to Millville; Without the professor; A day at the races; For the love of Randi—Scandinavian style; For the love of Randi—Scandinavian style; Death on Mount Torment; File No. A-81730; Clue of the indirect proof.

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

Kirkus 19:696 D 1 '51 130w

"Mr. Radin's chief contribution is his roving eye for cases of uncommon interest. Having discovered them he treats each like the others in an uninterrupted stream of easy cliché. He is only occasionally speculative and refrains, perhaps wisely, from more than the most perfunctory examination of character although some of his specimens would appear to warrant rich exploration. Still, the material's here to elicit more sensitive response from readers." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 2 '52 180w

"It's devoutly to be hoped that this valuable survey will become an annual tradition." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '52 300w

"One should not pick favorites in a collection such as this. Each reader will have his own, and ought to, for with Mr. Radin he is in the hands of a virtuoso in crime who knows both how to make his criminal selections and how to recite the crimes once he has chosen them." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 6 '52 900w

"Fine selection, only two likely to be familiar (and those worth retelling); some downwriting." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:57 Mr 1 '52 20w

RAE, WALTER. Editing small newspapers; a basic handbook for journalists; rev. and with a new foreword by Roscoe Ellard. 213p il $3 Mill

070 Editing. Journalism—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 52-10263

"Revised but not enlarged to cover new techniques and processes, such as varitype." (Booklist) Glossary of newspaper terms used. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943.

Booklist 48:341 Je 15 '52

"The author is mainly concerned with school and college papers, professional weeklies and small dailies, and as far as he goes he is clear, concise and accurate, offering sound information for beginners." D. B. B.

+ Springfield Republican p6D J1 27 '52 140w

RAFTERY, GERALD. Copperhead Hollow. 185p $2 Morrow

52-5066

Story of a boy's summer camp in New Jersey, and of two boys who went unwillingly, but stayed to make good. There is a mystery, also, about a uranium deposit. For ages ten to fourteen.

Kirkus 20:3 Ja 1 '52 130w

"The ethics used in exposing the mystery might be questioned. Otherwise, this is a good, readable story for 10-12-year-old boys." A. M. Wetherell

+ — Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 70w

"A boy who goes to camp an unwilling grouch and is changed before summer's end is rather a stock figure. But Mr. Raftery, with the same skill he showed in his dog and horse stories ('Gray Lance' and 'Snow Cloud'), gives a familiar pattern a new twist. . . . The boy talk, the camp doings, all are well reported, and the happy change in Jim is believable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 200w

"The plot is routine, but the style is crisp and easy and suspense builds up convincingly. In unobtrusive but effective manner, the author puts across the value of cooperation." Howard Boston

+ — N Y Times p22 My 11 '52 140w

RAHV, PHILIP, ed. Great Russian short novels [by Gogol and others] with an introduction. 774p $5 Dial press

51-13886

Contents: The overcoat, by Gogol; First love, by Turgenyev; The Amazon, by Leskov; The eternal husband, by Dostoevsky; Ward No. 6, by Chekhov; Hadji Murad, by Tolstoy; Dry valley, by Bunin; Envy, by Olyesha.

"The 'Great Russian Short Novels' can stand on their literary merits. Even though most of the stories date from a time when our grandparents were young, they are anything but curiosa. . . . It does not seem possible that the creative power which produced these works can have been broken forever by the Soviet system. Rather we may venture to say that, unless the Kremlin orders the destruction of all prerevolutionary books, these books will some day kindle in the Russian people the vision of a better state." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 19 '52 650w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 17 '52 40w

RAINE, KATHLEEN J. Pythoness, and other poems. 56p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 821

Third collection of verse by an English poetess. "As for form, her range is not great; but like Richard Wilbur in this country, and William Empson in her own, she demonstrates at every point a taut assurance of control which goes far to establish the quiet violence characteristic of her work at its best." (New Repub)

Booklist 49:30 S 15 '52

"It is the sincere and individual expression of one of the best women poets of the day." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:2175 D 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 175:392 O 25 '52 70w

"She is a craftsman of a very high order; and if she were no more than this, she would still be a refreshing phenomenon in an age of slick, mechanical technic. But she is much more than this. She is her own Pythoness: a seer. Her insight is deep, her mysticism real and sometimes troubling." Dudley Flitts

+ New Repub 127:27 O 6 '52 900w

"Miss Raine is an explorer in the world of essence. As such, she picks her way most delicately, with hardly a false step, among the shards of the visible universe." G. F. M.

+ Sat R 35:31 D 27 '52 250w

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Challenge to danger. 245p $2.50 Houghton
Western story.

"A typical easy reading Raine western quickie." Al Chase
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52 30w

"Agile and amiable."

+ Kirkus 19:713 D 15 '51 70w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 J1 '52

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Justice comes to Tomahawk. 249p $2.50 Houghton 52-415
Western story.

"One of Raine's best yarns." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 3 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:240 Ap 1 '52 50w

"Bill Raine can always be relied on for a whale of a good story, and 'Justice Comes to Tomahawk' gets a double A rating." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p32 S 28 '52 120w

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 100w

"Mr. Raine has never written an ordinary Western, but this latest is certainly among his top ten."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:94 Mr '52

RALEGH, SIR WALTER. See Raleigh, W.

RALEIGH, SIR WALTER. 1552?-1618. Poems; ed. with an introd. by Agnes M. C. Latham. (Muses' lib ser) 182p il $2.10 Harvard univ. press

821

A reprinting of the poems of Sir Walter Raleigh. It contains notes, a bibliography, critical comment by his contemporaries, and an introduction by the editor.

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:283 Mr 22 '52 80w

Reviewed by H. R. Trevor-Roper

New Statesman & Nation 42:230 S 1 '51 1450w

"Barely eighty pages of text have been brought together in 'The Poems of Sir Walter Raleigh,' even when conjectural poems and scraps of translation are included. But among the fifty-three surviving pieces are several that reveal the power of Raleigh's lyric gift which made him the admired friend of Spenser and Sidney." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 2 '52 120w

"A highly successful attempt to collect all the poems which can reasonably be attributed to the Elizabethan courtier who was also soldier, sailor and poet." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 6 '52 110w

"Miss Latham's edition is all that can be desired, but the average reader of poetry will be content with the amount of Raleigh's work that he finds in an anthology of Elizabethan verse." J. M. C.

+ Spec 187:312 S 7 '51 250w

RAMSEY, ELOISE, and HOWARD, DOROTHY MILLS, comps. Folklore for children and young people; a critical and descriptive bibliography for use in the elementary and intermediate school. (Publications of the American Folk-lore society. Bibliographical ser, v3) 110p $4.50 Am. Folk-lore soc.

016.398 Folklore—Bibliography. Children's literature—Bibliography 52-10251

"Intended to meet the needs of parents, teachers and librarians. It is not designed to serve scholars." It includes folk stories, rhymes, music, games, arts and crafts, but only the best books are recommended. 'Anthologies of the scissors-and-paste variety' are omitted, as are also watered-down retellings. It is not limited to American folklore but represents many countries, especially in the folk tale sections." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:352 J1 1 '52

"The authors have made a real contribution to the field of children's books with this carefully annotated list of folk material." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:337 O '52 70w

"This is an excellent bibliography both in philosophical approach and in practical compilation, and its purchase is recommended for all collections of books used by those who work, or will work, with children-librarians and library school students; teachers and matriculates in teachers colleges." Eulalie Steinmetz

+ Library J 77:1969 N 15 '52 180w

"This slim book holds wealth beyond measure. It results from the determination of a subcommittee of this society to provide 'scholarly assistance to teachers,' and Miss Ramsey's collaborator, Dorothy Mills Howard, was its chairman." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 22 '52 200w

RAND, ADDISON, pseud. See Regli, A. C.

RAND, CHRISTOPHER. Hongkong; the island between. 244p $3 Knopf

951.25 [915.125] Hongkong—Description 52-10942

Impressions of life in Hongkong by an American journalist, who has been a correspondent and contributor to the New York Herald Tribune and the New Yorker. In addition to comments on Hongkong itself there is material on South China gleaned from travelers and refugees who have made the British colony a kind of "listening post."

Booklist 49:88 N 1 '52

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 19 '52 250w

"Mr. Rand, with the rational eye of a highly trained journalist and literary craftsman, presents all angles of life today in Britain's crown colony, whose name he points out, incidentally, means 'Fragrant Waters.'" Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 24 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:439 J1 15 '52 160w

"This book falls into the uniquely happy class of the 'A Reporter at Large' section of The New Yorker (where some of its material

RAND, CHRISTOPHER—Continued
has already appeared): relaxed and informative reading. . . No problems are solved; the book ends 'Perhaps—always perhaps,' but it's well worthwhile anyway." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by E. O. Reischauer
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 21 '52 700w

"'Hong Kong: The Island Between,' is a deftly written, leisurely and readable book. The author has captured much of Hong Kong's flavor and projected various aspects of the local scene with sensitivity, tolerance and—as in his section on Lantau island—a touch of mysticism. Here and there, however, this reviewer found himself left hanging on the cliff by occasional random ruminations on such matters as the ethics of free trade and the relationship between the caves of Yenan and the playing fields of Eton." Henry Lieberman
+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '52 750w

"Mr. Rand writes simply and smoothly, with a touch of humor that brightens what would otherwise be a very grave portrait." E. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '52 320w

Reviewed by Robert Payne
Sat R 35:26 O 4 '52 650w

"From the 'human interest' standpoint, this is one of the most entertaining and readable nonfiction books of recent publication." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 150w

Reviewed by Rupert Emerson
Yale R n s 42:286 winter '53 170w

RAND, MCNALLY AND COMPANY. Cosmopolitan world atlas. rev & enl 2d ed 376p $12.50 Rand McNally
912 Atlases Map 51-1429

"This new edition [is] based on the latest census data, not only from the USA, but from 35 other countries as well. The book retains all the features which made it so outstanding two years ago. Among the new features are six new maps which illustrate world trouble spots and other areas that are attracting global attention; maps showing world distribution of languages, religions, climate variations, population densities; a double spread showing European and Asian boundaries in 1914, 1930, and 1950." Survey

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 28 '51 40w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 13 '51 200w

Reviewed by R. P. Tubby
Library J 76:2002 D 1 '51 250w

"A good buy. Rand McNally has, it seems to me been working hard to raise the formerly low standards of American popular cartography; this volume, while very similar to its 1949 predecessor, is certainly an immense improvement over other examples of recent American atlas-making." Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 20 '52 300w

Survey 88:90 F '52 230w

RANDALL, CLARENCE BELDEN. Creed for free enterprise. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 177p $2.75 Little

338.01 Economic policy. Competition 52-9084
A book on American business and business men by the president of the Inland Steel Company.

Booklist 48:352 J1 1 '52

Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 40w

"Very readable, thought provoking volume." John Fisher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 15 '52 650w

Reviewed by D. H. Scott
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 6 '52 500w

"A sound, honest, straightforward statement of a leader's position."

+ Kirkus 20:363 Je 15 '52 350w

"Recommended for public libraries." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 77:1010 Je 1 '52 90w

"The most stimulating and rewarding chapters are those dealing with preparation for executive positions, business support of private colleges, American aid to Europe, and compulsory retirement for executives. Least satisfactory are the chapters on labor unions and government, where the author seems to suffer from lack of information and bias." R. A. Lester

+ New Repub 126:22 Je 30 '52 480w

"Here is a book that could be read profitably by every American business man, whether he be the proprietor of a drug store on Elm Street or the president of a king-size corporation with tens of thousands on his pay roll. . . It is a monumental task that Mr. Randall asks the American business man to underwrite. Although you may not agree with everything he says after reading his book, you will respect the sincere conviction that leads him to state his creed and urge business men to participate in his program." Alex Lewyt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 29 '52 550w

Reviewed by Eliot Janeway
N Y Times p10 J1 13 '52 750w

New Yorker 28:119 Je 14 '52 160w

Reviewed by William Beauchamp
Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 150w

"Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:167 J1 '52

Reviewed by T. O. Waage
Yale R n s 42:147 autumn '52 380w

RANDALL, JAMES GARFIELD. Lincoln the president; v3, Midstream. 467p il $7.50 Dodd
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—History—Civil war

The first two volumes of this scholarly biography appeared several years ago (Book Review Digest 1945, 1946). The present volume deals with the year 1863 and contains personal details about the president and his family, as well as the political and military events of the year. Index.

Booklist 49:88 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 30w

"An excellent index increases the utility of this impressive addition to American biography." Paul Kinery

+ Cath World 176:317 Ja '53 300w

"Presentation of Lincoln as a compelling human figure adds charm to Randall's scholarship. Like his other books, this one is basic Lincoln literature." B. P. Thomas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 26 '52 450w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 6 '52 370w

"It is particularly valuable for the thorough examination of Lincoln's character and personality with some of the material presented for the first time. . . Highly recommended for American history collections." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin
Nation 175:470 N 22 '52 410w

"The most scholarly treatment of Lincoln's Presidency. . . Austere, disdaining reckless 'interpretation,' rash surmise, and glib rationalization of contradiction, Professor Randall's Lincoln has a new, a very great assurance. This was the way it was; this was his manner of man." D. C. Mearns
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 19 '52 1150w

"Lincoln the President; 'Midstream' is much more than 'just another Lincoln book.' It is a profound study to be read with pleasure and referred to later for unimpeachable facts. Here is the last word on Lincoln's life and problems during his most crucial year." Jay Monaghan

+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '52 850w

New Yorker 28:66 D 27 '52 190w

Reviewed by Austin Blair

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '52 60w

"Can the Ph.D.'s bring Lincoln to life? If Dr. Randall has not done it, it cannot be done. He has shown how painstaking research can re-create a figure from the past without recourse to imaginative conjecture." T. H. Williams

+ Sat R 35:17 N 8 '52 700w

Time 60:132 N 10 '52 30w

RANSOME, STEPHEN, pseud. See Davis, F. C.

RAPPORT, SAMUEL, and WRIGHT, HELEN, eds. Great adventures in medicine; with an introd. by Detlev W. Bronk. 874p $5 Dial press

610.9 Medicine—History 52-5615

Collection of medical writings covering the high lights and achievements in the history of medicine from the Hippocratic oath to the development of cortisone. Arrangement is chronological. For the layman. Index.

"Man's conquest of disease has been a long and difficult task. It is a history in itself and the stories of its heroes, fools, and charlatans make fascinating reading. The book contains over 100 of the most representative tales along this line." T. R. Van Dellen

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 28 '52 270w

"Finest reference work—inexhaustible, inexpensive, invaluable." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:431 Mr 1 '52 100w

"It would seem wiser, in future editions, to provide individual notes about each author's personality and importance. Had biographical notes been appended to the present selections, the reader would not miss such important information as that of John Hunter's heroic self-inoculation with syphilis, which was one of the most spectacular failures in medical research, retarding the recognition of the disease for a century. These, however, are minor criticisms of a book which is bound to be of immeasurable service in stimulating interest in the history of medicine." Martin Gumpert

+ — N Y Times p4 N 16 '52 280w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 30 '52 180w

RASMUSSEN, ALBERT HENRY. Sea fever. 216p il $3 Crowell

B or 92 Seafaring life 52-10036

"At fourteen, when he persuaded his family to grant his one ambition, Mr. Rasmussen was a weak consumptive child whom the doctors gave six months to live. It was a courageous father who paid the passage from Oslo to South Shields, scarcely hoping to see his son again. . . . During his first grim experiences, running Tyne coal to the Thames in a coasting brigantine half a century ago, a tenacious spirit just contrived to compensate for frailty of body, and the sea soon rewarded his faithfulness by curing him. In a few months he had grown by inches. For six more years he sailed in vessels of all rigs and sizes to many places, and survived all the perils of the sea, including a fearsome shipwreck in a winter gale on Chesil Beach." Spec

Booklist 49:124 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53 30w

"Recommended as a top notch addition to your ship shelf or a wonderful gift to any one who likes true tales of the sea." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 16 '52 180w

"There are friendships, travel, the mutual feeling of ship and sailor, shipwreck, blood, and beauty in this book, which will appeal to those who like their adventure real and tough, and to the lovers of sea and sail."

+ Kirkus 20:588 S 1 '52 120w

"Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 77:1651 O 1 '52 50w

"A rough and honest book, a salty report on the last days of sail." Felix Riesenbergl
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 16 '52 280w

"In a way his book is a creditable achievement, but anyone seeking the magic of Melville or Masefield, of Kipling or Conrad, will not find it here. The writing is without color, like a child's essay. Yet Mr. Rasmussen has a simple tale to tell and he tells it. It is the kind of book the present reviewer has occasionally seen in the eye of some elderly shell-back when he says that if he only had time he could write a book." William McFee

+ — N Y Times p47 N 9 '52 270w

"Despite its naïveté, this narrative conveys a genuine sense of the romance that has disappeared with the tall masts and the white canvas." T. E. Cooney

Sat R 36:62 Ja 3 '53 150w

"Stories of little boys who run away to sea have been told many times before, but seldom more agreeably than in Sea Fever." G. P. G.
+ Spec 189:144 Jl 25 '52 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p358 My 30 '52 420w

RASMUSSEN, CARRIE E., and STORCK, CAROLINE. Fun-time puppets; pictures by Caroline Storck. 41p $2.40; bds $1.25 Childrens press

791.5 Marionettes 52-7564

"Gay pictures by Caroline Storck and attractive pages that cover stick, fist, finger and hand puppets and marionettes made from cardboard, sponge rubber, wood, and papier-mâché. Good ideas abound, but all information is in outline form." Library J

Reviewed by Anne Izard

Library J 77:603 Ap 1 '52 70w

"Here at last is a gay book predicated on the daring concept that playing puppets is the child's objective, not the manufacture and mastery of an intricate marionette. . . . Directions are terse and clear and the gaiety is carried by the many bright illustrations." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p30 Je 8 '52 80w

RASMUSSEN, STEEN EILER. Towns and buildings described in drawings and words [tr. by Eve Wendt]. 203p $4.25 Harvard univ. press

711.09 Cities and towns. Architecture

A52-9249

"In this book an effort has been made to bring the reader to look on the city as an entity which expresses certain ideals. The individual monuments, the buildings, thus become part of a whole. . . . The chapters are as varied as the subjects, for there are no two cities in the world that are identical. In some instances it has seemed natural to begin by drawing up the main lines, which have determined the arrangement of all else, and then to go on to the details; the monumental buildings, the ordinary houses and the streets. In other cases it seemed more fitting to begin with a particular monument which had been a determining factor in the formation of its surroundings, the nucleus from which all the rest evolved." Pref

"Whatever city Mr. Rasmussen studies—Peking, Rome, London, Paris, Copenhagen—he sees it as a whole, as a particular monument to the special way of life lived by its builders. His view has in it something of the monumental imaginative sweep of Henry Adams and Lewis Mumford. Copiously illustrated, this is a stimulating and beautiful work." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 5 '52 400w

Reviewed by Charles Holden

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 19 '52 330w

RASMUSSEN, S. E.—Continued

"There is nothing on the jacket to warn us that we are reading a book for the young and, so far as the subject-matter goes, we are not. But Mr. Rasmussen is evidently 'writing down' to somebody or other, and the inclined style is injurious to adult pride and, surely, devastating to that of adolescence. Apart from this curious aberration, the book can be recommended for its many imaginative and instructive side-lights on town-planning history and as an entrancing specimen of Danish book-production." John Summerson

+ — New Statesman & Nation 44:20 J1 5 '52 330w

"There are chapters in this book—about Peking, about Amsterdam, about the Paris of the Musketeers, about Charlottenborg and Amalienborg in Copenhagen—that are not to be found in the conventional histories. But it remains a delightful scrapbook, and does not do for townscape what must soon be done if there is to be enough public demand for fine building to enable it to survive." Lionel Brett

+ — Spec 188:238 F 22 '52 650w

"The drawings include no plans or sections, but in place of them there are views of buildings from above with roofs and upper storeys taken off, and frontal aspects as if one were looking into dolls' houses. Professor Rasmussen is direct and reasonable to the verge of naivety, but he is also clearly susceptible to those subtleties of townscape which go unnoticed by so many architectural scholars and town-planners."

Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 4 '52 550w

RATTRAY, ROBERT FLEMING. Bernard Shaw: a chronicle; with photographs by Thérèse Bonney. 347p $5 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard 52-6229

A compilation about the life and works of George Bernard Shaw, arranged chronologically from 1865 to 1951. Index.

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

"Professor Rattray wisely gives Shaw his head in this biography, and the results are good." H. N. Maclean

+ Canadian Forum 32:93 J1 '52 290w

"In no sense a general biography for the general reader, this is rather a dossier of definitive material for study and reference."

+ Kirkus 20:63 Ja 15 '52 180w

"There are so many books about Shaw these days that a new one seems redundant. However a properly annotated chronology is valuable for librarians seeking a quick answer to a reference question. Recommended for larger theatre collections and for college reference desks." George Freedley

Library J 77:534 Mr 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 20 '52 230w

New Yorker 28:142 Je 7 '52 50w

"What Mr. Rattray contributes in his chronicle is a handbook indispensable to an understanding of Shaw's career as distinguished from his achievement, that is to say, a selective but steadily chronological account of what Shaw did and wrote and participated in from the mid-Seventies till his death." Jacques Barzun

+ Sat R 35:16 Mr 29 '52 230w

"Dr. Rattray's work is one of piety rather than of criticism, but the piety is so exceptionally well documented that the publishers are probably right in thinking it will be indispensable to all worshippers, present and future, at the Shavin shrine."

Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 30 '51 700w

RAY, GORDON NORTON. Buried life. 148p $2.75 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Thackeray, William Makepeace 52-11301

"A study of the relation between Thackeray's fiction and his personal history." (Subtitle) The author of this book is the editor of the four-volume Letters and Private Papers of William Makepeace Thackeray. Index.

Booklist 49:11 S 1 '52

Reviewed by David Daiches
Manchester Guardian p4 S 2 '52 450w
Nation 175:116 Ag 9 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis
New Repub 127:22 S 29 '52 240w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 44:267 S 6 '52 1450w

"As a literary sleuth Mr. Ray is an Inspector at least—thorough, judicious, and convincing. His literary detections are fascinating. But he is less persuasive in defending Thackeray's shortcomings as novelist, particularly the uncritical sentimentalism. . . . The most regrettable thing about the book is its wretched makeup, especially the unreadably small type for quotations."

+ — Sat R 35:31 Ag 23 '52 200w

"This 'by-product' is passably interesting. I don't like the title of it—it suggests that Professor Ray is out to disinter scandals. Thackeray's 'buried life' is, in fact, the best part of him; at any rate it is all virtue. . . . The best part of his book lies in information rather than in comment. The valuable chapters are those in which [the author] concerns himself with identifying the originals of some of Thackeray's characters." H. W. Garrod

+ — Spec 189:192 Ag 8 '52 600w

"Mr. Ray's work is not only an admirable example in the compact construction of a large assortment of new facts, which will demand a readjustment of Thackeray criticism; it is itself exhilarating in its portrait gallery of distinctive people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 17 '52 1950w

RAY, GORDON NORTON, and others. Nineteenth-century English books. See Nineteenth-century English books

RAYNAL, MAURICE. Nineteenth century; new sources of emotion from Goya to Gauguin; tr. by James Emmons. (Great centuries of painting) 147p col il $12.50 Skira

759 Painting—History. Paintings. Painters 51-14572

"The present volume belongs to a series devoted to The Great Centuries of Painting, which purports to give bird's-eye views, of great artistic achievements throughout almost the entire civilized world. . . . Commencing with the classical art of David and Ingres, he devotes a chapter to Goya and another to Constable, Turner, and Bonington before approaching Géricault, Delacroix, Daumier, Millet, and Courbet, all of whom are represented by well-selected illustrations. Corot, Boudin, and Jongkind then lead to the Impressionists who are shown in somewhat more familiar works. Cézanne, Seurat, Van Gogh, and Lautrec, with one plate each, announce the birth of the twentieth century. America is represented by Whistler and Ryder." Sat R

"While the text in these picture books takes for the most part the character of a sort of subdued background music, it has occasional bursts of self-assertion. We have one of these, for example, in the nineteenth century volume where the author has the happy idea of giving a page to the quotation of a section from the official catalogue of the Paris Salon of 1824." J. J. Sweeney

N Y Times p1 D 9 '51 550w

"Maurice Raynal's running commentary on artistic trends, accompanied by notes on individual painters as well as by analytical captions for the three-score illustrations provides a highly readable summary." John Rewald

+ Sat R 35:54 Mr 1 '52 650w

RAYNOLDS, ROBERT. Sinner of Saint Ambrose. 443p $3.75 Bobbs

52-5813

Historical novel based on the last days of the Roman Empire. The central figure is Gregory Julian, a Roman aristocrat, who after spending most of his life in Rome and its provinces, ends his days in Britain.

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52 30w

"A travesty." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:475 S '52 260w

"The Sinner of Saint Ambrose" undoubtedly belongs with the grandiose historical novels. But it is a considerably better than average example of the type." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 10 '52 450w

"This is what the title promises—a good sized prospectus for any historical novel. But 'The Sinner of Saint Ambrose' achieves much more than that. Actually it depicts in brilliant detail the political, social, domestic story of the death of an Empire. Mr. Reynolds has, in fact, written in delightfully acceptable form a spacious fictional version of the Decline and Fall." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 10 '52 800w

"As I look back at this novel I find that few of the characters or episodes remain vividly in my mind. But something else does. Call it a feeling or flavor—the awareness of things coming to an end and other things struggling dimly for birth. Though not a great book, it is one that is greater than the sum of its parts." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '52 550w

"Mr. Reynolds' interest in human beings and their behavior seems to be fervent and sympathetic. It is hard to understand why he has chosen to deal with people so remote from himself, whose story must necessarily be dwarfed by gigantic historical figures and confused by the rehashing of familiar historical actions and facts."

New Yorker 28:88 Ag 16 '52 160w

"All the dramatic and sensational symptoms of a collapsing social order are in Mr. Reynolds' material. He uses them with the skill of great storytelling. There are pomp and pageantry and high matters of state. There are treachery and betrayal, infidelity both public and private. There are crime and cruelty, sensuousness and austerity, cowardice, courage, and faith. The light of God, and its reflected glow of the human spirit, are in the book. It is a story of a dying society but of living men." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 35:16 Ag 9 '52 1000w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 190w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. English prose style. 2d ed 216p $3.50 Pantheon bks.

808 English language—Style [52-4444]

"Originally published in 1928 [Book Review Digest 1929] this book has been in continuous demand ever since. In the summer of 1947 I was invited to give a course of lectures at the School of English, Kenyon College, Ohio, and this provided an opportunity for a complete reconsideration of a subject I had first treated twenty years earlier. Though I did not find it necessary to alter the general plan of the book, several of the chapters have been recast, and additional specimens, generally of a more recent date, have been inserted either in the body of the text, or in a special Appendix." (Pref) Index.

"Herbert Read's new book, revising and expanding his earlier book of 1928, is virtually without competition. It is a good book anyway. . . . The discussions are bright, and they are illustrated by fascinating passages from the prose masters. It makes an excellent first reading." J. C. Ransom

+ New Repub 127:17 O 6 '52 1500w

"Dr. Read surveys the art of prose writing in a most stimulating fashion." G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 19 '52 70w

REBENTISCH, MARTHA RUTH. Healing woods; with decorations by Fred Collins. 250p $3 Crowell

B or 92

52-7034

The experiences of a tubercular patient who, when she found she was not improving at the Saranac sanitarium, took to the woods nearby, and lived a primitive existence until she recovered.

Booklist 48:277 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 50w

"Miss Reben handles the language smoothly but [she] has the unfailing ability of killing every good anecdote with skimpy details and a needless anti-climax." Walter Harding

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 20 '52 200w

"A delightful nature story." G. P. Lancaster
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '52 280w

"The emphasis is on the outdoors rather than sickness and if the telling leaves something to be desired, the material is well worthwhile in its picture of Adirondacks wild life."
+ Kirkus 20:111 F 1 '52 190w

"A peaceful, satisfactory book, excellent for the bedside table and for all who enjoy vicarious woodland rambles." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 77:431 Mr 1 '52 80w

"This is a different sort of nature-book, with its nice sense of humor and unobtrusive courage on more levels than one. Charming illustration by Fred Collins."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 17 '52 170w

"An entertaining, moving story." Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p15 Je 29 '52 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 4 '52 120w

"The author of 'The Healing Woods' gives full credit for regaining her health to life in the outdoors after her long period of complete rest. Her story is an interesting one, not only in how she became well but in how she became well versed in outdoor activities." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 300w

Wis Lib Bul 48:171 J1 '52

RECHNITZER, FERDINAND EDSTED. Captain Jeep; il. by John Gretzer. 209p $2.50 Winston

51-13737

Mystery story for boys of twelve to fourteen.

Kirkus 19:398 Ag 1 '51 100w

"Nothing outstanding, but will appeal to boys from 12-14." Evalyn Willey
Library J 76:1343 S 1 '51 70w

"An excellent example of the mystery which is based on personality." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '52 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 11 '51 80w

Springf'd Republican p28A N 25 '51 40w

RECK, FRANKLIN MERING. 4-H story; a history of 4-H club work. 308p il $3 Iowa state college press

630.6 4-H clubs

History of the origin and growth of the 4-H club, a movement to train farm youth to become better farmers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:155 Ja 1 '52

School & Society 75:80 F 2 '52 20w

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. On being Negro in America. 156p $3 Bobbs

325.26 Negroes

51-13473

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

REDDING, J. S.—Continued

"A personal document in which the author gives a lucid and impressive account of the frustrations, anxieties, humiliations, and limitations from which one has to suffer as a result of 'Negroness' in America. While the book is ostensibly designed to mirror the internal struggles of the writer against discrimination, segregation, and racial prejudice, it is really an attempt to speak for the American Negro, particularly the more enlightened, race-conscious elements of the population." E. H. Fitchett

+ Am J Soc 57:602 My '52 1000w

"Recently the personal essay has lost ground in our literature, but now and again an insouciant writer, scorning the trend, offers a reminder of the still virile possibilities of the form. J. Saunders Redding's new book, as the title itself indicates, is such a reminder. That the theme and form seem so well suited in this case is a tribute to the author. The man can write!" Arna Bontemps

+ Sat R 35:23 F 16 '52 750w

"As a highly personalized autobiography, On Being Negro in America is a revealing account of one Negro's tortured and never-ending search for personal dignity and self-realization in a society that brutalizes the racial oppressor as well as the racially oppressed. As a literary effort it is marked by a poignant recapture of moods, impulses, and feelings that are at once fragile and intense." Wilson Record

+ Social Forces 30:352 Mr '52 400w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:11 Mr '52 220w

REDL, FRITZ, and WINEMAN, DAVID. Children who hate; the disorganization and breakdown of behavior controls. 254p $3.50 Free press

136.7 Child study. Juvenile delinquency 51-13784

"This is the first of two volumes about the hyperaggressive, impulsive, emotionally disturbed children who are the despair of teachers, social workers, law-enforcement agencies, and psychotherapists, not to mention parents. The present book deals with an important and neglected aspect of these children's disorders. The second book, not yet published, is to suggest how these children might be helped. The thesis of the present volume is that the reason why nobody has been able to get very far with these children is not that the children hate so excessively but that they do not have the same sort of control over their behavior that is available to other children." Survey

"While the book's greatest contribution will be its wealth of new material for professional use, the material is so clearly presented that it should prove helpful to any one interested in children. The authors' style and fascinating choice of terminology sustain the reader's interest throughout." A. W. Greene

+ Am J Pub Health 42:601 My '52 260w

"The book closes with the statement that the 'details of a total strategy for ego support will be offered by the authors in their forthcoming publication.' This leaves the reader at the cross roads not knowing which way to go. Nevertheless the book will be most useful for professional workers with children, and the supplementary volume should be awaited with eager anticipation." G. B. Mangold

Ann Am Acad 281:227 My '52 400w

"In this report, the authors convey to the reader an image of the life-ways and the most intimate feelings of a group of children with a clarity usually achieved only by the skilled novelist." W. E. Henry

+ El School J 53:119 O '52 270w

Reviewed by Urie Bronfenbrenner

J Home Econ 44:666 O '52 370w

"A sound scientific study, which is gripping as well as informative; it should appeal to parents, but especially to educators, social workers and therapists." S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 140w

"The authors describe in fascinating detail the nature of the ego disorders from which these children suffer. . . . Some readers may object to so much classification and so much use of terminology. It seems indisputable, however, that the writers have made clearer than ever before the specific characteristics of the situations that provide these children with frustrations or enticements too strong to be coped with." H. L. Witmer

+ Survey 88:182 Ap '52 550w

REDL, FRITZ, and WINEMAN, DAVID. Controls from within; techniques for the treatment of the aggressive child. 332p $4.50 Free press

136.7 Child study. Juvenile delinquency

"This account of the treatment of five aggressive boys who were residents (15-19 months) of Pioneer House, a residential treatment center for severely disturbed adolescents, is a sequel to Children Who Hate, which describes the boys and their clinical background. It seeks to show how internalized behavior controls were substituted for controls from without." Ann Am Acad

"A scientist hesitates to wade through pages and pages which describe procedures in minute detail in order to secure small amounts of questionable generalization. A practical worker may find in such reading suggestions on procedures to be used with disturbed children. A skillful writer selects detail in terms of its relevance to a major theme. These authors seem to be interested in detail as detail." J. E. Anderson

Ann Am Acad 283:211 S '52 400w

"Only a reader particularly interested in this clinical approach is likely to wade thru the extremely technical language." F. D. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 15 '52 70w

"Of much interest are the notes by the counselors utilizing the salty language of the boys under treatment." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 75:409 Je 28 '52 60w

REECE, BYRON HERBERT. Song of joy, and other poems. 125p $2.75 Dutton

811

52-7790

"This is the third volume of lyrics, ballads, and sonnets by Byron Herbert Reece. As in his two previous books of poetry, 'Bow Down in Jericho' and 'The Ballad of the Bones,' his work reflects his indebtedness to a rich heritage of folk poetry—the sonorous cadences of the Psalmists and early English balladry. These are not his only influences—a cloud of witnesses encompasses him: the metaphysical and religious poets, together with Christina Georgina Rossetti, W. H. Davies, Millay, Frost, and, of course, Blake." Sat R

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 19 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:296 My 1 '52 130w

"Reece, a favorite of this reviewer, is one of our finest poets, and eventually he'll be so recognized." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1513 S 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal

New Repub 128:28 Ja 5 '53 80w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 7 '52 40w

"Most young poets, it is true, reflect what they admire, but the strong talents shake off their influences. Mr. Reece's poetic gifts are so considerable, his ear so flawless, and his craftsmanship so impeccable that it is to be hoped he will not be content to be so often the arranger of themes, the virtuoso rather than the creative artist." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 35:29 S 6 '52 450w

REED, ELIOT, pseud. of ERIC AMBLER and CHARLES RODDA. Tender to danger [Eng title: Tender to Moonlight]. 186p $2.50 Doubleday

51-14723

"Andrew Maclaren is a conscientious young Scot and when trying little Mr. Kusitch disappears in Brussels he attempts to convince the Belgian police that something sinister must have happened to him. Dismissed politely, he goes on to London and very soon has no doubt at all that something sinister is about to happen to him." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:623 O 15 '51 70w

"A thriller that manages a steady tension without much bustle until it breaks out in the conclusive violence of its finals. . . 'Tender to Danger,' a thriller in a day rather bare of good ones, will commend itself to most readers." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 23 '51 150w

"If it all seems somewhat the mixture as before, without the full Ambler creative force, it is at least stirred with admirable professional dexterity and taste." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p14 D 30 '51 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:46 F 9 '52 20w

"A very ably constructed and attention-holding chase novel . . . This is good solid stuff, well written and, until the end, not paced too fast for leisurely reading." D. F. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 90w

REESE, JOHN HENRY. Big mutt; il. by Rod Ruth. 190p $2.50 Westminster press

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-7057

The story of Big Mutt is the story of a dog abandoned by its Eastern owners in the Dakota sheep farming country. Rescued eventually by a farm boy, Big Mutt has a hard time in the community before he lives down his reputation as a sheep-killer.

Booklist 48:303 My 15 '52

Horn Bk 28:179 Je '52 120w

"A sound dog story." J. L. G.

+ Kirkus 20:76 F 1 '52 110w

"A gripping, realistic picture of the North Dakota Badlands in a time of bitter cold and blizzard." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 77:542 Mr 15 '52 80w

"This author transforms the often used device of the city or house dog reverting to his wild nature, yet always craving a master, into a freshly exciting and absorbing story. His underlying themes about man and nature, and about faithfulness, and the real portraits of these Western people, give power to a tale whose style is not always distinguished. But no one who takes it up will put it down willingly, nor soon forget it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 11 '52 300w

"Laid in the sheep-raising country of North Dakota, 'Big Mutt' successfully combines a moving dog story with exciting adventure." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 27 '52 150w

"In many ways, the story of Big Mutt can be compared to the great Scotch story, 'Bob, Son of Battle.' Without being in the least sentimental, it has both drama and pathos. Big Mutt is an exceptionally good dog character."

+ Sat R 35:60 My 10 '52 210w

REESE, JOHN HENRY. Shouting duke; a story scientifically calibrated to the taste, needs, and educational development of the 9 to 90 age groups; il. with drawings by Richard Horwitz. 133p $2 Westminster press 52-8505

Satirical novel about the Grand Duke Bello, a man of common sense. The grand duke came back from a trip to find that his neighbors had got ahead of him in his absence. But the situation didn't last long. After all Duke Bello was a man of sense, and his duchess was famous for her recipe for no-egg cake.

Booklist 49:2; 14 S 1 '52

"There are some funny passages, and for people who like the genre, almost endless entertainment from the Duke's lengthy sallies."

+ Kirkus 20:599 S 15 '52 160w

"A whimsical story, depending largely on adult foibles for its humor which may puzzle rather than amuse the children for whom it is intended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:1521 S 15 '52 40w

"A rambling fable which is consistently delightful if not always pointed." Wilmott Ragsdale

+ N Y Times p25 D 14 '52 180w

"A satirical and very funny commentary on government and life in general, this small book will amuse adults as well as children."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 16 '52 170w

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Fiddling cowboy in search of gold. 243p il $2.50 Watts, F.

51-8070

"Ross Gordon joins his uncle in the Dakota Gold Rush. Entering the Black Hills against government orders, he experiences cold and hunger and meets hostile Indians. Later, on the side of the law, his thirty-six hour ride on Dixie saves a group of white men from maddened Sioux warriors." Library J

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 120w

+ Kirkus 19:444 Ag 15 '51 100w

"In presenting this fascinating chapter in our history, this well-written book deals with rough country, rugged men, and our mistreatment of the Indians. Recommended for ages 11-14." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:70 Ja 1 '52 80w

"A good picture of the period, with more fiddling, roping and riding than gold diggings by the impetuous, likable 17-year-old cowboy." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p42 D 9 '51 140w

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Real book about Buffalo Bill; il. by Robert J. Lee. (Real bks) 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

B or 92 Cody, William Frederick (Buffalo Bill)—Juvenile literature 52-12507

A biography of Buffalo Bill written for ages 8 to 14. Includes a list of real dates in the life of Buffalo Bill; a brief bibliography, and an index.

Booklist 49:146 D 15 '52

"A well-paced biography."

+ Kirkus 20:373 Jl 1 '52 90w

"Buffalo Bill and his family come to life in this fast-moving account. . . Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 77:1666 O 1 '52 30w

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Real book about the wild West; il. by Ted Shearer. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

978 West—Juvenile literature 52-12432

An account of the change and growth of the western United States during the nineteenth century. Ages 8 to 14.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:373 Jl 1 '52 90w

"Well-organized and well-written account. Recommended for the early teens." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 70w

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Southpaw fly hawk, by Addison Rand [pseud] decorations by W. B. Ricketts. 183p $2.25 Longmans 52-5641

A story of minor league baseball and of a young player who learns some things about life and the game the hard way but wins out in the end. For boys 12 to 16.

Booklist 48:283 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 22 '52
20w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52 90w
+ Kirkus 20:79 F 1 '52 110w

"This is good standard material. The writing is adequate, the baseball good, and the story holds interest." Lillian Morrison
+ Library J 77:1082 Je 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 20w

N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 120w

"This is an exceptionally good baseball story for younger boys."

+ Sat R 35:59 My 10 '52 50w

School & Society 75:222 Ap 5 '52 10w

REICHLER, JOSEPH. Inside the majors; a panorama of the national sport as played in the big leagues. 192p il $2.95; pa $1 Hart 796.357 Baseball 52-10086

Portraits and brief biographical sketches of forty-eight present-day baseball stars. The volume concludes with chapters on records and statistics and remarkable happenings.

"A gallery of glory for the fans, slightly garish but lively."

Kirkus 20:326 Je 1 '52 70w

"Young worshippers will find in these colorful sketches not only the usual statistics on their heroes but much of their baseball philosophy and techniques, their families, hobbies and fetishes. . . The book is sure to be popular with sandlotters." W. C. F.

+ N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 70w

"'Inside the Majors' is tops, either as a lively and factual introduction to baseball for young fans, or new ones, or as a handy reference book for those who have followed the game all their lives." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 180w

REID, EDWARD. Mafia. 238p $3 Random house

364.973 Mafia. Crime and criminals 52-7145

A story of the Mafia, the terrorist underworld organization, which was pointed out by the Kefauver Committee as the "cohesive" element in the crime syndicate which controls much of the vice in the United States. No index.

Booklist 49:99 N 15 '52

Reviewed by P. A. Holmes
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 9 '52
430w

"For true crime addicts."

Kirkus 20:585 S 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:1083 O 15 '52 100w

"A splendid job." Theodore Link

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 9 '52
700w

"Ed Reid, a reporter whose stories on police gambling graft won a Pulitzer Prize for The Brooklyn Eagle, is to be commended for having tried to tell the story of the Mafia. . . It makes for an interesting and often fascinating book." Emanuel Perimutter

+ N Y Times p12 O 19 '52 350w

Reviewed by Malcolm Johnson

Sat R 35:13 D 27 '52 750w

REID, MAURICE H. How to use hand tools. 306p il $3.50 Crowell

621.9 Tools 52-6894

This book covers carpentry tools, machine tools, all varieties of wrenches, measuring instruments, metal-working tools, glass-cutting tools, forging tools, fasteners of all sorts, and some power tools. It tells how to use tools in their proper and most efficient way; what the principles of a tool's action are; physical laws, force, stress, etc.; how to sharpen cutting tools and how to take care of all implements so they will last indefinitely; what tools are best to get.

Booklist 48:209 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:723 Ap 15 '52 80w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERNAN). Double man. 245p $2.50 Random house 52-5170

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:202 Mr 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 18 '52 150w

"First-draft sketchiness again—much of the story is not even written but summarily synopsisized. Cape Cod setting is good, as is the character of the stupid and sadistic female Maecenas who is the murder victim; but she is onstage only briefly, and Inspector Christopher McKee has an almost supernumerary role." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p37 My 25 '52 60w

"Not up to Mrs. Reilly's customary high standard."

— New Yorker 28:120 Je 14 '52 60w

"One of the better Reilly productions." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 1 '52
70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 30w

REILLY, WILLIAM JOHN. Successful human relations; principles and practice in business, in the home, in government. 144p $2.50 Harper

301.1 Psychology, Applied. Success 52-6280

"In this book for students of human relations, the author of The Twelve Rules for Straight Thinking and The Law of Intelligent Action answers such questions as: What do people really think of you? What is the best way to open a closed mind? How can you earn the confidence of others? How should we use persuasion to keep peace in the home, on the job, in international relations?" Publisher's note

Booklist 48:371 J1 15 '52

Kirkus 20:151 F 15 '52 70w

Springf'd Republican p10D Je 22 '52
330w

Wis Lib Bul 48:166 J1 '52

REINFELD, FRED. Human side of chess; the story of the world champions: their triumphs and their illusions, their achievements and their failures. 302p il $3.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

794.1 Chess 52-9361

"The author relates the story of the world champions, their triumphs and illusions, their achievements and failures: Anderssen the Romantic, Morphy the Gentleman, Steinitz the Lawgiver, Lasker the Philosopher, Capablanca the Machine, Alekhine the Fighter, and the one still living ex-champion, Euwe the Logician." N Y Times

Booklist 49:101 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:483 Ag 1 '52 160w

"This is the most beautiful book I have read on the royal game, and the most dramatic and profound in its ironies." Alfred Kreymborg
+ N Y Times p55 N 9 '52 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '52 170w

REINFELD, FRED, ed. Treasury of chess lore.
306p il $3.95 McKay

794.1 Chess 51-14331

"Stories, poems, excerpts from various writings, assembled to make good reading whether you play chess or not. Illustrations." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 20w

"Mr. Reinfeld, one of the best American masters and a prolific writer on the game, has put together an anthology which is, in effect, a knight's tour of the subject." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52 100w

REINHARDT, GUENTHER. Crime without punishment; the secret Soviet terror against America. 322p $3.50 Hermitage

364.13 [351.74] Secret service—Russia. Communism 52-12850

"This is another first person disclosure of insidious activities that endanger the world in general, the United States in particular. The author, who has been a newspaperman, writer and assistant in various intelligence and security agencies of the U.S. tells of the activities of the G.P.U. and its successor agencies of the Soviet Secret Police." (Library J) Index.

"Here's a bargain for Hollywood—plots for a dozen mystery thrillers wrapped up in one colorful volume. It is also a valuable addition to the growing library of works on the sinister operations of soviet agents in this country and abroad." Willard Edwards

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 9 '52 360w

"Mr. Reinhardt's book is a telling answer to the Soviet peace protestations. It also is a thrilling account of the fight which the West's counter-intelligence forces have to wage against heavy numerical odds and under constant risk of their lives." E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 24 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:531 Ag 15 '52 170w

"Too much of what the author writes has to be taken on faith to make the book more than another account of subversive activities." H. L. Roth

Library J 77:1651 O 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by Merle Miller

New Repub 127:29 N 17 '52 450w

"Gunther Reinhardt's 'Crime Without Punishment' is possibly not a book for the 'average' reader, but it is certainly an important document for those who are interested in following the complex and sinister underground movements of Stalin's international army." H. A. Philbrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 23 '52 410w

Reviewed by J. H. Lichtblau

N Y Times p62 N 9 '52 380w

"Basically, belief in the stories presented by 'Crime Without Punishment' depends largely on the reader's appraisal of the author, who has undoubtedly done some FBI work and some military counter-intelligence, who has been around underground, so to speak, but who emerges as an intense, dramatic person inclined to ride a theory to death. . . Except for occasional purple passages, exemplified in the conclusion to a chapter on Communist penetration in Guatemala, the writing is adequate. The book has an excellent index." Oliver Pilat

+ — Sat R 35:20 D 20 '52 400w

REITER, FREDERICK. You train your dog; teaching the pup—training the dog; drawings by E. Nofziger; photographs by Emeric C. Gross, through the courtesy of the Gaines dog research center. 140p $3.50 Macmillan

636.7 Dogs—Training Agr52-433

Manual on dog training, giving basic principles, detailed instructions on training a pup or a dog, and lessons on obedience training. Illustrated with drawings and photographs.

"Every step in teaching a pet is outlined clearly and concisely. . . Clever, rib-tickling drawings by Ed Nofziger are a substantial contribution." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 14 '52 50w

"An excellent manual. . . Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1207 J1 '52 20w

REMARQUE, ERICH MARIA. Spark of life; tr. from the German by James Stern. 365p $3.75 Appleton

52-6136

"The author of All Quiet on the Western Front tells in this moving novel the tragic story of life in a Nazi concentration camp. According to Remarque, this was a 'mild' camp, in which the victims of the Third Reich were not exterminated, but were permitted to die slowly from exhaustion and undernourishment." Library J

"What he has written is essentially a fictional documentary. As such, however—despite our familiarity with the horrors described—the book is gruesomely absorbing. It projects with terrible intensity a picture of total human anguish."

Atlantic 189:85 F '52 80w

Booklist 48:185 F 1 '52

"Not for the squeamish."

Bookmark 11:133 Mr '52 30w

"Compassion, ironic humor, and the eloquence of conviction have gone into this dramatic tribute to the human spirit. The author of All Quiet on the Western Front and other novels that remain as footnotes to our catastrophic age has written in this book one of the most powerful fictional documents (fiction based on fact and rendering fact in its essence and clarity) yet to come out of the war." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 175:72 Ap '52 270w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 27 '52 500w

"The mind almost steadfastly refuses to think of concentration camps without the thought of the few surviving heroes saved by a liberation. Erich Maria Remarque's novel does not, and probably no novel can, convey this horror. It does, however, intimate its thoroughness and effectiveness. The title is apt." Serge Hughes

Commonweal 55:427 F 1 '52 550w

Kirkus 19:663 N 15 '51 280w

"It is a sad, depressing tale, yet it rings true and certainly should be widely read, since there are still so many concentration camps in the world. . . Strongly recommended for all libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:144 Ja 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 S 19 '52 120w

"An utterly uncompromising and courageous book, the more so because its subject matter is such that it cannot be transferred to the screen, as were 'All Quiet on the Western Front' and 'Arch of Triumph'; nor is it calculated to win a wider reading public for Mr. Remarque, since despite its idealism 'Spark of Life' is one of the most brutal books of our time." Harvey Swados

Nation 174:158 F 16 '52 650w

"If we cannot read Spark of Life with a sense of discovery, it is nonetheless well worth reading for what it surely is, a penetrating, heartening, consistently interesting dramatization of the power of the human spirit to survive in a world beset by subhuman dogmatisms.

REMARQUE, E. M.—Continued
 And that is a great deal, a very much needed great deal." W. V. Clark
 + New Repub 126:18 F 25 '52 800w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
 New Statesman & Nation 44:398 O 4
 '52 350w

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 27 '52
 900w

"A grim, agonizing but terribly wonderful story of what happened to the political and religious nonconformists in Hitler's Germany."
 Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 27 '52 1450w

Reviewed by Anthony West
 New Yorker 27:70 F 2 '52 2250w

Reviewed by Douglas MacKey
 San Francisco Chronicle p10 F 9 '52
 600w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
 Sat R 35:10 Ja 26 '52 650w

"The reader aches with tension, willing the little band to keep alive and to outwit the last malice of their enemies. Herr Remarque writes with a power and a practical skill which are always subordinated to his purpose; and, when already it is pretended that the histories of German concentration camps are propagandist exaggerations, this terrible yet sober book may be doubly justified." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 189:374 S 19 '52 150w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
 Springfield Republican p8D F 17 '52
 700w

Reviewed by M. J. Butcher
 Survey 88:229 My '52 240w

"Perhaps Author Remarque has tried to write his story too soon. Most likely, the enormity of the crime he tries to dramatize has swamped him. His story of faceless victims and soulless destroyers occasionally enrages the mind; it seldom engages the heart."

Time 59:102 Ja 28 '52 500w

"Reading this new novel, with its second-hand details and contrived horrors, it is hard to believe that it is by the same author as All Quiet on the Western Front. The difference, perhaps, is the difference between fact and fiction. History has got in first this time, and has left no room for the novelist."

—Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 3 '52
 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:95 Mr '52

RENDEL, JOHN. Dog book. 144p il $2.95 Sterling

636.7 Dogs Agr52-411

"By the kennel editor of The New York Times. A copiously illustrated book on care and training of dogs, but emphasis is on training sporting dogs for field trials, and others for obedience trials." Library J

Booklist 48:243 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 30w

Reviewed by E. K. West
 Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 13 '52
 90w

"A good, practical book." R. W. Henderson
 + Library J 77:441 Mr 1 '52 30w

RENDINA, MRS LAURA (JONES) COOPER.
 Summer for two; frontispiece by Ruth King.
 216p $2.50 Little

52-6794

A novel for older girls in which Debbie and Rachele of Roommates (Book Review Digest 1948) have grown up. Debbie is still harum scarum, and Rachele still poised and lonely, but the summer changes at least one of them.

"This is the kind of book I should like to give to young people throughout the land, and I feel sure that if it were read by them thoughtfully, that bugaboo of teacher, parent, and judge—the teen-age problem—would diminish substantially." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 190:102 D '52 90w

Kirkus 20:324 Je 1 '52 130w

"High school girls seeking sentimental romance will find wholesome advice, good philosophy, and an interesting story in this parallel, interwoven account of a poor girl's and a rich girl's summer." E. H. Speer
 + Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 60w

"The characters do not become too alive to this reader, and the way of translating the girl's inner thoughts is a bit too emotional.
 But the problems tackled bother many girls. . .
 So it is better pass-the-time reading than most of its sort. Girls of the age of the heroines would find better solace and advice in adult books, so it will be read by the junior high age." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p36
 N 16 '52 300w

"Wise and sensitive young novel. . . Not until the book reaches its satisfying ending can one be sure of its outcome. It is exciting to the last page. Under its apparent simplicity,
 'Summer for Two' has many implications."
 Nora Kramer

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '52 140w

Reviewed by B. B. Thorpe
 San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
 30w

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). Nicky's football team; il. by Marian Honigman. 115p
 $2 Scribner

51-12895

Story about how Nicky got his first football and how he and his friends started their own team. For grades two to four.

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

+ Kirkus 19:530 S 15 '51 150w

"Good values and welcome fare for 7-10-year-olds." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 70w

"A fine, easy-reading tale for second and third grade boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 11 '51
 150w

Wis Lib Bul 48:96 Mr '52

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). Pete's home run; il. by Pru Herric. 117p $2 Scribner

52-9349

A small boy's intense interest in baseball, and how he succeeded in learning to be a batter is the theme of this story for grades 2 to 3.

Booklist 48:325 Je 1 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 22 '52
 70w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley
 Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15
 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:280 My 1 '52 120w

"Fine social relationships. Good addition to other Renick sport stories. Grades 2 and 3.
 Usable for older retarded readers." O. R.
 Way

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 70w

"The psychology is fine, and there's fun at the pet show besides. It is all in easy-reading big type, with pleasant two-color pictures."
 L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11
 '52 80w

N Y Times p18 Jl 27 '52 80w

REPLANSKY, NAOMI. Ring song. 57p $2.50
 Scribner

811

52-11792

A first book of verses by a young poet who was born and bred in New York city.

Booklist 49:9 S 1 '52

Kirkus 20:393 J1 1 '52 80w

"Spiritually disturbing and lacking in affirmation, but of high artistic merit." Shirley Barker
+ — Library J 77:1514 S 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 175:218 S 13 '52 30w

"Despite some political tendentiousness, her poems are alive and bright with color and feeling—high-strung, even shrill at times. Perhaps it is inevitable that a quick, flashing talent like hers should also be a hasty one, for it is often true that her poems give the effect of having been set down with not quite enough revision, or with less than full development. These are serious objections, especially since Miss Replansky seems capable of writing much more durable verse than most of the present collection offers us." M. L. Rosenthal
+ — New Repub 128:29 Ja 5 '53 110w

"Naomi Replansky shows certain influence as a young poet should, but she also shows qualities of her own—wit, sophistication, taste, technical skill." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 50w

"Here is some very uneven writing—uneven in both intensity and diction. One has a feeling the poet does not use her mind enough when writing, as if merely to observe were enough. But her observation is not particularly acute, her poetic perception hardly exceptional. . . But this is a very young poet, and some of the work included here was written when she was 16. In a few years she may be writing some very wonderful things." Lawrence Ferlinghetti

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 7 '52 80w

"There is vitality here, freshness in words and ideas, an uncertain vers-libre technique, and a trifle too much cynicism which we hope she will outgrow before its canker eats into her high talents." A. M. Sullivan
+ Sat R 35:30 S 6 '52 240w

REUSCH, GLAD, and NOBLE, MARY. Corsage craft; sketches by Glad Reusch. 148p il $3.50
Van Nostrand

635.96 Bouquets 51-12773

Illustrated step-by-step instructions on the making of corsages for amateurs. Considers both florists materials and home-grown flowers. The authors are respectively a lecturer and past president of the Washington State federation of garden clubs, and a New Orleans woman who edits a gardening magazine about Southern gardens. Index.

Booklist 48:155 Ja 1 '52

"The first completely illustrated manual on the art (or hobby, if you like) of corsage making, either from your own flowers or those bought at the florist's."

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 7 '51 90w

Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 20w

REUTTER, E. EDMUND. School administrator and subversive activities; a study of the administration of restraints on alleged subversive activities of public school personnel. 136p $2.85 Teachers college

371.1 Allegiance. Teaching, Freedom of 51-11677

"Guiding principles are suggested for administrators in public elementary and secondary schools. The 'guiding principle' factor is emphasized since the author points out that no universal solution can be offered. The recommendations are derived from analysis of practices in various states, of judicial decisions and precedents, policies of professional groups, experiences in related fields, and opinions of leading educators." Booklist

Booklist 48:275 My 1 '52

"Reutter's book belongs in the library of all administrators who work with school personnel. Merely having it in the library, however, is not enough. It should be brought to the attention of, and read by, school-board members, teachers, and others concerned with the problem of alleged subversive influences in our public schools." E. C. Bolmeier

+ El School J 52:425 Mr '52 700w

School & Society 74:31 J1 14 '51 20w

REY, HANS AUGUSTO. Curious George rides a bike. 45p $2.75 Houghton

52-8728

Picture-story book about the mischievous little monkey, Curious George. This time he gets a bicycle for a present and the consequences are both gay and disastrous. Ages 4 to 7.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 70w

Horn Bk 28:316 O '52 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 28:394 D '52 40w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 77:1906 N 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 30w

"His escapades aren't quite so furiously paced as in 'Curious George Gets a Job,' but they are fast and funny enough to keep any youngster happy once he has glimpsed Mr. Rey's comic pictures." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '52 70w

New Yorker 28:191 D 6 '52 60w

REY, HANS AUGUSTO. The stars; a new way to use them. 143p il $4 Houghton

523.8 Stars. Constellations 52-7840

A book meant "for people who want to know just enough about the stars to be able to go out at night and find the major constellations, for the mere pleasure of it." (p. 9) Illustrated with drawings which picture the constellations in a new way—neither old fashioned romantic or scientific-geometrical but simple, easily memorized "stick-drawings" of men, beasts or objects.

Booklist 48:243 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 20w

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 6 '52 250w

"Mr. Rey has turned out a book that is readable and useful and that children, as well as adults, can enjoy." R. C. Cowen

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 10 '52 320w

"It is a fascinating book, full of scientific information and as lively in its illustrations as his much-loved Curious George books." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:334 O '52 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 28:394 D '52 40w

"Recommended for public libraries, large and small." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p30 N 16 '52 90w

"This beginner's guide to the stars and primer of astronomy represents the pictorial method of teaching at its best. It is almost certain to become standard equipment among amateur star gazers. H. A. Rey's text is well organized and far more simply written than one would think possible in such a difficult subject. But it is his marvelous drawings that excite the imagination and put the mind to work." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 20 '52 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ap 20 '52 190w

"The Stars' is the best book available for its purpose. It is also a brilliant—and most reasonably priced—example of the combined use of art and writing in bringing science to the layman." John Pfeiffer

REY, H. A.—Continued

+ Sat R 35:18 J1 5 '52 340w

REYNOLDS, BARBARA LEONARD. Pepper; il. by Barbara Cooney. 169p $2 Scribner

Raccoons—Legends and stories 52-9132

Pepper was a raccoon, and the story is about a small boy's dilemma; whether to make a house pet of Pepper, or turn him over to a zoo.

Booklist 48:304 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 29 '52 150w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 100w

"The author's son has a pet raccoon so she is able to write with authority of the habits and mischievous pranks of Pepper who is a good hero (and sometimes a villain!) for a story to delight both boys and girls." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 28:105 Ap '52 90w

"A versatile, flavorful story about a very human boy and a very endearing raccoon."
+ Kirkus 20:155 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Recommended for nine-year-olds and up."
O. R. Way

+ Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 60w

"It makes most amusing reading, happily combined with a theme about the boy longing to start a proper sort of zoo." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 11 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
N Y Times p28 My 25 '52 180w

"This is a story that little boys and girls will thoroughly enjoy. Barbara Cooney's drawings are delightful."

+ Sat R 35:28 Je 28 '52 160w
Wis Lib Bul 48:219 S '52

REYNOLDS, DICKSON, pseud. See Reynolds, H. M. G. C. D.

REYNOLDS, MRS HELEN MARY GREENWOOD (CAMPBELL) DICKSON (DICKSON REYNOLDS, pseud). Angry river; decorations by Clifford Geary. 181p $2 Nelson

51-7314

This novel for high school boys and girls tells the story of a farm boy whose secret desire is to become a doctor. A river flood and the mystery of the old Chinese who had been his great grandfather's friend provide the plot for the story.

"Sound action in an unusual setting."

+ Kirkus 19:619 O 15 '51 110w

"Authentic background of floods in the Pacific Northwest gives this book strength. . . A slight mystery is added, but it is the inexorable rise of the river and the dogged human efforts to combat it that hold the attention." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 76:2126 D 15 '51 80w

"Forceful and real. . . It makes up-to-date, journalistic reading for high school boys." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 11 '51 170w

"Well written, with especially skillful conversation, the plot, not too deep for teen-agers, is told with speed and suspense." M. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p20 N 11 '51 180w

REYNOLDS, JAMES. Maeve, the huntress. 439p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

52-6981

"Celebrates the Ireland of the country house, the ballroom, and race week—a rambling, picturesque story continuing the chronicle of the Lassiter family of Connaught and particularly the adventures of Mark and Maeve, the twins, who have reached their eighteenth birthday as the story begins. It is a sequel to Mr. Reynolds' novel, The Grand Wide Way [Book Review Digest 1951]." Atlantic

"No personalities but lots of characters; no plot but plenty of incident; death and fires are soon forgotten, for what counts here is the joie de vivre. Mr. Reynolds's zest for Irish society is genuine and compelling." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:78 Je '52 270w

Booklist 48:298 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:391 Ag '52 260w

"An overfull book, with crowded gallery of supercharged personalities and an almost encyclopedic recall of Irish lore, this has many brightly colored moments that make for leisurely time-passing."

Kirkus 20:263 Ap 15 '52 160w

"Parts of the book are like a travelogue in which story and characters are thrown in for good measure. The romantic spectacle, however, is handsome and diverting and in Maeve I believe Mr. Reynolds has created a character sufficiently vivid to carry the account of Virginian life and horses and dogs that almost surely will follow in his next novel." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 25 '52 400w

Reviewed by Wilmott Ragsdale

N Y Times p22 Je 8 '52 240w

REYNOLDS, PHILIP. When and if; tr. from the French by Joseph F. McCrindle. 246p $3 Sloane

52-12145

A novel about a RAF intelligence agent who sets up a network during a supposed future war between Russia and the West.

Kirkus 20:286 My 1 '52 130w

"The functioning of the network itself is interesting enough but the book's appeal lies in the very real excitement created by the author's analysis of the war's progress. . . First novel by young French author who served with British Intelligence and Shaef in Holland." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1196 J1 '52 80w

"Although it is obviously, pure fiction, it sounds exactly like pure fact."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 7 '52 260w

"'When and If' is an unheralded book by an unknown author. This reviewer unreservedly recommends it as a work of realistic fact-fiction and as a warning of what could very easily happen to us if we let down our guard. He wishes he could put copies of it into the hands of purblind propagandists who delude themselves that World War III would be a walk-over for anyone." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p5 S 7 '52 600w

"All this is told in the dry, factual autobiographical style of an on-the-spot newspaper reporter. . . This makes for close and complicated reading but is not very exciting. The whole thing, as a matter of fact, is unbelievably dull considering the potential explosiveness of the material. The fault lies partly in the style, which is so unemphatic as to give the effect of a rewrite of last year's newspaper. The other fault lies in the substitution of a plethora of geographic detail for some dramatic imagination." E. J. F.
— + Sat R 35:49 O 4 '52 200w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. Custer's last stand; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. (Landmark bks) 185p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Custer, George Armstrong—Juvenile literature 51-14189

Story-biography of Custer from early childhood to his death. For grades five to eight,

Booklist 48:162 Ja 1 '52

Kirkus 19:484 S 1 '51 130w

"The realistic portrayal of the relations between the Indians and white men make this an important addition to the books on the making of America. Highly recommended." C. W. Field

+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 50w

"Very readable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 30w

"This is more than dramatic history. The author has succeeded in making Custer a real person and thus has given his book the additional depth and interest of biography." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p36 N 11 '51 30w

"Too much of it is given to unimportant details and too little to the great events in which he participated. . . Often the author makes the mistake of writing down to his readers, stooping to explain things they already know and giving them too few opportunities to reach up and grow." M. P. Allen

— Sat R 35:53 F 16 '52 110w

Wis Lib Bul 48:44 Ja '52

REYNOLDS, REGINALD. Beds; with many noteworthy instances of lying on, under, or about them. 310p $3.50 Doubleday

392 Beds and bedsteads 51-14510

"That dedicated assembler, interpreter, instructor and investigator of sanitation (Cleanliness and Godliness) and Beards [Book Review Digest 1946, 1949] bounces through the whole encyclopedia of a prone program and produces some wonderful and funny information. There is history and customs and legend concerning beds per se and there are energetic side trips on the practice of couvade (the father undergoing the travail of his wife in childbirth), and of bundling; there is unlimited lore on cradles, the public aspects of the lit de justice, lit de parade and social lyings-in; there is gleeful research on bedclothes and all sorts of bed decor." Kirkus

"This vast panorama of beds necessitates a true perspective only to be found by taking to bed—therefore a 'must' for horizontal readers."

+ Kirkus 19:627 O 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 44:647 N 29 '52 40w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 27 '52 500w

"Anyone who enjoyed the earlier books will want to add this one to his shelf, and I shouldn't be surprised if many who haven't encountered the author before will be led by this new dissertation to dig up his earlier researches, too." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 9 '52 700w

"It could not really be said that Mr. Reynolds concentrates on very much of anything; one of the chief charms of his hilarious essays being their nonchalant habit of leaping from fact to nonsense and back again. Will Cuppy did much the same thing, but the British Mr. Reynolds' essays are more formal in scholarship even though intended to amuse first and instruct if convenient. . . This witty volume affords much amusement, and lest the timid hang back, it can be remarked that Mr. Reynolds' chief American authority turns out to be none other than Groucho Marx." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p4D Ja 27 '52 300w

"Rare and fascinating tome." Richard McLaughlin

+ Theatre Arts 36:94 F '52 350w

REYNOLDS, REGINALD. Quest for Gandhi [Eng title: To live in mankind: a quest for Gandhi]. 215p $3.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand 52-8047

"A memoir of the author's relationship with the Mahatma, which began in 1929, when Mr.

Reynolds journeyed from England for an extended visit with Gandhi at Sabarmati. Mr. Reynolds was twenty-four at the time, and already powerfully attracted by Gandhi's ideas of passive resistance and non-violence. . . He kept up a correspondence with Gandhi from that time on, and went to India again in 1949, the year after Gandhi's death. The description of this second visit, during which the author was able to see how some of Gandhi's teachings are working out, forms the epilogue of the book." New Yorker

Booklist 48:377 J1 15 '52

"Well worth reading for the sake of either man, Gandhi or Reynolds." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 22 '52 300w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p9 O 13 '52 160w

Nation 175:238 S 20 '52 240w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 J1 6 '52 700w

Reviewed by Charles Spielberger

N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '52 260w

"Mr. Reynolds is pretty much a dedicated man, but his style is graceful, and lighted with the same sly humor."

+ New Yorker 28:106 Je 21 '52 150w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Spring'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 800w

RHODE, IRMA. Cookbook for Fridays and Lent; with an introd. by Robert I. Gannon. 187p $3 McKay

641.5 Cookery 51-13880

"An interesting essay on the history and meaning of fasting and abstinence prefaces this book of non-meat dishes that can be eaten with the blessing of the Roman Catholic Church on any day of the year." N Y Times

"This cookbook is a 'must' for every household that must eschew meat and fowl for religious reasons, and a valuable addition to any culinary library." Morrison Wood

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 18 '51 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 76:2008 D 1 '51 50w

"The recipes are not very novel but they will prove useful to those whose religion or health dictates a no-meat regimen."

N Y Times p54 D 2 '51 60w

"It contains almost no surprises, but the variety within the prescribed limitations is abundant. The meaning and observances of Lent and other days when meat is not eaten are lucidly and authoritatively explained in an introduction by Father Robert I. Gannon." Lawton Mackall

+ Sat R 35:69 Mr 8 '52 60w

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RICH, DANIEL CATTON. Edgar Hilaire Germain Degas. See Degas, H. G. E.

RICH, MRS LOUISE (DICKINSON). Trail to the North. 213p $2.50 Lippincott

52-7466

Continuation of Start of the Trail (Book Review Digest 1949). Bob Gordon does some guiding during a college holiday and runs into a mystery. For ages 12 and over.

Booklist 49:36 S 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 100w

"Bob, his parents and twelve-year-old Susie are likeable people and their family relationships pleasing to read about." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:331 O '52 90w

Kirkus 20:375 J1 1 '52 100w

"Recommended." Alice Wetherell

+ Library J 77:1828 O 15 '52 40w

RICH, L. D.—Continued

"Like all books by Mrs. Rich it has fine values beyond the action and adventure. Her genuine, deep feeling for the woods and for the rough loggers, her discernment about young people, her picture of a specially happy family life, all set her writing apart. Her style is not distinguished, but her warmth of heart, humor, and vigorous approach to life are a tonic. For both boys and girls of about twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52 200w

"The characterizations are splendid and the family life of the Gordons is portrayed with sympathy and skill." M. F. Allen

+ N Y Times pt2, p14 N 16 '52 90w

"There is a vivid description of a lumber camp and of a fight there that will deeply interest the older boys. It has not perhaps quite the holding power of the first tale; but it is a book that will undoubtedly find its place on the shelves of home and school libraries."

+ Sat R 35:60 N 15 '52 60w

RICHARDSON, JOANNA. Fanny Brawne. 190p il $3.75 Vanguard

B or 92 Lindon, Frances (Brawne). Keats, John 52-13206

A biography of the woman who was the "fair love" of the poet Keats. It is as complete a reconstruction of Fanny Brawne's life as is possible with the material extant. Bibliography. Index.

"In the nature of things [Fanny Brawne] refuses to come at all vividly to life save in the light of Keats's suffering, and her champion must admit that the publication of her letters to Fanny Keats had already gone far to vindicate her, not to say Mr Middleton Murry's impassioned essay in her defence. But her task was worth doing and she has performed it with a graceful thoroughness." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 12 '52 270w

"Miss Richardson's whole performance is reticent and scholarly."

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:460 O 18 '52 240w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 14 '52 380w

"Miss Richardson's book is a useful collection of all the available information about Fanny Brawne, and she has succeeded in reconciling to Fanny's advantage the various conflicting opinions about her." F. H. Lyell

+ N Y Times p59 N 9 '52 500w

"The adjective 'Victorian' recurs too often in Miss Richardson's narrative when she disagrees with some decision taken or opinion given in the last century; she resorts—but for this there is good excuse—to a surprising number of conjectures; and she makes something of a system of picturesque backgrounds. Nevertheless the animation as well as the investigation in her book, the spirit of the whole, where the topic itself appeals so lastingly to us, commands favour and gratitude." Edmund Blunden

+ Spec 189:336 S 12 '52 750w

"Miss Richardson works here on the known material. The interpretation of this is not done best by throwing on dabs of whitewash labelled, as it were, the Innocent, the Faithful, the Wasting Body and the Loving Heart. . . Since Fanny is not to be a heartless flirt, then Keats is a ninny, or at best an example of morbid psychology. This is hardly the conclusion Miss Richardson intended, but her insight has not fully matched her sympathy. She has shifted the misreading rather than corrected it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 S 19 '52 1100w

RICHARDSON, MARGARET STIMSON. Seven little Pifflesniffs; pictures by John Teppich. 95p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

52-3052

Ten stories about the lively doings of the Pifflesniff family: Pa and Ma, and seven children. For ages 5 to 9.

"Excellent for reading aloud or for story telling."

+ Bookmark 12:11 O '52 20w

Kirkus 20:366 Jl 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by K. N. Dill

Library J 77:1519 S 15 '52 60w

"The very idea of a family of seven children with such a name will seem funny to boys and girls of about five to eight." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p38 N 16 '52 90w

"These tales are just right to satisfy the clamor for 'just one more' bedtime story." J. M.

+ N Y Times pt2, p38 N 16 '52 90w

RICHARDSON, MRS MYRA REED. Finders keepers; il. by Don Freeman. 190p $2.50 Viking

Dogs—Legends and stories 51-13563

"This is the story of Sam Winton, his friends Shorty and Hal, and a glorious assortment of dogs. Cricket, a St. Bernard with a heart as large as his body, is the leader of the dogs, the idol of the boys, and one of the most engaging canines in a long time. Among other feats Cricket 'rescues' a mother bear and cubs. As a result, the boys are plunged into a series of adventures." N Y Times

Booklist 48:187 F 1 '52

Horn Bk 28:30 F '52 90w

+ Kirkus 19:437 Ag 15 '51 120w

"Incidents are original and characters, once they are sorted out, lively and well developed. This is a long book, and the fine print will be a definite deterrent to many boys who would otherwise enjoy it. Should be seen before purchase. Not to be confused with the picture book of the same name by Lipkind." Anne Izard

Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 80w

"Boys of ten to twelve will appreciate these small town lads, and will love Cricket. Mr. Freeman's many sketches are humorously effective. The type is small, which may put off some younger readers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 11 '51 130w

"There is a pleasant quality of timelessness about 'Finders Keepers' because counterparts of the boy characters could have lived fifty years ago, do live now, and will live tomorrow. Unfortunately the adults in the story are less convincing." L. R. Davis

+ — N Y Times p11 D 23 '51 170w

RIDENOUR, LOUIS NICOT, and others. Bibliography in an age of science. (Second annual Windsor lectures, 1950) 90p il $2.50 Univ. of Ill. press

010.1 Bibliography 51-11147

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Containing the sober reflections and recommendations on this subject of two well-known physicists with extensive interests and experience in the problems of communication, as well as those of a librarian who has given foremost attention to technological applications in library work, this slim, absorbing, and provocative volume deserves to be read widely by the members of the profession to which it was addressed, not merely by those who profess an interest in 'bibliographic organization' in any narrow sense." V. W. Clapp

+ Library Q 22:61 Ja '52 1250w

Special Libraries 43:150 Ap '52 180w

RIEDMAN, SARAH REGAL. Grass, our greatest crop; drawings by Glen Rounds. 128p $3 Nelson

584.8 [584.9] Grasses—Juvenile literature

52-10880

"It tells the story of the grass family which includes the cereals. It shows the great importance of grass as a preserver of the soil and traces the history of the various species. It has specific directions, too, for planting and keeping grass in good condition. A good deal of history is embodied in the story as, through the cultivation of grass in its various forms, the wandering tribes of the primitive world became herdsmen and farmers." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 49:146 D 15 '52

Kirkus 20:684 O 15 '52 90w

"This happy combination of author, artist and publisher has produced a beautiful and unusual book about grass." V. K. Fitch
+ Library J 77:2187 D 15 '52 80w

"In schools, it will be a valuable supplement to more than one subject, in grades 5 or 6 on up. The style is excellent." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 80w

"It is one of the most attractively designed science books I have seen in a long time." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 D 14 '52 110w

"A very attractive book to look at, this has delicate marginal drawings, printed in green, by Glen Rounds."

+ Sat R 35:75 N 15 '52 70w

RIEDMAN, SARAH REGAL. Water for people; il. by Bunji Tagawa. (Man and his world ser) 151p $2.50 Schuman

551.49 Water—Juvenile literature 52-7779

Describes the importance of water to human life, discussing its origin, properties, forms, uses, power, water and weather, water supply, shortages and conservation. For grades six to eight.

Booklist 48:269 Ap 15 '52

Commonweal 57:176 N 21 '52 10w

Kirkus 19:532 S 15 '51 80w

"Very excellent study." N. S. Chasteen

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 8 '52 40w

Reviewed by Nina Chasteen

N Y Times p16 Jl 20 '52 60w

RIES, VICTOR HEINRICH. Gardener's trouble shooter. 320p il $3.50 Sheridan

635 Plants—Diseases. Gardening 52-8097

Help for the gardener, giving information on soil fertilizers, effect of light, temperature, wind and climate. Detailed descriptions and drawings of garden pests, with instructions on their control. Illustrated. Index.

"Readable, fully informed book."

+ Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 30w

"Don't buy the book for gardeners who make a specialty of their hobby, but do get it for rank beginners." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:723 Ap 15 '52 70w

"Victor Ries has put his long experience with gardens and gardeners to excellent use in this down-to-earth volume, with the result that many new friends will doubtless join his host of old ones in gratitude for his knack of clarifying the problems of gardening simply and with authority." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 My 11 '52 110w

Sat R 35:21 Ag 2 '52 20w

"The book is very well organized, clearly and simply written, and covers almost any potential garden disaster." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 230w

RIESMAN, DAVID, and GLAZER, NATHAN. Faces in the crowd; individual studies in character and politics. (Studies in national policy) 751p $5 Yale univ. press

136.4973 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 52-5357

"A second volume in the author's study of the American man in relation to his society.

Faces in the Crowd, subtitled Individual Studies in Character and Politics, with its specific interest in individuals contrasts with the more general first volume, The Lonely Crowd [Book Review Digest 1950, 1951] in its orientation. Turning again to his terms, 'inner-directed' and 'other-directed', the author explores the relation of character structure and 'political style', or the place of politics in the total life orientation, by means of a series of interviews which comprise a major portion of the book. Mr. Riesman draws from essentially urban areas, from Harlem, from a Bridgeport, Conn. trade school, from graduate students in Chicago, from a suburb, etc.; from various economic, social, and educational groups." (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by R. T. LaPiere

Am Soc R 17:631 O '52 500w

Booklist 48:310 Je 1 '52

"There is a good deal of psychological verbiage which he assumes is known to his audience. While the study is provocative, it is by no means conclusive (the limitations of the sample and the single-interview technique would seem to preclude this). People interested or involved in social and political science and psychology, teachers, and so on may find food for thought and further investigation here."

Kirkus 20:314 My 15 '52 180w

Reviewed by Max Lerner

New Repub 126:18 Je 30 '52 1200w

"One line of investigation seems particularly promising. Mr. Riesman's account underlines the importance in the American character structure of the diversity of cultural heritage in the United States. It is certainly no coincidence that all the examples of tradition-directed characters in the volume are either Negroes or the children of immigrants. Of the ethnic qualities of the culture of such people we are well enough aware. But we have too casually taken for granted the essential similarity of antecedents of those we term 'natives.' Continued scrutiny of the cultural antecedents of all Americans is very likely to reward us with understanding of the tangled strands from which their character was formed." Oscar Handlin

N Y Times p6 My 25 '52 1050w

"The profiles are fascinating reading in themselves, but the author's purpose is to develop a social theory which will throw some light on our society and especially on the apathy and indifference and loneliness which so many people feel today." I. E.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 31 '52 260w

School & Society 75:319 My 17 '52 20w

RIESS, CURT. Berlin story. 368p $3.75 Dial press

943.087 [943.086] Berlin—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 52-5948

A Berlin newspaperman who came to this country and became a citizen when the Nazis took over, returned to Berlin after the war, and has written this journalistic study of post-war Berlin.

Atlantic 190:111 N '52 50w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 28 '52 400w

"His account of the city's seven-year struggle is full not only of hitherto unknown and often most important details but also is a monument to the Berliners, those matter-of-fact, caustic, purposeful, and apparently unconquerable people who in the fuel-less blockade winter could joke that they were freezing more than they could shiver." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 15 '52 500w

"Fascinating reading. . . Highly recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:1404 S 1 '52 200w

"Mr. Riess' account of the courage, stoicism, self-glorification and self-pity with which Berliners accept the hardships of the blockade is an important contribution toward understanding the mentality of the 3,500,000 Berliners. Yet 'The Berlin Story' has one glaring weakness. It omits many of the important events and personalities which made post-war Berlin the focal point of world attention." J. H. Lichtblau

RIESS, CURT—Continued

+ N Y Times p16 O 12 '52 600w

"[The author's] memory of the old days, his familiarity with Berlin slang, and his feeling for the Berliner—a type unique in Germany—go to make this an unusual book, very different from comparable studies by American and British journalists."

+ New Yorker 28:128 S 20 '52 140w

"This is a fascinating account of life in Berlin from the last days of the war down to the present. Riess is a German journalist who was educated in Berlin, left when Hitler came to power and returned shortly after the Russians entered the city. He knows Berlin, he understands Berliners and he writes an interesting report in skilled journalistic style."

I. F. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 9 '52 250w

"This is Curt Riess's book and he has done, all in all, a good job of reporting a difficult subject. Riess knows well the Berliners about whom he writes; he used to be one."

Allan Jackson

+ Sat R 35:28 D 6 '52 500w

RIETVELD, MRS JANE. Great Lakes sailor; il. by [the author]. 188p $2 Viking

52-12805

"Twelve-year-old Tom, a carpenter's son, wins his heart's desire—opportunity to sail from Milwaukee to Buffalo as a cabin boy—in 1844 when steam was beginning to threaten sails on the Great Lakes run. Sailors' hazing, a tremendous storm, a race between steamships provide excitement, but most important is Tom himself: his yearning to become a sailor, his pride in being accepted as one of the crew, and his love for the sailing vessel." Horn Bk

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

"Nautical minded 9 to 12 year olds are sure to find these contrasting experiences recorded in the liveliest fashion of great interest. And they will agree enthusiastically with Tom's final decision, approved by his father, to be a sailing man forever, come what may!" Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 19 '52 170w

"Good historical writing, full of action and sharply sensitive detail, makes this a story boys will like." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:326 O '52 60w

Kirkus 20:411 J1 15 '52 120w

"The style is good and Tom's relations with his family are happy again at the end. The sketches have good period feeling and decorative skill." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 23 '52 80w

RIGG, ROBERT B. Red China's fighting hordes; a realistic account of the Chinese Communist army [drawings by the author]. 378p il $3.75 Military service

355 Chinese people's liberation army

51-14756

"A study of the Chinese People's Liberation Army and its rapid growth from a small conspiracy to the fighting force of three million men it is today." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 48:179 F 1 '52

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ap 13 '52 120w

Foreign Affairs 30:683 J1 '52 30w

"An army officer who has seen much service in Eastern Asia, Colonel Rigg was a prisoner of the Red Chinese forces for several months in 1947. His book goes far beyond the knowledge he then gained. It is packed with an astounding amount of valid current detail and historical background. Though loose in arrangement, it is readable and intensely interesting; few American books have so thoroughly described an enemy army in terms equally comprehensible to lay and military readers." J. I. Greene

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 16 '52 350w

"Colonel Rigg, an American military attaché in China from 1945 to 1948, has marched with the Chinese Reds and seen them fight, and his evaluation of their army is most thorough."

New Yorker 27:65 D 29 '51 120w

"The book's well-presented charts and tables, together with good photographs, a useful appendix and full index, contribute to its undoubted value. For a study of such a complex subject, this volume is most readable. It will not only interest students of military affairs but will also provide food for thought for all who are concerned with the role of communism in the world today." R. V. Dewar-Durie

+ Pacific Affairs 25:413 D '52 390w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:41 Ag 23 '52 240w

RIGGS, FRED WARREN. Formosa under Chinese Nationalist rule. 195p $2.75 Macmillan

951.249 Formosa

52-3209

"Dr. Riggs has offered a useful antidote for the type of wishful thinking that sees on Formosa a powerful, highly trained and well-equipped army of more than a half million ready to spring to the reconquest of the Chinese mainland as soon as the United States gives the word. . . The tone of the book is anti-Kuomintang and anti-Chiang Kai-shek." N Y Times

Current Hist 23:271 O '52 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Smith

N Y Times p24 S 14 '52 330w

"China-born Dr. Fred W. Riggs has done an important service in compiling 'Formosa Under Chinese Nationalist Rule,' a concise and impartial interim report that makes no pretense of being a definitive work, but is extremely readable and thoroughly informative. . . The appendix of the volume includes a sort of Formosan separatist's manifesto, written by one Joshua Liao from exile in Hong Kong. It represents an important—if submerged—viewpoint among millions of Formosans, and deserves further study." Stuart Lillico

+ Sat R 35:15 S 6 '52 600w

RIGSBY, HOWARD. Kill and tell. 218p $2.50 Morrow

51-13616

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:458 Ag 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 18 '51 100w

"A new entry in the ranks of the better private investigators is Timothy Wilde of San Francisco. . . [The book] is freshened by the portrayal of a small California seacoast town, numerous well-sketched minor characters and a first-rate full-length portrait of a beautiful woman hagridden by her pianistic talent." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p50 N 18 '51 130w

"Plausible and interesting." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 2 '51 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 30w

RILEY, OLIVE LASETTE. Your art heritage. 320p il col pl $4.50 Harper

707 Art—Study and teaching

51-12450

"Olive L. Riley, Chairman of the Art Department at New York's Washington Irving High School, has prepared this book especially for the adolescent to arouse and sustain a direct interest in all forms of art by presenting it in a way to hold the youthful reader.

The development from primitive art on through the classical works to modern art and architecture are covered in the easy-to-read text and the many photographs. Several paintings are reproduced in full color." (School Arts) Contains Topics for discussion. Index.

Booklist 48:283 My 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"There is a running, simple commentary which does not often stoop to the jargon of the historian. Any child would be left a maturer person for the reading of this book." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 5 '52
130w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1510 S 15 '52 90w

"We consider [this] one of the best books of this year. It does, in a form and style much more attractive to youth, the task so well done in a much longer, more adult book, Gombrich's 'Story of Art'. . . The 281 pictures are well chosen, ten in full color. The long index, together with the contents outline, makes it a helpful reference book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p26 N
16 '52 220w

"Here addressed to teenagers, is a fine history of art from prehistoric to modern times."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 23 '52
100w

School Arts 52:14a S '52 50w

RILEY, TOM. Build-it-yourself ranch-type house. See Popular mechanics magazine

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. His last friendship; unpublished letters to Mrs Eloui bey; with a study by Edmond Jaloux; and an introd. by Marcel Raval [tr. by William H. Kennedy]. 114p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Eloui, Nimet 52-8399

Nimet Eloui Bey, a beautiful Egyptian woman, was the friend to whom Rilke wrote the ten letters in this book. The preceding study by Edmond Jaloux describes Rilke and this "last friendship," as an introduction to the letters.

"Recommended for large poetry collections."

H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:390 Ap 19 '52 50w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 126:25 My 12 '52 400w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 35:42 Je 21 '52 240w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Life of the Virgin Mary [Das Marien-leben] the German text with an English tr. and introd. by Stephen Spender. 49p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

831 Mary, Virgin—Poetry A52-9832

The German text with English translation of Rilke's sequence of poems on the life of the Virgin Mary.

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:390 Ap 19 '52 50w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 126:25 My 12 '52 400w

"A minor poem of charm and beauty. . . Of all modern poets, perhaps only Rilke could get near [the miracle of Mary], could recreate the mystery and yet not fall into either vulgarity or over-refinement. I'm not certain that Spender's translation is always delicate enough, but it is lucid and it catches the tone and rhythms of wonder and praise and miracle that are in the German original." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p27 Mr 9 '52 140w

"It is hard to say just why this Life of the Virgin is usually given an inferior rating among his works. It is a highly personal interpretation of the Christian story." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 6 '52
120w

RINEHART, MRS MARY (ROBERTS). Swimming pool. 312p $3 Rinehart

51-8790

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

"Top-flight Rinehart." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 175:75 Ap '52 150w

"After an interruption of something over six years in producing full length mystery novels, Mrs. Rinehart comes along with this rewarding work, in which she displays undiminished skill at weaving romance, family skeletons, heinous villainy, and situations of emotional terror into a tale of puzzling murder involving the upper social strata." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 3 '52
210w

Kirkus 19:713 D 15 '51 120w

"The pages include a great deal of sedulously colloquial talk, a nightly routine of scurrying about in the shrubbery, bashings and shootings and, most of all, a rather strenuously contrived fog." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 10
'52 190w

"It contains such typically Rinehartian absurdities as poverty with two full-time servants; and the prose too often sounds like that of Mrs. Rinehart's imitators—or even her parodists. But there's a great deal of pleasant warmth and smooth readability, a well-handled love affair . . . and a plausible tangle of family problems and emotions, with a murderer who is for the first time that I can remember in the Rinehart canon, believably motivated." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '52 140w

"As usual, the author depends strongly on the had-I-but known technique, and she has dragged in a romance more or less by its heels, but the fashionable atmosphere is still there, along with a satisfactory amount of violence, and it can probably be said that the old formula continues to work very nicely."

New Yorker 27:83 Ja 19 '52 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52
80w

"Told with author's usual skill, but build-up a little too elaborate, throwbacks and throw-aheads too frequent." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:59 Ja 19 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:95 Mr '52

RIPLEY, ELIZABETH. Leonardo da Vinci; with drawings and paintings by Leonardo. 67p $3 Oxford

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci—Juvenile Literature 52-9432

A brief biography of the famous Renaissance painter, written for grades 7 to 10. Includes reproductions of many of his drawings and paintings, some showing the artist's scientific genius. Short bibliography.

Booklist 49:20 S 1 '52

"Leonardo's drawings of armored cars, underground streets, flying machines and other inventions may attract many boys who would not read the book if only the paintings were included." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:333 O '52 70w

"A fine gift and a wonderful invitation to further study."

+ Kirkus 20:453 Ag 1 '52 150w

"Recommended for the art and biography collections of all libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 80w

"It is a fascinating introduction to Leonardo for any age, for it interprets and reveals him in all aspects of his genius. Boys who hang over the reconstructed models based on his sketches and designs which recently toured this country will be especially interested." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p26 N
16 '52 220w

New Yorker 28:206 D 6 '52 60w

Sat R 35:68 N 15 '52 80w

RIPLEY, SIDNEY DILLON. Search for the spiny babbler; an adventure in Nepal. 301p il $4 Houghton 954.2 [915.42] Nepal—Description and travel.

Natural history—Nepal 51-8913

An account of a bird and small mammal collecting expedition in Nepal. The author and his associates, under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute, Yale university, and the National Geographic society started their expedition in 1948 and penetrated far into country formerly closed to foreigners. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:153; 170 Ja 1 '52; Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:106 F '52 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 17 '52
400w

"The account of the adventure is spiced by entertainment given the party by Mahara-jahs and colored by visits to native bazaars and distant villages. The whole is like a fairy tale with a purpose, a tale written by a man with an observant eye and a respect-ful heart." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 27
'52 400w

Horn Bk 28:189 Je '52 20w

Kirkus 19:657 N 1 '51 200w

"Amusing and absorbing account. . . Readers who want a story of adventure or a bird book, or an appreciative introduction to this little-known country, or a combination of all three, will find it here." M. N. Barton

+ Library J 77:47 Ja 1 '52 230w

+ Nation 174:256 Mr 15 '52 190w

"As a book of travel-observations in a coun-try that has been visited by not more than two dozen Americans, 'Search for the Spiny Babbler' will have special values beyond its contributions as a book of natural history." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 17
'52 650w

"Mr. Ripley has written amusingly as well as informatively. He does full justice to the harassments of travel in India. . . And, of course, there's much on birds, but not in profes-sional vein; the whole project, in fact, is handled in all its aspects with humor, reada-bility, and with the authority of a qualified sci-entific traveler." Robert Trumbull

+ N Y Times p6 F 17 '52 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 13 '52
220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:91 Mr '52

RITCHIE, JEAN. Swapping song book; pho-tographs by George Pickow; piano arrange-ments by A. K. Fossner and Edward Tripp. 91p $2.75 Oxford

784.4 Folk songs, Kentucky. Children's songs 52-9433

"Here Jean Ritchie has collected some of the songs which she sang as a child in the Kentucky Cumberlands—'Skin and Bones,' 'Lazy John,' 'Pretty Fair Miss' and eighteen others—with simple arrangements of the mu-sic, including guitar chords. She presents these in relationship to their background, ac-companying each song with a sketch of life and customs of the Cumberlands as children know them today and with a photograph by George Pickow." (N Y Times) Ages 8 to 12.

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 16 '52
130w

Kirkus 20:555 S 1 '52 100w

Library J 77:1747 O 15 '52 20w

"Highly recommended." K. N. Dill

+ Library J 77:2078 D 1 '52 60w

"For reading, looking and learning, for fun with or without the singing, comes this freshly devised song book. . . The book is a treasure for fourth grade 'social studies,' as well as a gift of long usefulness to any happy singing family." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N
16 '52 170w

"The sketches are lightly flavored with the mountain idiom and the photographs, if not highly imaginative, help to place the songs as part of real life." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 N 2 '52 140w

RITNER, MRS ANN KATHERINE (GILLI-LAND). Keepsake. 287p $3 Lippincott

52-5100

Love story, the scene of which is Arizona in the time of the Spanish-American war. Cathy Brett, the unworldly daughter of a well-known industrial and political leader is the narrator and central figure.

Booklist 48:329; 339 Je 15 '52

"On the level at which this tale is told, Miss Ritner has acquitted herself with appre-ciable competence, ease, and air of sincerity. But between the simulacrum and the reality falls the shadow forever." Gertrude Buckman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 14 '52
350w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:341 O '52 80w

"For libraries which purchase love stories for the rocking chair brigade." M. P. Mc-Kay

Library J 77:1193 Jl '52 80w

"This is a routine melodrama written in a routine way."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 14 '52
120w

"Told from Cathy's viewpoint, the story focuses with competent cinematic directness on typical scenes and episodes of a semi-raw frontier society." A. F. Wolfe

N Y Times p14 Jl 20 '52 200w

"Even in Cathy's story the death of her mother and the near burning-up of Lisa bring in overtones of melodrama out of key with the rest of Mrs. Ritner's gently sentimental storytelling."

+ Sat R 35:35 Ag 2 '52 260w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CAR-NAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). Dog it was that died. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

[52-10405]

Detective story.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

"Compact plot and engaging detecting." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 5 '52
120w

Kirkus 20:389 Jl 1 '52 60w

"That there is a case at all is very much in doubt and it all makes for a good deal of that talk about it which Miss Lorac spins with such ease. But in this instance it makes for less than her usual interest, principally, I think, because so much of the business is played out in the wings and divined by a very late reconstruction out of fairly thin air." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 19
'52 90w

"A little below her best—unusually slow and too patently padded. But there is still fine solid novelistic meat here." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p39 O 5 '52 50w

"None but an English writer—or maybe nobody but Lorac—could succeed with a mystery in which, after the murder, the char-acters do nothing but talk, yet suspense is there. Solution not quite up to standard but Inspector MacDonald's detection good as ever." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 5 '52
40w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). It's her own funeral. 186p $2.50 Doubleday 52-9064

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ag 10 '52 90w

"Leisurely but intelligent."

+ Kirkus 20:291 My 1 '52 50w

"Miss Carnac is a solid, careful, pungent craftsman. Her work won't, of course, satisfy the reader who wants blondes and bashings, but it's an analyst rather than the mystery that he needs anyway. . . This book isn't a 'Crime Club Selection.' They are usually a little gaudier and a little slacker of jaw one way or another. But it's the sort of book that makes me content that the club sustains its readers with beef as well as bangles." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 20 '52 200w

"Miss Carnac is so associated with just this type of unspectacular but satisfactory Scotland Yard story that her admirers will feel no disappointment in her latest," Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 J1 20 '52 120w

"Carnac novels generally display unusual twists and good writing. This is a neat specimen." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 27 '52 40w

"Plodding but pleasant," Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:56 N 22 '52 30w

"The story is above average and the prose is grammatical," Esther Howard

+ Spec 187:684 N 16 '51 50w

RIWKIN-BRICK, A. See Brick, A. R.

ROARK, GARLAND (GEORGE GARLAND, pseud.). Slant of the wild wind. 284p $3 Doubleday

52-5127

"Geoffrey Lipscomb-Grey, a suave Englishman who never lets his emotions get out of hand, is the head devil of the shipping firm of Van Oren, Ltd. He has weak George Van Oren in his pocket; he is going to marry lovely Martha Van Oren, take control of the business and make himself a leading citizen of Sydney. There are obstacles of course, but Geoffrey keeps his head and pulls the strings. He is ready to sacrifice everyone, especially Captain Redd, his rival for the heart of Martha. The climax comes amid bloodshed on the Island of Gold—after a chase on the high seas." N Y Times

"If you like lusty, exciting tales of the sea, don't miss 'Slant of the Wild Wind.'" R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 3 '52 150w

"Less complex in plot, perhaps, than its predecessors, but equally dependent on phony atmosphere and language so nautically caparisoned that a mere landlubber is lost, this is, I felt, the least successful of Roark's tales."

— Kirkus 19:683 D 1 '51 180w

"Garland Roark, who has frequently written knowingly and vividly of the physical aspects of sailing vessels and men, shows every sign, in 'Slant of the Wild Wind,' of being able to write interestingly of people."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 27 '52 320w

"A lusty, if improbable, tale of sailing ship days in Australia. Garland Roark believes in warming the blood and making the nerves tingle. His ships are smart and fleet; his captains are bold and masterful." W. B. H.

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '52 180w

"Mr. Roark's plot contrivances are fairly predictable, but his pace is fast, his characterizations serviceable, and his descriptions of seafaring action intensely alive. If you like a fast chase (cum romance) you'll like this one." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:35 Mr 15 '52 200w

ROBACK, ABRAHAM AARON. History of American psychology. 426p il $6 Lib. pubs.

150.9 Psychology—History

52-11499

"As comprehensive as 426 pages will allow, the history is traced in detail from dim Colonial beginnings through all the many stages of its development to the present. Early and contemporary schools in psychology are explored, and their leaders (Dewey, Cattell, Titchener, McDougall, Woodworth, Thorndike, etc.) are characterized. Make-up features are the many portraits, drawings, and charts the exhaustive documentation by footnote and quotation, the excellent sectional arrangement, and the inclusive names-topics indexes." Library J

"All in all, despite its unevenness I liked this book. Readers will enjoy reading once more of the tremendous influence of the clergy in early American higher education. They will find food for thought in Roback's clear delineation of the manner in which the progress of psychology was correlated with its increasing freedom from theology." W. J. McKeachie

+ Christian Century 69:1408 D 3 '52 480w

"An invaluable, permanent reference for student, layman, and professional in every type of library." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1399 S 1 '52 110w

"Rather uneven, ranging from straight history, which includes consideration of European influences, to deliberate emphasis on the work of men like Muensterberg and Titchener, of whom the author writes that neither 'identified himself with their adopting (more than adopted) country.' Roback nevertheless has added one more contribution to his long collection of books and scholarly articles." G. E. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ag 17 '52 130w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 40w

ROBBINS, HAROLD, pseud. See Rubins, H.

ROBBINS, ROSSELL HOPE, ed. Secular lyrics of the XIVth and XVth centuries. 331p $3.50 Oxford

821.08 English poetry—Collections [52-9924]

"This collection is a sequel to the anthologies of religious verse of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries made by Carleton Brown; and like them it stems from a work of pure scholarship. Its editor collaborated with Brown in the compilation of an index of Middle English Verse, and from a study of many manuscripts selected the poems printed here. Primarily it is a book for serious students." New Statesman & Nation

"The volume is for the advanced student rather than for the general reader: the texts are supported with notes and a glossary. There have been complaints recently that Chaucer should have been translated into modern English so that a wider audience could read him. How academically possessive is such a view! Let some modern poet render the verses in Mr Hope Robbins's collection. Nothing spectacular might appear, no new Chaucer, and this Mr Hope Robbins, most honestly, confesses." B. I. Evans

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 22 '52 250w

"Ye autient spellynges and the use of letters now disappeared from our alphabet make this scholarly volume a little formidable to read through at one session; but take your time with it and you will find some delightful numbers, and a refreshing sense of the gaiety of the world in a time that may have been, really, a good deal less secure than our own." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 175:37 J1 12 '52 60w

ROBBINS, R. H.—Continued

"Readers who are put off Chaucer because of the unfamiliar words and spelling will not make much of this volume; but amateurs with a smattering of Middle English, who are neither too lazy nor too proud to use the good glossary, will find much here to entertain and reward them. The first half of the book is the livelier; there are some fine pieces of ribaldry among the popular songs, and a superb nonsense poem, When to trust Women, which calls out for illustrations by Hieronymus Bosch."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 43:566 My 10 '52 400w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 31 '52 230w

"It is a book that no one who cares for poetry can afford to miss. The difficult spellings quickly lose their terrors after a reading or two, and the very adequate glossary soon makes the unfamiliar words familiar. Had some earliest of literary critics had this collection at his elbow, he could safely have prophesied a glorious future for English poetry; but had he by any stroke of magic also been able to read the present introduction, he would have despaired of this kind." J. M. Cohen

+ — Spec 188:492 Ap 11 '52 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p477 J1 25 '52 1600w

ROBBINS, ROSSELL HOPE. T. S. Eliot myth.

226p $3 Schuman

811 Eliot, Thomas Stearns 51-14190

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Booklist 48:262 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 175:319 J1 '52 140w

"His dislike for the ideas he attributes to Eliot does not excuse Prof. Robbins for the attack he makes under the guise of a scholarly documentary analysis which fundamentally he never achieves. . . It is not within the compass of this review to pursue with detailed analysis what has now become the Rossell Hope Robbins problem. As to Mr. Eliot, we have to await a scholarly, documented analysis of his writings, especially of his prose. Indeed, the academic paraphernalia is a handicap to the Robbins polemic for the reader who checks the complete Eliot text against the Robbins documentation." H. C. Currie

— Christian Century 69:161 F 6 '52 400w

"Although The T. S. Eliot Myth is not likely to have any effect on Eliot's reputation, the book cannot be dismissed with a shrug of the shoulders. Reading it is a disturbing experience. The author is obviously sincerely concerned about important matters, and fond of books (some books). He has the right to disagree with Eliot. But he needs to find valid grounds for disagreement first." Thomas Moser
New Eng Q 25:104 Mr '52 750w

"This is a book likely to be widely condemned by both poet and scholar. It is not that it goes against popular opinion. It is a mine of misinterpretation. It is the unhappy result of erudition unaccompanied by sufficient poetic intuition or insight. . . With splendid tools of technical erudition, Mr. Robbins has gone a long way in the exploration of this myth, mostly in the wrong direction. It is, above all, Eliot's opinions which antagonize him, as they may antagonize us. But a doctor is not less of a doctor if his diagnosis of our condition happens to be one we won't admit." Laurence Ferling

— San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 6 '52 290w

"Mr. Robbins might have done well to look twice at his reference to Meredith and Hardy as twentieth-century novelists; and he would have done even better to reconsider his remarkable suggestion that Mr. Eliot should be chided for failing to note, or perhaps even understand, that the French Revolution brought about 'the destruction of feudalism.' But—limitations and possible corrections aside—this is a vigorous work of criticism that will interest any reader who has ever concerned himself with the mind and nature and stature of T. S. Eliot." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R 35:19 F 2 '52 750w

"The methods Mr. Robbins uses are familiar in the field of pamphleteering (to which his book properly belongs); it is disappointing to see them offered as criticism. Mr. Robbins particularly neglects the problem of language. He reads with narrow literalness when that serves his purpose, and he is not at all reluctant to find the widest and most damaging implications in the phrases he has detached from Eliot's context." Martin Price

Yale R n s 41:458 spring '52 430w

ROBERSON, JOHN, and ROBERSON, MARIE.

Complete barbecue book; il. by H. W. Doremus. 294p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

641.578 [641.76] Cookery, Outdoor. Menus 52-6045

In a preliminary section the authors describe various kinds of spits and grills and barbecue fireplaces and give a list of do's and don'ts for amateur cooks. The main section contains some three hundred recipes for meats, fowl, and fish dishes with a few for vegetables, salads and desserts. Suggested menus are included.

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 77:1203 J1 '52 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 28 '52 140w

ROBERTS, LESLIE. Canada: the golden hinge.

288p il $3.50 Rinehart

971 [917.1] Canada—Description and travel 52-3885

An account of present-day Canada, its industries, and its place in the world. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:103 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:54 D '52 30w

Current Hist 23:393 D '52 110w

"The author is a Canadian journalist and for the general American reader his book is both fresh and revealing. . . It is a necessary book for any general library." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 77:1899 N 1 '52 150w

"His book is full of useful information and, written though it is in conscientiously breezy journalese, can be recommended to anyone planning to visit Canada as tourist or on business." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 175:390 O 25 '52 550w

"A lively word picture of a peace-loving and prosperous people, whose march to greatness seems foreordained." Stuart Keate

+ N Y Times p28 N 23 '52 500w

Reviewed by L. L. L. Golden
Sat R 35:38 D 13 '52 180w

ROBERTS, OWEN JOSEPHUS. Court and the Constitution.

102p $2 Harvard univ. press

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history. U.S. Supreme court 51-12388

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Although Robert Cushman, Thomas Reed Powell, and many others have made most significant contributions of which notice might well have been taken, it was the role of the Supreme Court that Justice Roberts set out to examine, and that he has done rather neatly in this little volume." C. A. Berdahl

+ Ann Am Acad 280:180 Mr '52 800w

"This book will not make easy reading for the general reader, but he will find a compact, lucid treatment of several important and revealing areas in our constitutional law. The specialist may accompany the author as he retreads some of the ground which he covered while on the court, but the specialist will wish for more. Both the general and the special reader will approach the book with interest because it is the work of Justice Roberts, himself an important figure in American constitutional history." T. C. Sinclair

Christian Century 69:159 F 6 '52 460w

"This is an interesting and stimulating book for the special student of Constitutional Law, and should be educative to any reader who still cherishes the belief that our judicial storks import their babies from heaven." E. S. Corwin

+ Harvard Law R 65:1471 Je '52 1000w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 22 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. C. Cairns
Sat R 35:41 F 16 '52 280w

"The book gives perspective from a conservative point of view on the development of constitutional law in three crucial fields of government, and it affords lessons in legal analysis of the words and structure of a great document developed through principles to concrete decisions of cases. It is, however, disappointing, for the scope is narrowly limited, the tone defeatist, and the discussion often becomes merely a digest of case facts."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:389 D '51 270w

ROBERTSON, D. B. Religious foundations of Leveller democracy. 175p pa $2.75 King's Crown press

942.06 Levellers 51-11648

"The Levellers, a small but articulate group of left-wing Puritans active in and around London between 1647 and 1649, constituted the first democratic party in modern times. Dr. Robertson here develops the thesis that 'their political ideals are better understood as working out of certain of their religious principles,' although he concedes that these ideals had also strong economic and political motivation." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Mr. Robertson has undertaken yet another examination of the considerable body of a radical sectarian thought that emerged in England during the revolutionary era. He has made full use of the splendid collection of pamphlets available in the McAlpin collection and has given thoughtful, if not particularly critical, attention to the whole range of Leveller thought." W. K. Jordan

+ Ann Am Acad 280:223 Mr '52 280w
Christian Century 69:1225 O 22 '52 70w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 29:212 Ap '52 900w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:382 D '51 190w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Lonesome sorrel; il. by Taylor Oughton. 214p $2.50 Winston

Horses—Legends and stories 52-5491

Cliff Barry cared more for motorcycles than he did for horses, and yet he was presented with a horse. The horse was mourning the loss of his first owner, so it looked as if trouble would follow. The story is of a girl who liked horses and what she did about Cliff's situation.

Booklist 48:304 My 15 '52

"A good job for the horse story readers, with an element of humor too often lacking in their fare."

+ Bookmark 11:164 Ap '52 70w

"This is a splendidly written story." E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 90w

+ Kirkus 20:193 Mr 15 '52 170w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 77:911 My 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 11 '52 70w

"That Cliff learns to appreciate Cinnamon will not be surprising to horse lovers. But it will be as satisfactory and as convincing as the book's agreeable and plausible style. Unfortunately the illustrations do not reflect the ring of genuine horse sense which distinguishes the story." L. R. Davis

+ N Y Times p10 J1 6 '52 140w

+ Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 80w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Mystery of Burnt Hill; drawings by Raffaello Busoni. 224p $2.50 Viking

Mystery story for ages 10 to 15. 52-12806

Booklist 49:93 N 1 '52

"When two high school sophomores become imbued with Sherlock Holmes complexes anything is apt to happen. It certainly does in this welcome story by a skilful and popular author who has a knack for building up suspense to the utmost." R. F.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 100w

"Master story teller Robertson weaves a mystery with a different twist in his characteristically easy, smooth-flowing narrative style."

+ Kirkus 20:412 J1 15 '52 180w

Library J 77:1750 O 15 '52 30w

"All quite possible and convincing. Good mystery." R. M. McEvoy

+ Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '52 60w

ROBERTSON, PRISCILLA (SMITH). Revolutions of 1848; a social history. 464p maps $6 Princeton univ. press

940.28 Europe—History. Revolutions 52-5833

"Discusses the revolutionary movements of 1848 in France, Germany, Austria, and Italy, and concludes that far from producing freedom, they contributed to the power politics of our own time." Booklist

Reviewed by Goldwin Smith

Am Hist R 58:112 O '52 650w

"This delightfully brilliant work by Priscilla Robertson, daughter of Preserved Smith, is in its keen analysis of the social conditions of the 1848 revolutionary era well worthy of the distinguished father to whom it is dedicated." J. E. Gillespie

+ Ann Am Acad 283:229 S '52 700w

Booklist 48:336 Je 15 '52

"This scholarly and at the same time fascinating presentation of the issues and events of 1848 will be of the greatest help to anyone who wants to explore that question." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 69:925 Ag 13 '52 200w

"This spirited book, rich in facts though never merely factual, solid but never stolid, will delight those who prefer history when it is as stimulating as fiction. Teachers will welcome it as supplementary reading for their classes and some will adopt it as a text. There are several maps, a thirty-page bibliography, and an excellent index." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 15 '52 1100w

"No one else has seen 1848 quite as Mrs. Robertson sees it, with an ample perspective of time and a tempered but not disillusioned belief in the democratic ideals which inspired the revolutionists. . . But just as she avoids the academic pitfall of straining for the hitherto unsaid, so she avoids the contemporary journalistic pitfall of straining for hard-boiled brightness. She has written a book in the best tradition of what, in a word now perhaps significantly beginning to be overworked, we must call humanism." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Times p5 J1 13 '52 650w

"This is narrative writing of a very high order, yet it is interpretive, too. . . Mrs. Robertson is blessed with the light touch, and the only criticism the book is open to is that in embracing so much history it has to skimp on illuminating details."

+ New Yorker 28:76 Ag 9 '52 180w

Reviewed by Arnold Whitridge

Sat R 35:12 N 22 '52 600w

"As might be expected in so grandiose an undertaking, some sections are better than others. The French and the Austrian cases are the most satisfactory; the German, within its restriction for all practical purposes to the Prussian story, is adequate; the Italian study is the least satisfactory. Whatever the weaknesses, there is considerable compensation in the lucidity of style and in the scholarly refections on the results of the revolutions."

ROBERTSON, P. S.—Continued

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:288 S '52 170w

"As a piece of narrative history the book is very successful in reaching the high goals Mrs. Robertson set for herself. Her style is most attractive and her ability to characterize personalities, classes, nations, and events with a few strokes of the pen admirable." Hajo Holborn

+ Yale R n s 42:141 autumn '52 310w

ROBERTSON, WILLIAM SPENCE. Iturbide of Mexico. 361p il $6 Duke Univ. press

B or 92 Iturbide, Agustín de, emperor of Mexico. Mexico—History 52-6325

Biography of Agustín de Iturbide, born in Spain in 1783. He was a Royalist officer in Mexico when Ferdinand VII was dethroned by Napoleon. In 1822 he was crowned Emperor of Mexico, but was forced to resign in 1823, and had to leave the country. In 1824 he attempted to re-enter Mexico, but was arrested and shot.

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 250w

"A scholarly, thorough and highly readable life of a man too little known. The author is to be commended for resurrecting from the dust of history the story of Agustín de Iturbide and according him his first adequate biographical treatment."

+ Current Hist 22:166 Mr '52 250w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 20 '52 90w

Reviewed by Anita Brenner

N Y Times p12 Je 15 '52 420w

"This biography, an example of bedrock scholarship, gives us the best picture available of the tragic and pathetic Augustin I." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '52 430w

"It cannot be said that Professor Robertson has succeeded in rescuing Iturbide from his obscurity. The product of many years of research, much of it among unpublished materials, this is the most complete biography available in any language. As a record of the facts it is a definitive work. . . But although Professor Robertson undoubtedly knows all there is to be known about Iturbide, he is unable to present him as a living human being." H. B. Parkes

+ Sat R 35:44 Je 14 '52 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:120 Je '52 250w

ROBINSON, DONALD. 100 most important people in the world today; with illustrations. 427p $3 Little 920

"After polling the University of Illinois faculty, who offered him such names as Tallulah Bankhead and Joe Louis, Mr. Robinson decided to pick his own century, which includes Tito, Mao, Stalin, Beria, Molotov, de Gaulle, Eva Peron, Zhukov, Konev, Rokossovsky, Axel Wenner-Gren, Ilya Ehrenburg, Lysenko, Sartre, Picasso, Diego Rivera, and Klaus Fuchs. (The finger of scorn is pointed at some of these). However, 41 Americans are included. . . Portraits, which are line drawings, range from mediocre to downright bad; T. S. Eliot looks like Emerson and Irving Berlin like nothing on earth." (Library J) Index.

Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 50w

"The book is certain to rub your fur the wrong way. That's why it's fun." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 22 '52 70w

"Opinionated as it is, this small book has its place among a reference department's biographical manuals. Its choice of scientists is good." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1197 J1 '52 140w

"Essentially factual, they are spiced with anecdote and comment, and while Mr. Robinson attempts to present conflicting views when there are any, his own sentiments are not always obscured. As far as it goes, and in turning the spotlight on many prominent people little known in America, this is a valuable compendium." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 210w

ROBINSON, GEORGE LIVINGSTON. Live out your years. 114p $2 Abelard

248 Old age 51-14801

"Brief religious essays on the inspiration and solace to be gained from old age. There are many quotations, biblical and modern, with a section giving a wise philosophy and faith in facing death." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:214 Je '52 40w

Spring'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52 130w

ROBINSON, HENRY MORTON. Enchanted grindstone, and other poems. 107p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

811 52-8711

A collection consisting of the author's own selection from his poems. Several of the poems have appeared before in magazines, anthologies, and earlier volumes of verse. Others have never been published previously.

Booklist 48:335 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 77:1206 J1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 174:589 Je 14 '52 70w

"In 'The Enchanted Grindstone,' [the author] is returning, it would seem, to the first love of a literary man of various talents. There seems no doubt that as a poet he has skill, but a skill he has been forced at times to neglect." M. H. Irvine

N Y Times p18 My 18 '52 360w

"Lumping together Brook Farm and Unesco is the kind of fuzzy thinking which makes us reflect that Robinson is the kind of poet Plato had in mind when he said poets are often misleaders. From a purely narrative point of view, however, Robinson's major poems are all very beautiful and moving stories." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 My 25 '52 210w

"It is as thoroughly grounded as it is gratifying to read. It never lacks style; and if the emphasis is on grace, it is an elegance which has distinction without pretension. Except for a few unfortunate pages, the lines convey a felicity, an unusual concinnity which is, in itself, a mark of integrity." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R 35:18 Je 21 '52 550w

Spring'd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52 180w

ROBINSON, KENNETH. Wilkie Collins. 348p il $4.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Collins, Wilkie 52-7833

The first full-length biography of Wilkie Collins. "Close friend of Dickens and Charles Reade, man of unconventional domestic life, tormented by gout and sustained by laudanum, he was also a master of intricate plotting. Ten illustrations include Frederick Walker's striking woodcut poster for The Woman in White." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:296 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 30 '52 270w

"A competent and honest biography."

+ Kirkus 20:105 F 1 '52 240w

"Recommended." E. L. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 150w

"This careful and sensible study makes one of the most welcome biographies we have had for a long time." N. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 14 '51 300w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
Nation 174:434 My 3 '52 1350w

"Mr. Robinson has set down the facts in a straightforward manner, and has provided an honest and welcome book. Yet, even in his own biography, Collins has the air of being a background figure." Naomi Lewis
+ New Statesman & Nation 43:105 Ja 26 '52 1100w

"Collins took steps which 'suggest that he wished the story of his own life to remain something of a mystery to all but his closest friends.' In all likelihood, Mr. Robinson has uncovered far more of the mystery than Collins ever intended. At least he has made a provocative outline of the problem, and has shown future detectives where to search." Delancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 6 '52 800w

"A first-rate life of Collins. . . The merit of never being dull fortunately belongs not only to Wilkie Collins, but also to his biographer. If we are to see a Wilkie Collins revival such as Miss Sayers and Mr. Eliot tried to foster twenty years ago, much of the credit can be given to Kenneth Robinson." Carlos Baker
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 23 '52 1400w

New Yorker 28:148 Ap 26 '52 190w

"Mr. Robinson sets out the story in orderly fashion . . . presenting a solidly good picture of Collins, together with some sensible discussion of the body of his work. No Freudian analyst, Mr. Robinson is content to say only that Collins' life seems to have been influenced greatly by his mother and perhaps by reaction against his father's overfirm discipline, but he wisely presses this no further, sticking chiefly to the provable facts of his subject's life and work." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 18 '52 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R 35:20 My 3 '52 900w

"We close Mr. Robinson's warm-hearted and workmanlike book with affectionate admiration for its central figure. We thought Wilkie was like that; now we know." Michael Sadleir
+ Spec 187:788 D 7 '51 1350w

"Mr. Robinson's analysis of Collins' writing style is sound and workmanlike. He recognizes the worthlessness of the more extravagant tales, but also does full justice to Collins' peculiar and brilliant talent in creating the well-nigh perfect story of complicated action and surprise denouement. However, when it comes to writing about Collins the man, Robinson meets the same mystery that has baffled all his biographers." L. S. Munn
+ Spring'd Republican p10D Ap 6 '52 700w

"A very good, honest piece of work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 30 '51 2450w

ROBINSON, LENNOX, comp. Ireland's Abbey theatre; a history, 1899-1951. 224p il $6 Macmillan

792 Dublin. Abbey theatre [52-7941]

"The Abbey is perhaps the most famous 'little' theatre in the world. . . Here is no lively volume of theatrical reminiscence and anecdote, but a sober, factual and on the whole objective recital of dates, names and occasions. Here are full cast-lists of every first production the theatre has presented—hundreds of them. Here, too, are details of business management." Spec

"Some day there will have to be a complete history of the Abbey Theatre and it had better be written by somebody who is not inhibited by too close a connection with the theatre. Considering the limitations imposed on him as an 'official' historian Mr Robinson has done as well as might be expected and has produced a useful reference book." Gerard Fay
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 4 '52 550w

"Of recent Abbey history there is nothing of importance. . . There is no bibliography. In short, the Abbey propagandists seem to be digging their own graves: not even the shabby and plodding mediocrity which stuns the visitor at Abbey productions is equal to the senile vacuity of the face now officially presented to the rest of the world. It seems that a victory even by default must soon go to debunkers of the Abbey myth like Mr. Kavanagh." William Becker

— New Repub 127:22 Jl 21 '52 360w

"Mr. Lennox Robinson, associated with the Abbey for over forty years as manager, producer, and playwright, and now its official historian, has a proud story to tell and he tells it well." John Bryson
+ New Statesman & Nation 43:316 Mr 15 '52 600w

"Because it comes complete with portraits of the famous personalities associated with it, plus cast listings of all plays presented in its first fifty-one years of operation, it is a must for the theatrical reference shelf. Because it implies that a permanent acting company, a willingness to produce unpopular contemporary plays, and a genuine humility where art is concerned are among the basic tenets of this kind of creative national theatre, it deserves a wider readership." Henry Hewes
+ Sat R 35:32 S 13 '52 150w

"A bibliography of material about the Abbey would have been helpful, but that is the one refinement which seems to have been overlooked, although a number of useful books are mentioned in the text. All the same Ireland's Abbey Theatre is an admirable piece of historical writing within the limits Lennox Robinson proposed to himself, and it must remain a standard reference work of the Abbey's first 50 years during its second 50." K. H.

+ Spec 188:188 F 8 '52 380w

"Ireland's Abbey Theatre is a disappointment. A double disappointment, since Mr. Robinson is in as good a position as any person living to know the Abbey's history. . . His book is a colorless, astonishingly perfunctory patchwork of personal reminiscence, of quotations from old records and newspaper clippings, and of cautious appraisals of the various periods of the Abbey from its beginning in 1899 up to the present. The important facts seem all to be there, though they are indifferently organized." Joseph Carroll
— + Theatre Arts 36:6 O '52 1100w

"Mr. Lennox Robinson, commissioned to write the official history, has not attempted an elaborate estimate of this achievement and of the continuing tradition which it established. He is content to be cheerfully businesslike. His book, he explains, is not an appreciation, nor is it a criticism. It is a history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 8 '52 450w

ROBINSON, ROBERT SHIRLEY (PHILIP LATHAM, pseud). Five against Venus. 214p $2 Winston 52-5496

Science-fiction novel.

Kirkus 20:227 Ap 1 '52 150w

"Recommended for seventh grade up." L. T. Bulman

+ Library J 77:1212 Jl '52 70w

Reviewed by H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 6 '52 70w

"There is a dry humor in 'Five Against Venus,' which is rather infrequent in science-fiction stories. . . The story may not be highly original, but it's good fun." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p15 Je 22 '52 100w

ROBINSON, THOMAS PENDLETON. Lost dog Jerry; il. by Morgan Dennis. 190p $2.50 Viking

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-12234

Jerry, a loveable Saint Bernard dog, was shipped by mistake to Kansas with a load of calves. When the mistake was discovered Jerry was released and he set out on his long journey on foot back to his little master in

ROBINSON, R. S.—Continued
Massachusetts. The story is of his various stops on the way, and of the friends he made everywhere.

Booklist 49:20 S 1 '52

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 176:205 D '52 40w

"A warm love for and understanding of dogs—and people—and a fine sense of humor enrich this most unusual odyssey. A perfect book for dog lovers of 9 to 13, who will think the drawings of Jerry are perfect, too." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 2 '52 220w

+ Kirkus 20:453 Ag 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte
Library J 77:2185 D 15 '52 70w

"Mr. Robinson proved in 'Pete' how well he can interpret a dog's ways in relation to people and he has done just as fine a dog portrait here." The pictures, of course, are just right." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 120w

"Like Mr. Robinson's previous dog story, 'Pete,' this has the ring of authenticity. The style is simple and direct, without a trace of sentimentality. Morgan Dennis' sympathetic pencil illustrations effectively portray the lumbering, lovable dog and his animal companions of the road." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '52 110w

"In some ways it is rather a sad story, but it is lightened all through with humor. Jerry's method of making himself welcome to everyone seldom fails. That great paw that he extends so graciously to every stranger is seldom refused. He is always funny and dignified and lovable. When he at last comes home we heave a sigh of relief. Boys and girls who like dogs will take this book to their hearts."

+ Sat R 35:68 N 15 '52 140w

ROCHE, ROGER FRISON-. See Frison-Roche. R.

ROCHESTER, G. D., and WILSON, JOHN GRAHAM. Cloud chamber photographs of the cosmic radiation; foreword by P. M. S. Blackett. 128p il $10.80 Academic press

539.722 Cosmic rays 52-3918

"The purpose of the book under review is to show what can be achieved by perfect technique. Produced by two of the acknowledged masters of this art, it contains more than 100 cloud chamber photographs. Some have been included for being the first to show some particular phenomenon; mostly they have been picked for technical perfection and for the clarity with which they demonstrate various phenomena in cosmic radiation. With each picture goes a short text, describing the conditions in which it was obtained and what conclusions can be drawn from it." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This book appears to be intended primarily as an atlas and guide for the advanced investigator in the field. . . . However, at the same time it is a treasury of information for the amateur and the extraordinarily high quality of its reproductions and comments makes it not only extremely valuable in the technical sense but also a source of repeated aesthetic satisfaction to its possessor and even to a casual reader." Milton Burton

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4660 N 3 '52 170w

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 24 '52 160w

"These descriptions are addressed to physicists and use their terminology, as the chief purpose of the book is to serve as a guide and to set a standard to scientists who use cloud chambers. But surely the book must be fascinating to many others, through the vivid glimpses it offers of some of the most subtle yet most violent happenings in Nature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p567 Ag 29 '52 350w

RODD, E. H., and ROBINSON, ROBERT, eds. Chemistry of carbon compounds; 5v; v. 1, pt. A, General introduction and aliphatic compounds; pt. B, Aliphatic compounds, il v. 1, pt A $20.75; to subs $18; pt. B $17.50; to subs $15 Elsevier

547 Chemistry, Organic (51-14658)

"Planned as a successor to Richter's Organic Chemistry, this new work is a comprehensive treatise on the professional level. When complete in five volumes, it will provide a full-scale survey of organic chemistry together with selected references to the patent and periodical literature. Chemical structures, properties, and reactions are covered but not uses. In the volume at hand [v 1, pt A], each of the chapters is a signed contribution of one or more prominent British chemists." Library J

Chem Eng 59:363 F '52 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:906 My 15 '52 60w (Review of v 1, pt A)

N Y New Tech Bks 37:63 S '52 (Review of v 1, pt A, pt B)

RODGERS, CLEVELAND. Robert Moses; builder for democracy; introd. by H. V. Kaltenborn. 356p il $6 Holt

B or 92 Moses, Robert. Municipal improvement 52-10302

"Like Robert Moses himself, who scorns any easy task, Cleveland Rodgers, former newspaper man and long-time member of the City Planning Commission, undertook a heavy assignment in writing a biography of New York's man of many jobs. Mr. Moses made a 'persistent effort to steer the author away from 'the personality business.' The result is a solid history of Mr. Moses' services for the state and of his later achievements as a builder of highways, parkways, bridges, tunnels, parks and housing." (N Y Times) Index.

Bookmark 12:55 D '52 20w

Kirkus 20:534 Ag 15 '52 120w

"This biography will prove to be useful, informative, and interesting to many types of readers. Highly recommended for all libraries." H. B. Balman

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 40w

"Cleveland Rodgers, former editor of 'The Brooklyn Eagle' and longtime member of the City Planning Commission, has done a good job of telling the Moses story. It is actually far more than biography. Any such account is bound to be more or less a history of greater New York for the last twenty or thirty years. . . . While the author's sympathies are plain enough, he is objective and keeps a perspective." L. L. Engelking

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 19 '52 850w

"New York thanks God for Robert Moses as a man of action, but it is what he has said and written, the 'personality' stuff that Mr. Rodgers was supposed to play down, that makes this book highly readable." William Ogdon

+ N Y Times p28 O 19 '52 480w

RODMAN, MAIA. Market day for Ti André; il. by Wilson Bigaud. 48p $2 Viking

52-12915

Story of Ti André who lives in Haiti and goes to market for the first time with his mother.

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

"A story that is original in setting and in the conclusion of a picturesque adventure." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:402 D '52 100w

Kirkus 20:549 S 1 '52 140w

"Recommended for third and fourth grades." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:2011 N 15 '52 70w

"Maia Rodman, who knows Haiti well, has put so much color and movement into this story that one is all the more disappointed because it seems to break in two, leaving one with the feeling that Ti André has been gypped. The gaiety of the pleasant Haitians is depicted by Wilson Bigaud, a native painter, in primitive style." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p11 D 28 '52 130w

"There is so much atmosphere in this beautiful island, and so little of it has been portrayed for American boys and girls. It is disappointing to have a story that is as 'pedestrian' as this one."

Sat R 35:58 N 15 '52 200w

ROE, FREDERIC GORDON. Victorian furniture. 160p il $5 Roy pubs.

749.22 Furniture 52-12451

A description of the various overlapping Victorian periods and the furniture which embellished their domestic scenes. Many illustrations. Index.

Reviewed by Anne Douglas

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 O 26 '52 60w

"Fun reading."

+ Kirkus 20:584 S 1 '52 190w

"In his discursive and sometimes ironical book, Mr. Gordon Roe is never a whole-hearted detractor: nostalgia sweetens his judgment; the pictures he wisely leaves to speak for themselves. Rightly, too, he refuses to accept a Victorian 'Period,' as if the England of Dickens, Lewis Carroll and Mr. Bulfinch suffered no sea change." R. St. C. Talboys

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:743 Je 21 '52 260w

"Only one who can pass a junkshop without slackening his pace will be insensitive to Mr. Roe. . . Probably no country in Europe produced so much bad furniture in the second half of the nineteenth-century as Britain. But though the authoritative work that will interpret these trends remains to be written, one cannot but be grateful to Mr. Roe for his preliminary and wayward explorations."

J. M. Cohen

+ — Spec 188:722 My 30 '52 800w

"Mr. Roe's story is clear and concise, and though many attractive by-paths are explored, they embellish rather than detract from this essay in a field as yet but little filled."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Je 6 '52 600w

ROETHKE, THEODORE. Praise to the end. 89p $3 Doubleday

811 51-14047

Collection of poems by the associate professor of English at the University of Washington. "The verse is an incantation, a celebration—and it is often playful. Roethke is an interior monologist forever inviting his soul to the Self. He has delved into obscure childhood and in mature complexity has drawn up marvels of tonal simplicity and penetration, gnomic flashes, witty self-criticisms, curious neologisms, all bestowed with fountainlike exuberance. His verbalism suggests Swinburne but a more resilient Swinburne of the times." (N Y Times)

"Every sin, probably even obscurity, can be forgiven to a poet who exalts and exults. To convey ecstasy, not by explicit denotation but by rhythm and connotation, has a lucidity all its own, a metacommunication, a fourth dimension that transcends—in a way that 99 per cent of obscure poets fail to do—the issue of clarity versus obscurity. Roethke belongs to this obscure but felicitous 1 per cent." Peter Viereck

+ Atlantic 189:81 Ja '52 170w

Kirkus 19:523 S 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:284 Mr 22 '52 420w

"Roethke at his best does not make 'sense'—he isn't trying to. He is trying, and succeeding as well as any poet can, to write a poetry of pure intuition. . . In its present form, at least, Roethke's verse communicates nothing except to the reader who is willing to surrender himself to the music of suggestive incantation and join the poet on his somnambulist return to the nursery." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 D 2 '51 430w

"Theodore Roethke joins the ranks of the pure poets. His power is that his offering is clean-cut. His verse is pure, it is totally sensuous, totally personal, and his vision is totally contained. His poetry is not based on schematized intellectualism but on blood-felt reports of sense experience known in memory, transmuted by imagination. The limitation of his work makes for its purity and acts as a conscious good." Richard Eberhart

+ N Y Times p4 D 16 '51 490w

"His rendition of a sub-or pre-conscious world is filled with coiling and uncoiling, nudging and creeping images that often can be expressed only with the aid of nonsense and gibberish. But it is witty nonsense and effective gibberish, since the poet's control over this difficult material is always formal; he knows exactly when to increase and when to decrease pressure, and he comes to a stop just before the point of monotony is reached."

Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 37:108 F 16 '52 210w

"His language, his lean, unlovely English, has a breathlessness, an urgency about it which makes one sense the depth of the life from which it sprang. And the depth of its source is after all a question of prime importance in any work of art. This is an important book in the advance of modern poetry."

L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 20 '52 170w

"'Praise to the End!' is a profound work, beautifully accomplished, and anyone seriously interested in contemporary poetry will have to measure Roethke's achievement keenly."

Frederick Brantley

+ Yale R n s 41:476 spring '52 420w

ROGERS, WILL. How we elect our presidents; selected and ed. by Donald Day. 175p $2.75 Little

817 Presidents (United States)—Election 52-5018

A collection of Will Rogers' remarks on our national political affairs.

Booklist 48:244 Ap 1 '52

Reviewed by J. T. McCutcheon

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 13 '52 420w

Reviewed by Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 27 '52 470w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Je 22 '52 70w

"The trouble with on-the-spot, off-the-cuff humor [is that] it seldom has vitality after the event, and subsequent events do play havoc. Surprisingly, though the humor strikes one as remote and dim, the reporting itself has virtue. One comes away with a keener idea of the confusions and venalities and flilps that pertain to our 'quadrennial clambake.'"

Harvey Breit

N Y Times p33 Ap 6 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R 35:46 My 3 '52 320w

"It is not easy for even a master-humorist to be consistently funny all through the pages of a complete book, although it may be composed of excerpts that are the cream of a crop. Nevertheless, this volume does contain many real chuckles, and numerous acute observations on the political scene, and is appropriately published in this year of a spirited Presidential campaign." H. H.

Springfd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 230w

ROJANKOVSKY, FEODOR, II. Great big wild animal book. unp $1.50 Simon & Schuster 599 Animal pictures 51-13964

"The double-paged pictures in this jumbo-sized volume give one the impression of stroll-

ROJANKOVSKY, FEODOR—Continued
 ing through the wild animal sections in the Museum of Natural History. Here are families of lions and tigers, foxes and llamas portrayed in their native habitats. A hippopotamus and a water buffalo wade happily in company with a flock of flamingoes. Zebras frisk near a placid rhinoceros." N Y Times

Kirkus 19:631 N 1 '51 80w

"Recommended." Augusta Baker
 + Library J 76:2010 D 1 '51 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
 N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 9 '51 40w

"The imagination and wit which distinguished Mr. Rojankovsky's early work have been sacrificed to realism, but these pictures will charm the small child who wants to know what a giraffe looks like." E. L. B.
 + N Y Times p41 N 11 '51 110w

ROMAN, MRS KLARA GOLDZIEHER. Handwriting; a key to personality. 382p il $6.50 Pantheon bks.

137.7 Graphology 52-7197

"With the aid of some 400 samples of handwriting Dr. Roman sets forth in simple language the methods that practiced psychologists apply in studying a personality. She begins with the scribbling of children and the doodling of the absent-minded and winds up with the handwriting traits of men and women in ordinary life, delinquents and others who are problem members of society. To her, handwriting is an expression of the self and an indication of how far a writer has adapted himself to his social and cultural environment." (N Y Times) Bibliography, Index.

"This is probably the most useful and important introduction in English to the study of handwriting as an indicator of personality." Waldemar Kaempffert
 + N Y Times p34 Ap 27 '52 400w

"Mrs. Roman is an expert in her field, and the scientific approach is evident throughout this comprehensive manual of handwriting analysis." C. W. W.
 + San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '52 220w

RONDELL, FLORENCE, and MICHAELS, RUTH. Adopted family; foreword by Viola W. Bernard. 2v il 64; 20p $2.50 Crown

362.73 Adoption. Children—Management 51-12008

"Advice to the adoptive parents on how to handle relations in the family and community, and telling the child about the adoption. The story in the second volume, The family that grew, is to be read to the child." Booklist

Booklist 48:276 My 1 '52

"These attractive volumes, gift-boxed as one, make a contribution to the adoption field. Helpful bibliography of recommended reading for parents is appended." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 76:2113 D 15 '51 100w

"For a long time there has been a distinct need for a book which would give the parents of adopted children understanding advice on how to explain the facts of their adoption to children at various age levels. 'You and Your Child' and 'The Family That Grew' attractive twin books by Florence Rondell and Ruth Michaels, answer this need adequately and sympathetically." S. V. S. Theis
 + Survey 88:183 Ap '52 450w

ROOKE, DAPHNE. Mittee. 312p il $3 Houghton

52-128

"A story about South Africa. Mittee is the nickname of a beautiful young white girl, and Selina, who tells the story, is her colored servant. . . The story is built around the devotion existing between Selina and Mittee, and follows their adventures, lucky and unlucky, with the men they love." New Yorker

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
 Atlantic 189:78 F '52 300w
 Booklist 48:215 Mr 1 '52

"A remarkable book." Riley Hughes
 + Cath World 175:73 Ap '52 200w

"The story of 'Mittee' is told by a girl, half savage, a servant to the title heroine. . . Yet the story is told in a language, with an imagery, a skilled beauty which comes only with learning. The book would have been without any mental hazards for readers, I think, if it had been written as narrative and not as coming from the lips of Selina. Its subtlety of word pictures, its beautifully turned phrases would then not seem inconsistent with the literary powers of the teller of the tale." Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 3 '52 550w

Kirkus 19:663 N 15 '51 240w

"An exciting story enhanced by excellent storytelling technique." C. J. Roth
 + Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 140w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
 Manchester Guardian p4 D 14 '51 70w

"I don't think Mittee can be called an epic, or even a very important novel; but it is an unusually interesting and well-written story about a Transvaal community in the eighteenthies." Jocelyn Brooke
 + New Statesman & Nation 42:738 D 22 '51 550w

"Miss Rooke is a careful and unhurried writer, mature enough to know that tragedy cannot be wholly blamed upon either character or circumstance, and that those who are drawn into a tragic situation are not excused from the obligation to go on with living. . . 'Mittee' is a love story; there is violence and repeated murder and the shadow of war, and yet one sentiment stands out above all the rest, the love of a Cape Colored servant girl for her Boer mistress." Sylvia Stallings
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 3 '52 950w

"Miss Rooke would have done better to tell her story in the third person. As in her earlier novel, the plot is spattered with crimes like murder, incest and miscegenation, and with characters who are either amoral or abnormal. If and when this book is published in South Africa, Afrikaners will probably resent her disagreeable picture of their ancestors, but Miss Rooke has history on her side. Readers in this country will find the book a fascinating, if occasionally repelling, introduction to the earthy life the Boers once lived." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p4 F 3 '52 600w

New Yorker 27:75 F 2 '52 100w

"It is a delight to run into the work of a novelist who recognizes that novelists are first and foremost storytellers, who has the gift of storytelling and the love of it, and thus endowed produces a tale to be read for simple pleasure. Miss Rooke certainly has this view and these qualities: I picked up her book with mental reservations and doubts concerning stories of South Africa larded with exotic Boer words and strange folk-stuff, but I read it enthralled." Oliver La Farge
 + Sat R 35:21 F 16 '52 480w

"I am very much afraid that Mittee is a phony. So many novels have lately come out of South Africa. . . The best of these writers—Alan Paton, Doris Lessing—have been very good indeed; and there is a real danger that we may be taken in by what more critical reading shows to be no more than a simulacrum, a popular novel in a new setting." Marghanita Laski

Spec 187:866 D 21 '51 150w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
 Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 120w

"In her three main characters Novelist Rooke has created solid and credible people. Paul and Mittee are decent folk, coarsened by their easy assumption of superiority. Selina is a minor triumph; when she dreamily imagines herself a white girl or secretly dresses up in Mittee's clothes, the novel takes on a fine undertone of poignance. In its modest way.

Mittee proves that big subjects can be well-handled in small packages."

+ Time 59:106 F 18 '52 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p817 D 21 '51 270w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO, and DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Roosevelt and Daniels; a friendship in politics; ed. with an introd. by Carroll Kilpatrick. 226p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Daniels, Josephus 52-10959

"This book is a collection of letters exchanged, in the beginning, between the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and his chief, and in the end between the President of the United States and his Ambassador to Mexico; but their interest is not official and not, in the ordinary sense, historical. It is psychological—the record of a strong friendship that grew up and lasted between two men who constituted the most ill-sorted pair imaginable." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 48:377 J1 15 '52

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 20w

"The letters in this book [are] interesting and useful," Oscar Handlin

+ Nation 175:115 Ag 9 '52 350w

"This is certainly not the whole truth about either, but this is, nevertheless, truth, and since both have been targets of unlimited abuse it is only fair that the world should have this evidence that they were capable of a generous and fine devotion that could withstand disagreements, misunderstandings and disappointments. It is a heart-warming book." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 20 '52 500w

"All in all, 'Roosevelt and Daniels' may not be an earth-shaking volume, but it is an agreeable and ably-edited record of a friendship, which does honor to and illustrates the quality of both men." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Times p11 Je 29 '52 700w

"The Roosevelt-Daniels correspondence, ably tied together by Carroll Kilpatrick, records the progress of one of the pleasantest political friendships of recent U.S. history. It is without earthshaking significance, but it casts an interesting light on each of its principals and provides a footnote to history that will prove of value to students of the era in years to come." G. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 J1 20 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. M. England

Sat R 35:29 Ag 30 '52 360w

Reviewed by Basil Rauch

Yale R n s 42:150 autumn '52 130w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Letters; selected and ed. by Elting E. Morison; John M. Blum, associate ed. 8v v5-6 il $20 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 (51-10037)

These two volumes, subtitled: The big stick, cover the years of President Roosevelt's second administration, 1905 to 1909. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1951.

"Although the letters in this set include less than 8 per cent of those available for the four-year period, the care and skill with which they were selected result in a letter picture of Roosevelt hardly less complete than would have been obtained by publication of all the letters. Professor Morison's interpretative essay is richly rewarding, and the notes are invaluable to the scholar and most helpful guides to the general reader." C. O. Johnson

+ Ann Am Acad 284:179 N '52 320w

Booklist 49:31 S 15 '52

Reviewed by A. S. Henning

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 17 '52 800w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 23 '52 300w

Current Hist 23:190 S '52 90w

"The editing of the letters is admirable, an especially valuable feature being the day by day chronology." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1404 S 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by M. R. Werner

Nation 175:216 S 13 '52 900w

"A feature of the two volumes under consideration is an introductory essay, in Volume V, that is, in this reviewer's opinion, the most brilliant analysis of Theodore Roosevelt that has yet been written—and I am not forgetting H. L. Mencken's incandescent 'Autopsy,' of thirty years ago. Mr. Morison's endeavor is to analyze an intelligence, with little reference to the colorful personality. In so doing he is as ruthless as Mencken, but without flamboyance and with greater penetrative power." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ag 17 '52 1200w

"The letters in these volumes are unlikely to change anyone's evaluation of T. R., but they do substantially enlarge and clarify our picture of him. When Henry F. Pringle prepared his biography twenty years ago, he had access to T. R.'s correspondence up to 1909, the year with which these volumes end. The last two volumes yet to come, which will carry the Rough Rider to the end of his life, may well shed new and significant light on the period they cover." Richard Hofstadter

N Y Times p7 Ag 17 '52 1200w

New Yorker 28:174 N 8 '52 150w

"The letters here collected also show the great heart of Theodore Roosevelt, his deep love for his family, and his remarkable ability to write interesting, affectionate and very wise letters to his children. . . In short, the Roosevelt we see here is the same Roosevelt we met in the previous volumes, more mature, vastly more experienced, and with a more concrete idea of what he was doing, but still a vehement Republican, vitally interested in all phases of party success and organization." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 24 '52 900w

Reviewed by G. E. Mowry

+ Sat R 35:32 N 1 '52 550w

ROOT, PAT. Evil became them. 300p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

52-7943

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:97 F 1 '52 80w

"This astonishingly well sustained long tale is an exercise in the Gothic vein set in frightening insecurity on a small West Indian island. . . Miss Root, in a first novel of formidable proportion and effectiveness, evokes, and sustains fear with delicate assurance, winding it through savage violence and sleekest urbanity but never for an instant letting it slacken. Coming so quickly after Peggy Bacon's 'The Inward Eye' this tale suggests that a year begun exceptionally well among the novices is continuing with hair-raising assurance." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 30 '52 200w

"It's an odd book altogether—unnecessarily long, often clumsily constructed, yet rich in well-contrived melodrama springing out of character." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 30 '52 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '52 50w

"Dialogues too extended and on ingenuous order; personnel as mechanical as unpleasant. Too long." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 3 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 100w

ROSCOE, MIKE, pseud. of JOHN ROSCOE and MICHAEL RUSO. Death is a round black ball. 216p $2.50 Crown

52-5673

Detective story.

Kirkus 20:16 Ja 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 160w

"Despite all the derivative implausibility the book does offer a crisp, lively and surprisingly economical style. When one adds the author's brisk descriptive touches (the story is played out against the almost untouched setting of Kansas City) the book turns out to be more readable than its content might first seem to warrant." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '52 160w

"Sexy scenes put in with a shovel, as usual in this type; also as usual, hoods, wicked nightclub proprietors, corruption in city politics and lots of meaningless violence. If that's what you like, it's all yours." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 24 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:58 Mr 8 '52 30w

ROSCOE, MIKE, pseud. of JOHN ROSCOE and MICHAEL RUSO. Riddle me this. 211p $2.50 Crown

52-10764

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 40w

"The book is wretchedly and unfairly plotted, and contains orgies of sexuality and sadism which have been surpassed only by Mr. Spillane." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p16 S 14 '52 170w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 14 '52 70w

"Typical toughie." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:40 S 13 '52 20w

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL. Union solidarity; the internal cohesion of a labor union. 209p $3 Univ. of Minn. press

331.88 Trade unions

52-5322

"Through the method of the questionnaire survey, Professor Rose has systematically studied a random sample of the 8,500 members of Teamsters' Local 688 in St. Louis. The attitudes of the members with regard to participation in and evaluation of their union, the extent of opportunities for democratic control of the local, attitudes toward employers, incentive pay, job seniority, political action, and workers' education are some of the many significant areas probed into." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The findings are interesting and no doubt valuable, but one cannot help feeling that the value of the study resides in its contribution to the methodology of attitude study rather than its contribution to the sociology of labor unionism. As revealed here the attitudes of the membership of Local 688 of the Teamsters are pretty much what most students of unionism would expect, and there are remarkably few findings in all Dr. Rose's tables which are in any way surprising or novel. This study seems to belong to that group of studies which goes to great pains to discover the already known. Many of the findings are, however, suggestive." C. W. M. Hart

Am Soc R 17:639 O '52 400w

"That the study is subject to the limitations imposed by the questionnaire survey method, as the author clearly indicates, should be recognized by the reader. Nevertheless, some of the descriptive findings have important practical and theoretical value. . . The study would have been generally more readable if less of its content had been devoted to charts and tables and more given over to interpretation of findings and general description of the internal functioning of the local union."

Bernard Karsh

+ — Ann Am Acad 282:147 J1 '52 450w

Booklist 48:290 My 15 '52

"A valuable contribution to labor literature. . . Mr. Rose makes no wide claims for the book; he states his case frankly, clearly and without bias. A well-known sociologist he has brought wide experience and deep understanding to this interesting piece of work." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:898 My 15 '52 110w

Management R 41:559 Ag '52 40w

"Although the study attempts to provide practical guides to union organization and policy, the book will probably be most used by social scientists for the reported data."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:183 Je '52 130w

ROSE, WILLIAM GANSON. Best is yet to be. 212p $2.75 Austin-Phelps, inc, 200 E. 37th st, N.Y. 16

362.6 Old age

51-14842

A professional worker in the field of social welfare for the elderly gives advice on planning for the years after sixty-five, and illustrates with cases which have come under his observation.

"The book is practical throughout and abounds in verbal case illustrations. . . The book is stimulating and suggestive reading for one facing old age or so classified. However, while it points the way, it calls for full co-operation on the part of the individual concerned if his or her latter years are to confirm the title of the book." R. P. Kaighn

+ Am J Pub Health 42:460 Ap '52 260w

"Especially recommended for the worker in geriatrics."

+ Bookmark 11:214 Je '52 20w

ROSENBERGER, FRANCIS COLEMAN, ed. American sampler; a selection of new poetry. 70p $3 Prairie

811.08 American poetry—Collections 51-8189

"This anthology was put together at the request of Poetry Quarterly of London and was originally published in two issues of that revue in 1946-47. The aim was to show what is going on in American poetry, and it was compiled by inviting a number of poets to submit new work. . . Now published in its entirety for the first time, the collection suffers from the passage of time, not being enlarged to include any of the vital poetry written since 1947 by such men as John Ciardi, Kenneth Rexroth, and Theodore Roethke." San Francisco Chronicle

"Mr. Rosenberger's pickings are far from parochial: if anything, they cover too much ground and present authors of whom we (and I am sure the British) could well afford to remain ignorant. But I am not especially bothered by the compiler's somewhat erratic taste and the resulting unevenness of his book; his honesty, his patent denial of coterie spirit more than makes up for this." Francis Golfing

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 8 '52 390w

"Attractive as 'American Sampler' is, one could wish it was more fully representative of contemporary American poetry in general and of the work of the poets included." Milton Crane

N Y Times p28 Mr 16 '52 130w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Grigson

Poetry 80:162 Je '52 170w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 3 '52 190w

ROSENHEIM, RICHARD. Eternal drama. 302p il $6 Philosophical lib.

792 Theater—History 52-12672

"Subtitled: A comprehensive treatise on the syngenetic history of humanity, dramatics, and theatre, this book consists of lectures given in Prague before the war, and brought up to date by 'intense research.'" New Repub

"Recommended to all large drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1208 J1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Jonathan Bishop

New Repub 127:23 O 13 '52 130w

ROSENMAN, SAMUEL IRVING. Working with Roosevelt. 560p il $6 Harper

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 52-5469

Judge Rosenman helped Franklin D. Roosevelt write his first big speech for his 1928 gubernatorial campaign; seventeen years later he was helping him on the report on Yalta speech—the last before the death of Roosevelt. In this volume the author tells the story of those years, and of Roosevelt as he knew him. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:86 J1 '52 650w

Booklist 48:338 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 30w

"It might be said that Rosenman, one-time legal adviser and ghost writer to Roosevelt, is too late with too much for his own profit. The cream of the Roosevelt market has been skimmed by a host of others who rushed into print earlier with less expensive items. However, in all fairness to Rosenman he is hardly concerned with personal profit. His is a work of love for his friend. It is frankly idolatrous, altho he acknowledges F. D. R. had his faults, in spite of which Rosenman says he will rank in history with Washington." Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 1 '52 490w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 7 '52 800w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 40w

"The book has some news value in a fresh interpretation of controversial phases of Roosevelt's administrations. But its chief value lies in a further revelation of the man and the processes of his thinking."

+ Kirkus 20:242 Ap 1 '52 240w

"Judge Rosenman's knowledge of what makes a good speech has been applied to the writing of this book—it is a fast moving and consistently interesting narrative." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

Nation 175:332 O 11 '52 600w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman

New Repub 127:19 J1 14 '52 1200w

"Working with Roosevelt ranks in importance with Miss Perkins's reminiscences and Mr. Sherwood's masterly study of Harry Hopkins, and it reveals more of the intimate life of the White House under the New Deal than I have read in any other book." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:726 D 13 '52 550w

"This is, in fact, basically not a partisan but a technical book. It is a detailed and authoritative account of how the public utterances of a President of the United States are put together... The particular value of the Rosenman account is that it deals with a President who was conspicuously successful in his employment of the method. It is all the better because it carefully describes errors, as well as triumphs. The book admits that Roosevelt made mistakes, and points them out. Indeed, it goes further—it admits that Samuel I. Rosenman made mistakes, and points them out, too. This makes it admirable as a textbook for aspiring politicians. . . Altogether, it is an important and highly readable addition to the Roosevelt literature." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 1 '52 1000w

"Here is not 'just another Roosevelt book' but a warm, human document, sprinkled generously with dramatic and humorous anecdotes and containing its share of 'inside' revelations." Samuel Lubell

+ N Y Times p1 Je 1 '52 1600w

New Yorker 28:97 My 31 '52 240w

"It is only natural that Rosenman should take the best view of Roosevelt. . . Yet the Judge is not uncritical of his subject. . . Rosenman sometimes had to do Roosevelt's dirty work, and he indicates his own lack of enthusiasm over this evasive way of getting it done." Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 1 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R 35:38 Je 21 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 750w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:240 S '52 170w

Wis Lib Bul 48:171 J1 '52

Reviewed by Basil Rauch

Yale R n s 42:148 autumn '52 500w

ROSENTHAL, HAROLD, ed. Baseball is their business; Fresco Thompson [and others]. 180p $2.50 Random house

796.357 Baseball 52-5857

Ten people connected with baseball in various capacities explain their sides of the game for baseball fans. Contents: Fresco Thompson, the scout; Dick Young, the newspaperman; Gil Hodges, the player; Ernie Harwell, the radio announcer; Arthur E. (Red) Patterson, the publicity man; Jim Beach, the television producer; Charles F. Berry, the umpire; Allan Roth, the statistician; George M. Weiss, the administration man; Eddie Sawyer, the manager.

Booklist 48:302 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 22 '52 120w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52 60w

"It's all pretty sensibly written. Lively too, and it should prove of value for those informative hints for the interested or for those who plan to make it their living."

+ Kirkus 20:230 Ap 1 '52 90w

"Highly recommended for boys 12 and up." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 77:1082 Je 15 '52 70w

"The book makes for the kind of fascinating baseball talk by experts that all fans like to eavesdrop upon." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 18 '52 130w

Reviewed by R. L. Plabb

N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 110w

ROSENTHAL, LEONARD. Pearl hunter; il. by Rachel Rosenthal [tr. from the French by Herma Briffault]. 214p $3 Schuman

B or 92 Pearls. Jewelry trade 52-9197

Memories of the author's life from the age of twelve when he realized he had an aptitude for buying and selling. He describes his years as a merchant dealing in pearls in various European countries, his struggle to accept the modern cultured pearls, and his flight from Europe to the United States because of the war.

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Je 29 '52 110w

"There's a good bit here about the pearl, in history and legend, its value, its care, and if these memoirs lack the lustre of their inspiration, they still provide a pleasant, rather formal narrative."

+ Kirkus 20:143 F 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by Ralph Chapman

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 15 '52 500w

ROSMOND, BABETTE. Lucy; or, The Delaware dialogues. 210p $3 Simon & Schuster 52-6984

"In the conversations we follow the charming if somewhat erratic course of Lucy Delaware (Mrs. Eugene Delaware, aged twenty-nine, of Westchester County). She is like thousands of young wives who spend their days coping with children and in-laws; she is unlike almost anybody's wife in that she is unfailingly articulate . . . with one exception. Her fantasy of a romantic episode comes true, and for a brief period it renders her almost silent." Publisher's note

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

Kirkus 19:646 N 1 '51 160w

"'Lucy' is mostly chapters of conversation that sparkle on the surface, but has deeper meanings for the attentive and perceptive mind. The talk is smooth and likely spoken, but the implications are sharp. Miss Rosmond handles her polished weapons with precision. . . Somewhere along the way, the author decided that her story needed more plot, but the result is a departure from mood that many readers will wish hadn't happened." Lisle Bell

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 3 '52 450w

"The authoress gives credit to Anthony Hope's delightful 'Dolly Dialogues' for her structure. Although her characterization is good, it is unfortunate that she didn't absorb some of his quick-witted style and apply it to her tiresome Delaware family, who end up right back where they started." Louise Anderson

N Y Times p22 F 10 '52 230w

Reviewed by Ray Pierre

Sat R 35:44 F 23 '52 180w

ROSNER, CHARLES. Printer's progress; a comparative survey of the craft of printing, 1851-1951. 119p il col il $5 Harvard univ. press

655.1 Printing—History [51-14375]

"This volume is a comparison between the printer of 1851 and the printer of 1951, and of the work and tools representative of each. . . Ignoring the phases between 1851 and 1951, Mr. Rosner is able to make strikingly evident the progress achieved in one hundred years. Vast changes have been wrought in machinery and materials during this time, particularly following the advent of the camera. This latter invention has resulted in such techniques as older printers could only dream of: photoengraving, photolithography, photogravure, photocomposing, etc. Such advances have almost without exception improved the craft to such a degree that today it might in many cases be called, and with justification, an art." Special Libraries

"Unfortunately, in developing his idea, [Mr Rosner] has permitted his obvious predilection for so-called contemporary forms of graphic design to give an ill-balanced comparison between 1851 and our own time. . . The book is well produced, although there is a certain flatness in the lithographic sections. Mr. Ellic Howe's scholarly touch is happily evident in the brief introductory notes." Robert Harling

Spec 187:516 O 19 '51 600w

Special Libraries 43:32 Ja '52 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p674 O 26 '51 700w

ROSS, LILLIAN. Picture. 258p $3.50 Rinehart 792.93 [791.4] Moving pictures 52-9607

"The history of a motion picture, 'The Red Badge of Courage,' is the material on which Miss Ross displays her powers of express-trained observation. . . Miss Ross tells us what happened, from start to finish, from the idea in Crane's book to the financial requiem in the New York office of the super-bosses; the conferences at the studio, the breakdown of the costs, the splendors and miseries of the actual shooting, the cutting, the compromises, the music scoring, the sneak previews, the final showing, and the studio's publicity." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:121 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Seymour Korman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 21 '52 290w

"A fascinating exposition of the film world that will draw the New Yorker calibre reader."

+ Kirkus 20:590 S 1 '52 200w

"This is of incomparable value to any student of film-making. Highly recommended for all cinema and theatre collections, but will have much appeal in paid circulation collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1652 O 1 '52 80w

"Miss Lillian Ross names names, and at the same time she uses all the selectivity of a good novelist. Hers, indeed, is what might be called the technique of the candid typewriter, which is no more truly candid than the candid camera, since neither clicks unless and until the operator chooses." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 23 '52 900w

"Now that I have read the articles in book form, I find myself wondering whether Hollywood hasn't once more gone off the deep end, an acrobatic feat my home town has perfected through years of practice. For 'Picture' presents Hollywood's more heroic attitudes as well as its more foolish and familiar ones. Never blind to Hollywood's persistent creative effort, it is sharply observant of the business mechanism that blunts the points of some of the industry's sharper talents. It plays back with an unfailing ear some of the wise things that are said in that keyed-up, pent-up industrial town, as well as the wise-cracking, the bathetic and banal." Budd Schulberg

N Y Times p4 N 23 '52 1200w

Reviewed by Arthur Knight

Sat R 35:34 N 29 '52 650w

ROSS, MARGARET ISABEL. Wilderness river; adventure in the fur trapping country. 214p $2.50 Harper

52-6281

"Alex McAndrews was younger than the gentlemen apprentices brought from the Scottish Highlands to work in the Canadian Northwest, but he managed at fourteen to join the North West Fur Company, important rival of the Hudson's Bay Company. This story of his journey westward follows him through great dangers, when, separated from experienced companions, with canoe gone, route lost and winter at hand, he finds himself responsible for three dependent persons." Horn Bk

Booklist 49:130 D 1 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 16 '52 110w

"A sense of the vastness, grandeur and peril of this region and the general spirit of brave enterprise are well conveyed." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:331 O '52 90w

Kirkus 20:455 Ag 1 '52 170w

"Boys over twelve will undoubtedly be interested in Alexander's adventures. Unfortunately, inaccuracies prevent recommendation of the book as good historical fiction." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ — Library J 77:2187 D 15 '52 80w

"This is rich history, with strongly delineated characters and plausible adventures." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times pt2, p14 N 16 '52 90w

ROSS, NANCY (WILSON) (MRS STANLEY YOUNG). Time's corner. 310p $3.50 Random house

52-9581

Louisa Frazier, unhappy and bewildered at the end of a love affair, enters an Anglican retreat, in the hopes of coming to a new understanding of life. While she is there she becomes acquainted with a doctor who is a drug addict and who attempts to win her over to help him in his experimental work. Louisa is saved only thru the unconscious medium of a teen-age girl who is also a drug addict.

"In spite of its seeming sensational aspect there is no sensationalism here. Miss Ross says what she has to say quietly and beautifully. Moreover, she relates her novel to today's spiritual currents." J. H. Jackson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 19 '52 450w

Kirkus 20:572 S 1 '52 130w

"The somewhat humorous depiction of the inmates of the Retreat gives way to a tale of horror, powerful and gripping, artfully interwoven with deep religious feeling, centering on the real meaning of the Crucifixion. Mature readers will find this well worth reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1656 O 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

New Repub 127:22 D 15 '52 80w

"Perhaps it is the drug element that bars 'Time's Corner' from the universality it reaches for, which is, one would guess, nothing less than to reaffirm the Christian ethic in its handling of the problem of good and evil. But the attempt is brave and full of reward for readers who can enjoy a dialectical feast. In particular, the prose painting of a drug addict's visions is not only a remarkable tour de force, but a feat of sustained imagination quite literally out of this world." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 12 '52 600w

"Miss Ross is a beguiling writer, with wit, erudition and perception. If the torrents of her imagination pour out too wildly, that is a fault more generous than dryness. 'Time's Corner' is odd. But oddities have value, and this is a novel to be treated with respect." Phyllis McGinley

+ N Y Times p4 O 26 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:131 N 1 '52 110w

"The drug-episodes are shockers. But, handled as it is, the story is never merely shocking. Miss Ross relates it to today's trends... More than one thoughtful writer has suggested that our world must re-discover love and base its actions on this re-discovery before it can again find its true direction and purpose. This is what Miss Ross' novel suggests, and many will find this symbolic re-statement both genuine and convincing." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 10 '52 500w

"It is an uneven book, at times poignant and arresting and as often forced and artificial." Walter Havighurst

Sat R 35:21 N 8 '52 260w

ROSS, MRS PATRICIA (FENT). Made in Mexico [the story of a country's arts and crafts] il. by Carlos Merida. 329p maps $4 Knopf

709.72 Art, Mexican. Arts and crafts 51-11085

"The author, an instructor in the Department of Anthropology at Mexico City College, discusses the fine and the popular arts of Mexico, from the awesome pre-Columbian pyramids to the straw and pottery toys of today, from sculpture to cookery, even including chapters on literature, medicine and religion. Not only does she trace their origins and traditions but she gives further perspective by relating them to parallel developments in the great stream of civilization." (N Y Times) Glossary. Bibliography and index.

Booklist 48:302 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Mary Handy

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 120w

Horn Bk 28:244 Ag '52 130w

"Accurate in detail and sharp in flavour."

+ Kirkus 20:157 Mr 1 '52 200w

"A book to read for pleasure and use for reference. For twelve years old on up through adulthood." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1214 J1 '52 60w

"The text combines an introduction to the Mexican people of today, with brief analyses of past and present in each field of art or craft taken up. These include the fine arts, popular arts, and a bit on the sciences. There is even a delightful chapter on Mexican kitchens and cooking." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 1 '52 260w

"Mrs. Ross' 'Made in Mexico' replaces Susan Smith's charming little book of the same title, now out of print. This book is intended for an older age-group and is much fuller in treatment than was that earlier study... Wide in range, precise and colorful in detail, this is an exciting book for any young person interested in the arts, and it should prove helpful as an introduction for adults, too." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 My 4 '52 210w

"Altogether, good as the entire series has been, this is the best volume in it, and deserves your attention if you have any interest in Mexico or its arts and know a young reader who might be interested and to whom you might give it. I'd risk a guess that the adult who buys it as such a gift will read it first, too." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '52 360w

"This is a beautiful book, one of the most beautiful of the 'A Country's Arts and Crafts' series."

+ Sat R 35:28 Je 28 '52 150w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:261 S '52 70w

Wis Lib Bul 48:221 S '52

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Green land. 287p $3 Bobbs

52-10280

Historical novel about the Pacific Northwest, beginning shortly after the end of the Civil war. It is the period of railroading, when the Northern Pacific railroad was pushing north from Portland.

"Mrs. Ross has packed a considerable amount of action into this pleasantly complicated romance of the Great Northwest." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 7 '52 210w

"Fascinating historical novel." L. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 12 '52 400w

"Solid, smooth, and unobtrusive." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:41 S 13 '52 150w

ROSS WILLIAMSON, HUGH. Sir Walter Raleigh. 215p il maps $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Raleigh, Sir Walter, 1552?-1618

[52-26269]

"A short life of the Elizabethan adventurer, scientist, writer, and statesman which rescues him from his detractors without whitewashing his moral lapses, and also tries to do full justice to his protean nature." Booklist

Booklist 49:11 S 1 '52

"A good piece of work, mercifully lacking the invented inanities of conversation... This new book makes no concessions to children except for the shortness of the chapters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p18 N 23 '51 150w

ROSSI, JEAN-BAPTISTE. Awakening; tr. from the French. [Eng title: False start]. 244p $3 Harper

51-11953

"A boy of fourteen, still at school at a Jesuit college, falls in love with a nun of 28, and she with him. They are both repressed by the religious system in which they have been reared and longing to be born into life. It is

ROSSI, JEAN-BAPTISTE—Continued
the lost child in Denis who appeals so strongly at first to the stifled motherhood in Sister Clothilde, but inevitably she becomes the woman through whom he struggles up (or down) toward manhood." Manchester Guardian

"A novel of great literary promise which extends a plea for understanding and charity which a discriminating audience may well accord."

+ Kirkus 19:666 N 15 '51 190w

"Obviously objectionable to Catholic readers, this can be skipped for most collections. The author's ability to write outpaces his ability to find something to write about. The basic plot may create demand." R. E. Kingery

— Library J 77:213 F 1 '52 180w

"M. Rossi wrote this novel when he was only sixteen. This doubtless explains the intensity and intimacy with which he realises Denis's feelings. But the maturity with which he handles so difficult and daring a theme is even more remarkable." H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 J1 13 '51 230w

"There is no amour-propre about Denis's love for Clothilde, and there is therefore no need for psychological analysis. What had to be done, and what the author has done superbly, is to record an ecstasy. His story tells us nothing new about the human heart and because of this, for all its apparent kinship, it is outside the French moralist tradition. Its inspiration derives not from Adolphe or Gide but from an earlier and more poetic fiction. Marie de France, not Constant, is M. Rossi's precursor. His book (admirably and anonymously translated) remains a limp and exquisite love story, an autarchy free from the shadows of the clerical Great Debate." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:78 J1 21 '51 550w

"The subject of this novel might easily have been treated in a distasteful way. One might fancy that only an experienced and consummate craftsman could have avoided all the ugly pitfalls which such a plot opened, and composed a small masterpiece of restraint and delicacy. In fact, Jean-Baptiste Rossi was 19 when, two years ago, he completed this very promising first novel. Along with Bloch-Michel's first novel and Françoise Mallet's uncannily effective story, 'Le Rempart des Beugues,' this book is proof of the continued vitality of French fiction." Henri Peyre

N Y Times p4 F 3 '52 360w

"This silly story . . . is interesting because of its sincerity, which, though naïve, is real, and because any book written by a very young person (Mr. Rossi, who was born in Marseille in 1931, wrote this book about two years ago) about his school days is bound to have a certain amount of freshness and feeling."

New Yorker 27:75 F 2 '52 50w

Reviewed by Henri Peyre

Sat R 35:20 F 16 '52 500w

"While it seems to have been a bit over-rated, it is at least a remarkable book for a teen-age author. . . . Awakening may seem a shocker, especially to Catholics, but it is no dirty-minded adolescent scrawl."

Time 59:76 F 4 '52 600w

ROTH, CHARLES B. How to hold and develop customers. 190p $4.25; to schools $3.20 Prentice-Hall

658.85 Salesmanship 52-10147

"Tested formulas for building customer confidence and getting bigger orders, following up new orders and creating permanent good will, avoiding 'customer neglect,' selling quality instead of price, and so on. Of special interest is the chapter on how to handle 40 types of customers: 'The Tight Mouth,' 'Mr. Snob,' 'I'm Too Busy,' 'The Goodtime Charlie,' 'Let's Wait a Few Weeks,' and 35 others.' (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:1306 Ag '52 30w

Management R 41:562 Ag '52 40w

ROTHENSTEIN, SIR JOHN KNEWSTUB MAURICE. Modern English painters: Sickert to Smith. 256p il $5 Macmillan

759.2 Painters, British [52-40976]

"[Collection of essays] on seventeen English artists who were born between 1860 and 1879. . . . As the son of Sir William Rothenstein, and as director of the art-galleries at Leeds and Sheffield and finally of the Tate Gallery, he has been particularly well placed not only to appraise the output of contemporary painters as a whole but also to study the artists as individuals; for he has known most of them personally and is often able to provide fresh and illuminating biographical detail." Spec

"Sir John Rothenstein was brought up among painters, and he knew personally, or knows, nearly all the artists he deals with. One can say little more than that the essays are most of them noteworthy for their knowledge, insight, sympathy, and well-tempered approach." I. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 18 '52 350w

Reviewed by R. H. Wilenski

New Statesman & Nation 44:46 J1 12 '52 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 9 '52 200w

"With this collection of essays Sir John Rothenstein has made a valuable contribution to the study of modern painting." Derek Hudson

+ Spec 188:815 Je 20 '52 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p627 S 26 '52 650w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). New York today; il. by Norman Nisbet. 279p $3.75 Prentice-Hall

974.71 [917.471] New York (city)—Description 51-14843

The author of many informal travel books, here writes of New York city, both for those who live there and for those who visit it. Partial contents: Skyscraping capital of the U.N.; Ellis Island—baptistry of freedom; Tide, docks and piers; Homes, houses and projects; Holiday; Physicians and surgeons; Culture on tour; Gardens—parks to pushcart; Star's eye view.

Booklist 48:158 Ja 1 '52

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 50w

"Agnes Rothery paints a warm and generous picture of New York and chooses not to speak at all about dirt, smells, tensions, or crankiness. This makes for a cheerful, if not an entirely accurate picture."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 6 '52 230w

Reviewed by Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p7 Ja 6 '52 140w

Sat R 35:32 Ja 5 '52 220w

ROTHSCHILD, MIRIAM, and CLAY, THE-RESA. Fleas, flukes and cuckoos; a study of bird parasites. 304p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

598.2 Parasites—Birds 52-11938

"This is the first book to be written about the parasites of birds. Like the best of its predecessors in the New Naturalist Series, it will appeal both to the general reader and to the trained biologist. By discussing their subject against a background of general theory, the authors offer much that will be of value to the ecologist, systematist and physiologist. Its chief merit, however, lies in the new and apparently grotesque world which it reveals to the general reader." Spec

"It is hard to believe that such subject matter could be made into a fascinating book, but the authors who are internationally known authorities on bird fleas and bird lice have succeeded in turning it into a book that will hold the interest of practically all readers of natural history from laymen to established scientists." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1816 O 15 '52 70w

"Fascinating book. The whole story of these illuminating associations of animals which some people think so gruesome and which zoologists know as parasitism, commensalism, and symbiosis is dealt with in this book by two most competent experts," H. G. Cannon
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 3 '52 200w

"At a time when so many scientific books are written in an almost esoteric jargon, it is a relief to find one that, without any loss of scientific authority or usefulness, is presented with literary grace by two writers who obviously have interests far outside their special subject. And their special subject is one that might easily be thought forbidding, not to say unpleasant,"
+ New Statesman & Nation 43:595 My 17 '52 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:76 S '52

"The book is well illustrated, so that the reader can always visualise the animals under discussion. In fact it is in some cases over-illustrated; and the specialist may wish that an even more detailed bibliography had been substituted for some of the pictures of bird hosts, which have only a vague relevance to the text. The authors have not omitted to make use of the opportunities for the pleasantly unsophisticated strain of humour to which the subject-matter lends itself. They will certainly convert many to take a greater, and possibly more kindly, interest in their subject," R. A. Hinde
+ Spec 188:788 Je 13 '52 500w

Time 59:77 Je 2 '52 440w

"All naturalists must read this book, and they will enjoy not only the fascinating and immense body of information that it contains but also the delightful style in which it is written,"
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Jl 4 '52 450w

ROUAULT, GEORGES. Miserere; with a pref. by the artist, and an introd. by Monroe Wheeler. [13p] 58pl $3.75 Mus. of modern art

769.2 Jesus Christ—Art 52-8813

Photographic reproductions of Rouault's 58 aquatint engravings in the two parallel series called Miserere and Guerre; with an introduction by Monroe Wheeler, Director of Exhibitions and Publications, of the Museum of Modern Art.

"The Museum of Modern Art, completely faithful to its own purposes, has also given distinct service to religion in this country," Frank Getlein
+ Commonweal 56:490 Ag 22 '52 850w

"Intense, powerful and hauntingly poignant, the plates are testimony to the artist's greatness and his credo. Here are his outrage at proud, brutish, stupid judges, kings and war-makers; his compassionate awareness of man's tragic fate, essential loneliness and masked countenance; his sympathy for the judged and fallen; and his hope and profound religious faith. The expressive, fragmentary captions, written by the artist for this volume, illuminate the depth of his feeling," A. B. Louchheim
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '52 300w

"A work compounded out of a love of God, a love of Mankind, and a love of art—a trinity of emotions that rarely exist simultaneously in the world of art today," R. H. Hagan
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 31 '52 390w

ROUGHEAD, WILLIAM. Classic crimes; a section from the works of [the author] made by W. N. Roughead; with a pref. by James Bridie. 449p $4 British bk. centre

364.15 [364.38] Murder [52-7263]

Twelve real murder cases, most of them Scottish, selected by the editor from his father's works. Contents: Katharine Nairn; Deacon Brodie; The West Port murders; To meet Miss Madeleine Smith; Constance Kent's conscience; The Sandfyrd mystery; The Balham mystery;

Dr. Pritchard revisited; The Arran murder; The Ardlamont mystery; The Slater case; The Merrett mystery.

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

"Deacon Brodie, Burke and Hare, and Oscar Slater are perhaps Mr. Roughead's best subjects, though others, including Constance Kent and Donald Merrett, run them close. These pithy accounts are distinguished by the older-fashioned decencies of style, which have not precluded some admirable asides on Edinburgh, criminal face hair, police bumbledom, H. B. Irving, etc. Mr. Roughead's favourite authors seem to be, with a nice blending, Webster and Dickens,"
+ New Statesman & Nation 43:20 Ja 5 '52 240w

"A volume which must henceforth be the cornerstone of any library of crime." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '52 450w

"All in all, any murder enthusiast who has never read any of Roughead's sharp, wise, pawky accounts of British classic crimes will find this the best possible introduction to the man and his subject. Those who do know and admire Roughead-on-crime will be happy to see these old favorites brought together," J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 26 '52 300w

"Grade A." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:58 Mr 8 '52 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 4 '52 200w

ROUNAULT, JEAN, pseud. See Biemel, R.

ROUNDS, GLEN. Buffalo harvest; il. by [the author]. 141p $2.25 Holiday

970.1 Indians of North America—Juvenile literature. Bison, American 52-13433

"Tells the story of the Indians of the Plains when they hunted the great herds of buffalo in the autumn. It is a detailed account showing how the buffalo were the sole harvest of the tribes, how they were food and shelter, clothing, utensils—everything that the Indians needed to sustain life," Sat R

Booklist 49:147 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52

"This is good fare, uncluttered with fiction," M. B. K.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 80w

Commonweal 57:176 N 21 '52 10w

"As a study that derives from the Indian point of view, lore and legend, this is excellent anthropological material, and fine literature,"
+ Kirkus 20:504 Ag 15 '52 150w

"An addition to any library's Indian collection for basic information and better understanding. For better readers of grades 5-6. Vital and expressive drawings by the author. Excellent format. Recommended." Helen Perdue
+ Library J 77:1908 N 1 '52 80w

"This lively, authentic chapter from our western past, expertly related, must also be prized for its strong, good-humored drawings," Irene Smith
+ N Y Times pt2, p32 N 16 '52 110w

New Yorker 28:204 D 6 '52 60w

Sat R 35:74 N 15 '52 50w

ROUNDS, GLEN. Whitey and the blizzard [il. by the author]. 31p $1.25 Holiday

52-9568

Another story about Whitey who helps his uncle run Rattlesnake Ranch. This time he battles a blizzard on a two-mile trip to the mailbox. Ages 6 to 9.

Kirkus 20:224 Ap 1 '52 100w

ROUNDS, GLEN—Continued

"Relatively simple vocabulary, large type, and brevity of the story all make it perfect for beginning readers to enjoy for themselves." C. B. Gilbert

+ Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 My 11 '52 60w

"It is always a pleasure to have a story about Whitey. . . The tales are generally quite simple in construction and it is this very simplicity, added to a realism and an understanding of boys, which makes them so memorable." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 My 4 '52 140w

Sat R 35:39 Ag 16 '52 50w

ROUSSIN, ANDRE. Little hut [play in three acts] adapted from the French by Nancy Mitford. 93p $1.50 British bk. centre

842

"This needle-tongued French farce has been charmingly blunted down for British consumption by Miss Mitford. The dilemma of a woman, her husband, and her husband's best friend who is also her lover all shipwrecked together on an almost deserted island is resolved by a wife-sharing plan in both versions. Miss Mitford, however, somehow manages to make the whole business seem as inoffensive as a game of musical chairs." Sat R

Booklist 48:225 Mr 15 '52

"Sexy and funny. Recommended for large drama collections." George Freedley

Library J 77:721 Ap 15 '52 20w

Sat R 35:28 Mr 15 '52 210w

ROWAN, CARL THOMAS. South of freedom. 270p $3.50 Knopf

301.451 [325.26] South—Social conditions. Negroes 51-11990

A young Negro reporter for The Minneapolis Tribune went South in the winter of 1951 on an assignment from his paper. He was to see if anything had changed the condition of the Negro in the South since he left his native town in 1943. This book is his report.

Booklist 49:5 S 1 '52

"Carl T. Rowan, writing this book, is a journalist first and a Negro second. His desire was to report 'what it means to be a Negro in America.' Only a Negro can do this with sensitivity and accuracy, but to do it he must achieve a certain sense of detachment that is most difficult to attain under the circumstances. This Carl Rowan does. . . It is due to his humility and balance that this is not an embittered tract nor a bland glossing over but an intimate and convincing view of America's most deplorable social problem." R. R. Brunn

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 4 '52 800w

Kirkus 20:311 My 15 '52 260w

"This is a personal account and it is a powerful one that belongs in most libraries with the important literature of protest." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1404 S 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by W. A. Brower

Nation 175:176 Ag 30 '52 1200w

"Much the best passages in the book are those in which Rowan ceases to be a reporter and draws freely on memory and reflection. His return to the South was a profound personal experience, and he communicates that experience to the reader with unusual skill." Harold Fleming

+ New Repub 127:28 S 22 '52 380w

Reviewed by Tarleton Collier

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 3 '52 1150w

"Because of his or his publisher's provocative choice of title I approached with some hostility this angry account of a native's brief return to his Southern homeland. I was not hostile when I had finished it, only depressed by a vivid reminder that changes which a white Southerner thinks are swift seem snail-like and indecisive to a Southerner who is not white and who suffers from color barriers. . . His book is no more objective, impartial or balanced than its title, but it is a noteworthy contribution to the sad folklore of American interracial relations." Hodding Carter

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '52 1050w

"A factual, personal, excellently written and very moving story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 7 '52 700w

"It never fails. Just when a subject seems exhausted, just when you begin to feel that another book on the same theme would be superfluous, along comes a new treatment so perceptive and arresting it cannot possibly be ignored." Arna Bontemps

+ Sat R 35:15 S 20 '52 900w

Reviewed by S. N. Neal

Springf'd Republican p26A S 21 '52 130w

ROWLAND, JOHN. Century of murder. 227p $3.50 Roy pubs.

364.15 [364.38] Murder. Crime and criminals —Great Britain [51-30373]

Retells "the outstanding murder cases of approximately a hundred years" (1840 to 1945) in Great Britain.

"For the novice who is first acquiring a taste for true crime, this is a good introduction to many of the greatest classics." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 13 '52 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 12 '52 120w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 20w

ROWNTREE, LESTER. Ronnie; il. by Don Perceval. 188p $2.50 Viking

52-8098

"Life in the northern California mountain area was never dull for Ronnie, but, with no relatives of his own, he felt lonely and unloved by Aunt Sal with whom he lived. However, a year spent with some summer visitors who befriended him changed his whole outlook and his attitude toward Aunt Sal." Library J

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 20w

Booklist 48:285 My 1 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 50w

"A book distinguished for the nature lore its author, a botanist, has succeeded in weaving interestingly into her narrative. Trees, animals and birds are a bright part of daily living, as real as the individual characters that fill the story." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:105 Ap '52 100w

Kirkus 20:71 F 1 '52 160w

"Camping lore and local history are good, but the characters never come alive." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 80w

"The author makes her rather quiet story almost a travel book of two parts of California. She brings in plants, trees, animals, as Ronnie would know them. Here are views of a beautiful west, very different from those in the 'westerns' and a worthwhile picture of a boy happily befriended because he well deserved it. The line cuts are very good." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 15 '52 160w

"Ronnie is a real backwoods boy, living an almost pioneer life in modern times. He works hard, and some of the things he knows and can do may astound young readers, but they are not far-fetched, considering his intelligence, his observant nature and his environment. His story is full of pleasant, sometimes exciting incidents, with just enough natural history to give it solid substance." G. C. Castor

+ N Y Times p24 My 18 '52 170w

"The author (Lester is a she) knows her country well, for she is also a distinguished botanist who has spent a good portion of her life on solitary camping trips in the Sierra and the Trinity country. The line drawings which go with her story are adequate."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 160w

"We are told that the story of Ronnie is by a distinguished botanist. Certainly the forest background of northern California is described vividly and in great detail. One longs to see it, to share the beauty of its trees and shrubs and wild flowers. Ronnie himself is an exceptionally well-drawn character." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:50 My 10 '52 180w

ROWSE, ALFRED LESLIE. English past; evocations of persons and places. 245p $3.75 Macmillan

942 Great Britain—Biography 52-6231

"[The author] is a historian who sees the past in terms of the individual men and women, living in specific places, who made it; 'the mere uncounted folk' whose lives have woven the real fabric of history. Fully a third of the people dealt with in these 'evocations' will be no more than names—if even names—to an average reader. . . . But Rowse is as much at home with belles lettres as he is with old documents. The other two-thirds of 'The English Past' deal with Milton, Swift, the Brontës, Hardy, Buchan, and D. H. Lawrence as seen against the backgrounds of the places where they passed formative parts of their lives." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:263 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 20w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 3 '52 360w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '52 380w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 O 9 '51 180w

Reviewed by Willard Thorp

New Repub 126:19 Mr 10 '52 310w

"Mr. Rowse is an historian who can write. . . . It may be premature to despair of a culture which can still produce, and support, such a chronicler as Alfred Leslie Rowse." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 27 '52 850w

"Mr. Rowse possesses the ability to write history so that nonprofessionals can read it with enjoyment. Some of the essays in the book, such as 'Bisham and the Hobys' and others on seventeenth-century themes, are by-products of Mr. Rowse's larger work, 'The England of Elizabeth,' but this is meant in no disparaging sense. For these, like his larger work, reflect the author's sensitivity, his passion for effective detail and his Cornish and Oxford soul." H. F. West

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '52 700w

New Yorker 28:134 Mr 22 '52 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 16 '52 180w

Springf'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 230w

"It is not too much to say that few writers, writing to-day are as qualified for this kind of work as Mr. Rowse."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 19 '51 1000w

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, LONDON. Dictionary of gardening; a practical and scientific encyclopaedia of horticulture; ed. by Fred J. Chittenden; assisted by specialists [with a foreword by Lord Aberconway]. 4v il $55 Oxford

635.903 Gardening—Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"In England this dictionary is the successor to the long-esteemed Nicholson's 'Dictionary of Gardening.' This, however, has not only been out of print for some time but had become outdated by plant introductions and the development of new techniques, especially in pest control. The new dictionary has been eleven years in the making. The editor, Fred J. Chittenden, organized material from many specialists in the field of plants, including at least two Americans. These volumes are not for casual reading by gardeners but for reference by the plantsman. . . . The definitions cover not only plants but terms common in practical gardening. . . . The books deal with plants (species, hybrids and forms) long established and widely grown and with fundamentals. A fifth volume will refer to plants introduced during the preparation of the dictionary and will list recommended varieties." N Y Times

"An authoritative and painstaking work." D. H. Jenkins

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 9 '52 400w

"You will find that a considerable amount of general information that was not touched in Nicholson's dictionary has been included in this. There is an extensive discussion of insecticides, for example, dealing with modern developments. The drawings have been made uncommonly clear in an effort to show the distinctive features and growth habit, where possible, of the plants. They are all black and white line drawings finely contrived and therefore useful for identification work." Charles Downie

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 6 '52 1000w

"It is a good many years since so impressive a set of encyclopedic volumes has appeared in the field of gardening as the new four-volume 'Dictionary of Gardening.'" C. H. Woodward

+ Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 40w

"For the student, teacher, garden-owner, or professional gardener in Britain the Dictionary may be expected to remain the standard work of reference for many years, and it is so comprehensive that it should command the attention of horticulturists in many countries overseas. . . . A valuable feature, carried on from Nicholson's work, is the inclusion of references to illustrations of the plants in other important works. The illustrations in the Dictionary itself are all reproductions of clear and simple line drawings, and convey the immediate impression that they have been chosen with care to amplify the text. The inclusion of photographs or coloured plates might have made the volumes more attractive, but these would have added greatly to their cost and to their bulk without contributing proportionally to their usefulness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 11 '52 1250w

RUARK, ROBERT CHESTER. Grenadine's spawn. 253p $3 Doubleday

52-8748

Sequel to the author's Grenadine Etching (Book Review Digest 1947) a satire on the historical novel of recent years. In this one the author relates the adventures of Grenadine's children after Grenadine's death in 1945.

"It's highly refreshing these days to come upon a book which offers nothing but pure entertainment. Such is 'Grenadine's Spawn,' a novel of our times by that master of subtle, rowdy satire, Robert C. Ruark. . . . In 'Grenadine's Spawn,' the author seizes this jittery age by its throat and forces his characters to talk recognizably, if absurdly, like real people."

RUARK, R. C.—Continued

The story is caustically and continually funny."

R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 7 '52
270w

Kirkus 20:354 Je 15 '52 120w

"The author's principal and somewhat peculiar obsessions—apart from the purely scatological—are pyromania, homosexuality, the New Deal and the atom bomb. All of these, you may be surprised to learn, are screamingly funny, and you are supposed to laugh every time Mr. Ruark mentions them just as you do whenever Milton Berle puts on women's clothes."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 14 '52
160w

"A combination of mixed metaphor, slapstick humor, biting satire and outrageous puns in Ruark's free-swinging style, 'Grenadine's Spawn' is highly recommended reading for all those sick of bosomy, bedroom, 'historical' novels, or modern ones, for that matter. For accurate sniping at the strange doings of people in general, Ruark is unexcelled, as he again demonstrates in this book." J. E. Crain

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 7 '52
650w

"In the course of sketching these five unattractive Etchings, Ruark is occasionally funny about the way Hollywood people talk, about advertising agency jargon, about a Washington cocktail party. He is unfunny about sex, newspaper staffs, the State Department, Southern novelists, and some other stuff previously reserved to war novels and the Latin footnotes of Krafft-Ebing." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R 35:31 S 6 '52 400w

Springf'd Republican p11C O 19 '52
140w

RUBIN, MORTON. Plantation county. 235p il maps $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975 South—Social conditions. Plantation life. Social Surveys 51-14192

"This is one of a series of studies of the Modern Cultures of the South organized by Professor of Anthropology John Gillin of the University of North Carolina and financed by the Julius Rosenwald Fund. Mr. Rubin presents a fluently written social anthropological survey of the organization of a southern community and the behavior, thoughts, and concepts of its people. The community was chosen as a typical one in the coastal plains or the old plantation cotton belt, and has 5,000 whites and 20,000 Negroes in its population. The author lived in this county in 1947 and 1948, returning to it in 1950, and carried on a thorough field study guided from Chapel Hill, and reported all findings to the University." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by G. E. Simpson

Am Anthropol 54:545 Jl '52 600w

"This is another most worthy contribution to our knowledge of the South by the University of North Carolina, and makes the reader impatient for the appearance of other studies in Professor Gillin's series." Karl Brandt

+ Ann Am Acad 280:212 Mr '52 350w

"A useful addition to our knowledge of the economic and social patterns of American life."

+ Nation 174:353 Ap 12 '52 110w

"Mr. Rubin not only seems conscientious in his research and evaluation of evidence, but he writes clearly and with occasional touches of humor. Even so, as a social scientist, he is capable of describing a plantation as, 'a total-socio-cultural system located in ecological space.' Not much of that, however." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 6 '52 170w

"This study will be widely read and discussed by social scientists, social reformers, students, and laymen; in short, all who are interested in understanding trends in southern life." A. D. Edwards

+ Social Forces 30:470 My '52 550w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:82 Mr '52 230w

RUBINS, HAROLD (HAROLD ROBBINS, pseud). Stone for Danny Fisher. 403p $3.95 Knopf

51-13212

"Danny grew up in Flatbush, son of a humble, independent druggist who was wiped out by the depression. Danny, essentially a 'sensitive' and good boy, follows the familiar patterns of this literature: the Golden Gloves ring, resistance to the 'fix' attempts of gangsters, but ultimate submersion in the slow corruption of rackets, leading to a premature and violent end." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Larry Rogers

Canadian Forum 32:119 Ag '52 160w

"It's a good story. It is weakened because Mr. Robbins sees Danny as the victim of circumstances." Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 16 '52
450w

Kirkus 20:11 Ja 1 '52 240w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

Library J 77:530 Mr 15 '52 110w

"Mr. Robbins, to judge by his title and the emphasis he gives certain incidents, evidently regards 'A Stone For Danny Fisher' as a tract on the twisting of a child's life by a stern, inflexible father. To this reader, the book seems rather to be an honestly written story of frustration, caused by environment in general, only slightly influenced by the ignorance and sternness of the parent." E. L. Acken

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 6 '52
450w

"As a novel, 'A Stone for Danny Fisher' draws its strength from vivid characterization, a feeling for individual scenes. But its total effect is one of uneasy make-believe. Mr. Robbins strains credulity as he reaches for sentimental effects. One feels at the end that this lusty, vital tale could have been skillfully edited into a memorable one." James Kelly

N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '52 460w

"The spirit of self-pity that dogs this novel is its undoing. . . Everything goes wrong for Danny, and the endless account of his failure and setbacks becomes dismayingly monotonous, in spite of the sincerity and sympathy of Mr. Robbins' writing."

+ New Yorker 28:118 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Those who like sex and violence in large portions will find 'A Stone for Danny Fisher' their dish." Louis Falstein

+ Sat R 35:16 Mr 22 '52 480w

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY. Teacher of teachers; frontiers of theory and practice in teacher education. 308p $4 Harper

370.73 Teachers, Training of 52-5728

"An important controversialist in education urges the younger teachers of education to follow what he terms the creative path of the Great Tradition. If a democratic U.S. is to survive the automatization of heavy industry in the next 25 years, he argues, educators with creative imagination must construct an education for teachers that, based on new theories of society, human behavior, and esthetics, will reintegrate American culture." Booklist

Booklist 49:61 O 15 '52

School & Society 76:159 S 6 '52 30w

"In this study Mr. Rugg has created a 'Bible' for all students and teachers of education and a challenging statement of facts to be recognized by the practical men." M. W. Prince

+ Springf'd Republican p35A N 16 '52
450w

RUML, BEARDSLEY, ed. Manual of corporate giving; in collaboration with Theodore Geiger. 415p $6.75 National planning assn.

361.7 Charities

"The book is edited by Beardsley Ruml with the collaboration of Theodore Geiger and besides contributions by them contains articles by competent writers on different phases of the subject including, for example, Ralph Hayes.

The basic idea of the book is that the right of corporations to make deductions from Federally taxable income up to a total amount not exceeding 5% of contributions for health, scientific and welfare purposes, is recognition of the propriety of the assistance by corporations of certain educational, scientific and welfare activities not supported by government. Such activities were formerly supported largely by individuals whose ability to contribute has been vastly diminished by taxes." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 42:1333 O '52 230w

Booklist 49:27 S 15 '52

"Much of the information it contains will interest any person who is interested in the wider questions involving philanthropy."

+ Christian Century 69:1064 S 17 '52 150w

"In producing 'The Manual of Corporate Giving' the National Planning Association has performed a most appropriate service. This thoughtful volume on a subject of growing importance is of interest not only to corporation executives and directors but to all concerned with economic and social developments." A. A. Ballantine

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 J1 13 '52 350w

"The editors are to be commended for the specialized bibliographies accompanying each paper, as well as for the format which brings each paper to a practical conclusion, detailing 'types of 5 per cent programs' in each area of welfare spending." Eliot Janeway

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '52 900w

RUNBECK, MARGARET LEE. Hungry man dreams. 373p $3.50 Houghton

52-6084

"A story of the errors and trials of a young man in search of his own style of living. It is also a portrait of a German-American family in the setting of early twentieth-century St. Louis." Publisher's note

Booklist 49:49 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 30w

"All characters are created evenly. Each is an entity but each, as in life, with his peculiar bearing upon the other. The characters do not argue Christianity. The thesis does not harangue. There is absolutely nothing that smacks of sickly sweet sentimentality. Rather, it is a moving story of love and faith—faith not only in God but in mankind." K. Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 21 '52 370w

Kirkus 20:384 J1 1 '52 300w

"'A Hungry Man Dreams' starts out enticingly. Papa is painted in with the gusto that was his essence; Lucile is beautiful 'for what had been left out as Chinese prints are beautiful'; the boy Jubal is real and beguiling. But as time runs more swiftly in the later years, Jubal the man becomes increasingly shadowy, and his lovely wife, Gay Savanne, never quite comes to life. Jubal's dilemma, more subtle than the simple choice between God and Mammon, is a potentially rich theme, but its evolution here does not go deep enough to make this a memorable novel." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 S 14 '52 450w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

RUNES, DAGOBERT DAVID. Of God, the devil and the Jews. 186p $3 Philosophical lib. 296 Jews—Religion. Christianity 52-10708

A volume of essays, some quite brief, on ethical and religious topics, all embodying criticism of Western civilization's beliefs and practices.

Reviewed by E. L. Allen

Hibbert J 51:88 O '52 20w

Kirkus 20:392 J1 1 '52 70w

School & Society 75:383 Je 14 '52 20w

"Here is a charming series of essays inspired by intense religious beliefs and the deep conviction that there is room for a more liberal sense of understanding in the western world." B. F. K.

+ Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52 120w

RUNES, DAGOBERT DAVID, ed. See Spinoza, B. de. Spinoza dictionary

RUSH, MRS HELEN (SHERKANOWSKI), and SHERKANOWSKI, MARY. Rooms to let; decorations by John O'Hara Cosgrove II. 275p $3 Houghton

818 Lodging houses

52-5259

The two authors, who are sisters, ran a rooming house in Boston during the war years. This is their account of some of their experiences with their roomers, most of them funny, but some of them not so pleasant.

Booklist 48:317 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 40w

+ Kirkus 20:220 Mr 15 '52 160w

"Relaxing, even hilarious reading, with enough tinge of temporary tragedy to balance very light spirits. . . Recommended for library purchase unless the budget hath that lean and hungry look." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 8 '52 500w

"The housing shortage has hatched several books about rooming houses, but none of them has the freshness of this heart-warming story." Anzia Yezierska

+ N Y Times p12 J1 27 '52 270w

"The book is amusing, sometimes genuinely touching, always readable. As for the various stories about the roomers—well, most of them seem plausible enough. There's one—maybe two—that I'd guess were doctored a trifle to make them more dramatic, but you never know in such cases." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 My 28 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. S. Bishop

Sat R 35:28 S 13 '52 260w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p5C J1 13 '52 300w

Wis Lib Bul 48:170 J1 '52

RUSHMORE, HELEN. Ponca, cowpony; il. by Peter Burchard. 175p $2.25 Harcourt

52-6909

A sequel to Cowboy Joe of the Circle S (Book Review Digest 1950). In this story Joe and his cowpony Ponca are instrumental in catching some cattle thieves and with the reward Joe buys cattle, so he can go into partnership with his father. Grades 4 and 5.

Booklist 49:20 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 20w

Kirkus 20:451 Ag 1 '52 120w

"The demand for horse and ranch stories is a constant one, and this is a good addition for libraries needing them. . . There are humor and sympathy in the telling, with enough exciting events for the most jaded fourth- and fifth-grade reader. . . Recommended." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 77:1522 S 15 '52 90w

"The shortcomings of both pony and boy make an interesting story for the author's clever pen." S. M. Neal

+ Spring'd Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:219 S '52

RUSINOFF, SAMUEL EUGENE. Forging and forming metals. 279p il $3.95 Am. tech. soc. 671.33 Forging. Metal work 52-1208

"An elementary book on present-day techniques of forging. Metal extrusion and hot

RUSINOFF, S. E.—Continued
 spinning also are described. All of the exposition is descriptive, and mathematics have been altogether avoided. The book is suitable for the instruction of workers who need a practical knowledge of forging operations and their effects upon metals. Also, it can be used as a source of information for young people and other laymen who are curious about the subject." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
 Library J 77:724 Ap 15 '52 70w
 N Y New Tech Bks 37:40 My '52

RUSS, WILMA. Quivering earth; a novel of the Everglades. 248p $3 McKay

52-6432

The Florida Everglades at the beginning of the century is the background for this novel. It is the story of the girl Keeta, abandoned after a Seminole raid, and brought up by Pop Gundyhill, an elderly swamp derelict.

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

"In many ways, the Florida Everglades may be considered America's last frontier, and Wilma Russ writes in her first novel a lively story of that mysterious and beautiful region at the turn of the century and beyond. Her tale, romantic and sentimental, is rich in regional lore and native wisdom, in colorful scenes and picturesque characters." Gene Baro
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 23 '52 650w

"Miss Russ has provided a love story that is pretty contrived but not too obtrusive. It shouldn't distract you from some very nice nature descriptions, a lusty gang of secondary characters, and a general atmosphere of earthy wholesomeness which is pleasantly refreshing." E. J. Fitzgerald
 + Sat R 35:34 Ap 5 '52 200w

"A story that has more heart than art. So long as the heart beats firmly (about half the distance), this story of the big swamp has the endearing ingenuousness of a primitive painting, and some of the lushness."
 Time 59:110 Mr 17 '52 450w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM
RUSSELL, 3d earl. Dictionary of mind, matter, and morals; ed. with an introd. by Lester E. Denonn. 290p $5 Philosophical lib.
 192 Philosophy—Dictionaries 52-9198

A compilation of quotations from the work of Bertrand Russell, arranged alphabetically to form an index to his writings. Chronological list of works from which selections are taken.

Booklist 48:371 J1 15 '52

Christian Century 69:925 Ag 13 '52 70w

"The book should be a source of pleasure and information for the many admirers of Russell." Manuel Bilsky

+ Ethics 36:77 O '52 140w

"There will be some demand for this book in both popular and scholarly libraries." A. D. Osborn

Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Wade Donahoe
 New Repub 126:23 Je 16 '52 370w

"Unfortunately, some of the selections seem more like snips from a larger, closely woven fabric. But even the briefer samples show the wit, the humane spirit and the insights of an outstanding thinker of our time." I. B.
 + San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '52 160w

"The dictionary entries illustrate again Russell's most salient quality—the quality of clarity. He says, 'I prefer a clear statement subsequently disproved to a misty dictum capable of some profound interpretation.' There is no doubt that Russell has possessed this virtue to a greater degree than any other philosopher and those who have to run while they read will find it amply illustrated in this dictionary." R. B.

+ Sat R 35:40 O 11 '52 220w

School & Society 75:253 Ap 19 '52 20w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
 Springfield Republican p6D Ag 3 '52
 100w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM
RUSSELL, 3d earl. New hopes for a changing world. 213p $3 Simon & Schuster
 301.153 Civilization—Philosophy. Man 52-204

An argument against the tyranny of fear and an affirmation of faith in the good life and the life of reason.

Reviewed by Gail Kennedy
 Ann Am Acad 281:240 My '52 550w
 Atlantic 189:86 Mr '52 170w
 Booklist 48:178 F 1 '52

"Stimulating, encouraging essays."
 + Bookmark 11:107 F '52 20w

"Russell is at his best in his defence of individualism, in his criticism of communism, and in his proposals concerning cooperation and competition in the world of tomorrow. But certain weaknesses in his moral and social philosophy are pointed up rather sharply in this book. There can be no doubt that he suffers from a distorted conception of Christianity." J. A. Irving

+ Canadian Forum 32:188 N '52 450w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
 Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 27 '52
 210w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
 Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 24 '52
 850w

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher
 Churchman 166:12 Ag '52 110w
 Foreign Affairs 30:669 J1 '52 30w

"A stimulating though hasty summary; a heady Utopia strengthened with sinewy logic and aphorisms."

+ Kirkus 19:694 D 1 '51 280w

Reviewed by Guy Wint
 Manchester Guardian p4 N 6 '51 440w

"Mr. Russell has written a stimulating and inspiring book. It is a sermon on the life of man, which articulates without unction and with insight a noble vision of human excellence. It achieves what Mr. Russell set out to do, for it makes attractive to both mind and heart the faith underlying a liberal social philosophy." Ernest Nagel

+ Nation 174:181 F 23 '52 1350w

"One can be truly grateful for this book. Russell's mind, in its 80th year, is a good deal better than that of most people who write about politics in their prime. It does not go very deep, for it consists of a series of broadcast talks which were entitled Living in an Atomic Age, and is therefore addressed and adjusted to the widest of audiences. But Russell does not talk down to his audience; the book is full of reason and a sweet reasonableness which are sorely needed in this worried, puzzled, and frightened age." Leonard Woolf
 + New Statesman & Nation 42:540 N 10 '51 600w

"For all the greatness of its theme, this is a relatively brief book, and it is a simple one—occasionally, it will no doubt seem, even simple-minded. Here, as in many of Mr. Russell's other books, there is the same tendency to treat major social and political problems in exclusively psychological terms. . . . Mr. Russell has nothing much more to say on the subject of human progress than did Condorcet in the eighteenth century. Indeed, his book resembles Condorcet's not only in its spirit, but even in the details of its structure and argument. But what is startling about it is not the extent to which Mr. Russell repeats old ideas, but rather how supple and exciting these ideas remain." Charles Frankel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 13 '52
 1350w

"This is the same old Bertrand Russell we have always known, inditing with the confidence of orthodoxy what many will regard as heinous heresy. He is radical about 'root' matters, and remains the unreconstructed liberal as touching independence of mind, courage of heart, and the royal right of love to forge its way through fear. These are stalwart grounds of hope in any age. They are stout reliances for even this age of anxiety. 'Dangers are not averted by terror; they are averted by calm thought.'" T. V. Smith

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 13 '52 800w

New Yorker 28:91 Mr 1 '52 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52 190w

"This is one of Russell's wisest books, a serene meditation at evening on the state of mankind." Brand Blanchard

+ Sat R 35:14 F 2 900w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Springf'd Republican p12D Mr 16 '52 390w

Time 59:98 Ja 21 '52 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p741 N 23 '51 2600w

Reviewed by C. H. Driver

Yale R n s 41:631 summer '52 650w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM
RUSSELL, 3d earl. Wit and wisdom; ed. with an introd. by Lester E. Denonn. (Wit and wisdom ser) 136p $2 Beacon press

192 51-14401

Topical arrangement of brief excerpts from Bertrand Russell's writings, the subjects ranging from art, education, and happiness to science, sex education, and war.

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 27 '52 210w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 16 '52 40w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY).
June, moon, and murder. 188p $2.50 Doubleday

52-11621

Detective story.

"Irrepressible, to a point of irresponsibility."
Kirkus 20:577 S 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 23 '52 30w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p44 N 30 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 21 '52 60w

"So-so." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:30 N 29 '52 20w

RUSSELL, FRANK MARION. The Saar: battleground and pawn. 204p $5 Stanford univ. press

943 [943.42] Saar 51-13870

"This study had its more remote origin in 1919. The author became intrigued by the ingenious provisions of the Treaty of Versailles embodying the solution of the Saar controversy. . . The chief interest of the author was then and still is in the interplay of political and economic forces across national frontiers and in the possibilities of fruitful and sustained international collaboration where problems of the nature of those encountered in the Saar demand solution. . . The present study could not possibly have been written had it not been for an earlier one by the present author on the International Government of the Saar, published by the University of California Press in 1926. However, this work did not cover developments beyond 1923. The present study deals with the period during which the Saar Basin Governing Commission functioned, the organization and supervision of the plebiscite, the World War II period, and the present experiment under French auspices." Pref

Reviewed by Sarah Wambaugh

Am Hist R 57:971 J1 '52 600w

Am Pol Sci R 46:267 Mr '52 30w

Reviewed by A. J. Warner

Ann Acad 280:232 Mr '52 550w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 11 '52 370w

Current Hist 22:37 Ja '52 60w

Foreign Affairs 30:678 J1 '52 50w

"Mr. Russell's well-documented description of the horse-trading at Versailles and his discussion of the tremendous difficulties encountered by the League's Governing Commission in ruling over a population essentially hostile to any non-German government makes thoughtful and informative reading. . . The final chapters of the book dealing with contemporary Saar affairs are, probably by necessity, less accurate and more opinionated than the earlier parts." J. H. Lichtblau

+ — N Y Times p34 D 9 '51 450w

"Professor Russell retells the story of the Governing Commission clearly and objectively, but he adds little that is new. In his over-brief treatment of the period since 1945 he misses an opportunity for a close study of Franco-Saar relations which might shed considerable light on the future of the Franco-German problem in the construction of a United Europe. The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the addition of a documentary appendix which includes the new Saar constitution." L. G. Cowan

+ — Pol Sci Q 67:298 Je '52 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:60 Mr '52 200w

RUTHERFORD, DOUGLAS. Flight into peril. 243p $2.50 Dodd

Detective story.

"Knives, guns and dilemmas proliferate and if you don't mind the mindlessness the effect is pretty smooth." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 5 '52 100w

"Backgrounds, from London to Trieste, are colorful; but you've read it all before—though not from an author who can't decide from page to page whether he's writing in the first or third person—or how to spell Yugoslavia." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p31 O 12 '52 30w

"The terrific howler about curare on p. 12 of this book is in sense the measure of the remainder. . . Plot, characters and author's approach are strikingly naive." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 70w

"Pace brisk in spots, but crises adhere to conventional spythriller pattern. Medium."

Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 20w

RYAN, CORNELIUS, ed. Across the space frontier, by Joseph Kaplan [and others] il. by Chesley Bonestell [and others]. 147p $3.95 Viking

629.14353 [629.1388] Interplanetary voyages 52-12571

This book is an expansion of a scientific symposium which originally appeared in the pages of Collier's magazine. Contents: Introduction, by Cornelius Ryan; This side of infinity, by Joseph Kaplan; Prelude to space travel, by Wernher von Braun; Can we survive in space? by Heinz Haber; A station in space, by Willy Ley; Who owns the universe? by Oscar Schachter; The heavens open, by F. L. Whipple. Index.

Booklist 49:84 N 1 '52

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 6 '52 750w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:427 D '52 40w

RYAN, CORNELIUS—Continued

"A close-up of infinity, in which surmise comes right down to earth in terms of the near probability which is as fascinating as it is frightening."

Kirkus 20:44 J1 15 '52 150w

Library J 77:1760 O 15 '52 30w

"An engrossing volume, one of the most unusual features of which is a matter-of-fact discussion of housekeeping problems in an atmosphere hardly conducive to equilibrium or repose."

+ New Yorker 28:138 O 4 '52 160w

"Year's best non-fiction buy," Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:43 O 13 '52 20w

"Of all the triumphs which science shall put into the hand of man, none shall be so satisfactory as the conquest of space—the expansion of the race out over the dark to the worlds, and half-worlds beyond. It is this feature which gives 'Across the Space Frontier' its importance, for the book is a space-prospectus, and presents as well some more or less unfamiliar material in compact form." Peter Ritner

+ Sat R 35:42 N 8 '52 600w

"Readers who have turned, sometimes reluctantly, from Jules Verne to the matter-of-fact space travel conversations of the atomic age, will find this splendid book like a dive into the ocean, shocking at first and then invigorating. Here in reasonably non-technical language and exciting pictures is the world to come; there's no point in standing on the shore wetting your wrists, dive in before you are stranded by the tide." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p11C O 12 '52 300w

"The very precision of the propaganda makes it undeniably seductive. And the assurance of the authors is infectious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p793 D 5 '52 340w

RYDELL, RAYMOND A. Cape Horn to the Pacific; the rise and decline of an ocean highway. 213p map $4 Univ. of Calif. press

387.522 U.S.—Commerce—History. Shipping —U.S. 52-7241

An introductory chapter gives a rapid survey of Pacific ocean history from Magellan to Captain Cook. In subsequent chapters the author discusses the Old China trade, the whaling industry, the missionaries, the clipper ship era, etc. Author is associate professor of history at Los Angeles State college. Bibliography. Index.

"The notes, located in inconvenient fashion at the end of the text, contain much valuable information, as does the impressive bibliography. For a study based on such a rich collection of sources, the 154 pages of text seem surprisingly brief. Although the book is well constructed and written in attractive fashion, the reader finishes with the feeling that some of the chapters do not go much beyond available secondary materials and that the wealth of Mr. Rydell's research is not adequately revealed. The treatment of the period after the California gold rush is especially disappointing." J. H. Kemble

+ Am Hist R 57:1013 J1 '52 250w

"The style is excellent—lucid and comprehensive. . . 'Cape Horn to the Pacific' is a sound, definitive work, well indexed and copiously annotated." William McFee

+ N Y Times p25 My 18 '52 300w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:164 Je '52 280w

S

SACHS, EMIL SOLOMON. Choice before South Africa [pref. by Tom Driberg]. 220p $5.75 Philosophical lib.

968 South Africa—Politics and government. Africa, South—Economic policy [52-35661]

"Mr. Sachs has played a fine part in the world which he describes, and has just been forced out of his job as a trade union leader by the Nationalist Government. The choice which he outlines is that between an economy based on the cheap labour of a subject race and the full application of modern scientific technique irrespective of race. In his most interesting chapter he argues that manufacturing, rather than mining or farming, ought to be the mainstay of the South African economy." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 49:118 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 2 '52 110w

Current Hist 23:394 D '52 80w

"A good and necessary presentation, but overpriced." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1811 O 15 '52 70w

"Authoritative and convincing." P. J. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 J1 4 '52 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Logan

Nation 175:450 N 15 '52 290w

Reviewed by Leo Silberman

New Repub 127:22 N 24 '52 180w

"The most spirited of Dr. Malan's opponents has written a book as challenging as we should expect from him. Banned in the Custom house at Capetown, this book will make its way all over the English-speaking world." H. N. Brailsford

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:654 My 31 '52 800w

Reviewed by John Barkham

N Y Times p21 O 12 '52 190w

SACK, JOHN J. The Butcher; the ascent of Yerupaja. 213p il $3.50 Rinehart

796.52 Mountaineering. Yerupaja mountain 52-7159

Seven American college boys went to South America in 1950 to spend their vacation climbing Mt Yerupaja, the highest unclimbed peak in the Western Hemisphere. This book, written by the one non-climber in the group, is the account of the "expedition that started as great fun and ended as great adventure."

Booklist 49:8 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 30w

Reviewed by Ernest Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52 180w

"The conquest of Yerupaja was a spectacular achievement. Unfortunately Mr. Sack's account falls much below the level of the deed. Where one might have expected a book in the large tradition of Freya Stark, Peter Freuchen, Henry Bordeaux, one is given journalese. Mr. Sack asserts that he was a newspaper reporter among six mountaineers. His book might have been far better and more permanent if it had been written in a straightforward manner by some less professionally self-conscious member of the expedition." Francis Russell

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 7 '52 650w

"It is a well rounded book, a layman's as well as a mountaineer's and one with a forthright appeal for the thrill of winning a peak. The author's sharp if acrid observations reveal a wealth of geographical and climbing detail."

+ Kirkus 20:313 My 15 '52 250w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1408 S 1 '52 30w

"The Butcher' is not intended as a contribution to the technical side of mountaineering. Rather, Mr. Sack has set out to entertain his audience and in this he has succeeded. Even a layman might have preferred a less continuous levity, but certainly the account of the accident high on The Butcher does much to make amends. The book is a deserved tribute to a gallant crew." Lynn Carrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 27 '52 550w

Reviewed by R. S. Monahan

N Y Times p6 J1 27 '52 210w

"It is unfortunate that the prose does not match the stature of the deeds—prose that leans heavily on puns and college humor. It is also unfortunate that there are not more and better photographs, for the jacket picture in color shows that there were possibilities. But still, here is an account of one of the great climbs in mountaineering history—an account however unheroically told, of one heroic summer among the highest and most murderous peaks of the Western World."

Keith Kent

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 21 '52 800w

"Why, one may ask. The author of the Yerupaja conquest answers: 'In one month we live more than many people live in a lifetime.' His treatment of this episode of high adventure, although the humor is sometimes a bit strained, is graphic, the narrative both entertaining and informative." F. C. Lane

+ Sat R 35:15 J1 26 '52 410w

Time 60:80 Ag 4 '52 550w

SACKVILLE-WEST, EDWARD, and SHAWE-TAYLOR, DESMOND. Record guide. 763p $6.75 British bk. centre

789.913 Phonograph records [51-13887]

"This is the first British example of the type of record book made familiar in this country by Messrs. Hall and Kolodin. After an introduction containing the inevitable and necessary 'hints to collectors' (with useful label and number information) the book is an alphabetical composer listing with some background and commentary on each composer. Only discs available in England are considered. A chapter of addenda brings the catalog up to December 1950." Library J

"Recommended for larger collections." P. L. Miller

Library J 77:146 Ja 15 '52 210w

"The 'Record Guide' is judicious and sensible in its appraisements, though naturally there is much to argue about."

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 24 '51 260w

"The casual reader will find hours of enjoyment browsing through these pages, with their many old and new treasures; the ardent record collector will find stimulating and often provocative discussions of an incredibly vast number of English releases." R. H. Reid

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:286 Mr '52 430w

Reviewed by Philip Hope-Wallace

New Statesman & Nation 42:234 S 1 '51 1150w

"This is much more than a guide-book to the gramophone repertoire at present available in this country, though it is a remarkably full and efficient piece of work from that point of view. Both the authors are well-known writers on musical subjects in general, as well as specialists in matters of performance, recording and all the increasingly complex affairs of the gramophone world. Their tastes are catholic but personal, and their standards of performance exacting, so that any recording which they deem worthy of a star will almost certainly satisfy even the most esoterically minded or pernickety discophile." Martin Cooper

+ Spec 187:374 S 21 '51 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p656 O 19 '51 1000w

SAGER, GORDON. The formula. 247p $3 Lip-pincott

52-5086

International intrigue and mystery-adventure story dealing with the search for a secret formula hidden somewhere among the art treasures of Venice.

"Strictly as a mystery thriller, 'The Formula' must be rated as class B plus at best. But as solid entertainment for a quiet evening's diversion, it is A-1." Henry Cavendish

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 6 '52 320w

Kirkus 19:709 D 15 '51 130w

"Everything is muted and further muffled by words and save for the fortuitous rescue of the hero by the United States Navy there is nothing in it that would ruffle any reader looking for a soporific." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 90w

"More than ordinary merit marks Gordon Sager's slick novel of adventure (his third). His story has suspense and speed, his characters are sharply defined, his dialogue sparkles with urbanity, and his setting, which is Venice, achieves something of the glow and substance of reality. . . Indeed, he is so dexterous and so charming a guide through the glimmers of his chosen city that one is even willing to overlook the preposterous melodramatics with which he rings down his curtain." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 23 '52 360w

"Nicely written, but perhaps with a plethora of Italian atmosphere."

+ — New Yorker 28:140 Ap 12 '52 90w

"The Formula' is by no means an impossible novel, but it is exciting reading and a neat example of good craftsmanship on a minor scale using standard props. Mr. Sager's writing experience as a staff member of The New Yorker magazine stands him in good stead as a novelist and his talent for the calling is conspicuous." J. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 Ap 20 '52 390w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:64 Ap 12 '52 190w

ST JOHN, PHILIP. Rocket jockey; jacket and endpaper designs by Alex Schomburg. 207p $2 Winston

52-8972

Science fiction novel for boys.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:561 S 1 '52 60w

"Recommended for children's rooms for beginning science fiction fans." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:2013 N 15 '52 50w

"Mr. St. John has notions of future rocket technique and orbiting which are going to come as a great surprise to such authorities as Mr. Clarke or Willy Ley; and his climax hinges on an astonishing arrangement of planets which will come as an even greater surprise to the Creator of the solar system." H. H. Holmes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52 60w

"In clear, simple style Philip St. John has written a worth-while novel which has the suspense of 'Around the World in 80 Days.'" Villiers Gerson

+ N Y Times pt2, p28 N 16 '52 60w

"It is pretty good space opera-type stuff, except that the rocket is handled in a way that conveniently ignores most of the laws of physics." Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 16 '52 40w

ST JOHN, ROBERT. Tongue of the prophets. 377p $4 Doubleday

B or 92 Ben-Yehuda, Eliezer 52-5233

The life-story of the Jewish scholar, Eliezer Ben Yehuda. In the late nineteenth century he became interested in reviving the Hebrew language and the rest of his life was devoted to two main purposes: to make Hebrew the accepted language in Palestine; and to further the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine.

Booklist 48:213 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Louis Binstock

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 16 '52 390w

"Even those who can have little interest in the Hebrew language or in Israel itself will find this tale of struggle and victory exciting and inspiring. It is the result of long research and was given the blessing of Hemda Ben Yehuda, the wife who did so much to make possible her husband's success. During coming years many biographies of Eliezar Ben Yehuda will be written. This is a worthy one to begin the long list." J. G. Harrison

ST JOHN, ROBERT—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 19 '52 490w

"This 'story of a faithful fanatic' who gave his life that a dead language might live again deserves a wide and appreciative audience." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 166:14 My 15 '52 70w

"An important contribution to Israeli history, though unlikely to achieve the wide popularity of his earliest books."

+ Kirkus 19:720 D 15 '51 210w

"The author's style and sympathetic handling of the material enhances a book that will appeal to all who relish a fight for freedom and a dream turned into reality." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:359 F 15 '52 140w

"Three years ago, in 'Shalom Means Peace,' correspondent Robert St. John wrote a glowing and affectionate tribute to the people of Israel and to their courage in the dark days of their war of independence. Now, in 'Tongue of the Prophets,' he has written the same kind of warm, simply done and sympathetic account of one of their heroes." Gerold Frank

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 24 '52 800w

"Mr. St. John has taken the subject while it is still warm, working with first-hand materials and with the Ben Yehuda children, and he has written an exciting biography of an important and fascinating man." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p6 F 24 '52 800w

"Mr. St. John, who has become something of a non-Jewish specialist on Israel and its history, has written an admiring book about a very interesting man; it is regrettable that he has blunted its persuasiveness by the use of such devices as supposedly verbatim conversations that took place sixty years ago. Still, that is a minor point."

+ New Yorker 28:140 My 10 '52 160w

"'Tongue of the Prophets' can be highly recommended as a heart-warming and entertaining book, as well as a study of a fascinating character whose story would make a splendid film." Irving Babow

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 2 '52 850w

"It is to be regretted that in the effort to underscore Ben Yehuda's achievements, some errors have crept in. There is no explanation of the Haskalah movement and its various currents, which varied from a modern attitude toward Jewish tradition, to outright antipathy to religion. It is not true that 'when it ceased being a spoken language, Hebrew ceased increasing its vocabulary'; actually, it continued to grow with the expanding horizons of Rabbinic and modern thought. Moreover, it is not made clear that modern Hebrew already had a vital written literature and an active press before Ben Yehuda began his labors. Even with these lapses and other minor errors of fact, Robert St. John has produced an engrossing tale of the power of one man to transform his world." Robert Gordis

+ Sat R 35:21 Mr 8 '52 800w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney
Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52 120w

Reviewed by D. D. Pool
Survey 88:232 My '52 500w

SAINT-LAURENT, CECIL, pseud. See Laurent-Cély, J.

SALTER, ANDREW. Case against psychoanalysis. 179p $2.50 Holt

131.34 Psychoanalysis 52-6632

"After its meteoric rise, Freudianism has been more realistically adapted by Horney and several other psychoanalysts. But Salter is an example of current critics who desire to abolish Freud pitilessly, because he is 'inaccurate,' 'preposterous,' 'unscientific.' Salter believes that it is now time for healthy theories based on a vigorous experimental psychology and on present, nongenetic perceptions." (Library J) No index

Reviewed by D. W. Fiske

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 6 '52 220w

"Quotations are taken out of context. Psychoanalysis is presented in a manner of flagrant lack of understanding. There is a case against psychoanalysis—or at least there are many things in psychoanalysis which might be objected to or rejected—but this book does not present the real case. It is more a disgruntled blast about things which were being discussed twenty and thirty years ago, and which were answered long ago. It is too bad. That is all." Gregory Zilboorg

— Commonweal 56:179 My 23 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:145 F 15 '52 170w

"For oriented readers—a stimulating (con) argument." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:590 Ap 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by H. M. Lynd

Nation 174:527 My 31 '52 1050w

"Mr. Salter follows a rhetorical rather than a scientific pattern. He bolsters his opinion with scores of references, but for the most part he quotes opinions with few facts. His lack of cold clinical and laboratory data, however, is not entirely his fault. For in the forty years since Freud, though scientific literature should have contained reports of thousands of laboratory controlled experiments, testing the Viennese Master's hypotheses, the fact is that piteously few experiments have been made. A good case against psychoanalysis must wait for more facts." Earl Ubell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 20 '52 230w

Reviewed by Rollo May

N Y Times p27 My 4 '52 370w

"This book is a statement of arguments against Freud's theories, but it does not deal with the facts which these theories are designed to control. For this reason, I found it very dull. Theories designed to deal with irrational facts cannot be demolished by merely logical analysis. There is one consolation which the reader will note in forcing his way through this acrimonious document—to wit, Freud is liberally quoted. Freud was a first-class writer as well as a first-class mind, and I was refreshed by finding many of his beautiful thoughts quoted here." John Dollard

— Yale R n s 42:131 autumn '52 600w

SALTER, MARION ARMOUR. Cat's-paw. 215p $2.50 Rinehart

52-6617

Mystery story.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

Kirkus 19:689 D 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 24 '52 180w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p29 F 17 '52 40w

"You wouldn't believe this story in any case, but it might have been more bearable if the frenetic writing had been toned down." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p30 F 24 '52 50w

"Accent on psychological overtones rather than on detection of culprit, pursuit angles swallowed in emotional tangles and past performances." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:48 Mr 15 '52 20w

SALVADORI, MASSIMO. Rise of modern communism; a brief history of the communist movement in the twentieth century. 118p il $2; (Berkshire studies in European history) pa $1.25 Holt

335.4 Communism 52-7360

"Massimo Salvadori first deals with the Communist International during its revolutionary period from 1918 to 1923. He then traces the events that led, through the Stalin-Trotsky controversy and the Moscow purges, to the end of the National Front period. In the following twenty-six pages, Mr. Salvadori summarizes Communist history since the end of World War II." (N Y Times) Bibliographical note. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 40w

Booklist 48:242 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 20w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 16 '52 330w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham
Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 13 '52 1150w

"This brief study does a very able job of dissecting the nature of this modern movement."

+ Current Hist 22:229 Ap '52 80w

"To those who have followed the rise of modern Communism closely, there is little new. To the majority of readers, this is the answer to the need for bare bones information, concretely presented."

Kirkus 20:54 Ja 15 '52 330w

"Some readers may be deterred by the author's coldly factual style, but the book is recommended to those who wish a brief and clear statement of what communism is." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:431 Mr 1 '52 110w

Reviewed by Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 30 '52 350w

"A teacher of modern European history at Smith and Bennington Colleges presents in this slender volume what Norman Thomas, in his introduction, accurately describes as a 'brief, concise and perceptive story of the rise of modern communism' in the twentieth century." Martin Ebon

+ N Y Times p31 Mr 16 '52 370w

New Yorker 28:144 My 17 '52 130w

"Mr. Salvadori's students and the colleges that employ him deserve congratulations. He has a sure political touch and much knowledge. Even his two-dimensional, compressed review of the birth and antecedents of movements against capitalist liberalism in the nineteenth and this century contains valuable insights into the major problem of our time. Though he judges Soviet Russia by secondary sources, not always the best, he understands Stalinism. He opposes it, but without invective or alarm." Louis Fischer

+ Sat R 35:17 Mr 15 '52 800w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:288 S '52 170w

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp
Yale R n s 41:627 summer '52 300w

SAMPSON, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Range management; principles and practices. 570p il maps $7.50 Wiley

636.08 Pastures and meadows. Grazing. Live stock. Forage plants 51-13123

Discussion of the principles and care in the management of range land, and the stock and timber raised on it. Bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 48:209 Mr 1 '52

"An essential book for libraries in western U. S. A. and an important one for others with agricultural collections." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:906 My 15 '52 70w

"The amount of material presented in the book and its documentation are impressive; it should be useful to stockmen, public range administrators, and students of technical range management."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:185 Je '52 220w

SAMPSON, GEORGIANNE. Key to the other. 222p $2.75 Doubleday

52-5119

A first novel which is concerned with the breakup of a marriage, and a young woman who finally grew to maturity. The scene is New York city.

Kirkus 19:665 N 15 '51 130w

"A broken marriage and an unfortunate love affair have been illumined with a rare perception and maturity in this first novel." Anne Brooks

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 20 '52 600w

"The dissolution of a marriage is sound fictional material; but 'The Key to the Other' is too unsuited, too immature, too minute in canvas to add up to much more than a commendable effort. One just can't take this story or the characters as seriously as the author." E. B.

N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '52 170w

"Miss Sampson is a young writer of undeniable talent. Her observation is sensitive and acute, her style accomplished and lucid. She has written a first novel of exceptional merit." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 35:30 Mr 29 '52 380w

SAMUEL, HERBERT LOUIS SAMUEL, 1st viscount. Essay in physics; with a letter from Albert Einstein. 178p $3 Harcourt

530.1 Physics—Philosophy 52-7058

"The present book deals with physics as a science whose function is to explore the causes of observed phenomena and provide us with an understanding of nature. Lord Samuel believes that twentieth century physics has let us down in this respect. It has increasingly restricted itself to the production of mathematical formulas that describe adequately our observations and no longer even attempts to find the real causes of these phenomena." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 48:207 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

"The problem which Viscount Samuel set out to discuss is urgent and it is good to have the weight of his great name bringing the problem to the attention of the general reader. However, the reviewer cannot see that this book makes any significant contribution to its resolution." A. J. Coleman

+ Canadian Forum 31:118 Ag '51 200w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
Hibbert J 49:408 Jl '51 950w

Reviewed by Philipp Frank
N Y Times p3 F 17 '52 1150w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
Sat R 35:33 My 10 '52 600w

"The greater part of the essay develops an interpretation of physics based on the assumption that energy exists in two states, quiescent and active, and passes easily from one to the other. These pages leave the physicist unsatisfied, for to him the concept of 'energy' only acquires scientific value from its mathematical expression, and a non-mathematical argument therefore lacks foundation. But so does fundamental physics to-day, and this gallant little book certainly reflects the growing recognition that abstract mathematical theory lacks some element that is indispensable for the comprehensive understanding of phenomena."

Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Mr 23 '51 450w

Wis Lib Bul 48:86 Mr '52

SAMUEL, MAURICE. Devil that failed. 271p $3 Knopf

52-8514

Halfway between a novel of scientific suspense and a psychological study, this is the story of Alan Cleaver, young, scholarly, normal American, who awakens after a period of unconsciousness, to find himself in an unbelievable, fantastic world.

Booklist 49:106 N 15 '52

SAMUEL, MAURICE—Continued

"As a 'morality for our times' this new novel leaves something to be desired; as entertainment, however, it is topflight work, all the more so because it is so different in its Gulliver like theme." August Derleth

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p25 N 16 '52 350w

"The Devil That Failed is neither a sociological satire nor a study in human behavior. The reactions of the hero to his temporary status as a monster rarely surpass the psychological level of a comic strip." Hans Sahl

— Commonweal 57:236 D 5 '52 210w

Kirkus 20:518 Ag 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 77:1657 O 1 '52 70w

"The Devil That Failed, despite a few arid spots and an ending that is not fully satisfactory in relation to the expectations that have been aroused, is good fun and good reading, and not the least of its merits is the lightness and ease with which it treats symbolically of some very important matters." Harvey Swados

+ — Nation 175:497 N 29 '52 450w

"Striking and stimulating novel." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 19 '52 490w

"Mr. Samuel is nearly successful, but not quite. Perhaps, had he not tried so hard to pitch the tale on a credible plane and paid heed to the master's use of satire (and, above all, stopped explaining how real it all is), this might have been an entirely brilliant and convincing piece. As it stands, it is only half convincing; and the half that convinces is a lesson drawn from the old truth that imagination outlives the prosaic fact." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p14 D 28 '52 300w

"Mr. Samuel, who is obviously delighted by the inspiration behind this book, spins his story out to the greatest possible length, reminding us inevitably of the man who has interesting dreams and who insists on telling them to us from beginning to end, leaving nothing out."

New Yorker 28:188 N 29 '52 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 30 '52 250w

"Alan in relationship to Sertorus, the satanic spellbinder in quest of the allergy trigger that precipitated the disaster, provides the reader with a dexterous and delightful variation on the old theme of Gulliver. But there is much more than cleverness here. There is weight." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 35:19 N 22 '52 450w

SANDERSON, GORHAM D. India and British imperialism. 383p $4.50 Bookman associates

954 India—Politics and government. British in India 51-14049

"England's control over India is examined with reference to the effects it had on both nations. Dr. Sanderson gives an interesting picture of India before the coming of the British East India Co., then describes its rapid decay and impoverishment. On the credit side of the ledger, Dr. Sanderson believes that the forces of liberalism in Britain have spread their influence to the colonial empire and contributed to the rise of democracy there." Current Hist

"Specialists in the history of British expansion will be able to furnish their own perspective, but the general reader should be warned that a number of Dr. Sanderson's generalizations are questionable and some of his evidence is of dubious weight. Although the bibliography provided is fairly representative of various points of view, the author leans heavily on a few nationalist writers, and this tends to color the discussion with emotional overtones that mar the effectiveness of the argument. Despite these shortcomings, and inevitable minor errors, the book is highly readable, and we look forward to the forthcoming companion volume on the Irish independence movement." Mark Naidis

+ — Am Hist R 57:678 Ap '52 500w

Reviewed by H. L. Hoskins

Ann Am Acad 280:225 Mr '52 440w

Current Hist 21:355 D '51 60w

Reviewed by J. D. Rogers

Library J 76:206 D 1 '51 100w

"This is an incautious book. . . A propensity for overstatement mars the book. . . Nothing in the book prepares the reader for the disputes between India and Pakistan or Nehru's present differences with the West. In fact, it all might have been written fully ten years ago." John Trueman

Sat R 35:27 Ja 26 '52 340w

SANDERSON, IVAN TERRANCE. Silver mink; il. by [the author]. 162p $2.50 Little 599.744 Minks—Legends and stories

52-5017

Story of a silver mink, shunned by her kind because of her color. It covers one year in her life, tracing her journey from her home in the northern pine forests, to the sea, and her return to her home so her babies can be born in the home nest. For grades 7 to 10.

Booklist 49:17 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"A slow-moving, beautifully written story. . . The small print, long descriptions, difficult vocabulary, and leisurely pace of the book all mean that it must be read aloud to be enjoyed by most boys and girls, probably in the upper intermediate grades." M. B. Snow

Library J 77:1412 S 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52 60w

"The author brings to the story an understanding of animal ways based upon long experience as a naturalist and explorer. As in his previous animal books, his style is dramatic and colorful, conveying to the reader his own feeling for the beauty and wonder of life in the wild." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '52 170w

"The writing is so harmonious, so serene in its atmosphere, that it leaves the reader with a sense of utter satisfaction. For a brief time we can lose ourselves in the great forces of nature, accepting without question Mr. Sanderson's record of his heroine's pilgrimage."

+ Sat R 35:66 N 15 '52 110w

SANFORD, CHARLES WILSON, and others. eds. Schools and national security; recommendations for elementary and secondary schools. 292p $3 McGraw

370.973 Education—U.S. 51-12321

"The result of a conference of educators, military, and civil defense administrators. The first part discusses the problems created in America by the present and possible future emergencies; the second considers the implications for education; the third takes up the responsibilities of administrators, P.T.A. groups and librarians, and outlines the values, purposes, and teaching methods for specific subjects in the curriculum." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 48:43 O 1 '51

Reviewed by E. W. Knight

Sat R 35:20 S 13 '52 550w

School & Society 74:144 S 1 '51 20w

"This work is a rich resource for the school and community that tries consciously to plan for performing its finest possible role in the total defense program of the nation. The volume is written in direct, straightforward language, is positive in its recommendations, and practical in its suggestions for action." J. E. Stonecipher

+ School R 60:246 Ap '52 950w

SANGSTER, WILLIAM EDWIN. Craft of sermon construction. 208p $3 Westminster press

251 Sermons—Preparation 51-7833

"The author, minister of Westminster Central Hall in London, approaches his subject from a background of thirty years' experience in preaching. His treatment of the techniques of sermon construction moves from a plea for a new awareness of the importance of preaching through classifications of sermons according to subject matter, structural type and psychological method to comments on the beginning and end of the sermon, methods of preparation, and mistakes commonly made." (Churchman) Index.

"This is a good book. . . For the seminary student or inexperienced minister the book provides a good introduction to the field, and for the man who already has a number of years of preaching behind him it recalls again the glory of his vocation and affords a generally dependable scale on which to evaluate the work he has been doing." R. M. Pearson

+ Churchman 165:16 N 15 '51 120w

"The man who knows most about sermon making will find here fresh and stimulating suggestions. The man who knows the least about sermon making will find a wealth of material just suited to his need. There are now and then flaws of taste and there are occasional bits of pseudo unctious. But they almost help to give the book its intimate human quality and its bright and quick and vital movement." L. H. Hough

+ Crozer Q 29:93 Ja '52 170w

"It will be of value principally as a textbook in Protestant theological seminaries. But preachers too will be interested in how one of their colleagues, a Scot, goes about preparing his sermons."

+ Kirkus 19:566 S 15 '51 50w

SANSOM, CLIVE. Passion play. 218p $3 Day 52-9170

In a small Bavarian village the people had performed a passion play every seventh year for many centuries. One year, when the peasant girl, Maria, is to play the Virgin, it becomes necessary to import outside talent, an actor from Munich, to play Judas. He brings trouble and sorrow into the life of Maria, and thru her to the young priest Father Müller.

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Je 22 '52 280w

"As Mr. Sansom weaves his story, it assumes an indefinable quality of a tale told and repeated by people, sometimes crude, sometimes naive but possessed also of earthy understanding and wisdom."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 21 '52 240w

"Especially sensitive are the author's feelings for nature and music and contemplation. Excellent also, are his many sketches of the peasants who so agreeably populate this book. Now and then his style becomes curiously stilted and archaic, as if he had too tensely thought before writing. This is surely a minor fault in an otherwise charming story—one whose characters and setting are observed with freshness and understanding." J. C. Neff

+ N Y Times p17 Je 29 '52 350w

"Mr. Sansom has a mawkish outlook, and his direct, clipped way of writing does not hide the evasiveness of his plot and his characters."

— New Yorker 28:83 Ji 19 '52 90w

"Mr. Sansom, who has previously worked mostly in poetry, has written his engaging little fable with quiet humor and a warm appreciation for the simpler virtues of his somewhat out-of-this-world village characters. In particular his portraits of the priests, Müller and Schultz, provide delightful glimpses into characters widely different but convincingly likable. In all, I think you'll find 'Passion Play' one of the pleasanter light novels of the season."

+ Sat R 35:54 Je 7 '52 140w

SANSOM, SIR GEORGE BAILEY. Japan in world history; issued under the auspices of the Japan Institute of Pacific relations. 94p $2 Inst. of Pacific relations

952 Japan—History 51-13888

Based on lectures delivered by the author in Japan, this is a discussion of Japan's part in world history, by the director of the East Asia Institute of Columbia University.

"The specialist in Japanese history will read this small volume with profit and interest. But it is also a volume which can be read with profit by all historians who are not prisoners of narrow specialization." R. A. Wilson

+ Am Hist R 57:1045 Ji '52 160w

Current Hist 22:318 My '52 100w

Manchester Guardian p4 My 20 '52 240w

"'Japan in World History' will not appeal to an American audience. The usual reaction will be, I think, 'Well, this is certainly not Sansom at his best.' Admirers of the fluent style, the deft touches of humor, the bold and sweeping intelligence characteristic of the author's 'Japan: A Short Cultural History' and 'The Western World and Japan' will be disappointed. They will find this book rambling, repetitious, sometimes unconvincing. . . Nevertheless, this book provides us an opportunity to observe in action a man who knows Japan and the Japanese as few Westerners know them, making a contribution—very small, he would say—to the restoration of good relations between Japan and the West." Hilary Conroy

— + Nation 174:91 Ja 26 '52 800w

"Japan is singularly blessed to have Sir George B. Sansom as its foremost Western interpreter. . . [He is] a man of humility and understanding, yet learned and articulate. Nowhere are these virtues better demonstrated than in a recent series of lectures at the University of Tokyo, published here under the title, 'Japan in World History.'" Stuart Lillico

+ N Y Times p13 D 23 '51 280w

"The thesis of the book is so sound, and so convincingly presented, that it certainly will influence the thinking of many students of Japanese history and undoubtedly will lead many to undertake studies which should yield results of far greater significance and validity than heretofore." D. M. Brown

+ Pacific Affairs 25:191 Je '52 470w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 10 '52 150w

Reviewed by W. P. Metzger

Sat R 35:15 D 13 '52 250w

"It would be remarkable if the historian's temper as these Tokyo lectures reveal it had not impressed his auditors, aware as they were of his admirable and extensive contributions to the history of Japan; they stand in print as models of unforced eloquence, easy in manner, serious in theme, and however conversational yet keeping their direction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p815 D 21 '51 270w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Bicycle rider in Beverly Hills. 178p $3 Scribner

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-12748

Informally written memoirs of the author's childhood and youth in Fresno, California.

Booklist 49:1; 66 S 1 '52; O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 19 '52 270w

Reviewed by Ruth Wales

Christian Science Monitor p8 O 16 '52 290w

"In spite of the lapse of time since his first jejune recollections reached a popular public, this carries a certain recommendation if only because his curious point of view represents a facet of American living that has intrinsic interest."

+ Kirkus 20:484 Ag 1 '52 160w

"Has a great deal of charm and friendliness. Recommended particularly for paid circulation." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 127:27 D 8 '52 800w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM—Continued

Reviewed by W. K. Zinsser

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 28 '52
850w

Reviewed by Whit Burnett

N Y Times p4 S 21 '52 600w

"Like all his best works, this one is really poetry, for Saroyan is a poet manqué if there ever was one. It also proves that age cannot wither his infinite sameness; if you like Saroyan, you'll like this."

+ New Yorker 28:118 S 27 '52 120w

"A kind of continuation of his 'My Name Is Aram'—anyway in much the same vein—this is Bill Saroyan looking fondly back at Himself When Young, the man-on-the-flying-trapeze in his teen-age days when he pedaled around Fresno (he says that pumping his bike taught him rhythm in writing), and everything seemed fine and romantic and somehow tremendous. Anyone who can honestly remember his own youth will know how right Saroyan is. That's when things do seem so marvelous and so big that you almost lose your breath trying to take in the whole world at once. And that's the sense of marvel and wonder that Saroyan gets into this memoir." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 3 '52
650w

"Saroyan's gift is that of the affectionate encounter. The succession of small things that surround him win his sympathy and love and move him to the effort of comprehension. There is a freshness in his approach akin to innocence, and that enables him to communicate the sense of for the first time seeing, for the first time understanding, the specific qualities of people and places. This is a gift that sustains the writing of brief passages. Often enough to be rewarding, the book contains vivid descriptions of such events and characters. . . This is something. But it is not very much. Certainly, it is not enough to fill the covers of a whole volume." Oscar Handlin

+ — Sat R 35:27 O 11 '52 600w

SARTON, GEORGE. Guide to the history of science; a first guide for the study of the history of science, with introductory essays on science and tradition. 316p il $7.50 Chronica botanica

509 Science—History. Science—Bibliography
52-10902

"This book is intended by the author to be of service to two kinds of readers—on the one hand, scientists and scholars, and on the other, historians of science. It is true that the main part of it, which is a bibliography made by the man who, above all others now living, is qualified to make it, is of interest chiefly to the specialist, but the introduction, which is based on public lectures given a few years ago in the History and Philosophy of Science Department of University College, London, and which occupies nearly a quarter of the book, can be read with understanding and profit by any reasonably well educated person." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 49:44 O 1 '52

"The bibliography will be as nearly as possible indispensable to the historian of science and his copy will soon show signs of wear and tear. . . No serious thinker can therefore afford to neglect what Dr Sarton has to say in these essays, so highly charged as they are with knowledge and experience." Herbert Dingle

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 29 '52
300wSchool & Society 76:48 J1 19 '52 20w
Special Libraries 43:418 D '52 40w

"Although making no claim to even approximate completeness, it is the first book of its kind of comparable length. The quantity of professional hints and data presented will save the beginning researcher much precious time and effort."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:342 S '52 230w

SARTON, GEORGE. History of science; ancient science through the golden age of Greece. 646p il $10 Harvard univ. press

509 Science—History

52-5041

"A distinguished authority presents the first of a series of eight volumes planned to cover the history of Western science from antiquity to the present, and viewed largely as cultural history from the scientific point of view." Booklist

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

"Although this book is written primarily as a reference work for scholars, it contains much that will fascinate the general reader, especially when taken in small doses. If its material were more widely disseminated, science would be far better appreciated." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Times p7 D 14 '52 600w

"No one living today has so extensive or profound a grasp of the history of science as Sarton, and with the peculiar adornment of qualities which are so essentially his, he has now embarked upon an enterprise which will add further to his laurels as well as to the reader's pleasure and permanent enlightenment." Ashley Montagu

+ Sat R 35:38 N 8 '52 800w

School & Society 76:333 N 22 '52 30w

"Remarkably readable; at the same time it is a work of the greatest scholarship." F. G. Kilgour

+ Yale R n s 42:310 winter '53 350w

SARTON, MAY. Shower of summer days. 244p $2.75 Rinehart

52-9599

The scene is an Irish manor house, inhabited for the first time in thirty years, when the owner and her husband come back from Burma. Sally, the daughter of Violet Gordon's estranged sister, comes from America to visit and to think over a love affair, and the stage is set for quiet action.

"I am captivated by Violet, the professional beauty who must be loved. . . The men in the story are of weaker metal than their bosses, and Ian in particular is too pliant, but I do enjoy Miss Sarton's delineation of temperament and the skill with which she lets her men and women reveal themselves as they strive in cross-purposes and in intimacy to be true." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 191:80 Ja '53 430w

Booklist 49:90 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 50w

"A novel of high and quiet quality, deeply satisfying." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 30 '52
340w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52
130w

Kirkus 20:519 Ag 15 '52 170w

"Plot is tenuous, most characters are aimless and appeal is largely derived from charming descriptions of flowers and countryside. The whole is 'brilliant with unfulfilled possibilities' as to motivating purpose and plot development. Pleasant though unimportant reading." R. P. Tubby

+ — Library J 77:1657 O 1 '52 50w

"The novel is distinguished by an incisive intelligence that never fails to see complexity and never gives in to sentimentality, and it is proof that in the right hands the traditional form and traditional subjects constitute an unexalted but exceptionally firm base for the novelist." J. H. Raleigh

+ New Repub 127:28 D 8 '52 150w

"It is in the final pages that Miss Sarton brings her theme into full orchestration. Here it is that the subterranean drama rises to the surface; here it is that the continually stirring portrait of Violet receives the final strokes that raise it to magnificence." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 26 '52
550w

"A new novel by May Sarton is always an occasion for rejoicing on the part of discerning readers a stroke or two ahead of literary currents. For, as they know, Miss Sarton ranks with the very best of our distinguished novelists. 'A Shower of Summer Days' establishes once and for all her unmistakable authority." John Nerher

+ N Y Times p4 O 26 '52 450w

"The ending of the story is unsatisfactory, because it doesn't seem very true, but the writing is thoughtful and direct, the people are all alive and conscious of each other, and the house is wonderful."

+ — New Yorker 28:152 O 25 '52 90w

"The qualities which have distinguished May Sarton's poetry, the feeling for words, the vividness and color of expression, the imagination and observation, are here richly present. I could wish that she had given them more latitude than she has in this rather brief novel, but in any event, 'A Shower of Summer Days' is a rewarding and memorable book."

S. H. Hay

+ Sat R 35:18 N 29 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 60w

SATURDAY review home book of recorded music and sound reproduction, by Edward Tatnall Canby [and others] ed. by Irving Kolodin. 308p il $4.50 Prentice-Hall

621.345 Phonograph records. Sound—Recording and reproducing 52-10184

"This three-way collaboration is neatly divided into three aspects of recorded music—history and background of records and playing equipment (Canby), a guide for the record collector with basic lists (Kolodin) and a kind of Baedeker to the land of the Audiophile (Burke). As the title implies, the book is designed as a handbook for Saturday Review readers and others of their kind, and it puts into permanent form a great deal of knowledge and advice the authors could hardly keep repeating or incorporating into their monthly reviews and pronouncements." Library J

Booklist 48:334 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 S 14 '52 350w

"For serious music lovers who want the most qualitatively out of their records and phonographs, here's the book to own."

+ Kirkus 20:274 Ap 15 '52 130w

"The styles of the three are variegated and well known; the information they supply is sound, useful and about as complete as they could reasonably be expected to make it within the limits of book covers. Not another record book, not a history nor yet simply a guide to 'hi-fi,' the Home Book is something of all these. It will probably be very popular." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 77:1077 Je 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 175:53 J1 19 '52 1000w

Reviewed by Robert Evett

New Repub 126:23 Je 30 '52 180w

"With all allowances for the natural shortcomings and variances of a cooperatively written, pioneering volume, this 'Home Book of Recorded Music and Sound Reproduction' is an essential chairside companion for every listener, whatever his previous education in music and sound, whatever the present scope of his disc library and playing equipment. Above all, it is a provocative stimulus to fresh thinking on a subject of the keenest contemporary interest and convincing testimony for the thesis that music from the machine is not necessarily mechanistic music, nor a medium for merely tenuous, passive, or sterile experience." R. D. Darrell

+ — Sat R 35:18 Ap 26 '52 1100w

SATURDAY REVIEW OF LITERATURE (periodical). America and the mind of Europe [ed] with an introd. by Lewis Galantière and contributions by Raymond Aron [and others]. 125p $2.75 Lib. pubs.

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with Europe. Europe—Relations (general) with the U.S. [52-7772]

"In this reprint from a special midcentury edition of the Saturday Review of Literature, ten writers, American and European, analyze the current trends of European thought and culture and their impact on the thought and culture of the United States. Their essays range across the uneven gulf of nationalism, touching on philosophy, morals, politics, literature, music, painting, and travel, and busily trading ideas that could be the raw material of progress." Christian Science Monitor

Am Pol Sci R 46:595 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Ann Am Acad 284:218 N '52 360w

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

Reviewed by R. M. Brace

Chicago Sunday Tribune p34 N 16 '52 180w

"Some of this book is challenging. Some of it is sad. The 'meat' is in the first 60 pages. Much of the rest is merely interesting. But it is not more of this book that we need but rather more books like it." J. A. May

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 My 16 '52 500w

Current Hist 22:380 Je '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 30:675 J1 '52 20w

"What is it that separates America from the mind of Europe, and Europe from the mind of America? It is a healthy sign that a whole number of the Saturday Review of Literature, should be devoted to a symposium on this question, now republished in book form. . . . It is a fair challenge; and I only wish that Mr. Galantière's European contributors had bravely responded to it. They had the chance to tell thoughtful Americans what was wrong, and most of them funk it." R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 42:628 D 1 '51 420w

"The contents of this symposium are, on the whole, pretty grim, but can anybody at this date deny that they are realities? And however grim the facts, none of the contributors (Mr. Spender may be the exception) gives way to despair. It would be hard to think of any recent discussion of public affairs that contains, in so brief a compass as this book, so many incisive points of view that demand understanding on both sides of the Atlantic—and understanding quickly." William Barrett

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 3 '52 550w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 20w

SAUNDERS, EDITH. Mystery of Marie Lafarge. 256p $3.50 Morrow

B or 92 Lafarge, Marie Fortunée (Cappelle) Pouch- 52-9274

An account of a famous French trial, that of Marie Lafarge (1816 to 1852) who was accused of the murder of her husband and of stealing a diamond necklace belonging to a friend. She was found guilty and went to prison, obtained a release because of ill health and died in 1852.

Booklist 48:352 J1 1 '52

Kirkus 20:309 My 15 '52 240w

"The account set forth here is, on the whole, meticulous, although it has less richness and a good deal less skill to support its fascinations than the one Joseph Shearing gave us some years ago in 'The Lady and the Arsenic' (1937). Comparisons may be odorous, but readers will have a far surer sense of historical position and perspective if they seek out the Shearing account which is more skillful in its nice adjustment of evidence in an astonishingly perceptive anatomy of the posture of Romanticism." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 22 '52 240w

"Miss Saunders is English, and writes with a pleasant English restraint. Her researches appear to be sound, and her avoidance of description, homiletics, and theory, in favor of the deed as its own explanation, not only lets the reader think for himself, but results in a fine picture of Marie's times." J. M. Cain

N Y Times p21 Je 15 '52 350w

New Yorker 28:107 Je 21 '52 230w

SAUNDERS, EDITH—Continued

"A beautiful example of how to wrap up a character study and the facts about a murder case in the same package." J. H. Jackson
 + San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 8 '52 550w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:33 J1 26 '52 30w

Springf'd Republican p4C J1 6 '52 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 4 '52 200w

SAUNDERS, JOHN RICHARD. World of natural history; as revealed in the American museum of natural history. 321p il $5 Sheridan 574.074 American museum of natural history, New York. Natural history 52-13873

A member of the staff of the American Museum of Natural History summarizes the history of the institution, and gives the story of its workings, expeditions, and exhibitions. Illustrated with many photographs. Index.

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

"Although an expensive book, this is well worth the cost."

+ Library J 77:2189 D 15 '52 60w

"Mr. Saunders is chairman of the museum's Department of Public Instruction. In 'The World of Natural History' he has performed a work of public instruction of great value indeed. His book amounts to an outsized Guided Tour through both the public and private areas of the museum." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 14 '52 290w

"A good, conscientious job which avoids being a mere catalogue by including excursions into realms of adventure all over the globe. . . The photographs of what you see at the museum are many and excellent." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p32 N 30 '52 320w

SAVAGE, DEREK STANLEY. Withered branch; six studies in the modern novel. 207p $3.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

823.09 English fiction—History and criticism 52-6882

"Essays on Ernest Hemingway, E. M. Forster, Virginia Woolf, Margiad Evans, Aldous Huxley, and James Joyce by a critic who disapproves of them all. In his preface, he explains his point of view." New Yorker

"Mr. Savage makes the common mistake of thinking that our literature wallows in the hideous for its own sake. . . It is wrong of Mr. Savage to pretend that Hemingway deals only in war and blood, for it is the point of 'A Farewell to Arms' that Lt. Henry repudiates them. And how does Mr. Savage explain the fact that the greatest talents in literature today are those who have written in the way he deplors? One can only suggest that he does not read closely enough in the modern critical way, so that he loses the higher meanings in the welter of crass details. But it remains an illuminating and insightful study." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 F 17 '52 500w

New Yorker 28:146 My 17 '52 100w

"D. S. Savage is an excellent, original, and sometimes infuriating critic. These six essays contain some of the best things I have read lately in the field of literary criticism. Mr. Savage is distressing, I suppose, because just on the edge of real achievement, he will take a dizzy jump into the absolute." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R 35:10 Ag 2 '52 470w

SAVAGE, MILDRED (JANE BARRIE, pseud). Lumbervyard and Mrs. Barrie; il. by George Price. 243p $3 Holt

338.47 Lumber trade 52-10294

The hilarious, true story of a lumberman's wife who managed to pull her husband's lumber business out of the red, describing how it was done.

Booklist 49:101 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:51 D '52 30w

Kirkus 20:543 Ag 15 '52 150w

"Any business man will find this diverting reading though meeting Jane in the flesh would undoubtedly give them ulcers. Recommended for rental and large public libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:1804 O 15 '52 60w

"Funny and pleasant book. . . George Price's illustrations are wild and wonderful, as usual."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 2 '52 240w

"Mrs. Barrie's report on the goings on in the marts of trade is written with a light touch that does not conceal just what she and her husband were up against and how gamely they came through. George Price's illustrations are on exactly the right chaotic note." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p41 N 16 '52 260w

Springf'd Republican p35A N 16 '52 180w

SAVARESE, JULIA. Weak and the strong. 311p $3.50 Putnam

52-5271

"In New York's slums, in April 1930 and for four poverty-stricken years thereafter, Joseph and Fortuna Dante and their children Gabriel and Gino (with baby Gloria on the way), struggle with starvation and illness and intolerable housing—hopeless, jobless, goalless except for Fortuna's fierce desire to be rich which to her means to be strong." Library J

"A sincere book, written with a native naivete, but there may not be many who will have the fortitude to follow the Dantes through their Inferno."

Kirkus 20:238 Ap 1 '52 190w

"Queer novel, unfolded in episodes of mounting despair and horror. This small library won't need it." F. A. Boyle

Library J 77:592 Ap 1 '52 70w

"Miss Savarese's study of weakness and strength is unrelentingly bleak though often perceptive and moving, and while she depicts sensitive people, they are quite humorless ones. The publishers announce that this first novel is one of a projected trilogy. Even from as competent a writer as Miss Savarese, two more such determinedly gloomy books would be hard to take."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 14 '52 280w

"What saves this novel from being simply a chronicle is Miss Savarese's insights into the relationships between the Dantes. Quite innocent of plot, suffering from a paucity of dramatic incident and frequently from inaccurate and affected writing, it contains none the less many evocative scenes and phrases and has also something that much current fiction lacks—a characteristic tone." John Brooks

N Y Times p30 Ap 6 '52 280w

"Miss Savarese has set down the sufferings and struggles of the Dantes in a prose that is occasionally over-florid but always moving and evocative. She has recaptured the sights, sounds, and smells of Depression-struck New York with a skilled if somewhat overextended use of detail. . . This first novel is a solid opening installment, marred for me somewhat by the monotony of incident and the author's failure to connect her characters and their struggle with the larger political and economic currents of their time." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:38 My 3 '52 200w

Springf'd Republican p8D My 11 '52 180w

SAWYER, RUTH (MRS A. C. DURAND). Maggie Rose; her birthday Christmas; pictures by Maurice Sendak. 151p $2 Harper

52-7882

Maggie Rose was one of "those Bunkers," a happy, shiftless, singing family living in a small resort town near Bangor, Maine. Maggie Rose was born on Christmas Eve, and this is the story of how when she was eight years old she planned, and worked, and finally achieved a wonderful Christmas-birthday celebration.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 176:205 D '52 30w

"Maggie Rose's Christmas joy will bring happiness to all little girls who read her story. They are sure to consider her a very special friend." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p40 D 7 '52 120w

"This is a sensitive picture of a real little girl in a community needing warmth and color and understanding of character. Ruth Sawyer has told it more in the period of The Birds' Christmas Carol than of the 1950's, but its essentials ring true and the background of the book is authentic Maine." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:395 D '52 40w

Horn Bk 28:402 D '52 150w

Kirkus 20:406 J1 15 '52 200w

"Ruth Sawyer makes Maggie Rose a real person. All readers, especially girls from 9-12, will follow this heart-warming Maine seacoast Christmas story with tender concern." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 77:2078 D 1 '52 40w

"It is as full of sentiment and tears as was 'The Birds' Christmas Carol. . . Maggie Rose's way of speaking is a peculiar blend of backwoods plus charming poesy. The Sendak pictures are most unattractive. In spite of all this, a certain essence of the true spirit of Christmas is here, and there are such depths of imaginative goodness in this little girl that the book may appeal widely." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 30 '52 150w

"This is a moving portrait of an indomitable small girl." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '52 50w

"A radiant Christmas story that should endear itself to this generation of readers as much as 'The Birds' Christmas Carol" did to an earlier one. Mr. Sendak's scrawly, expressive pen-and-inks harmonize perfectly with the text."

+ New Yorker 28:196 D 6 '52 30w

"Format and illustrations are just exactly right for this appealing, satisfying story of Maggie Rose." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:44 D 13 '52 150w

SAX, NEWTON IRVING. Handbook of dangerous materials; assisted by M. J. O'Herin and W. W. Schultz. 848p $15 Reinhold

614.8 Chemicals. Explosives. Radiation—Physiological effects. Fungi. Pathogenic. Fungicides. Safety measures and appliances 51-14422

"The primary purpose of the volume is to present descriptions of hazardous industrial materials. More than 5,000 chemicals are listed, alphabetically, together with their hazardous properties, methods for storage or handling, and requirements for protection of personnel. Chemical formulas and other physical characteristics, such as molecular weights, specific gravity, and boiling point, are given, so far as such information is available. . . Explosives and fungicides are treated separately." (Am J Pub Health) Index.

"The volume would have principal value among public health staffs as a source book for the industrial hygiene physician, nurse, or engineer who needs easy reference to condensed data on hazardous chemicals and to anyone who might have to ship any of these chemicals." F. B. Elder

+ Am J Pub Health 42:317 Mr '52 180w

"Unquestionably the Sax handbook is a real contribution to safe practice. But the vocabulary trouble is a weakness. Are you sure you know the meaning and significance of, 'It is an excellent lipid solvent?' Or 'It can cause acute yellow atrophy.' Or 'It can cause iritis.'"

It seems as if the author could have translated and evaluated some of his source material without losing effectiveness, authority or accuracy." L. B. P.

+ Chem Eng 58:357 N '51 1050w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:824 My 15 '52 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:11 Ja '52

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). Emperor Constantine; a chronicle. 191p $2.50 Harper

822 Constantine I, the Great, emperor of Rome—Drama

A chronicle play in many scenes and with a large cast of characters, which presents incidents in the life of Constantine from 305 to 307, including a depiction of the Council of Nicaea. The play was presented last year during the Festival of Britain, at Colchester, which has claims to be the birthplace of St Helena, Constantine's mother.

Booklist 48:335 Je 15 '52

"The history is substantially sound. The religious feeling is deep and sincere. The author's concept of the church (she is strongly Anglo-Catholic) leads her to view with implicit approval the state-enforced monopoly which Constantine's favor presaged." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:724 Je 18 '52 140w

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher

Churchman 166:17 N 1 '52 110w

"The drama has a formality, an intellectual and even a liturgical quality appropriate for its public and civic purpose, but the author has developed also from the scanty and institutional historical sources and from her own comprehension and sympathy, the convincing and living characters of Constantine and his entourage to embody tragedy as well as teach lessons." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 56:326 J1 4 '52 1000w

"Should have a wide appeal and not only to Catholics and high Anglicans but to all interested in the history of the Church and its meaning for us today."

+ Kirkus 20:345 Je 15 '52 210w

Wis Lib Bul 48:170 J1 '52

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. Alexander Hamilton, nation builder; drawings by Gillett Griffin. 229p $3 McGraw

B or 92 Hamilton, Alexander—Juvenile literature 52-9765

A rewriting of the author's adult biography of Hamilton (Book Review Digest 1946) in a style and tone suitable for high school readers.

Booklist 49:91 N 1 '52

"Informative biography with limited appeal to the general reader but excellent for American history classes. . . Recommended for senior high schools." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 77:2187 D 15 '52 80w

"This is an important book for all high school libraries and the most interesting yet offered in a new biographical series, 'They Made America.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p14 N 16 '52 160w

"A study of a brilliant personality that is as exhilarating as it is authoritative."

+ New Yorker 28:207 D 6 '52 30w

School & Society 76:192 S 20 '52 10w

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. Thomas Jefferson; a biography. 2v 1070p il $12 Appleton

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 51-13987

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Among the numerous works on Jefferson that have appeared within the past few years and that continue to appear, some of them running to several volumes, here is one that is within the compass of the general reading public. . . The present work, while containing a great deal of detail and not to be skimmed through in an evening, is nevertheless not overwhelming in bulk." Christopher Crittenden

SCHACHNER, NATHAN—Continued

+ Am Hist R 57:984 J1 '52 700w

"Mr. Schachner has not contributed much to our understanding of his subject. His admirable collection of information about the man has been imperfectly transformed into knowledge of him. For the most part he writes, to put it succinctly, in the spirit of Montaigne. Although such an attitude has excellent biographical uses, it is not the best way of looking at Jefferson." George Genzmer
Nation 174:188 F 23 '52 380w

"Because of the fullness of the information it provides, this is at present the best complete biography of Jefferson available. The compilation of facts is, however, not the end of a biographer's responsibility, and all the facts put together come nowhere near adding up to the whole man, particularly one as subtle and complex as Jefferson. The paradoxes of Jefferson, some perhaps real and some certainly only apparent, which Mr. Schachner has listed in his foreword, are not really studied here; they are only presented. This is a useful biography, rather than a searching or profound one."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:12 Mr '52 290w

"A style made up so largely of verbal counters does not inspire confidence in the author's understanding of human motives or ability to interpret them. Right here is the real failure of this ambitious book. It contributes pitifully little to the understanding of one of the most complex and subtle minds that America has produced. The paradoxes (if they are such) and the mysteries (which are real) that cling as closely as shadows to Jefferson's greatness remain altogether unresolved, unilluminated." L. H. Butterfield
Yale R n s 41:441 spring '52 550w

SCHAPIRO, MEYER. Paul Cézanne. See Cézanne, P.

SCHARFF, ROBERT. Handicraft hobbies for profit. 199p il $4 McGraw

745.5 [680] Handicraft 51-13127

"Discusses in detail the business side of hobbies and the five basic crafts—woodworking, plastics, metalworking, leathercraft and ceramics. Photographs and line drawings. Bibliography, sources of supply and sales outlets in appendixes, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:292 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:208 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 13 '52 70w

"A helpful, straightforward book that people who are considering starting a handicraft hobby for profit or marketing a hobby they are already embarked upon will find good to have around."

+ Kirkus 20:209 Mr 15 '52 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:41 My '52

SCHAUINGER, JOSEPH HERMAN. Cathedrals in the wilderness. 334p il $4 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Flaget, Benedict Joseph, bp. 52-2939

"This biography of Benedict Joseph Flaget, first Bishop of Bardstown (later of Louisville), recalls the life and influence of the great Roman Catholic 'Patriarch of the West' as he worked with zeal and devotion to establish the Church on the American frontier during the first half of the nineteenth century. . . . To present the background of the times and the character of the Bishop, the author, Professor of History at St. Thomas College, St. Paul, Minn., has done extensive and careful research in the available letters, records and documents." N Y Times

"Instead of keeping his focus on Flaget, Mr. Schauinger tells in a somewhat confused fashion the story of the long period (1792-1850) during which this admirable man worked on the frontier. Everybody is brought in, but no person or event is very distinct. This, however, is not to say that this book has no value. Mr. Schauinger demonstrates his industry as a gleaner of facts, of facts that are much less known than they ought to be. Therefore those who can inure themselves to plod through Cathedrals in the Wilderness will be rewarded." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 56:394 J1 25 '52 350w

"This is a book of labor and hardship, of firm administration and benign influence, and above all of sure foundations for the later growth of the many dioceses and archdioceses that have sprung from Bardstown." G. R. Stephenson

N Y Times p18 D 7 '52 250w

SCHECHTMAN, JOSEPH B. Arab refugee problem. 137p $3 Philosophical lib.

956.94 Arabs in Israel. Refugees, Arabic 52-11659

Brief study of the postwar problem of the resettling of the more than 700,000 Palestinian Arabs who fled from the state of Israel in 1948. Index.

"Dr. Schechtman's book should be read widely by all interested in a thorough, realistic, yet humane study of the Arab refugee problem." Karl Baehr

+ Churchman 166:13 N 15 '52 150w

"A fair, impartial and documented review by a qualified observer. This is the only available book on a confused problem of great consequence to the Arab nations and to peace in the Near East." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 77:1405 S 1 '52 90w

"His volume is valuable now, just as the refugees are entering their fifth year of homelessness and are soaking up ever-more Communist and ultranationalist propaganda to trouble the Middle East. Dr. Schechtman's conclusions—and his general tone—are pro-Israeli. But studious objectivity forces him to present, at least in passing, the Arab side of the story as well." R. W. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 S 14 '52 300w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman

Sat R 35:15 D 13 '52 190w

SCHEIDLINGER, SAUL. Psychoanalysis and group behavior; a study of Freudian group psychology. 245p $3.75 Norton

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Social psychology 52-8726

"Draws on the writings of Freud and his successors, summarizes their collective theories of individual behavior, and shows how they are extended to interpret group behavior. Discusses basic drives and social tendencies, group processes, the role of the leader, intra- and inter-group conflicts, Freudian concepts of group relations, group psychology and psychotherapy, and educational practices that make use of the Freudian concepts. Twelve-page bibliography." Booklist

"The book as a whole was disappointing to this reviewer. Although replete with quotations, many of them trivial, footnotes, and all the academic trappings of a dissertation, it does not satisfy the demands of intellectual rigor nor linguistic precision that such a structure implies. For the social scientist familiar with Freud's work nothing new has been added. There would appear to be neither new facts nor a new synthesis of the old. The laymen unfamiliar with the vocabulary and with higher literary standards than the social scientist would have very hard going indeed." Douglas Courtney

+ Ann Am Acad 283:212 S '52 290w

Booklist 48:289 My 15 '52

SCHELKUNOFF, SERGEI ALEXANDER. Advanced antenna theory. 216p $6.50 Wiley 621.343 [621.384135] Antennas (electronics)
52-5084

"The development of radar, television and FM radio, in all of which the antenna is a critical factor, has led to much study of antenna behavior or theory in recent years. The author of this book is one of the outstanding scientists working in the field. Here, he presents a range of mathematical equations and techniques for solving antenna problems. The material is based on his own work and on the work of Hallen, Stratton, Chu and others." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:1211 J1 '52 90w

"Valuable monograph. . . The treatment is largely mathematical, and the mathematics is rigorous. The book is of primary interest to advanced graduate students and graduate engineers engaged in antenna research."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:34 My '52

SCHERF, MARGARET. Elk and the evidence. 189p $2.50 Doubleday 52-6365
Detective story.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52
Kirkus 20:204 Mr 15 '52 70w

"Games (and fun) are [the author's] purpose and here (as not always) she brings them off pretty amusingly while Martin, unevenly divided between the cure of souls and the curiosity which the toe arouses, splits himself to discover what it's all about. Miss Scherf, even with the burden of the toe, has managed agreeably here." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 1 '52 120w

"The most tightly detectival of Father Buell's usually rather staggering cases, with a likably perky, no-nonsense-about-her Imperiled Heroine, and such strange clues as The Toe in the Deep-Freeze." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Je 1 '52 120w

"Neat enough, easy-paced and funny." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 8 '52 40w

"Diverting." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 30w

SCHERMAN, DAVID EDWARD, and REDLICH, ROSEMARIE. Literary America. 175p il $5 Dodd

810.9 Literary landmarks—U.S. Authors, American 52-7205

"A chronicle of American writers from 1607-1952, with 173 photographs of the American scene that inspired them." Subtitle

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 190:80 J1 '52 290w

Booklist 48:293 My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 30w

"Mr. Scherman and Miss Redlich have produced a gem for the student and teacher of American literature. . . The photographs are lovely beyond words. . . Each is chosen with taste and imagination and photographed with distinction." Walter Harding

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 13 '52 190w

"A medley of contrast—with much that is familiar and more that is fresh and surprising, nearly half given to contemporary writing. It is a restless book of cycloramic sweep yet only surface significance, sometimes inspiring, again depressing, both beautiful and ugly—reflecting the swift change, the rich variety, and in current times the shocking paucity of the American scene from which much of today's writing has sprung. The photographs are of uneven artistic merit but always interesting." O. D. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 10 '52 200w

"The most effective photographs in the volume are those closest to the lives of the writers concerned. . . The least effective are the obviously posed figure studies, such as those allegedly illustrating O. Henry and Stephen Crane, simple pictures of Whilomville, Chancellorsville, or the Flatiron Building would have brought us closer to these authors. Of the letter-press one need only say that the quotation-captions are for the most part skillfully and sensitively chosen; the biographical notes are terse, factual, and non-controversial. The book after all, stands or falls by its pictures, and most of Mr. Scherman's photography is of a quality which assures that it will stand." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 27 '52 350w

"The authors, in a brief foreword, write that they resisted literal documentation 'in favor of a pictorial mood or impression that might illustrate better an author's own mood.' . . In some instances this method is entirely successful. . . In other instances, the method backfires, as does the logic. . . The very absence of plan gives the book its vitality. The book is absorbing." W. W.

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '52 450w

"The general idea is to show photographically the America that was closest to those who wrote—the America those writers saw. In most cases this works out well enough. . . But there are times when the method just doesn't work very well. . . Altogether 93 writers are briefed, placed in time and space, and demonstrated by quotation. For these Mr. Scherman has done 170 beautiful photographs, more than 99 per cent of which accomplish what they're supposed to. That's a high average all around." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 9 '52 440w

Reviewed by Anthony Richardson
Sat R 35:13 J1 12 '52 270w

SCHERY, ROBERT WALTER. Plants for man. 564p il maps $10; to schools $7.50 Prentice-Hall

581.6 Botany, Economic 52-7748

An introductory survey of economic botany. Contains discussions of edible, medicinal, and industrial plants used in modern times. The author is research associate at the Missouri botanical garden. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 48:260 Ap 15 '52

"Both readable and comprehensive, this [volume] should find a place on the shelves of many libraries." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:724 Ap 15 '52 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:61 J1 '52

SCHIFF, PEARL. Scollay square. 314p $3
Rinehart

52-8731

During World war II Scollay Square, the other side of Beacon Hill, was Boston's "liberty town." This is the story of socially prominent Beth who came to a life of independence via the seamy side of life in Scollay Square.

"For all the extremes of passion, physical (?public libraries?) and intellectual, this is not above dealing in social stereotypes and some easy solutions to attitudes of prejudice."

Kirkus 20:354 Je 15 '52 150w

"Slight story depending heavily on the 'women, wine and song' theme. Recommended." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 77:1193 J1 '52 40w

"This is a neatly written book, but its ideas are too elementary and its characters too conventional."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 14 '52 110w

"A first novel at once distinguished for its brutal candor and reportorial skill. . . It is to Miss Schiff's credit that she sees the humanities as well as the nihilisms of her scene."

Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '52 220w

SCHIFF, PEARL—Continued

"The girls are not very solidly drawn, the boys even less so; but the atmosphere is thickly realistic, smelly, and sordid, the dialogue authentic, the action fast. Not for the squeamish, though I doubt Miss Schiff's intentions were as sensational as her product." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:30 Ag 30 '52 170w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney

Spring'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 70w

SCHILDKNECHT, CALVIN EVERETT. Vinyl and related polymers; their preparations, properties, and applications in rubbers, plastics, fibers, and in medical and industrial arts. 723p il $12.50 Wiley

668.423 Polymers and polymerization

51-13457

"The compounds discussed in this book include not only many of the well-known plastics but also ion exchange resins, synthetic fibers, finishing materials and adhesives. The treatment is organized in families or groups as indicated by the chapter titles. Each chapter is mainly an organized critical digest of the pertinent literature, with references to the original publications. Both patents and Allied Intelligence reports were included in the surveyed literature. European and U. S. A. trademarks and names are mentioned at appropriate points and are included in the index." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book will be useful to a wide circle of readers because of its completeness." R. M. Fuoss

+ Chem & Eng N 30:2840 J1 7 '52 200w

"The literature of the field is cited in thousands of footnote reference." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:724 Ap 15 '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:47 My '52

"Valuable as a reference source for the product user, technologist, or research worker, the book can also serve as a general introduction for the student. For those more inclined toward theory, it provides an account of the background which has given the impetus to much of the fundamental research in the polymer field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:217 Je '52 250w

SCHILLER, ZOE LUND. Candle for a star. 275p $3.50 Macmillan

52-8369

A story of pioneer days in the Pacific Northwest. The tale is told following two threads of narration—old Duncan MacGregor's part in financing and supervising a pageant to open a new theater, and his reminiscences of the real happenings of his early life.

Booklist 48:248 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 20:12 Ja 1 '52 220w

"Diverting, funny, and a little sad. Miss Schiller (Mrs. Kreutz) is a young writer who should do even better than this as a novelist—she has written several plays. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:592 Ap 1 '52 110w

"It must be said at once that Duncan's memory-lane excursions to the early days of Frémont, Wash., are far more vivid than the rather tame device of the pageant, and the intrigues of the outlanders who set it in motion. Nevertheless, the show goes on—and everyone ends up happy." Louise Anderson

+ N Y Times p31 Ap 6 '52 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 8 '52 800w

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR, ed. Philosophy of Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan. (Library of living philosophers) 883p $7.50 Tudor

181.4 Radhakrishnan, Sir Sarvepalli

52-10747

"Consists of twenty-three descriptive and critical essays on the philosophy of Radhakrishnan by American, British, and Indian scholars, preceded by Radhakrishnan's own 'fragments of a confession' entitled The Religion of the Spirit and the World's Need and followed by his reply to his critics." Nation

Reviewed by J. C. Archer

Ann Am Acad 284:214 N '52 370w

Reviewed by G. V. Bobrinskoy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 29 '52 400w

"Distinguished volume."

+ Nation 175:158 Ag 23 '52 120w

"His life of action has not stunted his intellectual output. A glance at the bibliography at the close of this volume in the Library of Living Philosophers leaves no doubt of that. The critical analysis and evaluation of his thought by a dozen contemporary philosophers, his own 'Religion of the Spirit' and his reply to the evaluations made by his critics, give in this one book an adequate estimate of his impact on world thinking." Gerald Heard

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '52 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 S 14 '52 200w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. Go with the sun; il. by Symeon Shimin. [38p] $2 Scott, W. R.

52-8835

Story of Peter who wanted to follow the birds south, but finally decided his own way of spending the winter was better. Ages 4 to 8.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 16 '52 50w

Kirkus 20:548 S 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Miriam James

N Y Times pt2, p40 N 16 '52 60w

Spring'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 50w

SCHLEIN, MIRIAM. Shapes; pictures by Sam Berman. [32p] $1.75 Scott, W. R.

52-8836

Pictures and rhymes explain different shapes for ages 4 to 7.

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 16 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:550 S 1 '52 80w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:2010 N 15 '52 30w

"With a deceptively light touch Miriam Schlein sets young children to thinking about the nature of shapes... This is a brilliant little book which will help to train a youngster's eye and make him sharply aware of form and design." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times pt2, p41 N 16 '52 90w

Spring'd Republican p7C N 30 '52 40w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. Wonderful egg. [46p] il $2.25 Scribner

636.5 Eggs—Juvenile literature. Poultry—Juvenile literature 52-12035

In text and photographs presents a study of the egg industry for ages 5 to 9.

Booklist 49:38 S 15 '52

"The presence of the boys in these pictures taken on a farm in New York State adds to the appeal of this carefully planned book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:335 O '52 50w

Kirkus 20:551 S 1 '52 60w

"Recommended." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 70w

"The diagrams are clear, the brief text excellent. It is a fine sort of informational book."

L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 19 '52
80w

SCHMELTZER, KURT. Long Arctic night; tr. from the German by Elizabeth Brommer; il. by David Cobb. 188p $2.50 Watts, F.

52-11612

A translation of a German account of the Barents Expedition which set out from Amsterdam in 1594 to discover a northeast passage to the orient. The ship was wrecked in the Arctic ice and the story is of the long struggle to survive and of the return of the remaining members to Amsterdam. For ages 12 to 16.

Booklist 49:62 O 1 '52

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 30w

Kirkus 20:508 Ag 15 '52 140w

"Will appeal to boys of 12-16. Recommended." M. L. Turk

+ Library J 77:1524 S 15 '52 70w

"The boy who only cares for the up-to-date may not care for the tone, though I am sure this is a nourishing as well as an exciting book that will stay in mind. I am all for inculcating a sound dose of real literary experience between one atomic explosion and the next."

V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:680 D 8 '51 230w

"An absorbing tale. Boys of eleven up will find it worth while. It will set them to studying their modern maps of the Arctic, in comparison with those of the endpapers." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 21 '52
150w

"A stirring account of the heroism of men motivated by the love of adventure and discovery." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p31 S 7 '52 180w

SCHMIDT, DANA ADAMS. Anatomy of a satellite. (Atlantic Monthly press bk) 512p il $5 Little 943.7 Czechoslovakia—History. Communism—Czechoslovakia

52-10944

A former New York Times correspondent in Czechoslovakia tells the inside story of that country since 1945. "Mr. Schmidt traces the errors of Western diplomacy and Czech democracy, the Red perversion of courts and law, falsification of history, and the implacable, humorless drive to Sovietize the nation's mind and spirit through school, church, art, letters and propaganda." (N Y Times) Chronology. Index.

Kirkus 20:622 S 15 '52 200w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 77:1896 N 1 '52 100w

"While Mr. Schmidt left Prague in 1950, he had penetrated so well into the lives and thinking of real people that he was able to interpret the mass of published and unpublished information which became available up to the last two months and to fit the significant bits into a meaningful picture. If a Pulitzer Prize and a Nieman Fellowship can help do this, let's have many more of them."

P. E. Mosley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 7 '52
550w

"For this reviewer, Mr. Schmidt passes too briefly over the positive and formidable gains in Soviet power from Czechoslovakia's conquest. It is possible, also, not to share his trust that a genuine Titoist 'revolution' engineered by today's despots might contribute significantly to liberty—as anyone can confirm by visiting Yugoslavia tomorrow. But this does not diminish the high merit of his analysis or the importance of what we may learn from Czechoslovakia's fate." Hal Lehman

+ — N Y Times p3 N 16 '52 750w

SCHMIDT, HEINZ WERNER. With Rommel in the desert. 240p il maps $2.75 British bk. centre

940.542 Rommel, Erwin. World war, 1939-1945—Africa, North [52-6503]

"The story of Rommel's two years in Africa, told by a young officer, born in South Africa, who was his aide de camp for much of that time. There is no attempt to make Rommel either a superman or a broodingly inhibited foe of Hitler." N Y Times

Booklist 48:194 F 15 '52

"It is an inferior portrait to Brigadier Desmond Young's because it covers only a fragment of the man's career and because Schmidt plainly lacks the military background to judge Rommel as a general. Its merit lies in the absence of treacly adulation and in the eyewitness reporting of some desert engagements."

R. G. J.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Je 29 '51
240w

"'With Rommel in the Desert' is not a pretentious book, but a straight story of adventure. It is a swift, uninvolved and reasonably accurate narrative of the sand-worn war in which Rommel was unquestionably a prime figure." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p24 F 17 '52 600w

"This companion piece to Desmond Young's best-seller does not bring us much new information on the general but it is an interesting bit of reporting on the African desert campaigns from the German point of view. . . There is lots here for the student of recent history and it's a must for anyone who went through combat in that dry, fly-ridden nadir-zone of operations." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 23 '52
330w

Reviewed by Whitney Balliett

Sat R 35:55 Je 7 '52 190w

SCHMITT, GLADYS (MRS SIMON GOLD-FIELD). Confessors of the name. 568p $3.95 Dial press

52-5946

A psychological historical novel of Rome in the third century. The central figure is Favorinus Herennius, a nephew of the Emperor, whose search for a meaning to life leads him to Christianity and death.

Booklist 49:25; 90 S 15 '52; N 1 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 26 '52
350w

"Not an historical novel in the ordinary sense, but one that restores a sense of repeating patterns of history. Not easy reading, at times the interest flags, the text seems overlong. But in the main worth while."

+ — Kirkus 20:689 O 15 '52 300w

"Again Miss Schmitt has produced a large, crowded and colorful panorama of the far past and again, however costumed and staged, her central interest is the drama of personality. Very likely Thomas Mann is her master in this field. Certainly, though the novel is now our dominant form of story telling, such a writer as Miss Schmitt is an heir of the epic poets. But she has improved all the occasions. She has recreated fierce and unrestrained passions by the score and, being a novelist of most serious intentions, has quite rightly placed her well-balanced conjectures in the rank of facts."

W. T. Scott

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 26 '52
550w

"Miss Schmitt's theme—the finding of something new to believe in during a hollow age of skepticism—is well, if wordily, presented. Almost all of the book's characters are amazingly well drawn. The one fault is that the tone is too modern." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p30 O 26 '52 490w

"Miss Schmitt evidently enjoyed reading up on this period, for it seems, she has been unable to bring herself to omit a single word of her research from her story."

New Yorker 28:153 O 25 '52 50w

SCHMITT, GLADYS—Continued

"Make no mistake. 'Confessors of the Name' is one of the season's distinguished novels. If it falls short of anything it is only of the peak that Miss Schmitt herself is capable of reaching at times." Edmund Fuller
+ Sat R 35:16 N 15 '52 550w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Spring'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 470w

SCHNEIDER, HERBERT WALLACE. Religion in 20th century America. 244p il $4.25 Harvard univ. press

277.3 United States—Religion 52-8219

"In this contribution to Library of Congress Series in American Civilization Dr. Schneider departs from standard modes of research and knowledge, but still relies on them. Resulting study is somewhat reminiscent in character. Author's defense of his approach lies in conviction that the lapse of half a century has brought revolutionary changes in religious habits, ideas, and institutions. Dealing with religious experience itself—religious life, as subject-matter—author examines religion in its cultural context." Library J

Booklist 49:150 Ja 1 '53

"A challenging presentation which ought to be in every library." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 77:1896 N 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 175:558 D 13 '52 370w

"Regarded as a report to the general reader, the book is informative and stimulating, lively in approach and easy to enjoy. The author's style is unusually pleasing, scholarly without being dull." A. P. Davies
+ — N Y Times p24 N 23 '52 500w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Follow the sunset; pictures by Lucille Corcos. 43p $2.75 Doubleday

52-6370

"'Where does the sun go?' The Schneiders answer this frequent question by a picture book that combines a journey round the world with songs of many lands, all making a simple first science lesson. At the corners of the pages, the world is seen turning so that we watch the shadow slowly covering different areas. At the end the earth has turned all way round: 'from sunrise to sunset, one day has passed.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Standing way out front among this year's crop, in my opinion, is a really unusual book called Follow the Sunset. . . . As the story moves from page to page the whole world is shown at the close of day. It is a natural introduction to different peoples with their dress, their music, and their customs." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 190:101 D '52 70w

Booklist 49:52 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"Quiet paintings in jewel-like colors catch the spirit of the time of day. The lullabies of each land are written down in a simple melody line for singing to your own small children." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 2 '52 50w

"The text has a poetic quality, good for reading aloud; and simple melodies of lullabies are included. The teachers liked it for its easy science information but even more for the 'feeling of warm, friendly hominess' it carries. An unusual book that grows more appealing the longer one looks at it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:336 O '52 100w

Kirkus 20:547 S 1 '52 120w

"Recommended for reading aloud to 7-9-year-olds. Sensitive older girls will enjoy reading it themselves." Elizabeth Mitchell
+ Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 70w

"Such a following of the sunset is a charming idea. The artist completes it showing cities, country, oceans, workers, mothers, babies, all in the glow of the setting sun, or in twilight with the first stars. Her treatment has the breadth and romance to match the theme. It will be a delightful book to share with children of about five to eight." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt4 S 14 '52 100w

N Y Times pt2, p41 N 16 '52 60w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, NINA. Rocks, rivers and the changing earth; a first book about geology; with il. by Edwin Herron. 181p $3 Scott, W. R.

551 Geology—Juvenile literature 52-7269

"A truly readable first book in geology, divided as follows: 'The Land Torn Down,' 'The Sea Filled In,' 'The Land Built Up,' and 'Man and the Earth.' The vocabulary is simplified as much as possible for this subject matter; black-and-white line drawings give visual explanations and many very simple experiments suggest activity for the curious child. Index. Ages 12-14." Library J

Booklist 49:94 N 1 '52

Commonweal 57:176 N 21 '52 10w

"A Schneider science book is always a safe buy from the point of view of accuracy, clear presentation of a subject, and the happy faculty of relating it to the everyday lives of children." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:417 D '52 100w

"A sense of the far reaching implications of scientific findings makes this first geology book a definitely needed one for home and class."

+ Kirkus 20:454 Ag 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 77:2015 N 15 '52 40w

"A fine 'first' book for schools and for families to read together." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 120w

"It is refreshing to find these writers developing important geologic truths and furthering the understanding of scientific concepts in language that intellectually alert and eager young scientists can grasp. The Schneiders help the young reader identify his own part and place in the scheme of things and thus make the reading of this book a highly personal experience." B. D. Hurley

+ N Y Times pt2, p33 N 16 '52 140w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Your telephone, and how it works; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whitelsey House publication) 96p $2 McGraw 621.385 Telephone—Juvenile literature

52-7452

"When you hear 'Number, please?', do you know what is going on behind the scenes? This book describes all types of telephones—including ship-shore connections and walkie-talkies." (Bookmark) For grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 49:52 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:12 O '52 20w

"Continuing to do themselves proud as science writers for young people, the Schneiders make simple and fascinating the story of the telephone."

+ Kirkus 20:408 Jl 15 '52 170w

Reviewed by M. M. Smith

+ Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 30w

"Bright boys of ten can easily cope with it, and many in junior high will enjoy it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 16 '52 50w

"The text is interesting, the explanations logical and the step-by-step development makes difficult ideas appear easy. When the going gets tough Jeanne Bendick supplies a helpful illustration. A real contribution to the science shelf." B. O. Blough

+ N Y Times pt2, p33 N 16 '52 80w

SCHNEIDER, STEVEN. First book of fishing; pictures by Edwin Herron. 45p $1.75 Watts, F.

799.1 Fishing—Juvenile literature 52-10580

A book for beginning fishermen, aged six to ten. Takes up such things as rods, lines, castings, kinds of fish, river fishing, lake fishing, artificial bait, and a few pointers on how to cook fish. Index.

Booklist 48:345 Je 15 '52

"This valuable little book winds up, practically, with a lesson in cleaning fish and—most mouth watering—in cooking them." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 15 '52 110w

Horn Bk 28:247 Ag '52 80w

Kirkus 20:192 Mr 15 '52 50w

"Well-written, authentic guide." K. N. Dill
+ Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 11 '52 30w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky
N Y Times p18 Je 15 '52 60w

SCHNIEWIND, CARL OSCAR. Paul Cézanne sketch book. See Cézanne, P.

SCHOCK, EDSON IRWIN. How to build small boats. 137p il $4.95 Barnes, A.S.

623.82 Boat building 52-7409

"An extremely practical guide for the amateur boat builder, showing tools, equipment, materials and detailed drawings, so simple almost any handyman could build a boat in his own backyard, as many of these twelve rowboats, outboards and sailboats were. Glossary." Library J

Booklist 48:224 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Richard Philbrick
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 9 '52 80w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:442 Mr 1 '52 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:18 Mr '52

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 13 '52 90w

SCHOLLES, PERCY ALFRED. Concise Oxford dictionary of music; with 125 pictorial and musical illustrations and diagrams. 655p $6 Oxford

780.3 Music—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 52-2093

"To a certain extent this volume of some 10,000 entries is a reduction, in size and price, of the author's popular Oxford Companion to Music. However, as far as two features are concerned, it stands on its own: 1) the listing of active artists and others of current interest (e.g. Paul Schœffler, Peter Pears, the Maharaja of Mysore—but no Rudolf Bing), and 2) references to commonly known titles of music (e.g. 'Hear My Prayer,' 'October Symphony,' 'Winter Wind Etude'). To those fearful of a pronounced British slant, let me point out entries such as the following: Buckwheat Notation, Jam Session, Black Bottom, and Charivari." Library J

Booklist 48:381 Jl 15 '52

"With celerity and urbanity the doctor will set you right on any musical question which can be answered in, at most, a page or so. For those who need a reference work on music, but who don't need or can't afford one of the colossal ones, such as the Oxford Companion, this medium sized, medium priced book will be a godsend. And Doctor Scholes's name, combined with the Oxford imprint, are sufficient to guarantee substantial accuracy." Allan Sangster

+ Canadian Forum 32:47 My '52 100w

Kirkus 20:293 My 1 '52 100w

"Not as relaxed and chatty as is the Companion, yet delightful." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 77:1205 Jl '52 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 F 29 '52 140w

"There is certainly no general dictionary of music in one small volume that is as useful as this one. It may be recommended particularly to students and small libraries with limited budgets. The definitions of foreign terms are particularly helpful; even most of the German expressions with which Mahler's scores are peppered may be translated with the help of this dictionary." C. W. Fox

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:605 S '52 550w

"Dr. Scholes has allowed himself the luxury of making editorial comments which sometimes qualify the value of his dictionary as an accurate source. . . . Though serious errors in this dictionary are not numerous, until corrections are made, the book can not be consulted as a final authority."

New Repub 126:22 Je 30 '52 250w

"It is astonishing how much information is contained in this companion to the Companion. The tables of notation and nomenclature alone, with the relevant terms in four languages, are a model of clarity and concision. . . . The entries on all kinds of church music are particularly full and informative." M. C.

+ Spec 188:412 Mr 28 '52 240w

"Dr. Scholes's attitude to his reader is friendly, almost confidential, and he asks to be informed of errors which the user of the book may detect. . . . If for a moment Dr. Scholes stumbles he marches through the whole of musical scholarship with a gay confidence based on the best of foundations, accurate and well-verified knowledge."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Mr 14 '52 1150w

SCHOLLES, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Fourteen men; the story of the Antarctic expedition to Heard island. 314p il $4.50 Dutton

999 [919.9] Heard island. Australian national antarctic research expedition, 1947-1949 52-5288

Personal narrative of an Australian newspaperman's experiences when he accompanied an expedition of scientists and engineers to a remote island in the Antarctic to establish weather stations.

Booklist 48:212 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 30w

Reviewed by Roy Gibbons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 9 '52 230w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:127 Ap '52 50w

"Good reading for the armchair scientist-explorer. Good documentary evidence for the man who's actually done it, though not stimulating enough to create any real new interest." + Kirkus 19:697 D 1 '51 180w

"Although written in somewhat amateurish style, the book as a whole is of value in that it discloses heroic qualities latent in simple men." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:142 Ja 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by W. R. Flitt

Manchester Guardian p4 S 18 '51 300w

Reviewed by E. P. Hanson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Jl 13 '52 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 13 '52 250w

"Mr. Scholes's narrative, though it provides a good picture of men living under almost unbearable weather conditions, suffers from grave faults. He rarely mentions either dates or points of the compass, and in spite of some attempts at description fails to give the reader a developed picture of the amazingly spectacular topography of Heard Island. There is a sketch-map in the book but it contains no indication of points of the compass, no scale of distance, and only about one out of every ten of the place names which Mr. Scholes mentions. It is a pity that his adventure should suffer from his inability to describe it."

SCHOLES, W. A.—Continued
Raymond Holden

Sat R 35:18 Je 28 '52 380w

"Mr. Scholes's racy and unpretentious account of this very considerable adventure shows that even in this latitude, far from the extremes of the Antarctic night, and with the radio working well, men have to call on their reserves of fortitude and ingenuity in order to survive their isolation with friendship and zest intact. It also reminds us that we have no right to expect that every Polar expedition should be equipped with a practised annalist. Mr. Scholes breaks some elementary rules in making a book of this kind."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 28 '51
270w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. Deep short.
249p $2.50 Morrow

52-8042

Story of Pete Mason, son of a millionaire, who prefers baseball to wealth. He joins a minor league club and learns more about team play than he ever supposed existed. For older boys.

Booklist 49:17 S 1 '52

"Extremely humorous baseball story."

+ Bookmark 12:14 O '52 10w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 16 '52
60w

Kirkus 20:376 J1 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Scholz provides an interesting and informative description of how the minor leagues operate. I liked it." I. H. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26
'52 40w

"Mr. Scholz, a former Springfield resident, is an excellent sports writer and his latest teen-ager book is full of action as well as diamond lore."

+ Springfield's Republican p8D S 7 '52 50w

SCHOONOVER, LAWRENCE. Quick brown fox. 234p $3 Macmillan

52-12146

"Against the background of a New York advertising agency [the author] explores and exposes the conflict and the cunning inherent in the typing exercise, 'The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.' He tells the story of George Russell, art director of the Lanolux Shampoo account of Clement, Allister, Bliss and Boyd, known in the trade as CAAB, and the calculated efforts of Bill Gray, his assistant to undermine and destroy him." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

— Kirkus 20:383 J1 1 '52 210w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Raleigh

New Repub 127:23 S 15 '52 300w

"The strange and hectic world of an advertising agency, with its tensions, its intra and extramural competition, its crises in capturing or losing an account, its hokum and its stuffed shirts, come alive in Mr. Schoonover's pages. . . . There is more than an amusing story, quick moving and dramatically told, in Mr. Schoonover's novel. A graduate, cum laude, of the school of advertising, he possesses the polished, economic phrase to point up and give substance to his satiric portraits." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 14 '52
350w

"For all its distinction, 'The Quick Brown Fox' is not a strong novel. Too mechanical in its plot structure. Too great a breach between Russ, the ferocious agency man, and Russ, the faithful husband and community worker. But most readers, in and out of the agency business, will be delighted by this portrayal of an adman in harness, attending a cocktail party, buying a mink coat, fighting through crisis after crisis." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p28 S 14 '52 500w

"Since Mr. Schoonover's characters are not individuals but types, their typical fates match the cliché names he has given them. . . . Life really isn't like that, but neither is it like the books written about the advertising business." Caroline Burke

— Sat R 35:21 O 18 '52 350w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

+ Springfield's Republican p16C S 14 '52
280w

SCHOONOVER, SHELLEY E. American woods. 250p il col pl $7.50 Watling & Co, 406 Wilshire Blvd, Santa Monica, Calif.

634.93 Wood. Trees—U.S. 51-12539

"[A study of] 'the more interesting and outstanding characteristics of a selected list of American trees . . . with particular emphasis on the use of wood in the home workshop.' Photographs, some in natural color. Selected references, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:58 D '51 30w

"A delightful book for amateur woodworkers and anyone else interested in cabinet woods."

R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1939 N 15 '51 100w

SCHOOR, GENE. Jim Thorpe story; America's greatest athlete; [prepared] with Henry Gilfond. 186p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Thorpe, James Francis—Juvenile literature 51-12790

"Jim Thorpe, part Irish, part French, and part Indian, is usually regarded as the greatest athlete ever produced in the United States. He was a star at track, baseball, and football. . . . Schoor recounts the story of Jim Thorpe, his rise to athletic glory and sudden descent after it was 'discovered' that he had played summer league baseball for a small sum of money and thus was not eligible for all the Olympic trophies he won, and his reemergence into the limelight last year as the greatest football player and greatest athlete of the first half of the 20th century on the basis of an Associated Press poll of sportswriters and broadcasters." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

"Schoor has re-created the Age of Thorpe with skill, and whether you were a contemporary of the great Indian in his prime or have heard of him only by repute, you should get a bang out of reading of his deeds." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 11 '51
150w

Kirkus 19:490 S 1 '51 130w

"There will be great interest in this biography among young people not only because of Thorpe's amazing athletic achievements and his unusual story, but also because of the recent movie about him. For these reasons the book is recommended in spite of the rather sugar-coated, labored writing style." Lillian Morrison

Library J 77:70 Ja 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 17 '52
50w

"Aside from occasional lapses into imagined soliloquies by Pop Warner and Thorpe, the authors tell a factual, and at times exciting, story. Thorpe emerges clearly as a unique athlete; the subtler aspects of his personality have yet to be explored." N. A.

N Y Times p28 Ja 27 '52 200w

SCHOOR, GENE, and GILFOND, HENRY. Red Grange; football's greatest halfback. 186p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Grange, Harold Edward—Juvenile literature 52-12749

A short biography of Red Grange written for ages 12 to 16.

Booklist 49:159 Ja 1 '53

"Schoor writes like a circus barker; the book is full of excited superlatives and enthusiastic repetition, but the style will probably not bother most boys interested in football personalities. Recommended for its popular appeal to boys 12-16." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 50w

"There is a helmetful and more of memorable gridiron events in this biography; the weakness for many will be the author's failure to put life into the Red Grange offer the football field—a man few really knew." N. A.

+ N Y Times pt2, p26 N 16 '52 160w

SCHOOR, GENE, and GILFOND, HENRY.

Story of Ty Cobb, baseball's greatest player. 181p il $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Cobb, Tyrus Raymond—Juvenile literature 52-8230

Biography of Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, who has been called "baseball's greatest player." The author is a newspaper man who has written several books, been an athletic coach, and is well-known on radio and TV shows. Index.

Booklist 48:302 My 15 '52

Reviewed by J. C. Worley

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15

'52 50w

Kirkus 20:229 Ap 1 '52 120w

"Schoor surely has the knack of recreating the incidents in the life of his famous subject with all the freshness and vividness, as though he had just observed them. Excellent reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:796 My 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 25

'52 20w

"The story, told with a minimum of hubbub, is that of an undeniably great ballplayer. Since it is for younger readers, it is too bad the facts didn't permit it also to be the story of a great sportsman." Nathan Aleskovsky

N Y Times p32 Ap 6 '52 230w

"This is an excellent biography of a great American sportsman."

+ Sat R 35:59 My 10 '52 40w

SCHRODINGER, ERWIN. Science and humanism; physics in our time. 68p $1.75 Cambridge

530.1 Physics—Philosophy

"Four lectures delivered at University College, Dublin, under the auspices of the Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies, in 1950. . . The author is concerned partly to answer such philosopher-scientists as Bohr and Heisenberg, whose view of the fashionable 'uncertainty principle' he wishes to controvert, and partly to make out a case for a less rigid specialism among scientific research workers and their pupils. To the general reader, indeed, it will be the early part of the book which seems most important, for here Professor Schrödinger is arguing for a wider vision among scientists, for a recognition that concentration, not merely on one science but on one narrow aspect of that science, is bad for science and for humanity as a whole." Times [London] Lit Sup

"In so far as the aim of Professor Schrödinger's lectures was to provide an acquaintance with views of contemporary physicists as they contribute to the whole of human knowledge and not to provide a history of these views, one can hardly say that shortcomings in the little history that is incidentally offered detract much from the merits of the book. To have presented so clearly in so little space the intricacies of the continuum and the fundamental role which this notion plays in our efforts to comprehend the nature of matter is certainly an important contribution toward wider understanding of present-day science and its place in the humanistic outlook." Manley Thompson

+ Ethics 63:73 O '52 370w

"Despite the brevity and occasionally the cryptic quality of Schrödinger's remarks, his little book is enormously stimulating and eminently worth reading." Ernest Nagel

+ J Philos 49:539 J1 31 '52 480w

"From these brief pages there speaks a master." Michael Polanyi

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52 350w

"This is a deceptively simple little book about the philosophical and ethical implications of modern physics, written in such a style that we regret it is so short. But perhaps it is better this way, for the reader may carry it about with him and mull it over very carefully." J. W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '52 110w

Sat R 35:18 J1 5 '52 70w

"Professor Schrödinger's new book belongs to that almost unclassifiable group stretching from the borders of science to the borders of philosophy and even of theology; it is short and its argument so condensed and concentrated that it has to be read with the utmost care."

Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Mr 28 '52 600w

Reviewed by R. S. Cohen

Yale R n s 42:133 autumn '52 700w

SCHUHMAN, REINHARDT. Metallurgical engineering; 2v v. 1, Engineering principles. 390p il $7.50 Addison-Wesley

669 Metallurgy (52-7665)

"A new textbook in which the traditional approach to the teaching of extractive metallurgy has been discarded in favor of teaching the basic principles and unit processes. The importance of physical chemistry is demonstrated, and analytical and quantitative solutions of engineering problems are emphasized. In this first volume, basic principles common to the unit processes of extractive metallurgy, together with discussion of metallurgical fuels and refractory materials, are covered. The second volume, which will complete the work, will be devoted to the unit processes themselves. The book is based on experience in teaching at Massachusetts Institute of Technology where the author is Associate Professor of Metallurgy." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Schuhmann's book will be welcomed by those who are attempting to teach or learn process metallurgy by the unit process approach. While the principles are inherently the same as are found in standard texts on chemical engineering, the treatment and applications are based in metallurgical engineering practice. The coverage is broad enough that the book should be valuable as a reference for the practicing engineer as well as the student. . . The book has a few shortcomings as a text because of its breadth of coverage, for the basic fundamentals are not always clearly separated and drilled in before elaboration to more complex engineering situations." W. O. Philbrook

+ Chem & Eng N 30:5302 D 15 '52 230w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:2009 N 15 '52 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:75 S '52

SCHUMAN, FREDERICK LEWIS. Commonwealth of man; an inquiry into power politics and world government. 494p $5 Knopf

341.1 International relations. World politics 52-6124

"Professor Schuman devotes his attention to the yearnings of man, during recorded history, for world unity, and he finds slight signs that world federation is possible. He takes up one by one the possible alternative methods of gaining peace for the world. Schuman finds it historically necessary to discard the possibility of winning peace in our time by the sword—as did Rome—because of technological advance." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 49:135 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53 20w

Kirkus 20:535 Ag 15 '52 250w

SCHUMAN, F. L.—Continued

"A few of his remarks on the new Caesarian and the American century will not please some conservative readers who may not relish his observations on peace by treason either. Schuman is at his best, when examining the role of the United Nations and the outlook for world government. . . . Recommended for college and public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
 + — Library J 77:1808 O 15 '52 160w

"Schuman's book is rich and vital. To excess: as the French say, I complain that the bride is too fair. Its five hundred pages are packed with erudition à la Spengler, only, I trust, of much better quality. . . . I cannot believe it was indispensable to give us, for good measure, compendious treatises on anthropology and psychoanalysis." Albert Guerard
 + — Nation 175:525 D 6 '52 550w

"Professor Schuman was peculiarly fitted for inventory by an extraordinary eye for the relevant, whether in a scholarly treatise or a newspaper and by a stiff knee when confronted with the idols of the tribe. This has made him one of the foremost reporter-scholars of our time. His latest book is highly readable, but his documentation is brilliant." Stringfellow Barr
 + New Repub 127:20 D 15 '52 490w

"Scholarly specialists who recognize the tremendous social sermon in H. G. Wells' 'Outline of History' find flaws of omission and commission in the details of his magnificent chapters. A close scrutiny of Mr. Schuman's far-flung tractate may reveal the same occasional weaknesses, but such details will probably disturb only specialists." S. F. Bemis
 N Y Times p14 D 28 '52 470w

"To those who are familiar with Professor Schuman's 'Soviet Politics,' this book probably will not come as a surprise. For in his latest work Schuman displays the same facility for criticism of world politics coupled with a healthy dose of optimism about the course he finds most promising." J. H.
 + San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 23 '52 350w

SCHUYLER, ROBERT LIVINGSTON, and AUSUBEL, HERMAN, eds. Making of English history. 686p $5.60 Dryden

942 Great Britain—History 52-8935

"The seventy essays which comprise this volume are intended as supplementary reading of literary and historical value for the student. Covering the whole of English history from Pre-Norman times to the present, the essays touch upon all phases of English life through the centuries, often considering the subject from a new and stimulating viewpoint. Each essay is preceded by a brief editorial note." Current Hist

Reviewed by J. E. Conacher

Canadian Hist R 33:184 Je '52 130w

Current Hist 22:377 Je '52 60w

"Many of the essays are English, but there are also many from American sources which will be unfamiliar here and are decidedly worth having in this accessible form. Almost every important name in modern historical writing, political and economic, is represented, and the essays come down as late as England under the Labour Government."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 6 '52 90w

SCHWARTZ, BENJAMIN ISADORE. Chinese communism and the rise of Mao. 258p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

951.04 Mao, Tsé-tung. Communism—China. China—History 51-12067

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Within the framework of his important line of investigation, Dr. Schwartz has explored a great many previously unused Chinese sources. He also missed some valuable items. Since the documentary material on communism in China is still disorganized, fragmentary, and frequently suspect, one wishes he had provided more critical comment upon the documents he discovered in various American libraries. On one question—the Comintern's approval of the Northern Expedition which officially began early in July, 1926—Schwartz may have been led astray." C. M. Wilbur

+ — Am Hist R 57:679 Ap '52 800w

"This is a much needed book. Numerous writers have described their personal experiences in Chinese Communist territories, but until recently, few attempts had been made to analyze the basic documentary evidence which Bolshevik leaders—Russian and Chinese—have themselves created. In accomplishing this task for the approximate period 1918-1934, Mr. Schwartz has demonstrated how the painstaking scholar can reconstruct from Communist records an objective history of a Communist movement and its rise to power." R. C. North

+ Ann Am Acad 280:238 Mr '52 440w

Reviewed by H. C. Hinton

Commonweal 55:330 Ja 4 '52 480w

Foreign Affairs 30:508 Ap '52 40w

"Let me pay Schwartz what I think is a real compliment: his book is as valuable to those who disagree with him as to those who agree with him. There are few enough books of this kind being written today." P. M. Sweezy

+ J Pol Econ 60:181 Ap '52 650w

Reviewed by Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p4 My 13 '52 480w

"Mr. Schwartz's account is illuminating and Far East scholars are in his debt. For the first time there is an account of the rise of Chinese communism with background and substance." Nathaniel Peffer

+ Pol Sci Q 67:456 S '52 600w

"This book is one of the first products of the new American scholarship on China, and it would be difficult to overstate the difference in quality between Dr. Schwartz's scholarly effort and even the best of popular accounts of Chinese communism. The author has made extensive and critical use of the Chinese, Japanese, and Russian sources, and has brought to bear on them a sophisticated understanding both of world communism and of Chinese history. The result is a sound, thoughtful, and well-written analysis, valuable to the general reader as well as the specialist."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:389 D '51 250w

Reviewed by H. A. Steiner

Yale R n s 41:311 winter '52 500w

SCHWARTZ, JULIUS. It's fun to know why; experiments with things around us; il. by Edwin Herron. (Whittlesey House publication) 125p $2.25 McGraw

500 Science—Juvenile literature 51-13609

A New York City science teacher presents a series of easy-to-do experiments, illustrating properties and uses of iron, coal, salt, bread, wood, soap, paper, etc. For grades 4 to 7.

Booklist 48:304 My 15 '52

Reviewed by R. C. Cowen

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52 40w

"In interest this covers a wide age range and offers many hours of fun and profit. Younger children will need some help in using it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:185 Je '52 80w

"There isn't a rocket ship or uranium atom in the entire book, yet we'll wager that youngsters of nine will find it as absorbing as any piece of science fiction and lots more informative."

+ Kirkus 20:128 F 15 '52 120w

"Recommended for all libraries but particularly for schools." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:800 My 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 8 '52 70w

Reviewed by B. D. Hurley

N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '52 60w

SCHWARZ, SOLOMON M. Labor in the Soviet union. 364p $6 Praeger

331 Labor and laboring classes—Russia 52-7491

"Report on conditions of the workers in Russia since 1928. Labor market, wages and living standards, hours and forms of social benefits are discussed in terms of the claims of the U.S.S.R. and in terms of actual statistical and other first hand data. Where inevitable gaps occur, the author makes this clear. . . Students of this and related questions will also find much use for the copious references and the chronological index." Library J

"A thorough, convincing analysis." + Kirkus 20:580 S 1 '52 180w

"A mass of information studied and sifted with great discernment and objectivity." D. K. Oke

+ Library J 77:2005 N 15 '52 100w

"It is remarkable not merely because it is the work of a single scholar, but no less because it covers a vast field in little compass, is documented exclusively from Soviet sources, and really succeeds in piercing the triple wall of secrecy, double-talk and propaganda." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 26 '52 400w

"Certainly for the reader who desires the light of objective scholarship cast on one of the major facets of Soviet life, acquaintance with this volume is indispensable." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p26 N 30 '52 450w

"While respecting the author's understandable desire to present only the facts and the integrity of their presentation, some political evaluation of them might have been in order. It might have helped to bring more life into a mass of data, which is not easy to digest for the untrained observer. Nevertheless, out of the profusion of books that has been written about the Soviet Union Mr. Schwarz's will remain for years to come a source of authoritative information concerning a little known—but most significant—aspect of Soviet life." S. M. Levitas

+ — Sat R 35:21 N 29 '52 800w

SCHWARZENBERGER, GEORG. Power politics: a study of international society. 2d rev ed 898p $12.75 Praeger

341 International relations [51-13379]

"This impressive tome, published under the auspices of the London Institute of World Affairs, is greatly revised and improved second edition of a work which ten years ago was rather early attempt to interpret international relations in terms of power politics. Author, now Vice-Dean of Faculty of Laws at University College, London, and Director of Studies at London Institute of World Affairs, has written extensively on international law. . . One third of the volume is devoted to elements of power politics in disguise, with special attention given to the United Nations." Library J

"The book is so lucidly and admirably written and is so sensibly argued that one is reluctantly compelled to find it fundamentally unsatisfactory. The central theme, the subordination of international organization and law to international politics, is depicted most accurately. However, this study displays serious inadequacies in analyzing the concept of power and its relation to foreign policy." Fred Greene

+ — Am Pol Sci R 46:566 Je '52 1200w

"This long and challenging essay deserves wide reading. Unhappily, since academicians on fixed incomes are hard pressed by the 'war-for-peace' inflation, Power Politics at $12.75 is unlikely to be widely bought by professors or generally adopted for class use. . . Dr. Schwarzenberger has analyzed many aspects of this process with acumen and insight. His work will at least be accessible in good libraries. May it find many readers!" F. L. Schuman

+ Ann Am Acad 280:161 Mr '52 650w

"Recommended for public and college libraries which stress international affairs." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:1562 O 1 '51 150w

"There is too much crust for the layman and not enough meat for the student. As the title indicates, Dr. Schwarzenberger inclines to think that for all the many changes in form there has been little change in the temper and habits of relations between States. But while he is critical of the United Nations his own prescriptions show that he has not given up hope that it is in our power to bring about a united world."

Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '51 180w

"An exceedingly valuable, objective survey and study of the world in which great and little nations are now unhappily embroiled." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R 35:24 Mr 8 '52 350w

"In the first edition, [the author] was predominantly concerned to analyse and enlighten; here, one feels, he is merely seeking to inform. Instead of a book, the reader is offered an encyclopaedia in the making, and is tempted to inquire whether alphabetical order might not have been a more convenient arrangement. Similar doubts are raised by a bibliography, or set of bibliographies, extending to nearly 60 pages. This is not a complete catalogue of all works in English published during the last 20 years on international politics—such an enterprise, even if it served any purpose, would be scarcely practicable. But it is far too long to serve as a reading list for any general student of the subject, and far too general and unselective to help the specialist."

Times [London] Lit Sup p623 O 5 '51 850w

SCHWEBEL, STEPHEN MYRON. Secretary-general of the United Nations, his political powers and practice. 299p $4.75 Harvard univ. press

341.137 United Nations (organization). Secretary general 52-5042

"This volume opens with a discussion of the powers of the Secretary-General. Comparing and contrasting them with those of the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, author demonstrates the difficulties Mr. Lie has faced in carrying out his duties. While his powers are outlined in the rules of the organization, in many instances implementation has had to be a personal affair. Part II of this study shows how the present Secretary-General has through force and purposefulness contributed to such success as the United Nations has achieved to date. Part III discusses the future of the Secretary-Generalship, and an appendix includes an extensive bibliography." (Library J) Index.

"The volume is indispensable for students of international organization and for any citizen concerned with the growth of his own knowledge of the UN and the growth of enlightened world opinion." A. G. Davidson

+ Churchman 166:15 Je '52 110w

Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 110w

Foreign Affairs 30:670 Jl '52 30w

"Mr. Schwabel's book is well-written and contains a wealth of interesting details. His criticisms seem to have been tempered by his semi-official position and by the overwhelming kindness and frankness encountered by him in the course of his investigation of the Secretariat's work. But he is able to put a few shadows on his bright picture through an apt selection of quotations from and interviews with officials and former officials of other international organizations, past and present, and with members of delegations to the United Nations. Though a sympathetic portrait of Mr. Lie emerges from the pages of this book, the author does not hide the fact that not everything is perfect." L. B. Sohn

+ Harvard Law R 65:1271 My '52 650w

"This is a straightforward, factual account of one of the most important political offices in the world today and is essential for all libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 77:594 Ap 1 '52 150w

SCHWEBEL, S. M.—Continued

"This is a clearly-written and well documented study of a branch of current history which will be examined with increasing frequency during the next years." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 13 '52 190w

"Although readable, the book is so full of complicated facts that it is likely to appeal chiefly to teachers and to experts. The author has read exhaustively and has interviewed a large number of important persons. Occasionally his discussions have the abstracted quality of an academic exercise based on documents, but usually his generalizations and judgments are realistic and sound."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:172 Je '52 200w

SCITOVSKY, TIBOR, and others. Mobilizing resources for war; the economic alternatives. 284p $4.50 McGraw

355.26 Industrial mobilization (for war)
51-6985

"A study aiming at the formulation of an economic program for mobilization. The authors state first the economic objectives which they believe must guide any economic policy designed to alleviate the strains on the national economy. They then present a critical appraisal of some of the methods used or proposed in the past which they reject. Finally, their program—to remove excess of demand by direct limitations on spending, and then to rely on the price-income mechanism to allocate resources and distribute output." Library J

"This is an interesting and stimulating study, but it has an all-or-nothing quality about it, and a rather light-hearted way of proposing a string of extreme measures, which suggests that a good deal of further thought is needed before it is adopted as a plan of action." R. A. Musgrave

+ Am Econ R 42:457 Je '52 750w
Foreign Affairs 30:670 Jl '52 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1934 N 15 '51 80w
Sat R 35:42 Ja 19 '52 90w

"This book is at least a bold and stimulating venture in academic thinking, and at most it could have far-reaching effects on public management of our most urgent economic problem. Well organized and easily intelligible, the work should reach and hold a wide audience."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:373 D '51 200w

SCOTT, ANDREW MACKAY. Anatomy of communism. 197p $3 Philosophical lib.

335.4 Communism 52-6021

"Dr. Scott's volume is a perceptive analysis of Marxian ideology and its application to contemporary communism. Part I reviews Marx's theories with extensive illustrations from his major writings while in Part II there is a discussion of the interpretation, distortion and application of these theories by Lenin and Stalin." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 46:602 Je '52 40w

"On the whole, the reading public should be grateful to the author for this clear and thoughtful contribution to the real nature of the contemporary communist movement." H. W. Laidler

+ Ann Am Acad 281:247 My '52 480w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 69:280 Mr 5 '52 750w

"For its penetrating examination of the fallacies and discrepancies of communism, this book should be of value to every student of world affairs."

+ Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 90w

"Scott's general treatment of the anatomy of communism offers very little that has not been said before, but it has the virtue of seeing communism as possessing an anatomy, that is, as a whole structure of theory and application whose error is systematic and whose distortion is an inherent product. Consequently, though the analysis is not profound, it is clearly directed, earnest, and possessed of a fine sense of relevance." William Sacksteder

+ Ethics 63:75 O '52 270w
Foreign Affairs 31:152 O '52 20w

SCOTT, DUSTIN C., pseud. See Chute, V.

SCOTT, JOHN ANTHONY. Republican ideas and the liberal tradition in France, 1870-1914. 209p $3 Columbia univ. press

320.944 France—Politics and government
52-26

"Mr. Scott presents a study of the development of political theory as produced by the republican movement in France between the Franco-Prussian and First World Wars. He traces its roots back to the French Revolution, to Girondism and Jacobinism, as opposed to the Sansculotte republican ideology which Mr. Scott associates with the closing years of the Third Republic. It is a study of the philosophy of democracy, rather than of the political institutions of the period covered." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 46:260 Mr '52 20w

"This volume of the Columbia Studies in History, Economics, and Public Law is well organized, well written, and thought provoking." J. E. Gillespie

+ Ann Am Acad 281:253 My '52 900w
Current Hist 22:378 Je '52 80w

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 62:299 Jl '52 700w

"This lucid and penetrating monograph will be welcomed by all serious students of modern political thought and particularly by those concerned with the evolution of the Third French Republic." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R 35:32 Ag 16 '52 270w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:289 S '52 170w

SCOTT, JOHN DICK. Way to glory; or, The last night of the holidays. 291p $3 Knopf 51-11973

"This is a love story with a good plot and real people. . . . Ansell goes to Paris on a business trip; Tilly, his wife remains at home. Naturally Ansell picks up Sara and Lester and Nicky in Paris and almost melodrama follows. But not quite! That is the point." Library J

"Mr. Scott has a talent for making his people interesting; his touch is light and sure; and he consistently registers an intelligent comment on human behavior in the contemporary world. His novel meets two important tests; it has the stamp of reality and it establishes a firm hold on the reader."

+ Atlantic 190:87 Ag '52 200w
Kirkus 20:134 F 15 '52 200w

"Earnest and sometimes gay story. Very good reading for men and women." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 77:1194 Jl '52 90w

"This book is so well written that one wants to know why one is unlikely to want to read it a second time. A reason is that where infidelity is concerned every Ansell has to be his own sophist all over again: this particular Ansell's story has no universal reference, though the Saint-Evremond quotation on the fly-leaf suggests that we are going to be let into an important secret." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 16 '52 350w

"There is a quiet music in Mr. Scott's book, and those who don't demand cymbals and brasses will be able to hear it." Gerald Sykes
+ Nation 175:361 O 18 '52 480w

"Mr. Scott is a novelist's novelist. Like Mrs. Battle he is all for 'the rigour of the game.' His book contains no waste matter, there are no ends left lying about. I suspect that even the overtones were objectively envisaged, and were not, as with most novelists, the result of an almost unconscious process that grew up in the texture of the writing. Such gifts of precision, authenticity and sense of purpose are what the English novel at present chiefly lacks. For above all, Mr. Scott is a contemporary writer." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:593 My 17 '52 600w

Reviewed by James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 20 '52 370w

"With Paris as a background the story provides generously for the reader's vicarious emotion. When the scene shifts to England, the book seems built more for intellectual appreciation; an oblique study of English mores at bay; a meticulous X-ray of the old-school-tie mentality. Taken either way, it is brilliant entertainment." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p4 J1 20 '52 350w

New Yorker 28:75 Ag 9 '52 110w

"It may be that Mr. Scott is a novelist's novelist; men who write with his firm, disciplined brilliance often are most enjoyed by other writers, who know how and where to admire the technical niceties. But he will also entertain many a reader who simply likes a piece of well-written fiction polished to a pleasantly high gloss and requiring of its reader only a sensible appreciation of the quality of that gloss and a willingness to tip one's hat in acknowledgment of it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 29 '52 700w

"As a mildly exciting pot-boiler, no better or worse than the brilliant, tortured, questing young men are turning out by the thousands a year in England and America, this fills the entertainment bill. But the theme—oh, well, one doesn't criticize the theme in a work of art (?), does one?" C. V. Little

— + Sat R 35:17 Ag 2 '52 500w

"A remarkably good piece of work in its cultivated middle-class kind." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 188:790 Je 13 '52 270w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 23 '52 450w

SCOTT, NATALIE ANDERSON. Romance. 314p $3 Dutton

51-14033

"Against a background of the blue Mediterranean and the exotic beauty of the gardens and lovely buildings, is presented a moving story of love between intelligent, mature persons." Springf'd Republican

"A queer, unpleasant, haunted book, with an undercurrent of cynicism. Mrs. Scott's peculiarly archaic style, with its massed adjectives and its repeat pattern of characterization, in the homeric tradition, becomes more than a trifle wearisome."

— Kirkus 19:500 S 1 '51 190w

"The actual plot is so thinned out that its impact is lost. Some of the minor figures are deftly done, but the hero—he could feel his powerful lungs expanding to receive the joy-giving air—reminds one of bellows."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 13 '52 230w

"Miss Scott, who scored a real success with 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy' a few years back, is completely out of her element here. Her cast and her background are as gaudy as a travel-poster—and quite as unreal." Harrison Kinney

— N Y Times p27 Ja 13 '52 180w

"Told with a sensitivity and grasp of the intricacies of human relationships." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52 40w

SCOTT, PETER MARKHAM. Wild geese and Eskimos; a journal of the Perry River expedition of 1949; photographs by Paul Queneau. 254p 11 maps $5 Scribner

598.2 Geese. Eskimos. Perry River expedition, 1949 52-8141

Account of an expedition to the Perry River in Arctic Canada, made in 1949 with the primary purpose of studying the wild geese which make this region their breeding place. Index.

Booklist 48:261 Ap 15 '52

"A careful observer, many of Scott's passages capture the wonder and color of the Arctic. His drawings and the photographs are very good."

+ Kirkus 20:173 Mr 1 '52 100w

"Scott is keen writer as well as artist, and this record is of interest as Arctic exploration as well as natural history." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:442 Mr 1 '52 30w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 4 '52 310w

"Informal, reflective, Mr. Scott's entries give a vivid and intimate daily account of this northern trip. Many excellent photographs and drawings supplement the sensitive descriptions. Arm-chair travelers will derive quite as much satisfaction from this journal as ornithologists, who are promised a full scientific report in the near future." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '52 460w

Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 28 '51 500w

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Benjie and his family; pictures by Beth Krush. [60p] il $2 Harcourt 52-6907

Benjie was an outsize dog who adopted the Smith family. At first the Smiths were not keen on being adopted by such a large dog, but after they got used to him they couldn't part with Benjie. Ages 6 to 10.

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

"There are no happier, funnier dogs anywhere than those in Sally Scott's stories." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:405 D '52 80w

Kirkus 20:657 O 1 '52 120w

"Recommended." G. M. Shakin

+ Library J 77:1906 N 1 '52 70w

"Characteristically, the author arrives at the desired solution in an unexpected fashion. Beth Krush makes Benjie look just as funny and engaging as he sounds." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p40 O 5 '52 100w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 40w

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Binky's fire; pictures by Beth Krush. [51p] $1.75 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-6459

Story of Binky, just a puppy, who because he wasn't the good dog he intended to be, became a hero instead.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 70w

Booklist 48:237 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:161 Ap '52 40w

+ Horn Bk 28:102 Ap '52 70w

Kirkus 20:68 F 1 '52 110w

"Here is another lively, short, easy-reading, 'might-be-true' story for second or third graders, with many black and white pictures, that will be popular as practice reading." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 23 '52 90w

"A more expressive beaglish pup is hard to imagine. Beth Krush has drawn him as comically true as Mrs. Scott presents him. The fire, through a puppy's eyes, won't terrorize the kiddies either." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p24 F 24 '52 180w

"The drawings of Binky are very amusing. They are brush drawings that make an awkward puppy endearing."

+ Sat R 35:46 Mr 22 '52 100w

+ Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 30w

SCUDDER, KENYON JUDSON. Prisoners are people. 286p $3 Doubleday

365.3 California. Institution for men, Chino.
Crime and criminals 52-5128

"Mr. Scudder has been Warden of the California Institution for Men at Chino since it was opened in 1941. The Institution has no inner wall or gun towers. The men wear ordinary clothes, have many privileges, live in rooms instead of cells, and produce all the food consumed on the place. The experiment has been so successful that other penal institutions have adopted many of Chino's procedures and innovations." Library J

"Told simply and without flourish, the story of Chino is nevertheless an engrossing one. Many of the ideas in contemporary correctional treatment often considered as unrealistic or even visionary have been translated by Mr. Scudder into sound administrative practice. This is the book's real contribution, and while it undoubtedly has a general reader appeal, it should be read by every student of penology and prison administrator." J. V. Bennett

+ Ann Am Acad 284:198 N '52 480w

Booklist 48:242 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 10 '52 430w

Kirkus 19:672 N 15 '51 180w

"Whoever wrote the book has done so in simple and vivid style. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:47 Ja 1 '52 140w

"A useful volume for everyone interested in the rehabilitation of the criminal."

+ Nation 174:161 F 16 '52 70w

"The general reader should enjoy this book. Specialists cannot afford to overlook it although they may be skeptical about some portions of it." Frank O'Leary

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 27 '52 900w

Reviewed by Frank Tannenbaum

N Y Times p5 Ja 27 '52 700w

"An engrossing, informally written book, which doesn't minimize the difficulties of putting this sort of program into effect but at the same time offers a very telling commentary on the wastefulness and futility of the old lock-'em-up-and-let-'em-stew school of thought."

+ New Yorker 28:93 Mr 1 '52 200w

"Underplayed rather than overstated, this is no emotional argument, but a social history buttressed by the facts, and therefore worth serious attention aside from being thoroughly good reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 25 '52 800w

"The meticulous advocate of scientific method will, of course, question the objectivity of a book written by the man who is responsible for the affairs of the Institution during the eleven years of the experiment. If the book should not be considered as a final word of science on this development in penology, it is nevertheless a unique document and source material for the study of this and similar experiments."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:310 S '52 190w

SEAGER, DONALD W. Marionettes. (How to do it ser) 79p 1l $5 Studio

791.5 Marionettes

52-7387

"Lively interest in marionettes is well served by this book which was given impetus by the part played by puppets-on-strings at the recent most exciting Edinburgh Festival. Author evokes the 'element of magic which puppets and marionettes bring...' Careful instruction on dangling and dancing figures whether the simplest of rolled paper or the most complicated taped, carved, painted and costumed creations." Library J

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:1510 S 15 '52 50w

"This handsome big English book is one of the most intelligent and inspiring of any recent one in the field. The suggestions and the pictures alone are worth the high price, and this in spite of the fact that the printing is not too good." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 10 '52

220w

School Arts 52:8a O '52 110w

SEAGLE, WILLIAM. Law, the science of inefficiency. 177p $3.50 Macmillan

340 Justice, Administration of 52-1866

"Attorney, author of Men of Law, from Hammurabi to Holmes [Book Review Digest 1947, 1948] tries to demonstrate inefficiency of our legal system in a grand, perhaps too sweeping indictment. After giving some history, all branches of law, civil, criminal, constitutional, administrative law, as well as all legal institutions and the law profession are examined—and found wanting." Library J

"Some members of the legal fraternity will find in this small volume matter for offense; others will find in it ample room for disagreement; but surely no reader will find it dull." B. F. Cataldo

Ann Am Acad 283:201 S '52 550w

Booklist 48:352 Jl 1 '52

"To this reviewer it seems that the author has overstated his case. The law is not quite as inefficient as this book makes out. In any event Mr. Seagle's book is stimulating and, I believe, significant." H. C. Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 3 '52 240w

"A book for students of the American legal scene, for legal theoreticians and dedicated lawyers, and the law schools, this is filled with thought provoking material which may cause a few explosions as it crosses swords with the established dignity and omnipotence of the Bar."

+ Kirkus 20:213 Mr 15 '52 180w

"Although many will disagree with author's thesis, his fascinating, but sometimes also facile, remarks ought to be very stimulating for every lawyer, law maker, and well-educated layman." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by M. D. Howe

Sat R 35:30 O 4 '52 500w

Springf'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 90w

"Witty and lively book."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:301 S '52 200w

SEAVER, GEORGE. Albert Schweitzer: a vindication. 120p $2 Beacon press

B or 92 Schweitzer, Albert. Murray, John Middleton [51-29086]

In 1948 John Middleton Murry published a literary criticism of Albert Schweitzer entitled The Challenge of Schweitzer. The present volume is a vigorous defense of Schweitzer and a reply to Murry's volume.

Reviewed by J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 166:17 Mr 15 '52 70w

"The extremely polemical character of this book is, undoubtedly, not the proper overarch for the lofty philosophy of Schweitzer, but this reviewer found it refreshing to have something of the old-fashioned vigor of Origen contra Celsum brought into play. With it all, one cannot escape the feeling that Murry tackled Schweitzer for the same reason Leigh-Mallory gave for repeatedly challenging Mt. Everest, 'Because it is there.'" V. B. Richardson

Crozer Q 29:235 Ap '52 800w

"Much of the controversy revolves around questions of textual interpretation, and the book as a whole, like Murry's earlier one, is only for Schweitzer specialists. The bewildered reviewer wonders only what Schweitzer himself would think of this petty clash of charge and counter-charge." Robert Bierstedt

— Sat R 35:29 Ja 5 '52 230w

SEAVY, SUSAN. Neither man nor angel. 323p
$3 Bobbs

51-12268

Portraits of two brothers, Paul and Andy Britten, living in a small midwestern town. Paul was the handsome extrovert who was a villain at heart; Andy, the introvert, was the only one in town who really knew his brother. The story closes with Andy's lucky escape from Paul's final bit of double crossing.

"'Neither Man Nor Angel' is an unusual first novel. Simple, unpretentious, its superficially clumsy form hides appropriate artifice of a high order. Furthermore Mrs. Seavy has the power to transcend the grisly bones of a plot which deals with seduction, murder and sudden death, and convert these sordid materials into a novel of character which is ethically stalwart and sound. The story of young Andy Britten vis à vis his rascally brother makes, plotwise and in its strong human values, an excellent tale." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 2 '51 400w

"Of plot in the sense of movement and event, there is little here. There is, in its stead, a sure and solid building of emotional tension whose explosion is truly affecting." Elizabeth Bullock

+ N Y Times p4 S 23 '51 300w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 34:44 D 8 '51 320w

SECKAR, ALVENA VAJDA. Zuska of the burning hills; pictures by Kathleen Voute. 222p $2.75 Oxford

52-6170

Story for ages eight to twelve about life among the West Virginia miners. The heroine, Zuska, is the daughter of Czechoslovakian parents. The solving of a mystery changes the family fortunes for the better.

Booklist 48:326 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

"Miss Seckar has made an outstanding contribution to children's books about America in this genuine and well-written story of a little girl whose 'burning hills' are in a mining town in West Virginia." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:106 Ap '52 90w

Kirkus 20:259 Ap 15 '52 190w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:911 My 15 '52 90w

"The story is well written for ages about ten to twelve, but the Slovak words and names may hinder slow readers. The book might well be recommended to junior high age for their social studies." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 11 '52 330w

"It is not a depressing story, but it is a poignant one which children won't forget soon." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 160w

"Zuska is an admirably drawn character, and her story runs smoothly to a comparatively happy ending. It is a book that will be appreciated by older girls and even by their younger sisters." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:46 S 20 '52 90w

"A book that tells of an underprivileged childhood, yet it presents the miners as people of pride and dignity."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:261 S '52 60w

Wis Lib Bul 48:177 J1 '52

SECONDARI, JOHN H. Coins in the fountain. 320p $3.50 Lippincott

52-8785

Novel of modern Rome and of Americans living there. Among them are Shadwell, a famous novelist, dying of cancer; Bertin, head of a news bureau hesitating about returning to the States; and various girl secretaries at the Rome agency.

Booklist 49:58; 68 O 15 '52

"For impressions and dialogs the author can be given high marks; he does write with perception and an ear for the spoken word. But the book lacks what a novel should have—it is aimless, it doesn't have a story with a beginning, a middle, and an end." Seymour Korman
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 26 '52 210w

"While this is not the novel on Rome we need or hope for, it is probably the best we have had to date." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:518 Ag 15 '52 180w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1657 O 1 '52 30w

"Mr. Secondari has a clean, swift way of capturing speech and gesture. His rather large cast of main characters remains well-individualized throughout." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 26 '52 850w

"Mr. Secondari knows Rome well, and when he focuses his lens on a character he becomes deeply moving and human. There is a good portrait of Fred Shadwell, the famous novelist, slowly and rebelliously dying, and of the head of a news service who is torn between his love for his not-to-be-uprooted half-Italian wife and his homesickness. Their stories are told admirably. In other cases, though, he seems to leave his characters in midair." H. M. Clark
+ N Y Times p31 O 26 '52 190w

"An ordinary, uninspired story." Serge Hughes

Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 360w

Spring'd Republican p13C D 14 '52 130w

SEDGES, JOHN, pseud. Bright procession. 305p $3.50 Day

52-7347

Character study of a successful New York public relations counsel. It traces his life with his two wives, and his children, and the attempts of all of them to adjust to the perils of present day living.

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52 50w

"Completely unreal, wooden, and appallingly snobbish." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:155 My '52 150w

"At a time when too many of our new novels are shockingly vulgar and dismally pessimistic, it is agreeable to pick up a book whose theme is anchored firmly to such old fashioned values as decency, honest struggle, and hope. However slight the work may be, and 'Bright Procession' will ignite no literary bonfires, the reading of it leaves you with a clean feeling. That is a welcome change." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 9 '52 280w

"A sentimental twist for a story symbolic of the forces at odds in the world today. It doesn't cut much below the surface; the characters are stock figures, the situations contrived, but the whole will bring to some a heartening faith they need."

Kirkus 20:87 F 1 '52 350w

Reviewed by Louise Anderson

N Y Times p15 Je 1 '52 160w

"It must be admitted that Mr. Sedges is not equal to the task of writing a great spiritual novel. His Stephen Worth, the man who is transfigured in the midst of a materialistic life, is in fact a pedestrian figure. His words are clear, his thoughts are revelatory, yet it is difficult to believe that they rise out of a true agony of decision. He is well described, but he is not well created. . . 'Bright Procession,' if not a first-rate novel, is a first-rate tract, better than most because its argument is seen in human practice, its truth in the process of gestation. It deserves to be widely read." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R 35:14 Mr 8 '52 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 3 '52 90w

SEGY, LADISLAS. African sculpture speaks.
254p 277il $7.50 Wyn

730.96 Sculpture, African 52-6927

"Part I considers the meaning and sources of African sculpture—Approach, Basic Concepts, African Cults Employing Sculptures. Part II develops the content of African art—Historical Background, Characteristic Forms, Stylistic Features. Part III relates African art and European civilization—Our Approach to African Art, The Plastic Language, African Art and Modern European Art, The Collector's Viewpoint. An appendix of more than 150 pages classifies fourteen style regions, each with numerous sub-locales. There are 277 illustrations of good quality, elaborate bibliographies, an index, and maps on the endpapers." Nation

Booklist 49:101 N 15 '52

"For the growing circle of those interested in African art, this book is worth its price for its illustrations alone. . . Most readers would do well to ignore the text, but fortunately African sculpture speaks for itself better than does Mr. Segy." William Bascom

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 S 14 '52 240w

Kirkus 20:433 J1 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 78:59 Ja 1 '53 90w

"Despite its title this is an excellent book. Its value lies in its approach to the subject and the detail with which the matter is presented." S. L. Faison

+ Nation 175:279 S 27 '52 550w

"Crammed with out-of-the-way information, sums up well all that sociologist and the historian have to say about an art that was literally magical in its original functions." Stuart Preston

+ N Y Times p7 S 7 '52 130w

"Though Mr. Segy is a bit slow-paced and ponderous, there's no questioning either the thoughtfulness or the thoroughness of his approach. . . The chief value of the book, however, is in the illustrations. Some two hundred and fifty in number, they go far beyond such comparatively well-travelled areas as the Ivory Coast and the Sudan to explore remote sections where the work is at times almost startlingly different from the familiar African styles."

+ New Yorker 28:183 D 13 '52 160w

"While much has been written about African sculpture within recent years, Mr. Segy's book is undoubtedly among the finest published in this country." V. J. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 19 '52 480w

SEIDENSPINNER, CLARENCE ALFRED.
Great Protestant festivals. (Great religious festivals ser) 148p $2.50 Schuman

264 Festivals 52-12750

"This book describes the various festivals and services of Protestant churches from the beginning of the parish year in September to the next summer's close. Such festivals and observances are described as Rally Day, Religious Education Week, World Communion Sunday, the Festival of the Reformation, All Saints' Day, World Peace Sunday, Thanksgiving, Advent and Christmas. . . One of the features of this book is the use of specific parish churches to afford examples of the way in which Protestantism celebrates its festivals." Publisher's note

Booklist 49:59 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 30w

"Those who think that Protestant worship is without structure will be edified by reading this book. Those who find the variety of Protestant forms confusing will find more underlying rime and reason than they had suspected." K. B. Cully

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 5 '52 250w

"For study and reference this book would be a fine addition to a church library. It is, incidentally, neatly bound. The publisher's designing is as modern and tradition-shattering as many of the author's suggestions." B. E.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 26 '52 170w

SEIFERT, HARVEY. Church in community action. 240p $2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

254 Church and social problems 52-5379

Offers a plan of action that is practical for both rural and urban churches in matters economic, social, and political. Intended for ministers, but could be useful to laymen as well. The author is professor of Christian ethics, graduate school of religion, University of Southern California. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:310 Je 1 '52

"The author finds that there is no systematic and comprehensive handbook on techniques of community action available and attempts to supply this need. Calling his book a pioneer effort, he is humble to admit its inadequacies. It is, however, a very acceptable presentation. . . Study groups and church classes would find in this a helpful text book on how to make Christianity a vital force in community improvement." O. L. Ice

+ Churchman 166:16 My 15 '52 220w

"Community-minded Protestant pastors and leaders will find this book most helpful. Others may be thereby stimulated to action."

+ Kirkus 20:275 Ap 15 '52 170w

SEIFERT, SHIRLEY. Three lives of Elizabeth. 287p $3.50 Lippincott

Crittenden, Elizabeth (Moss)—Fiction 52-5087

Elizabeth's three lives were her three marriages. Her first marriage to Dr Daniel Wilcox in pioneer Booneville, Missouri, was ideally happy. Her second marriage to wealthy William Ashley, after Dr Wilcox's death took her to Washington, where she was more in love with the city than with her husband. Her third marriage to the famous John Jordan Crittenden, was lonely for both of them. After the death of her third husband, just before the Civil war, she returned to the home of her youth, but decided to make New York her permanent home.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

"An extremely dull book." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:392 Ag '52 120w

"For the long, hot summer evening's reading entertainment, 'Three Lives of Elizabeth' is a good dish." K. Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 1 '52 280w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 26 '52 80w

"Satisfactory but not emotional enough in its undercurrents to cut below the surface. Telling portrait of mid 19th century America."

+ — Kirkus 20:166 Mr 1 '52 230w

"'Three Lives of Elizabeth' deserves a high rating as a study of an important period in our history, and of the men who made it memorable." Margaret Widdemer

— N Y Times p23 My 18 '52 440w

"The style is a little fervid; characters never 'say' anything; they 'moan,' 'wail,' 'remonstrate' or 'declare,' which gets tiring after a while."

Sat R 35:46 My 24 '52 100w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 450w

SEIGNOBOSC, FRANCOISE (FRANCOISE, pseud). Small-Trot. [32p] col il $2 Scribner 52-7751

Picture-story book for ages four to six. Small-Trot is a talented young French mouse who joined a circus in order to help her widowed mother.

Booklist 48:253 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 Ap 20 '52
90w

Horn Bk 28:97 Ap '52 70w

Kirkus 20:187 Mr 15 '52 100w

"Recommended for a read-aloud story to younger children. All libraries." M. M. Gantt
+ Library J 77:725 Ap 15 '52 90w

"Once more Francoise distills and transforms a phase of her French country life into a picture book for younger children. Its big round handwriting might be read by some six or seven year olds... It stands out with gay distinction among the books of this spring. This artist is one of the few whose bold outlines and simple patterns really appeal to very small children." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 30
'52 220w

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '52 110w

Sat R 35:60 Ap 12 '52 170w

Wis Lib Bul 48:217 S '52

SELF, MRS MARGARET CABELL. Horsemanship; methods of training the horse and the rider; with il. by Sarah Mason. 440p $5 Barnes, A.S.

793.2 Horsemanship 52-6233

"Text for trainer or teacher, based on author's long experience. Especially adapted for training children, but also training at various levels to most advanced. Historical background adds interest. Profusely illustrated with photographs, diagrams and clever drawings." Library J

Booklist 48:181 F 1 '52

"Not a book to recommend to beginning riders, as terminology, principles, etc. are directed to those already in the know."

Kirkus 20:64 Ja 15 '52 190w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:442 Mr 1 '52 30w

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). All about eggs, and how they change into animals; il. by Helen Ludwig. [60p] $2 Scott, W.R.

591.33 Reproduction—Juvenile literature 52-7272

"Starting with the familiar eggs of chickens and birds and progressing gradually to the eggs of creatures, including humans, whose eggs are carried inside their bodies, the book explains briefly, in forthright pictures and a minimum of text, how life begins. Should be helpful in answering a child's first questions about where he came from. Ages 4-8." Booklist

Booklist 49:94 N 1 '52

"Miss Selsam's is an introduction to the facts of life and was considered by all the teachers who reviewed it a 'must' for their classroom libraries." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:336 O '52 40w

"The problem of how to tell a small child about birth is paramount in the minds of parents when a new baby is imminent. Here is a book that may help, though it still leaves much to be desired."

+ Kirkus 20:403 J1 15 '52 150w

"Recommended." H. E. Walker

+ Library J 77:2074 D 1 '52 70w

"It is nicely done, with few words, and will be a godsend to many a home." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 40w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times pt2, p42 N 16 '52 70w

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). Play with leaves and flowers; il. by Fred F. Scherer. 64p $2 Morrow

581 Botany—Juvenile literature 52-5937

The movements of such plants as the clover, telegraph plant, sundew, Venus flytrap, sunflower, and evening primrose explained in text and experiments. For grades 4 to 6.

Booklist 49:52 O 1 '52

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

"This is excellent introductory material to a side aspect of a large scientific field."

+ Kirkus 20:408 J1 15 '52 90w

"Not quite as exciting as some of the previous books by this author, but it has a definite place among nature books for children of 6-12." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 77:1666 O 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by Dorothy Jenkins

N Y Times pt2, p33 N 16 '52 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p32 N 23 '52 120w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 40w

SELTZER, LAWRENCE HOWARD, and others. Nature and tax treatment of capital gains and losses. 554p $7.50 Nat. bur. of economic res.

336.243 Capital gains tax 51-5126

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"The solid factual basis of the work and the author's attention to actual business situations, administrative and compliance problems, and public and Congressional attitudes give the book a realistic and practical quality." Richard Goode

+ Am Econ R 42:445 Je '52 1100w

"The merits of the work are exceptional. To lawyers and others wishing to obtain a better grasp of the considerations underlying capital gains tax policy, it can be recommended without hesitation. Indeed, it is the best work of its kind." Norris Darrell

+ Harvard Law R 65:709 F '52 1950w

"The present volume is the most comprehensive and most able treatment of the problem yet published. It combines an exhaustive statistical analysis with a comprehensive, detailed, and thorough discussion of the legal, economic, and administrative aspects of the problem." B. U. Ratchford

+ J Pol Econ 60:178 Ap '52 700w

Sat R 35:44 Ja 19 '52 100w

"The study is documentary rather than analytic, and of special value to the tax specialist by virtue of its rich development of institutional and statistical material."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:373 D '51 220w

SELTZER, LEON E., ed. See Columbia Lip-pincott gazetteer of the world

SELZNICK, PHILIP. Organizational weapon; a study of Bolshevik strategy and tactics. 350p $5 McGraw

335.4 Communism. Communist party (Russia) 52-2299

"An intensive study of the role of organization in the struggle for power. This book will be especially valuable to both civic and non-political organizations in meeting effectively the threat of communist infiltration and control, through giving them a thorough understanding of the methods employed, particularly by the Communist Party and its peripheral or 'front' organizations." (Publisher's note) Index.

"As a perceptive analytical struggle of Communism's organizational problems this book is often excellent." Barrington Moore

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:873 S '52 1150w

"This volume is a work of prime importance. Professor Selznick has executed excellently his task of delineating the strategy and tactics used by communists in their general revolutionary quest. Moreover, this work will yield

SELZNICK, PHILIP—Continued
the discerning reader much insight into the fundamental structure of modern society."
Herbert Blumer

+ Am Soc R 17:630 O '52 1150w

Reviewed by M. F. Parkins
Social Forces 31:176 D '52 380w

"The study is both scholarly and thoughtful, and is an important contribution to the understanding of organization and organizational practices as weapons in the struggle for power, and of Bolshevik strategy and tactics in general."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:302 S '52 130w

SEMRAD, ALBERITA R. The zoo; photographs and drawings by Ralph Graham. 71p $2 Rand McNally

590.7 Animals—Juvenile literature 51-14011

"In this informative, easy to read book, that curious child of yours will find everything he could want to know about the fascinating denizens of the zoo." (Chicago Sunday Tribune)
The photographs and drawings are by the assistant director of the Chicago zoological park, Brookfield, Illinois.

Booklist 48:187 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:134 Mr '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 11 '51
120w

Kirkus 19:634 N 1 '51 120w

"The Zoo' is a good book for the first trip or for the younger child. It is short, well organized and lively in style. It is illustrated with many marginal drawings and with photographs mounted against line drawings. This latter arrangement is not very happy from an artistic viewpoint, but it does make the animals stand out distinctly." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p13 D 30 '51 330w

Wis Lib Bul 48:98 Mr '52

SENTMAN, GEORGE ARMOR. Drummer of Vincennes; a story of the George Rogers
Clark expedition; il. by John Gretzer. 181p
$1.50 Winston

52-5485

A drummer boy who marched with Clark against Kaskaskia and Vincennes, an historical figure, is here given a background and a motive for joining Clark and a series of adventures before his objective is reached.

Booklist 48:363 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Ag 3 '52
30w

"A good yarn, sparky as the kick of a musket."

+ Kirkus 20:262 Ap 15 '52 130w

"Excellent background reading for grades
6-8. Vigorous two-colored illustrations by John Gretzer. Unfortunately, the only maps are on the end sheets. Recommended." Helen Perdue

+ Library J 77:1081 Je 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 11
'52 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 Je 8 '52 20w

"The story has realism and cruelty, excitement and humor." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
110w

Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 20w

SERMOLINO, MARIA. Papa's table d'hôte.
253p $3 Lippincott

818 Gonfarone hotel and restaurant, New York 52-5632

The story of Gonfarone's restaurant and family hotel, which used to stand in Greenwich Village at West Eighth and Macdougall.

The author is a daughter of Anacleto Sermo-lino, partner of Madama Gonfarone, the founder of Gonfarone's.

Booklist 49:86 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 40w

+ Kirkus 20:395 J1 1 '52 180w

"Vividly, lustily and humorously does she bring Papa, Mama, herself and Gonfarone's to life." Rosanna Field

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 21 '52
900w

"The book is as full of life and gaiety and high excitement as Gonfarone's itself on a gala night—music, lights, tantalizing aromas, crowds waiting outside; while within John Barrymore samples zabaglione, Papa's hangover remedy. . .
Very often family reminiscences are served up with a rather thick sugar coating. Miss Sermo-lino has too much taste for that." Helen Papashvilly

+ N Y Times p16 S 21 '52 600w

"Miss Sermolino here presents an uncommonly solid and entertaining picture of the restaurant that was the focus of her family life, and also tells about growing up in the Italian-American colony, whose members made up a large part of her father's clientele. Miss Sermolino is, of course, in duty bound to write vivaciously about all this, but she is a good craftsman and she doesn't bubble."

+ New Yorker 28:153 O 11 '52 160w

"Miss Sermolino doubts that it was an ideal place in which to bring up a little girl, but her account of her expansive, thoroughly engaging father and his restaurant will entertain her readers, but make them wish that such an establishment existed, or could exist, today." P. T.

+ Sat R 35:30 S 27 '52 340w

Springf'd Republican p11C O 12 '52
100w

SESSIONS, ROGER HUNTINGTON. Harmonic practice. 441p $7.50; text ed $5.50 Harcourt 781.3 Harmony 51-8476

"Seasoned theory teacher (Professor of Musical Composition, University of California, Berkeley) and ranking composer undertakes to share his belief that 'traditional' harmony is an essential tool for the music student, especially the student of composition; that its resources and implications are rich; and that it is first of all a practical discipline. Describes contemporary theoretical problems in his concluding sections. Greek to anyone who cannot read music; there are over 800 exercises."
Library J

"Better for use with a live teacher—a good one—than as a self-teacher although Sessions suggested solutions of some of the exercises will help." C. K. Miller

Library J 77:720 Ap 15 '52 90w

"Here is the work of a thoughtful composer, very personal in many details, fresh, and with a wealth of excellent examples." Hans Tischler

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:409 Je '52
370w

SETON, MARIE. Sergei M. Eisenstein; foreword by Brooks Atkinson. 533p il $8.50 Wyn
B or 92 Eisenstein, Sergei Mikhailovich

"A full-length personal portrait of the Russian cinema genius who helped to convert the motion picture craft into an art form. Included are accounts of his six complete films as well as his controversial film on Mexico, a discussion of his techniques as film director, and an interpretation of his personality and his scientific and philosophical theories." Publishers' weekly

Booklist 49:156 Ja 1 '53

"This is the most definitive biography that has been written about any film figure. It is also the most absorbing biography of anybody that I have read in years. It will attract three groups of readers: those interested in motion pictures, those who seek to fathom the Russian mind, and those fascinated by the intricacies of human character." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian
Commonweal 57:288 D 19 '52 600w
Kirkus 20:487 Ag 1 '52 180w

"This is a highly controversial biographical and critical study of the great Russian film director. . . Recommended for all cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 77:2006 N 15 '52 40w

"There will be some questioning of the validity of Miss Seton's portrait of Eisenstein, particularly by those who have known or who have worked with him. Given the complexity of such a man, however, it is quite possible that another associate might present a portrait of Eisenstein quite different from Miss Seton's—and yet that neither would be false. This reviewer, having no personal portrait of the director to go by, is less intent on passing judgment on Miss Seton's creation than on discovering out of what it grew." Gerald Weales

Nation 175:386 O 25 '52 900w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 44:686 D 6 '52 650w

"In some ways Marie Seton's long, fulsome and downright motherly biography of Sergei M. Eisenstein, the Russian film director, does for the creative artist what 'Darkness at Noon' did for the political man. The effect is not necessarily intentional. Miss Seton moves uncritically among the ideological totems of the modern world, more concerned with stroking the brow of her troubled hero than with evaluating—even by implication—the pressures which exhausted him." Walter Kerr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 2 '52 1000w

"It is an important book and a fascinating one and yet in many ways it is a poor performance. It rambles, is badly organized and intellectually is on a low level. The style is tasteless . . . turgid. . . The author's own interpretation of Eisenstein's career is incoherent. . . What saves this biography is data. The author has shoveled into it a huge quantity of richly detailed material without much order or discrimination but also without much discernible omission." Dwight MacDonald

+ N Y Times p7 S 23 '52 1250w
Publishers' Weekly p1569 O 4 '52

"For Miss Seton, who knew Eisenstein intimately, this has been a labor of love. The research she has done on this biography is staggering. The book has a vast amount of previously unpublished material, including photographs, documents, and drawings." H. G. Weinberg

+ Sat R 35:35 N 29 '52 700w

"Miss Seton makes it all oddly moving. The sadistic outbursts which took the form of jokes, the indifference to the unexpectedly responsible criticism from superiors and other ungracious aspects are explained by the tragedy of the anomalous and frustrated personal life. As a close friend of Eisenstein, the author does not always give the stress the reader may feel, but she does give the facts from which the stress can be inferred." Oswald Blakeston

+ Spec 189:644 N 14 '52 440w
Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 14 '52 460w

SEVAREID, ERIC. In one ear. 258p $2.95 Knopf

973.92 [973.918] U.S.—Civilization 52-8508

A collection of 107 brief broadcasts delivered during the last two years over CBS. All are comments or observations on various aspects of life in America.

Booklist 49:10 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 30w

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52 180w

"What distinguished Mr. Severeid's thinking is his ability to stand clear of the squalls over personalities and 'who was right' and 'who's to blame.' . . For this reviewer, he is at his journalistic best in the short studies of the Indiana-Illinois-Oklahoma mind as it faces the fact that the world stretches far beyond the fences of the farm. . . Mr. Severeid's book gives you a sharp, revealing sketch of the American nation, 1950-1952, with its anxieties, its confusions, its vitality, and the many crosscurrents that have made this period so difficult to define." R. R. Brunn
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J 26 '52 650w

"He covers the 'world front' and he leaves you with faith and courage that all will be well with the U. S. A."

+ Kirkus 20:311 My 15 '52 120w

"Each is brief (broadcast time four minutes) and tends for the most part to be glib and superficial. Over the air these pieces were probably entertaining, even stimulating; in print they are pleasant but hardly memorable readings. Like yesterday's newspaper, their force has been spent." Harold Lancour
Library J 77:1189 J 1 '52 100w

"This book is filled with the luminous reporting of a writer of grace and insight, an enemy of the shrill and the shoddy, of whom—whether they were called essayists or not—no generation has ever had enough." Robert Waithman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J 1 27 '52 650w

"In a time when the essayist's art seems to be joining that of the poet in limbo, it is reassuring to find so able a practitioner as Mr. Severeid flourishing in so unlikely a nutrient as radio." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 10 '52 460w

"Mr. Severeid, who comments chiefly on the political scene but is free to wander afield if he feels like it, has developed the brief radio address into something resembling an art form; he is an adept popularizer of ideas, and he has both humor and a pleasant feeling for irony, which give individuality to his turns of phrase."

+ New Yorker 28:90 Ag 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p15 J 1 23 '52 750w

Reviewed by Bernard Kalb

Sat R 35:37 N 29 '52 250w

"'In one Ear' is the work of a wise, honest, thoughtful man; of a believing, humane man, who, loving his country, expects much of her, but does not lose faith when she occasionally disappoints him. It comes, therefore, as an added grace that, having something to say, he is determined to say it well, often memorably." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R 36:47 Ja 10 '53 370w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 60w

SEVENTEEN (periodical). Nineteen from Seventeen; stories selected by Bryna Ivens. 239p $2.75 Lippincott

52-9528

A collection of stories about the problems of modern youth. All have appeared in Seventeen during the last six years.

Booklist 48:382 J 1 15 '52

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:342 O '52 30w

Kirkus 20:374 J 1 1 '52 90w

"Highly recommended." B. W. Schein

+ Library J 77:1523 S 15 '52 60w

N Y Times p36 S 28 '52 100w

SEVERN, DAVID, pseud. See Unwin, D. S.

SEWELL, ARTHUR. See Sewell, W. A.

SEWELL, ELIZABETH. Paul Valéry; the mind in the mirror. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 61p $2.50 Yale univ. press

841 Valéry, Paul 52-10459

"The author (an English writer now lecturing at Vassar) attempts to show Valéry's mind in the mirror which was a recurrent image in his writing. Miss Sewell finds the literature of Valéry's time (1871-1945) to be haunted with mirrors, and in this she sets Valéry alongside Lewis Carroll and Stephen Mallarme. The result is neither biography nor conventional literary criticism but more in the nature of a logical and imaginative response to the mind of the French poet himself." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Fritz Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 14 '52 40w

"Miss Sewell's book is very rapid and full of a lively sympathy for Valéry's own method of composition; it is a kind of critical tour de force, made possible only by Miss Sewell's brightly illuminated memory of all the various aspects of Valéry's work." Rudd Fleming

+ New Repub 127:22 J1 7 '52 150w

Reviewed by Michael Hamburger

New Statesman & Nation 44:142 Ag 2 '52 140w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 27 '52 500w

"Miss Sewell strikes me as giving altogether too favorable a view of Valéry, whose greatness we cannot deny but whose obsessive intellectualism was a serious blemish." William Barrett

N Y Times p5 Je 22 '52 50w

"Very unusual and quite brilliant essay." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 J1 6 '52 190w

Spec 189:80 J1 11 '52 60w

SEWELL, ELIZABETH. Structure of poetry. 196p $5 Scribner

808.1 Poetry [52-299]

"Beginning with the query 'What makes language into poetry?' [the author] quickly defines language as an open system of relationship, and makes it the middle term of a sort of mathematical series she has devised—Logic, Number, Language, Dream, Nightmare—to demonstrate her theories. Her definitions and points of reference established, she moves on to a most original and fruitful study of two French poets 'who tried to pull Language towards infinity . . . in opposite directions,' Rimbaud and Mallarmé." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

"A brilliant but recondite book which deals with the intrinsic relationships of words and numbers and which will attract a small circle of practising poets, semanticists, lyricists and philosophers."

+ Kirkus 20:482 Ag 1 '52 170w

"Miss Sewell is both an educated and a careful reader. In the present volume, however, she presents herself as a critic with a systematized approach to the interpretation of poetry. The system she evolves is both painstaking and ingenious, but nowhere in it can I find more illumination on the nature of the poems than is already explicit in a careful reading of the poems themselves." John Ciardi

N Y Times p43 N 16 '52 350w

"The Structure of Poetry' may seem, at the outset, technical and specialized. But it is soon clear that Miss Sewell is conducting her investigations in a fairly informal manner and filling in the chinks of her logical processes with a delightful wit." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 28:169 N 8 '52 200w

"As with a 'whodunit,' it is worth buying the book to find out how it ends. A brilliant and highly original mind will be seen at work on the case." L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 30 '52 140w

SEWELL, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Character and society in Shakespeare. 149p $2.50 Oxford 822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters [52-7043]

"[The author] begins by stressing the not unimportant fact that actor and spectator in the theatre are aware of each other. Character is therefore important in the criticism of Shakespearean drama. . . He is not concerned so much with the clash of person and person as with the more philosophic notion of the ways in which the characterization contributes to the total vision of the play. Thus he sees 'Othello' as a conflict between the sordid Venetian world of which Iago is typical and the grander universe to which Othello naturally belongs. The result of the conflict is another Fall of Man." Sat R

"Recommended to the largest of Shakespeare collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:534 Mr 15 '52 20w

Reviewed by G. B. Harrison

Sat R 35:28 Je 14 '52 130w

"The greater part of Professor Sewell's long essay elaborates the theory of character-creation in terms that have a delusive air of lucidity. The virtues of the theory as a critical weapon are sparingly demonstrated."

Times [London] Lit Sup p802 D 14 '51 500w

SEYMOUR, MAURICE. Ballet portraits. 165p $10 Pellegrini & Cudahy

792.8 Ballet—Pictorial works 52-5374

"A running critical and historical comment accompanies the 145 beautiful photographs of the 70 leading dancers of the Sadler's Wells and New York City Ballet companies as well as the Ballet Theatre and the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo." Library J

"Recommended for large ballet and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:721 Ap 15 '52 30w

"Perhaps the most interesting section of the collection is that devoted to a consecutive series of shots of Margot Fonteyn miming a whole choreographic sentence from 'Swan Lake.' In general, however, the photographs are the ones that you see in the typical souvenir program. It should also be noted that they are reproduced in offset—a process that does not seem to be very well suited to Seymour's dark, shadowy photographic style."

R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 13 '52 50w

"Anyone who has been following ballet since its renaissance in this country will probably find many of his favorites in characteristic roles. The pictures, for the most part, are conventional, and the action shots are reserved exclusively for the male dancers. There is a slight informative text, generally accurate, though at times a bit lavish in praise of certain artists." R. K.

+ Sat R 35:66 Ag 30 '52 230w

SHAFFER, ROBERT. Skeeter; the story of an Arabian gazelle; il. by Kurt Wiese. 192p $2.75 Dodd

Gazelles—Legends and stories 52-8281

In his earlier book Robert Shaffer told about the pet gazelle which he had owned during his stay in Arabia. In this book, written for younger readers, he tells the story of Donald's successor, the tiny gazelle brought him by the boy Hussein, to console him after Donald had returned to his own kind.

Booklist 49:38 S 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Shaffer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 160w

"The style could have had a bit of editing, but the content is most vivid and appealing to all animal lovers. We gather that there may be a sequel about Skeeter's finally coming to America which we would welcome indeed. We like Mr. Wiese's sketches, but we long to see some photographs of this enchanting beast who so cleverly and gaily adapted himself to men's ways." L. S. Eechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 10 '52
290w

"This is a fascinating book. It will probably be read with as much pleasure by adults as by the older boys and girls. Even the younger children will appreciate, if it is read aloud to them, the strangeness and beauty of the Saudi Arabian background and the alluring quality of the little gazelle—his humor and intelligence, his grace and charm." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:46 S 20 '52 330w

SHAFFER, ROBERT. Tents and towers of Arabia. 276p il $4 Dodd

953 [915.3] Arabia—Description and travel
52-6724

In 1944 the author was sent by the State Department to Jidda on the Red Sea. This book is an account of what living there was like for Americans and their British colleagues, with some observations on the manners and customs, politics and religion of the Arabians.

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 14 '52
400w

"The most important part of Mr. Shaffer's tale is, unfortunately, one he touches only briefly. It is a visit to Dharan, the immense oil preserve on the Persian Gulf, where the Arabian American Oil Company has jumped its production from 15,000 barrels a day in 1944 to 821,000 today. . . The rest of 'Tents and Towers of Arabia' is pretty old stuff. . . Lawrence himself and other writers have covered the same ground, and in more readable fashion, for Mr. Shaffer has a labored style, and he burdens us with some personal adventures that will surely interest only himself and his few colleagues who literally sweated out an assignment by the Red Sea." W. K. Zinsser

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 F 3 '52
750w

"Robert Shaffer was impressed with Arabia and the Arabs, and he has given his feelings a balanced and dignified expression. Yet despite all the book's good qualities one closes it with a feeling of incompleteness—it is possible that this feeling (which even T. E. Lawrence has mirrored) is the essence of the unbridgeable gulf which separates Arab from Westerner. Whether that gulf can, in fact, be bridged is one of the great enigmas of our time. Facing that enigma, Mr. Shaffer has written not only an amusing and informative book but an almost profound description of a crucial area of the world." Hasan Ozbekkan

+ N Y Times p4 F 24 '52 550w

New Yorker 28:125 Mr 8 '52 120w

SHALLIT, JOSEPH. Kiss the killer. 222p $2.50
Lippincott

Detective story. 52-5634

Kirkus 20:357 Je 15 '52 70w

"The whole tale [is] pretty gummy and a good deal less satisfactory than its predecessors." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 7 '52
120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 60w

"As usual, Mr. Shallit manages to be funny and keep things going at a good clip, and yet be properly serious about crime." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 7 '52
50w

"Satisfactory." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:56 N 22 '52 20w

SHANNON, JIMMY. Devil's passkey. 239p
$2.75 Appleton

Detective story. 52-12546

Kirkus 20:430 Jl 15 '52 50w

"This is the sort of post-Spillane iron-jawed do that has been turning up on the newsstands as an 'Original' paperback and if a couple of pages of it don't turn your stomach you can go right ahead and find a good deal more of the same, Ruff Morgan talking it all out of the side of his mouth." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 O 12 '52
40w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p39 O 5 '52 50w

"The exclamatory silliness of the climax sets a new low for detective fiction." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 5 '52
40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:42 O 18 '52 20w

SHARP, HOWARD M. Introduction to lighting. 337p il $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall 621.32 Electric lighting 51-8006

"A practical book suitable for engineering college students and practicing engineers who desire only a working knowledge of lighting principles and design. A good deal of the text is descriptive, but the mathematics that might be needed by a practicing engineer or architect in designing lighting systems is included. The chapters are supplemented by literature references. There are a high number of illustrations and numerous tables of engineering data. The author is a member of the faculty of the University of Buffalo." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:538 Mr 15 '52 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:8 Ja '52

SHARPE, WILLIAM. Drain surgeon. 271p $3.75
Viking

B or 92 Surgeons—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-12763

Autobiography of a brain surgeon, who received some of his training from Dr. Cushing. Dr. Sharpe pioneered in operations for cerebral spastic paralysis, and includes some account of his experimental surgery in that field. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:66 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:55 D '52 30w

Kirkus 20:534 Ag 15 '52 190w

"Warm humanity and humility fill this outstanding American autobiography. Recommended as a fine made-in-U.S.A. success saga." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1399 S 1 '52 130w

"Fascinating. . . For the more serious-minded high school student."

+ Library J 77:1759 O 15 '52 30w

"Dr. Sharpe is always entertaining, frequently amusing, and sometimes startling. . . His old friend, the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes, contributes a foreword which is a brilliant little essay on why we like to read about doctors of medicine. Unlike many a foreword, this is not only as good as the book, but fits it beautifully as an introduction." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 19 '52
750w

"Both informative and amusing, this book is, in sum, a medical Odyssey of much human value." Hermann Vollmer

+ N Y Times p24 O 19 '52 450w

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52
110w

SHAW, ARTIE. Trouble with Cinderella [an outline of identity]. 394p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-10229

An introspective autobiography by the famous dance band leader, Artie Shaw. No index.

Booklist 48:338 Je 15 '52

"Shaw has written his story with all the emotion at his command. He has fathomed his own personality in a wise, sensitive manner, and remains optimistic in face of discouraging reality." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 8 '52 390w

"The book is written frankly and will be vulgar in a few places for some readers. Perhaps this is so because Shaw tried to write as completely an honest record of himself as he could. The life of a jazz musician in America, revealed here in gripping realism, is not a pretty nor hopeful one. Too many musicians have spun in, as the aviators say. Here is one who did not. His is a fascinating narrative of a contemporary American, an absorbing account of a man's struggle with himself." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 17 '52 900w

"Not the usual jazz history but an honest self searching, this odyssey of a meteor has little of the cocky, loud-mouthed Broadway chatter that might be expected and instead reflects the inner development of 'Little man, where are you going.' Sort of a collector's item, at that."

+ Kirkus 20:272 Ap 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 77:1205 J1 '52 150w

"No illiterate, this fellow Shaw-Arshawsky, and he has done an impressive job of educating himself in the realities of personal existence, both abstract and concrete. His adventure thus far in life is purely American; it could have happened in no other society and in no other time. Yet even in the America of today it is unique." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 15 '52 950w

"A while ago, appearing on television, Artie Shaw revealed that, of all the people in the world, he would most rather be George Bernard Shaw. Well, he is not George Bernard Shaw and he is certainly not Carlyle; but in his own field the young man with a clarinet is perhaps as talented as they, and he has written a book that deserves to be read—if only because he wrote it." Rex Lardner

N Y Times p12 J1 6 '52 390w

"His story of the metamorphosis of little Arthur Arshawsky, the son of poor Jewish immigrants, into Artie Shaw, the mercurial jazz-band leader and idol of American youth is a fascinating one, and his dissection of the world of hot music—of what makes a fine jazz musician and a fine jazz band—is as good as anything of the sort in print. His soul-searchings are frequently embarrassing, and he has a marked tendency to babble, but when he has a good grip on himself—and, fortunately, that is more often than not—he is an excellent writer."

+ New Yorker 28:119 Je 14 '52 190w

"Had he seen fit to discuss his various marriages—and he's had almost as many wives as jobs—the book might have been sensational. It is a tribute to his ability as a writer that he can bypass the sensational and still produce an absorbing book. Artie Shaw has put down the clarinet for the pen, it seems. The dancehalls may lose by this trade, but the rest of us have benefited." R. J. Gleason

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '52 1250w

SHAW, BERNARD. See Shaw, G. B.

SHAW, CHARLES. Heaven knows, Mr Allison. 224p $3 Crown

52-10767

"Washed ashore, Marine Allison finds that he and Sister Angela, a nun, are the sole occupants of a Pacific atoll. When the Japs occupy the island, the two fugitives scrounge for food and plot ways to keep out of the enemy's hands. The ever present danger fans Allison's desire for the nun, but faith triumphs." Library J

Booklist 49:157 Ja 1 '53

"Granting Mr. Shaw his right to the subject matter and to the coincidences and melodrama involved, this is both an exciting and reverent book." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:234 D '52 200w

"The first novel of the Australian newspaper man, this is more for the faithful than the adventuresome, though it touches on both faith and adventure in a fine attempt which does not quite make the most of the possibilities of situation and emotion."

Kirkus 20:515 Ag 15 '52 160w

"The nun's victory is somewhat contrived, but Catholic readers especially will find the novel appealing. Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1812 O 15 '52 70w

"A distinctive and appealing little story. . . 'Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison' has the suspense and excitement of a present-day 'Robinson Crusoe.' . . The subtler side of the story, the relationship between a man and a woman who for months had to depend almost wholly on each other for life and sanity, is handled with respect for the faith of the gentle nun and the decency of a very human Marine. An odd by-product of war, this little book is both unusual and convincing." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 O 19 '52 350w

"Mr. Shaw in robust, direct style builds up a picture of a relationship that after a series of embarrassing incidents becomes touching and convincing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p153 F 29 '52 40w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Bernard Shaw and Mrs Patrick Campbell; their correspondence; ed. by Alan Dent. 385p $5 Knopf

B or 92 Campbell, Mrs Patrick. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 52-6411

The correspondence between Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, covering a period from 1899 to 1939, the year before her death. Index.

"This is an intriguing, in parts brilliantly entertaining, volume. But as Shaw himself observed, the letters do not give one a very precise idea of what his 'idyll' with the great actress was like. . . This is a case in which the reader would benefit from all the supplementary information he could get, and it seems to me that the editor of the correspondence, Alan Dent, has done an unsatisfactory job." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:92 D '52 410w

Booklist 49:140 D 15 '52

Bookmark 12:52 D '52 20w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 23 '52 800w

Kirkus 20:590 S 1 '52 240w

"This volume is essential to any literature or theatre collection." George Freedley
Library J 77:1652 O 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 175:524 D 6 '52 850w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
New Repub 127:17 N 3 '52 1800w

"Now that at last they appear—these famous letters 'interchanged by an intellectual giant and a great and beautiful actress'—they seem, it must be confessed, a disappointment. It isn't only that the 'intellectual giant' is little in evidence and the brilliance of the actress hardly communicates on paper; it is that the centre of the whole thing, the love affair between them, makes a curiously squashy, messy impact. . . The rewards of this correspondence are not as many as one hoped for and they are mostly to be found in the incidentals. Mr. Alan Dent has edited it on the most sensible plan imaginable. He never intrudes himself; but keeps us unobtrusively informed about relevant times, places and people, so that we know exactly where we are all the time." T. C. Worsley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 44:640 N 29 '52 850w

"Critics better qualified than I must pass judgment on the literary qualities of these letters; but I am sure that most of Shaw's are splendid Shaw. His love letters are quite beautiful, and one of them, written to Mrs. Campbell on the death of her son in the first world war, is a masterpiece. In it the red-bearded rebel of the '80s and '90s is at his fighting best. Many of Mrs. Campbell's letters are sufficiently charming, tender, witty, and exasperating to be read with much pleasure." Cedric Hardwicke

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 9 '52 1200w

"In the letters Shaw has most of the wit, but Mrs. Campbell has her share of it, and she has all the humor. She has most of the poetry, too, and all the sorrow, though it comes and goes with a laugh. . . Mr. Dent has done the editing quietly and well, bringing into our street the exciting figure of Bernard Shaw trotting, terril lirrill, past, a lady's favor pinned to his well-burnished armor." Sean O'Casey

+ N Y Times p1 N 9 '52 950w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 21 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. M. Brown

Sat R 35:20 D 6 '52 3600w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

Spec 189:732 D 5 '52 1100w

"These letters, published at long last, show Bernard Shaw at a sad disadvantage. The comedian, the rationalist, the anti-romantic has slipped on a romantic's cloak and set himself in reckless disregard of his natural genius to represent the Great Lover of myth and legend. . . The letters, taken as a whole, are perhaps the least interesting to the general reader that Shaw ever wrote. . . The love-letters have, of course, their special interest for Shavian students. They will note, however, that the writer is not only at a temperamental disadvantage. He is also at a literary disadvantage."

Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 14 '52 700w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Selected prose; selected by Diarmuid Russell. 1004p $6.50 Dodd

828

52-11523

"A selection containing passages of auto-biography; sections of his novels—Immaturity, Love Among the Artists, The Irrational Knot; selections from his MUSIC Criticism, and from his Drama Criticism; biography of his contemporaries—Pen Portraits; whole books such as The Quintessence of Ibsenism and The Perfect Wagnerite, etc." Publisher's note

"I can't share Mr. Russell's view that Shaw's writings on Socialism still constitute a first-rate presentation of the Socialist case. . . The extracts from two of Shaw's five novels are of interest mainly in that they show how wooden and tiresomely preachy a novelist Shaw remained throughout the nine years he devoted to fiction writing. But in the rest of the omnibus, there is no end of lively stuff." C. J. Kolo

+ — Atlantic 190:94 D '52 210w

Booklist 49:122 D 1 '52

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 23 '52 250w

Nation 176:17 Ja 3 '53 170w

New Repub 128:30 Ja 5 '53 210w

"About one-quarter of the contents of the volume have not been published before in America, except in a limited edition. . . All of it, however miscellaneous, is good Shaw, brimming with the wit and ideas that achieved their greatest sharpness in his plays." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 16 '52 700w

"After making room for material so difficult to excerpt as novels, Diarmuid Russell's omission of the letters (because too numerous) and the prefaces (as belonging to the plays) will seem simply arbitrary. His choices are otherwise sound and it is therefore a pity that he undertook to do the Introduction himself. Although he keeps to biographical data or the kind of observations anyone who can read Shaw can surely make for himself, his comments are inept and his writing amateurish. But once past that you have a thousand pages of authentic, undiluted and frequently delightful Shaw." Milton Rugoff

+ — N Y Times p34 D 7 '52 600w

"A very well-worked-out collection."

+ New Yorker 28:200 N 22 '52 120w

SHAW, LAU, pseud. See Shu, C.

SHAY, FRANK. Sailor's treasury; decorations by Edward A. Wilson. 196p $3.75 Norton 910.4 Seafaring life. Folklore of the sea

51-7454

"Being the myths and superstitions, lore, legends and yarns, the cries, epithets, and salty speech of the American seafarer in the days of oak and canvas." (Subtitle) Bibliography

Booklist 48:158 Ja 1 '52

"Sailors have a language of their own, incomprehensible to the landlubber. Here we have a glossary of his patter and a few maxims to boot. All in all, a good cargo—Yankee neat, or as the British put it, all ship-shape and Bristol fashion." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p46 N 25 '52 260w

SHEDLOCK, MARIE L. Art of the story-teller; foreword by Anne Carroll Moore; with a new bibliography by Eulalie Steinmetz. 3d ed rev 290p $2.95 Dover

027.62 [372.2] Story telling

52-9976

"The main text is reprinted without change; there is a slight revision in the foreword and the last section, the bibliography is completely new, having been compiled by Eulalie Steinmetz, supervisor of storytelling, New York Public Library." (Booklist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1915, 1936.

Booklist 48:341 Je 15 '52

"This has long been considered one of the two standard books on storytelling (the other is Ruth Sawyer's Way of the Storyteller, Viking); and has been greatly missed during the years it has been out of print. . . Miss Steinmetz's bibliography, chosen 'to reflect Miss Shedlock's own interest and high standards,' seems to me a particularly good one, covering a wide variety of stories both old and recent." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:251 Ag '52 120w

"This new edition of the classic handbook for storytellers is very welcome. First published in 1915, it is just as pertinent today as then." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1312 Ag '52 60w

"Important to all who work with books and children, and invaluable to story-tellers. . . English and history teachers in elementary grades will find very worth-while suggestions about using story-telling as part of their teaching." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 22 '52 170w

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Rage of the soul. 313p
$3.50 Random house

52-5168

The story of a "happy marriage" which is in danger of breaking up, when the wife decides on a trip to India. The husband, a State Department official, becomes involved in a scandal, goes to Rome to begin a new life, and there, the two meet again both wiser about themselves and life.

Atlantic 190:88 J1 '52 110w

Booklist 48:361 J1 1 '52

Canadian Forum 32:115 Ag '52 460w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:152 N '52 240w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 15 '52 240w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 5 '52 300w

Reviewed by Serge Hughes

Commonweal 56:371 J1 18 '52 420w

"Good reading, when the author does not deviate from his central theme into too long philosophical excursions."

+ Kirkus 20:267 Ap 15 '52 280w

"'Rage of the Soul' is a beautifully written novel, full of fascinating incident and information. I read every line of it with the intensest interest. Yet in the end I cannot say that I think Mr. Sheean has convincingly accomplished what he has undertaken. In his effort to present esoteric ideas in an attractive fashion he has tried to pass on both sides of the tree at once. . . Nevertheless, 'Rage of the Soul' has far more to offer the perceptive reader than many a wholly successful novel of lesser scope." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 1 '52 600w

"A novel about the world of Washington would certainly come to life in Mr. Sheean's hands. And there is enough evidence here, too, to establish that he could write a stirring story on the impact of India's ancient wisdom on occidental pragmatism. But these two major themes cannot be bedded between the same two covers." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '52 500w

New Yorker 28:138 Je 7 '52 140w

"As always, the author demonstrates that he can write. What he has done here, however, is to attempt something that does not quite come off. He tries to squeeze two stories into one, to cram two feet into a single shoe. And they don't fit." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 9 '52 450w

Reviewed by Joseph Hitrec

Sat R 35:21 Je 7 '52 550w

Time 59:101 Je 2 '52 380w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH, comp. Book of the Saviour. 420p il $4 Sheed

232.9 Jesus Christ. Religious literature—Collections 52-10606

An anthology of prose and verse concerning the life of Christ.

"The selection is too good to cavil at, Chesterton, Belloc, Sigrid Undset, Karl Adam, Gerald Vann, and many others, and no doubt Mr. Sheed had adequate reasons for choosing only contemporary prose. Still, the excellence of the earlier poetry included suggests the rich possibilities of a wider choice of prose. . . Perhaps in the future Mr. Sheed will oblige with an anthology of great rather than merely good authors on the same subject. Meanwhile, this is a pleasant volume."

+ Cath World 176:157 N '52 200w

Kirkus 20:468 Ag 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by M. M. Ahern

N Y Times p25 N 2 '52 230w

+ Sat R 35:30 D 20 '52 110w

SHEEHAN, DONALD HENRY, ed. This is America, my country. 2v il $9.90; art craft ed $11.90; Congressional ed $20 Wise

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—History—Sources 52-960

"These two volumes [were] assembled by Prof. Sheehan of Columbia university's history department. . . Preceded by a brief summary of events to follow, each chapter takes the reader on a first person tour thru the ages, with excerpts from records, letters, and other memoranda left by persons who were on the spot at the given time. Leif Ericsson's landing on the American continent in the 11th century is told in the ancient 'Saga of Eric the Red,' by Leif's father. Columbus' discovery is told in a letter he wrote to the man who had interceded for him with Queen Isabella to finance the trip. And so on thru the ages. . . Every major event to date is covered and lavishly illustrated in color and black and white." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"One of the most unusual and entertaining chronicles of America this reviewer has ever seen." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 6 '52 220w

"Altogether a useful book to have handy on your shelves—even if it does weigh a lot." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p26 D 7 '52 400w

SHEEHAN, DONALD HENRY. This was publishing. 288p $3.75 Ind. univ. press

655.473 Publishers and publishing 52-14582

"History of American publishing . . . from Appomattox to World War I. (A partial history of British publishing too, in the wrangles over copyright up to 1891). Mr. Sheehan has had access to the letter files of Scribner's, Holt, Harper and Dodd, giving his book a good stiff backbone. He quotes extensively from Publishers' Weekly, and has used all the expected printed sources except Hart's Popular Book." Library J

Booklist 49:136 D 15 '52

"A stimulating study presented with verve and skilful use of the archives."

+ Bookmark 12:33 N '52 30w

"A business for individualists, publishing impervious to monopoly. This being the case, Mr. Sheehan is perhaps a little harsh in speaking of the 'censorship' of certain publishers who gave a hard time to Henry George and other reformers. Could they not choose the books they wanted to sell as freely as Sheehan chooses the books he wants to buy? But the author's critical alertness shows that he did not set out to whitewash a profession—and if our pre-World War I publishers show up as a gifted, decent, dedicated lot it must be because that is what they were. This honest and lively book does them justice." Fred Wieck

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 26 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:619 S 15 '52 200w

Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1652 O 1 '52 100w

Nation 175:613 D 27 '52 80w

"A live and refreshing presentation of American publishing during its important era of growth and expansion, and no one who is interested in books or in the development of a distinctive segment of American business should forego the nostalgic stimulation of its pages." Raymond Bond

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 9 '52 750w

Reviewed by F. G. Melcher

N Y Times p36 N 23 '52 310w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. World's first love. 285p $3.50 McGraw

232.93 Mary, Virgin 52-6554

"The author portrays woman, motherhood, virginity, love, marriage, sorrow, joy, freedom, and suffering in his life of Mary, Mother of God." Publisher's note

Booklist 48:289 My 15 '52

"The author writes of the Blessed Virgin with a deep and reverent devotion and in a lyrical and exalted style that frequently approaches the realm of poetry. . . . The whole treatment is based on a high key." J. A. O'Brien

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 20 '52 330

+ Kirkus 20:207 Mr 15 '52 240w

"Bishop Sheen has written what is without question the most up-to-date book on 'The World's First Love,' for it indicates the very great significance of the Blessed Virgin to the atomic age. Yet I must confess that, admirable as are the book's contents, a style of remorseless epigram and paradox becomes a bit monotonous. No doubt the same sentences heard in the Bishop's beautiful enunciation are a different matter." Theodore Maynard

+ N Y Times p6 J1 6 '52 500w

SHEFFIELD, ALFRED DWIGHT, and SHEFFIELD, ADA (ELIOT). Mind of a member; new bearings for service to home and work relations. 208p $4 Exposition

301.15 Groups (sociology) 51-5421

"Here is another approach to the solving of group tensions, especially those that arise in industrial situations. Authors base their program upon many years of experience in industry, in group work and in social work." (Library J) Index.

"To the growing number of studies in social relations, this book is an important contribution." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 166:17 Ap 15 '52 220w

"Unfortunately, the method of presentation is so abstruse and the style of writing so stilted that the material never seems to come alive. But the ideas are well worth exploring for any one looking for new answers to this very present question." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 76:1936 N 15 '51 150w

SHEPARD, JUDY (MRS ALVIN ROSENFELD), and ROSENFELD, ALVIN. Ticket to Israel; an informative guide. 305p il $3.75 Rinehart

956.94 [915.69] Israel—Description and travel 52-5566

A combination of practical details, with some history and sociological information, about Israel. The authors have visited Israel several times, beginning in 1947. Suggested tours, holidays, and festivals. Index.

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:187 My '52 20w

Kirkus 20:114 F 1 '52 120w

"A practical and informative guide." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by Kimon Friar

New Repub 127:18 J1 28 '52 300w

"It is no great shakes as writing but succeeds admirably in conveying the splendor of a new country. Even when the authors rehash the Bible stories and set the biblical heroes against a modern landscape they succeed in communicating their own youthful and artless excitement." Robert Payne

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '52 40w

New Yorker 28:143 Je 7 '52 100w

"As a reporter who covered Israel for the New York Post, Mr. Rosenfeld learned a great deal about the country and he and his wife convey the information in a good-humored, detailed and helpful way. Their information was checked with official Israeli sources for accuracy." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 4 '52 190w

SHEPPARD, SIR JOHN TRESIDDER. Music at Belmont, and other essays and addresses. 192p $2.75 British bk. centre

881 Greek poetry. English poetry [52-9730]

"Sir John Sheppard, Provost of King's College, Cambridge, dedicates his book of essays on the relevance of Greek poetry, to 'his Friends at Yale.' Eleven essays on the sanity, humanity and grace—and prevalence—of Greek ideals in poetry, make up this tribute to Yale friends. . . . The title essay is a study of the poetry of the Moonlight scene in the Merchant of Venice and even the secondary school student will find it a rewarding approach to the much-read play." Library J

"A volume that all lovers of poetry will love and all who enjoy beautiful English and pleasant thought will read with delight." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 110w

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 24 '51 220w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis

New Statesman & Nation 43:18 Ja 5 '52 240w

Reviewed by H. W. Garrod

Spect 187:825 D 14 '51 600w

"The author has written throughout in a style almost aggressively informal, using locutions rarely printed except in fictional dialogue. The trick may well work its magic with a responsive reader, and one must hope it will, for the book is nothing if not atmospheric; it is certainly not for the dissecting-table."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 18 '52 750w

SHERIDAN, JUANITA. Mamo murders. 190p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5545

Detective story.

"Tasty enough if taken with salt." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 110w

"Miss Sheridan presents no glamorized touristic-technicolor picture of Hawaii, but a detailed portrayal of many conflicting ways of life. . . . And she weaves all of this absorbing background into a moving story of a deserted young bride standing unafraid with only Lily and Janice between her and ultimate terror. A story at once more colorful and a good deal more substantial than the average whodunit." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '52 190w

"The setting is wonderful, as usual with Sheridan, and it's more than scenery; the story springs from it. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 6 '52 100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:44 My 10 '52 30w

Spring'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 50w

SHERLEY-PRICE, LIONEL DIGBY. Confucius and Christ; a Christian estimate of Confucius. 248p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

299.51 Confucius and Confucianism, Christianity and other religions—Confucianism [52-18572]

"The author writes out of his experiences as a missionary in China. Under the several chapter headings he has grouped selected sayings of Confucius in comparison with the sayings of Jesus on similar subjects. These have been so arranged as to show the inadequacy of Confucius in contrast with Jesus." (J Religion) Bibliography.

"As a popular exposition of main Confucian and Christian sayings in comparison, the book will probably be useful and informative to many. Readers familiar with the subject, however, will find the treatment leaving something to be desired." C. H. Hamilton

+ Christian Century 69:401 Ap 2 '52 350w

"We find here a book of only mild interest for the novice in the field of Confucius and his disciples—a book that is too 'preachy' about the theological values of Christianity as com-

SHERLEY-PRICE, L. D.—Continued
pared with the admittedly solely ethical note of Confucianism." J. F. Davidson

Churchman 166:16 My 15 '52 190w

Reviewed by L. M. Outerbridge

J Religion 32:230 J1 '52 350w

Kirkus 19:660 N 1 '51 160w

SHERMAN, JANE. Real book about bugs, insects and such; il. by Kathleen Elgin. (Real bks) 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature 52-12295

Facts and stories about some of the better known insects and bugs. For grades 5 to 8.
Index.

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 S 28 '52

20w

"A fascinating text about bugs, the chapters of which read off like well planned feature articles."

+ Kirkus 20:374 J1 1 '52 160w

"Scientific facts presented in a straightforward and simple style make this a fine addition to the books on insects." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 77:1909 N 1 '52 80w

"The book on bugs is serious and interesting but its lack of sufficient illustration makes it inferior to the 'First Book of Bugs,' in the Watts series." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 2 '52
30w

SHERMAN, JANE. Real book about dogs; il. by Lorence Bjorklund. 192p $1.25 Garden City bks.

636.7 Dogs 51-12269

"Good factual book for anyone with a dog or with hopes of ever having one. First section is on choosing and training the dog, second contains the meanings of many terms used by dog breeders and owners (an unusual and useful feature). Last section is on types of dogs."
Library J

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51

"A sensible, step-by-step handbook for the young dog fancier and especially for the prospective owner."

+ Kirkus 19:322 J1 1 '51 120w

"Written clearly enough for fourth-graders on up to understand. Good buy for the money.
Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 24 '52
40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:46 Ja '52

SHERWOOD, JOHN. Ambush for Anatol. 223p
$2.50 Doubleday

52-11620

"A scurvy individual known only as Anatol had a method of getting things on persons of high station and blackmailing them into serving him in a currency exchange racket. If a pawn became unruly, Anatol resorted to murder. After a double killing in England, Charles Blessington took up a nerve cracking chase that swirled thru Paris and the Riviera over such hurdles as cabinet member decoys, kidnaping, and more killing." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"This yarn races in such cyclonic circles that it seems finally to run out of breath and ends on a strained note, but it's thrilling entertainment." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 23 '52
50w

"Mr. Sherwood is managing so well that Coles might cast a wary eye upon his muttons and his laurels. It is all very sprightly foolishness capable of teaching beavers something about business, and all set forth in a persuasively amusing vein with all sorts of incidental, humorous perceptions." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 23
'52 200w

"A trifle more conventional than the wondrous earlier adventures of civil servant Mr.
Blessington, but still a delightfully persuasive and amusing melodrama." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p44 N 30 '52 30w

"Our prim-appearing friend Charles Blessington, of the British Treasury, adores involvement in melodrama. . . . Luckily for readers he sticks with the adventure, not as thrilling as his others but still highly satisfactory. If you can't follow the complicated currency deals, don't worry, a good light-hearted yarn remains." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 21 '52
60w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:37 D 6 '52 20w

SHERWOOD, THOMAS KILGORE, and FIG-FORD, ROBERT LAMAR. Absorption and extraction. 2d ed 478p il $7.50 McGraw

660 Gases—Absorption and adsorption.
Solvents 51-12644

"A rather full treatment of two fundamental and important operations in chemical engineering. The emphasis is on fundamental matters and typical equipment rather than on specific applications. However, numerous applications are mentioned in passing. The book is primarily a text for upper-class students of chemical engineering, but some parts are full enough to be useful to graduate engineers. There is a bibliography of 518 references. The first edition appeared in 1937 [Book Review Digest 1937]. This edition contains largely material that did not appear in the original edition."
N Y New Tech Bks

"In this second edition well-known to chemical engineers, Dr. Pigford has joined Dr. Sherwood as co-author. Both authors are leading research contributors in the area of phase change operations. The book has been substantially rewritten and expanded. It reflects recent advances and the authors were critical in selecting subject material from a voluminous literature." R. H. Wilhelm

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:6160 D 5 '52 160w

"The usefulness of the book to the practicing engineer is greatly enhanced by the 46 illustrative calculations, and its value as a textbook is markedly increased by the addition of 56 problems. The material is carefully and completely presented and includes so much of value in fields other than absorption and solvent extraction that it belongs in every university and chemical process industry library." M. C. Molstad

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1799 Ap 28 '52 240w

"This important work, virtually rewritten since the first edition in 1937, remains an authoritative treatise on gas absorption." M. J.
B. Bogart

+ Chem Eng 59:340 Ag '52 260w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:824 My 15 '52 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:17 Mr '52

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Bridle for Pegasus; il. by C. B. Falls. 192p $3.50 Viking 629.1 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature

51-14050

Twenty-six short stories about men and flying, from the story of Icarus to Sikorsky's helicopter and the first flight to the stratosphere. For ages 11 to 16.

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

"Written with Miss Shippen's extraordinary ability to bring the past to life, each chapter is a fascinating story in itself. Yet the book leaves the reader with a feeling of having seen the history of flying as a whole picture—a picture that has only begun to unfold."
J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:40 F '52 100w

"Miss Shippen has the gift of direct approach to young readers and a true selective sense in dealing with a wealth of research." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 28:94 Ap '52 50w
Kirkus 19:445 Ag 15 '51 140w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon
Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 11 '51 240w

"Written in easy, non-technical style these narratives are always interesting and often dramatic." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '52 180w
Wis Lib Bul 48:42 Ja '52

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Mr Bell invents the telephone; il. by Richard Floethe. 183p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Bell, Alexander Graham—Juvenile literature 52-7227

A biography of Alexander Bell for high school pupils. It covers his life from the age of twenty-four, when he came to Boston to teach in a school for the deaf, until the telephone system had covered the United States from coast to coast.

Booklist 49:130 D 1 '52

"A very warming story, oriented to its times by solid historical tie-ins."

+ Kirkus 20:459 Ag 1 '52 120w

"A well-written story." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 30w

"Miss Shippen was just the right person to tackle the invention of the telephone. This short book, in big type, will, we hope, introduce her other longer and much more expensive books on inventions to many readers around twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p11 N 16 '52 40w

SHIRER, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. Midcentury journey: the western world through its years of conflict. 310p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

940.5 Europe 52-11611

"A ruminative monologue on the state of Europe as it looks right now to a man who has played an important part in recording its convulsive history during the past twenty-five years. Mr. Shirer revisited Austria, France, Germany, and England. . . In a postscript, he tells of his return to this country and how it looks from the perspective of one who has had a fresh view of the other half of the free world." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 190:103 O '52 130w

Booklist 49:2; 10 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 30w

Canadian Forum 32:187 N '52 250w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Cath World 176:75 O '52 250w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 21 '52 320w

"In short, this is not a pleasant or an encouraging book to read, except insofar as facing facts is more to be desired than ignoring them. But it is a book which has been carefully and, one feels, honestly written. It deserves the wide reading it will doubtless receive as September selection of the Literary Guild." J. G. Harrison

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 11 '52 750w

"A simple, clear, very readable commentary on recent history." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:427 D '52 50w

Kirkus 20:432 Jl 15 '52 300w

"Not a very optimistic book on the whole. Useful as a summary and recommended for small public libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton

Nation 175:360 O 18 '52 470w

"'Midcentury Journey' is not a comforting book, but it is not entirely discouraging; and if, after presenting so many and such hard facts, the writer can still see a possible way out, his strictly measured hope is more effective by far than the optimism of a sentimentalist who can see no evil in a rosy world." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 14 '52 1200w

"Mr. Shirer, in what is by far his most penetrating book, examines the forces which produced the bloodshed and the anxieties. He saw many of these forces come into being during the Nineteen Twenties and Thirties, when Europe was his beat; he saw the tragic failure of Great Britain and France to stop the forces which catapulted the century into World War II and into the present Age of Anxiety." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Times p3 S 14 '52 1200w

"The book as a whole is not pessimistic. We are living in a great age, he says, and great ages have never been comfortable to live in."

+ New Yorker 28:146 S 13 '52 140w

"If Mr. Shirer were an ordinary journalist, his interpretations of current history would have the same interest as the events he has devoted so much of his life to reporting. But because he sees beneath the surface and has attempted in this book to draw some conclusions from his work during the past quarter century, those who admire that work may be permitted to express disappointment that he did not go beyond the judgments he has already delivered in his newspaper columns and radio broadcasts." Quincy Howe

Sat R 35:29 S 13 '52 1150w

Springf'd Republican p16C S 14 '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

SHORE, MAXINE. Captive princess; the story of the first Christian princess of Britain; decorations by Kreigh Collins. 309p $3 Longmans

52-9668

Story of a princess of Britain who lived in the first century A. D. and knew the semi-barbaric world of a small British kingdom, the pagan, civilized world of Rome, and the secret world of the early Christians.

Kirkus 20:410 Jl 15 '52 230w

"A beautiful story. . . No student of history in high school should miss this book."

+ Library J 77:1749 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by F. W. Butler

Library J 77:2188 D 15 '52 80w

"Although this is all told in a somewhat old-fashioned style, the narrative itself is packed with incident and moves swiftly. The scene shifts frequently, and the reader is given glimpses of life in various parts of Celtic and Roman Britain, in Gaul and in Rome itself. A continuing thread in the narrative is the story of the establishment of Christianity in Britain and in Rome." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times pt2, p10 N 16 '52 170w

"The moving scenes from the life of the early Christians will remind young people of those seen in the film 'Quo Vadis.' The author found the first inspiration for her story in Paul's letter to Timothy, which mentions Claudia, her brother, and Pudens. She studied many sources for her background material: Jerome, Tacitus, Seneca, and others. The story gives new insight into the life of the early Britons and the first Christians." B. W. S.

+ Sat R 35:62 N 15 '52 240w

School & Society 76:208 S 27 '52 30w

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON, ed. Governments of continental Europe. rev ed 881p maps $6 Macmillan

342.4 Europe—Politics 52-1216

"Revised to take into account the many changes since the first edition in 1940 [Book Review Digest 1941]. Covers France, Italy,

SHOTWELL, J. T.—Continued
Switzerland, Germany, and the U.S.S.R. Each section is by a different author; the greater part of the U.S.S.R. section, by Michael T. Florinsky, was published under the title Towards an Understanding of the U.S.S.R. [Book Review Digest 1951]. (Booklist) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 50w
Booklist 48:300 My 15 '52
Current Hist 22:319 My '52 120w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R 35:57 O 4 '52 30w

SHOUER, LOUELLA G. Quick and easy meals for 2; il. by Reisle Lonette; pref. by Ann Batchelder. 274p $2.95 Holt

641.5 Cookery 52-6633

About two hundred menus with the necessary recipes. "The arrangement is by season, Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter, with menus and tested recipes for each. There are charts, tables, explanations and directions all in the order that one would expect from the associate editor of Ladies Home Journal." (Library J)

Booklist 48:374 J1 15 '52
Bookmark 11:179 My '52 20w
Kirkus 20:184 Mr 1 '52 130w

"Very good." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 77:1203 J1 '52 70w

"It deals realistically with moments when money and time are scarce and it should prove very helpful to a bride or anyone combining home and career." Charlotte Turgeon
+ N Y Times p12 J1 27 '52 40w

SHU, CH'ING-CH'UN (LAU SHAW, pseud). Drum singers, by Lau Shaw; tr. from the Chinese by Helen Kuo. 283p $3.50 Harcourt

52-6438

Modern China is the scene of this novel of changing customs. It is the story of fourteen-year-old Lotus Charm, who the raised as an entertainer wants to have a respectable life. The leader of the troupe is Fang Pao Ching, who is the girl's foster father.

Booklist 48:206; 230 Mr 1 '52; Mr 15 '52
Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 175:234 Je '52 190w

Reviewed by A. L. Bader
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Ap 20 '52 450w

"The characters are real, warm, interesting. Their story is an absorbing one. The Drum Singers enhances the growing reputation of a most skilful novelist." Jerome Smiley
+ Commonweal 55:644 Ap 4 '52 330w

Kirkus 20:89 F 1 '52 260w

"Not just another novel about China but a moving account of real people told with the sympathy and realism found in the author's Rickshaw Boy (1945) but ending on a more hopeful note." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 77:433 Mr 1 '52 110w

"Although 'The Drum Singers' stands in close relation with the [author's] other three books, it is probably the weakest of the group. I do not know when it was written, but it has about it occasionally an air of rather tired contrivance. . . The characters often behave in ways that serve to advance the action rather than reveal themselves, and the resulting inconsistencies mar the book. . . But though they work some injury on 'The Drum Singers' they do not keep it from being an illuminating piece of writing that consolidates Lau Shaw's position as China's leading contemporary novelist and interpreter to the West." J. J. Espey
+ N Y Herald Tribune BK R p11 Ap 13 '52 900w

"This is a wonderful story to read aloud, time and television permitting. . . The documentary aspect of the story, the struggle of an ancient profession to survive today and under war conditions, provide the most interesting parts of the book." Mai-mai Sze

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '52 400w

"The main trouble with this book is that it is too long by about half."

New Yorker 28:133 Mr 22 '52 80w

Reviewed by Nathan Rothman
Sat R 35:19 My 10 '52 550w

Reviewed by J. F. Rooney
Spring'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 120w

"The movement in the story is leisurely, and the clearly drawn characters in the account make for good reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:173 J1 '52

SHUB, BORIS, and QUINT, BERNARD. Since Stalin; a photo history of our time. 184p il $3.95 Swen publications co, inc, 11 W. 42d st, N.Y. 18

947.084 Communism—Pictorial works. Russia—History—Pictorial works 51-13618

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"College and school textbook buyers will welcome this superb popular outline of the history of Communism; or if they don't, one wonders what they are waiting for. Boris Shub has provided a carefully wrought, condensed narrative of the major events in the birth and growth of Communism and its evolution into an aggressive totalitarian empire. His collaborator, Bernard Quint, of Life magazine, has provided a multitude of well-chosen photographs, many of them rare or new." James Rorty

+ Commonweal 55:357 Ja 11 '52 230w

"In 30,000 words of politically sophisticated, lucid text and more than 400 remarkable photographs, Since Stalin presents a documented, fascinating history of the making of today's world crisis. It offers a prescription for cure without war that we cannot afford to ignore." Alexander Klein

+ New Repub 126:18 Mr 17 '52 600w

Special Libraries 43:221 J1 '52 60w

"The foreign aims of the Soviet Union, rather than such domestic changes as industrialization, are stressed, and the text accompanying the photographs provides a vivid account of the continuity of world communism and its many ramifications. The chief interest of the volume nevertheless lies in the photographs, many of them inaccessible elsewhere, which strikingly illustrate the text."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:61 Mr '52 160w

SHULIM, JOSEPH ISIDORE. The Old Dominion and Napoleon Bonaparte; a study in American opinion. (Columbia univ. Studies in history, economics and public law) 332p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

975.5 Virginia—History. Public opinion—Virginia. Napoleon I, emperor of the French 52-6920

"Survey of opinions of Virginians, particularly from 1798 to 1809, about French diplomacy and domestic politics. Sources include manuscripts, newspapers, and collected works." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 46:595 Je '52 20w

"An exhausting piece of reportorial work supported by 835 footnotes and a 25-page bibliography. The text is dreary reading, for it is full of repetitious quotations that add nothing to our knowledge, and it is almost empty of criticism or interpretation. For all the show of finished scholarship, this is a job of scissors and paste." A. L. Burt

— Ann Am Acad 281:211 My '52 140w

SHURTLEFF, BERTRAND LESLIE. Escape from the icecap; a tale of Huskie and Spare-ribs; jacket drawing and il. by Diana Thorne. 282p $2.50 Bobbs

52-5819

"This story is a sequel to 'Two Against the North' [Book Review Digest 1949]. It tells of the two huskies, Huskie and Sparreribs, and their masters, veterans of the K-9 Corps in the Pacific during the Second World War, and their rescue of two American flyers brought down on an ice-floe near Wrangel Island." Sat R

"Here is a long story, in smallish type, for men and boys over fourteen who want a modern thriller with a setting that is a change from their Westerns." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 11 '52 80w

"It is a modern, exciting tale that will probably appeal to grown-ups as well as to the older boys and girls."

+ Sat R 35:61 My 10 '52 70w

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 50w

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SICKELS, EVELYN RAY. That boy Johnny! il. by Jean Martinez. 120p $2 Scribner

52-12926

"With his pet lamb Mischief, Johnny lives on a New Hampshire farm, and the unusual plot focuses on some lost pants. All the incidents have been whittled down neatly by family retelling, for Johnny was the author's great-uncle." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 49:113 N 15 '52

"An unusually lively story... The author's great-uncle was the real Johnny and she has given universal appeal to the stories about him handed down in her family. Good line drawings." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:405 D '52 90w

"Mild family fun and the traditional apple stealing and punishment situations abound, but there is really not enough regional detail to help a tame story hold attention."

— + Kirkus 20:553 S 1 '52 110w

"It has been a long time since I have read a story so heart-warming, so real, with such vibrant, beautiful people." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 77:1909 N 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 16 '52 40w

SIEBERT, FREDRICK SEATON. Freedom of the press in England, 1476-1776; the rise and decline of government controls. 411p $7.50 Univ. of Ill. press

323.44 Liberty of the press 52-5892

"Through an exhaustive investigation of court cases, Parliamentary discussions, and official papers of such agencies as the Stationer's Company, the author has put together a step-by-step history of the rise and decline of the concept of governmental control over the circulation of ideas. The period covers English practice from the time when the printing press first came into general use in the country until the outbreak of the American Revolution." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"A thoroughgoing study of the evolution of the idea of free expression which has been a peculiarity of Western political conviction." W. F. Swindler

+ Ann Am Acad 283:218 S '52 500w

"Prof. Siebert's work is detailed and is supplied with many footnotes and references. It is a work for advanced study rather than casual reading. It should be useful to students of journalism and newspaper executives and lawyers." Gilbert Twiss

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 14 '52 330w

"Unfortunately, though the author is aware of it, no attempt is made to distinguish between the trade of printing and the function of publishing. Since some of the earlier regulatory efforts were intended to affect both phases of the subject, the reader must make the distinctions for himself and is not always provided with the facts needed to guide him. This is a serious weakness in a book that introduces a fascinating subject in legal history... Aside from pointing out where the crises came that caused direct action, this initial study is important for revealing the need of further study of a very subtle historical problem."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:289 S '52 200w

SIEGFRIED, ANDRE. Nations have souls; patterns of national culture in the world of today; tr. by Edward Fitzgerald. 213p $3 Putnam

909 Civilization, Modern 52-6127

"Analysis of the transformation of Western civilization. As might be expected his best chapters are those on the French and the British. The German? Well, perhaps the events of the past twenty years are too close." Library J

Booklist 48:183 F 1 '52

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 27 '52 420w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 24 '52 650w

Foreign Affairs 31:153 O '52 20w

"Recommended for all libraries." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 76:2113 D 15 '51 140w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 174:232 Mr 8 '52 1150w

"Mr. Siegfried has in this book above all used his mind, a good conventional French mind. This is not enough. But it is something. At least we can learn a bit more about what Frenchmen like Mr. Siegfried think the world is like." Crane Brinton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 20 '52 1000w

"The evidences of the crisis are all about us; and few would disagree with the main lines of Siegfried's analysis of it. When it comes to his solution, however, it is another matter; here his essays are pitifully inadequate. They have a certain superficial charm. A lively style, interspersed with personal anecdotes, makes few demands upon the intelligence of the readers. But the issues involved are too serious for charm and the contrast between what is being said and the manner of its saying is distressing." Oscar Handlin

N Y Times p18 Ja 27 '52 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 16 '52 200w

Reviewed by J. C. Cairns

Sat R 35:31 Ag 16 '52 340w

SIEPMANN, JANE. Lion on Scott street; pictures by Clement Hurd. [30p] $1.75 Oxford 52-11195

Picture storybook about a little boy who saw a lion on Scott street and what he did about it.

Booklist 49:38 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:11 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 5 '52 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 11 '52 50w

"The picture-book age will love the action and the color that fill these pages." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:317 O '52 70w

Kirkus 20:449 Ag 1 '52 90w

"Will appeal to preschool and kindergarten age level. Recommended." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 77:1411 S 1 '52 30w

"The humor of this picture-book lies in its matter-of-fact understatement, yet it has an unexpected, childlike imagination which reminds me of Dr. Seuss' much-loved extravaganza, 'And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street.'" E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '52 160w

"Little children will find this an amusing and rewarding picture book."

+ Sat R 35:47 N 15 '52 80w

SIEVERS, HARRY JOSEPH. Benjamin Harrison; v. 1. Hoosier warrior, 1833-1865; introd. by Hilton U. Brown. 344p il $5 Regnery

B or 92 Harrison, Benjamin

The first volume of a biography of the twenty-third president of the United States, who was a grandson of the ninth president. The "Hoosier warrior" discusses his rise from a pioneer boyhood in Ohio to the time of the Civil war. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. J. Graf

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 21 '52
420w

"It has remained for a scholarly young Jesuit priest to rescue a Presbyterian elder from an undeserved neglect. . . The 'Hoosier Warrior' is but the prelude to the culmination of the Presidency. Its great contribution is to disclose the warm and loving heart that beat beneath the forbidding exterior of the old curmudgeon in the White House." Margaret Leech

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 26 '52
1200w

"The early Harrison, despite the author's uncritical and sympathetic approach, remains the frigid, self-contained figure that contemporaries knew in maturity. He inspired respect without devotion, he was an intellectual without ideas; he was a leader without the common touch." H. F. Graff

N Y Times p10 N 16 '52 400w

"In the present volume Harrison's career is carried to the close of the Civil War. It is a well-written narrative, based largely upon Harrison's voluminous private papers which were opened to Father Sievers. These papers, from which numerous lengthy extracts are taken, enable the reader to penetrate Harrison's cold exterior and find the human qualities and feelings which he often revealed in letters to his wife." K. M. Stamp

+ Sat R 36:18 Ja 10 '53 650w

SIFFERD, CALVIN S. College and you; letters to Eleanor and Tom; il. by Perry N. Ragouzis. 111p $2.50 McKnight

371.422 Students. Personnel service in education 52-7112

Advice for those about to enter college, given in a series of letters, purporting to be written by a father to his twin children. Discusses academic, social, athletic, romantic, and financial problems.

Booklist 48:235 Mr 15 '52

"The advice is good throughout, although the letter device seems to us to get badly in the way. It is obviously chosen to lighten the serious advice and make the whole thing more readable, but this reviewer finds the device too artificial to be convincing. M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 35:38 S 13 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:87 Mr '52

SILLER, VAN, pseud. See Van Siller, H.

SILVA, RUTH CARIDAD. Presidential succession. 213p $3.50 Univ. of Mich. press

353.03 Presidents (United States)—Succession 52-562

"Seven Presidents of the United States have died in office; two others were for prolonged periods unable to discharge the duties of the office. These nine cases, and the complex history of legislation governing succession beyond the Vice President, provide the materials for this historical, legal, and analytical study." U S Quarterly Bk R

"There may be those who will disagree with some of the author's conclusions; but the book brings together all the arguments, precedents, situations, and decisions in respect to the problem of presidential succession, and it provides the definitive study of this long-neglected subject." C. A. Berdahl

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:895 S '52 650w

"This book has a threefold interest. It presents an exhaustive review of every shade of opinion which has been held on the subject of presidential succession, from the time of the Constitutional Convention to the present. It warns us that the current provisions, even though enacted as late as 1947, are inadequate to meet various crises which might arise, and may even be unconstitutional. Furthermore, it proposes a persuasive, if debatable, remedy." J. C. Long

+ Pol Sci Q 67:292 Je '52 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 6 '52
120w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:172 Je '52 320w

SIMAK, CLIFFORD D. City. 224p $2.75 Gnome press

52-10460

Eight science-fiction stories.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52

"There's better writing here and a sustained philosophical theme that rates it above the usual SF."

+ Kirkus 20:290 My 1 '52 90w

"Simak has written many good and a few excellent stories; but his chief fame as a science fiction writer rests on his chronicle of the Webster family, here gathered for the first time into book form. This series of eight stories is one of the major highpoints of modern science fiction." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 6 '52
200w

"Each of these stories is satisfying; taken together, they have a good deal more depth than most science-fiction." Basil Davenport

+ N Y Times p33 S 14 '52 200w

"The stories are laced together with mock-scholarly dissertations that are, themselves, entertaining, and there are a number of quite stimulating ideas concerning the future of our society." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 6 '52
60w

"Fair, but lacks unity." Fletcher Pratt
Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 20w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Act of passion; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 239p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

52-9542

Psychological study of the mind and heart of a murderer, set forth in the letters of the condemned man to his judge, the one man he hopes may understand why he committed the crime.

"The book has a sharply individual flavor, and it achieves a reality so intense that I feel I have seen the whole story actually pass before my eyes."

+ Atlantic 190:111 N '52 170w

Kirkus 20:472 Ag 1 '52 190w

Reviewed by S. M. Fitzgerald

New Repub 128:27 Ja 5 '53 550w

"To his psychological novels, Georges Simenon brings the same mastery that gave him top rank as the author of the Maigret detective stories. They have the pace, the tension, the drama that make it difficult for the reader to put the book down until the last page is reached. . . Simenon's art is a peculiarly individual one. There is, at the start of his story, nothing familiar or sympathetic in a man like Alavoine or a girl like Martine. It is what he does in explaining them, in creating the emotional world they inhabit that leaves one moved by and persuaded of their integrity as human beings." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 5 '52
600w

"Simenon the novelist does not probe more deeply than Simenon the commercial writer; he is simply more wordy, more pretentious, and a good deal less effective. There is hardly a Maigret story that does not rank—whether as entertainment or as serious literature—well above 'Act of Passion.'" Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p12 D 21 '52 240w

"It is a painful story, which seems on the surface to be a frank recital of extraordinary love, agonizing jealousy, and final despair. A second reading, or even a second thought, reveals a further and much deeper and more deadly picture. . . M. Simenon, a powerful writer, of few words, offers no comment on any of this. His wonderful book is so spare as to be hardly more than a skeleton. His people are not very likable, and their effect on each other is detestable, but what Simenon knows, and has the genius to impart, is that their need for each other is fatal." Maeve Brennan

+ New Yorker 28:161 N 8 '52 1800w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 19 '52 40w

"Aside from his belief that there is only a thin barrier between the murderer and the man who has led a blameless life, there is the avowal that no human being is evil. But another might ask if man is both bad and good what meaning is there in anger or hate for an evil deed, since both would be unavoidable aspects of our humanity." Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:17 O 11 '52 700w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p7C N 30 '52 260w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Girl in his past; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 211p $3 Prentice-Hall

52-8013

Psychological study of the mind and motives of a murderer.

"In the direct, sparse fashion for which the author is noted, The Girl in His Past exploits the frankest sex realism and sadistic violence; its sound and fury signify precisely nothing." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:155 My '52 100w

"The emphasis on the importance of sexual behavior and its revelations keep this out of the regular Simenon crime-sales, limit it library-wise and make it of interest to non-practicing psychologists."

Kirkus 20:84 F 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 2 '52 450w

"Readers who are upset by Gallic frankness should back away from that case-history at all costs. Those who believe that any life is worth exploring if it is explored truthfully and in depth will stay to the last bitter comma." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p22 F 24 '52 470w

"The story seems ragged and inconclusive, as though M. Simenon were not entirely interested in what he was doing, in spite of the intensity of his writing. The whole fault may lie in the character of Professor Méchouard, the inscrutable psychiatrist, who is part detective, part priest, and part doctor, and who evades the functions of all three."

New Yorker 28:129 Mr 29 '52 240w

"As usual M. Simenon combines a grimly suspenseful story with brilliantly evoked settings and a sound psychological understanding. As for the writing—if extravagant statements about the pre-eminence of particular French prose stylists are still in order, I would nominate M. Simeon. His prose in this—which is among the best of his works—is, as always, cleanly functional, impeccably beautiful." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R 35:34 Mr 8 '52 180w

SIMEONS, A. T. W. Mask of a lion. 305p $3.50 Knopf

52-8513

Novel about leprosy in India. Govind, a prosperous tailor, on discovering he had been stricken with leprosy, sent his family away and he joined a group of fellow-sufferers. The story follows his experiences up to his final redemption.

Booklist 49:106 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 23 '52 120w

+ Kirkus 20:518 Ag 15 '52 260w

"Strongly sympathetic characterization; detailed descriptions of native customs tend to retard the leisurely plot." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1657 O 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p8 O 10 '52 50w

"Mr. Simeons has written a book of considerable charm, a book touchingly and modestly and truly painful, sentimental only in the old-fashioned way of providing an improbable happy ending." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:489 O 25 '52 150w

"The novel has its difficult moments—though surely not too difficult—for the squeamish. But Dr. Simeons is so warmly, spontaneously interested in the human side of the poor wretches on whom fate lays so heavy a finger, and sees so clearly, that the novel manages to maintain throughout a nice emotional equilibrium." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 26 '52 600w

"Interesting and beautifully written novel." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p30 O 26 '52 360w

"Dr. Simeons gives a certain amount of factual information about lepers and their condition, but while what he has to say is informative, his book is rather lifeless, and his people are not much more than pawns of his interest in their disease."

— + New Yorker 28:178 D 13 '52 110w

"It would be pleasant to record that The Mask of a Lion is a picaresque novel of considerable proportions. Unfortunately, it is not. Dr. A. T. W. Simeons has contented himself with a miniature canvas, and within the limits he has chosen for himself he has succeeded admirably at least half the time." Robert Payne

+ — Sat R 35:16 N 29 '52 750w

Time 60:114 N 24 '52 300w

"The detailed description of a wandering leper's life is fascinating in its revelation of an extraordinary world with its own rigid code of behaviour. Those who feel that such a book must be too painful to read can be reassured; indeed, one criticism that might be made of The Mask of a Lion is that its dominant note of cheerfulness tends to conceal the true nature of the leper's plight. Nevertheless, the book as a whole is a remarkable feat of sympathetic interpretation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 17 '52 190w

SIMKIN, COLIN, ed. Currier and Ives' America. See Currier and Ives

SIMMONS, FREDERIC L. Mobilization and inflation; foreword by Walter B. Smith. 98p $2.75 Claremont colleges

330.973 Inflation (finance). U.S.—Economic policy. Industrial mobilization (for war) 51-8414

"A series of lectures, recently delivered by the author, describing how to control the current inflationary spiral and how to preserve a sound economy in time of national emergency." (Sat R) No index.

"This little book contains much pertinent information and sound interpretation on problems central to our present economic situation and the outlook for the future." E. G. Nourse

+ Ann Am Acad 280:188 Mr '52 1050w

Foreign Affairs 30:671 J1 '52 10w

"The three lectures contained in the booklet are certainly worth reading and may serve as a guide to further study of the problem, ably treated lately by Seymour E. Harris, Albert G. Hart, Jules Backman, and others." Michael Albery

+ Pol Sci Q 67:630 D '52 280w

Sat R 35:46 Ja 13 '52 30w

SIMON, EDITH (MRS E. C. R. REEVE). Golden hand. 501p $4 Putnam

52-5272

Novel of life in England in the time of Richard II. The story centers around the Widowsen family: Edwin who committed a sin for which he performed a lifelong penance; and his sons, among them Alfred who became an abbot when the women he loved was forced to marry another.

Booklist 48:298 My 15 '52

"This is a curiously unrewarding book which, despite some passages of undoubted power, never achieves wholeness." Riley Hughes

— + Cath World 175:473 S '52 240w

Reviewed by August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 11 '52 370w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 22 '52 300w

+ Kirkus 20:231 Ap 1 '52 280w

"Miss Simon's background in art undoubtedly has enabled her to recreate with unusual vividness both the setting and the spirit of the building of a cathedral—a combination that made it possible for craftsmen to make things with their own hands and crude tools that men with all the implements of engineering and science cannot rival. . . 'The Golden Hand' is a spacious and carefully wrought novel, thought-provoking and rewarding." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 4 '52 750w

"Miss Simon's style is literate, attractive, uncluttered by the conversational embroidery of conventional period pieces. . . This is a rich and (from a layman's point of view) accurate adventure in history. There is a great deal here to fascinate and absorb the imagination. But where the sense of sin speaks so much more loudly than love, faith itself grows lackluster." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p24 Ap 27 '52 650w

"Edith Simon does it all marvelously well. She is, of course, a scholar in the period of which she writes; authenticity is written all over the story." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 1 '52 800w

"This brilliantly told story of England in the last half of the fourteenth century is not a conventional historical novel in any possible sense of the word. Indeed, it eschews most of the devices which have now come to be the well-worn tricks of the trade. . . Here is no intrigue, no theatrically-costumed derring-do, and very little sword play—although plenty of things happen. In fact there is really no plot, not, at any rate, in the spider-web sense of the word." T. C. Chubb

+ Sat R 35:18 My 10 '52 550w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 500w

"The Golden Hand is worthy of the master of historical fiction himself, Sir Walter Scott. And it is often rich where Scott is poor—in the homely detail of ordinary scenes and natural activity."

+ Time 59:102 Ap 28 '52 700w

"It is a remarkable piece of work, which should be read by everyone interested in the past."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Je 27 '52 270w

SIMON, RUTH. Mat and Mandy and the little old car; with pictures by Lisl Weil. 109p $2.50 Crowell

52-7864

Mat and Mandy and their father and mother lived in a valley where it was very hot in summer. In the distance were some cool-looking blue mountains. This is the story of the family's adventure in their old car, going to the mountains where it was cool. Ages 5 to 8.

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 30w

"Gay and delightful family summer doings."

+ Kirkus 20:657 O 1 '52 100w

"Recommended." F. M. Hensley
+ Library J 77:1819 O 15 '52 70w

"The locale is undefined, but it's a fine place for adventures. . . Short chapters and Lisl Weil's many droll pictures make this an easy book for the post-primer reader and it is good to read aloud." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p36 S 28 '52 120w

SIMONDS, HERBERT RUMSEY, and others. Extrusion of plastics, rubber and metals. 454p il $10 Reinhold

668.41 Extrusion process 52-7079

"A practical survey of extrudable materials and extrusion processes. It is devoted mainly to the extrusion of synthetic plastic materials, but other materials are included as indicated in the title. It is intended for production engineers and others with practical interests in the subject. There are many tables of engineering data, and the numerous illustrations include photographs of extrusion equipment and operations. Possibly because the book is based primarily on a survey of current industrial practices, literature references have been omitted." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:538 Mr 15 '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:22 Mr '52

"One of the most complete treatments of extrusion available anywhere, the book is intended for engineers working in plastics and related fields. For those with a technical background who wish to learn about extrusion the book will be more than helpful. Even those with little technical training, but with experience in the industry, will find much of the material accessible."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:337 S '52 130w

SIMONT, MARC. Lovely summer [il. by the author]. [44p] $2 Harper

52-7876

Text and pictures describe the lovely summer when Gladys and Jerome, a pair of rabbits, lived very well indeed on the garden produce of a city couple, who seemed unable to foil the rabbits.

Kirkus 20:654 O 1 '52 120w

"One of those hilariously funny picture-book stories that may seem more amusing to grown-ups than to children. . . The whole cast of characters should meet Peter Rabbit and Mr. McGregor. Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1819 O 15 '52 80w

"The bunnies' adventures are likely to enchant youngsters who enjoy putting one over on grown-ups." P. C.

+ N Y Times p2, p39 N 16 '52 80w

"While this is not quite as funny as 'Polly's Oats,' it is a very amusing picture book."

+ Sat R 35:47 N 15 '52 60w

SINCLAIR, HAROLD. Music out of Dixie. 306p $3.50 Rinehart

52-5574

"A novel about a boy, a city and an art, and how the three grew into and out of each other; how each was sometimes the victim, sometimes the victor in a passionate struggle for expression. The city is New Orleans during the second decade of our century; the boy is a young Negro; the art is jazz." Publisher's note

Booklist 48:339 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by R. G. Peck

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 6 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:198 Mr 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 77:1205 J1 '52 90w

"Mr. Sinclair knows well the city and the music about which he writes, yet they do not come too vigorously to life; there is the odor of research in his descriptions of Storyville, and around his pictures of city life before 1914.

In suggesting the inner loneliness of an orphan boy he is more successful." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 M 18 '52 550w

"For the first time, a strong and honest novel has been derived from the rich materials of New Orleans jazz. . . Here for once is a 'new' phase of New Orleans." H. T. Kane

+ N Y Times p25 My 25 '52 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 13 '52 140w

SINCLAIR, KENNETH L. Mystery mine; il. by Sidney A. Quinn. 209p $2.50 Winston

51-13743

Mystery story for boys, laid in Arizona mountain country.

Kirkus 19:534 S 15 '51 100w

"A story that is interesting, fast-paced, and not too improbable. Better written than the average mystery. For 14-16-year-olds and young people's collections." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 76:1575 O 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p24 F 3 '52 80w

"Lon Barker, son of an Arizona cattle rancher, helps his guest Steve Allen to a summer's job in a logging camp, so there's some interesting stuff about both trades as well as about the abandoned mine which provides the mystery. Fine for teen-agers who like them thrilling." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 11 '51 70w

"It's thrill-a-minute reading for boys."

+ Springfield Republican p28A N 25 '51 20w

SINCLAIR, WILLIAM ANGUS. Conditions of knowing; an essay towards a theory of knowledge. (International library of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 260p $3.50 Harcourt

121 Knowledge, Theory of 51-13844

"This essay toward a theory of knowledge is an attempt to detect and identify some changes of general outlook in the epistemological field which seem to be taking place in our society." (School & Society) Index.

"The presentation of this theory neglects to follow out to a solution the traditional difficulties which it poses. . . Again, this account sets up a sharp contrast between relationships of cause and effect and of means and ends in behavior. Above all, the theory fails to take into account that points of view cohere for all their relativity—and not only because we may happen to agree, but because of the nature of the things with which we deal. . . At the same time, this essay contains some important insights." Richard Hope

+ Ann Am Acad 280:217 Mr '52 340w

"I should not be surprised to find the book enjoying a wide popularity since the writings of iconoclasts appeal to the rebel in all of us. The question which comes to my mind is whether or not the book shatters itself by attempting to root philosophy in the attitudes of mind of observers. Mr. Sinclair's view of the conditions of knowing turns and returns us again and again to the attitudes individuals have and their processes of selecting and grouping in their attention. This approach has the effect of making the real world amorphous, structureless, and its objects dependent on individual consciousnesses and all the caprices of individual minds. . . Mr. Sinclair's metaphorical account of reality will no doubt alienate those who are attempting to find a more objective ground for epistemology." R. D. Mack

J Philos 49:506 Jl 17 '52 2250w

"Author, a lecturer on philosophy at University of Edinburgh, clearly and simply expounds his theory though it is not fast reading. For all collections that may include abstract philosophy." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 76:1928 N 15 '51 130w

School & Society 74:367 D 8 '51 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 11 '52 500w

SIPLEY, LOUIS WALTON. Half century of color. 216p il col pl $8 Macmillan

778.6 Color photography

51-13148

"The most remarkable change in American periodicals in the last decade or so is the greatly increased use of color. . . The full story of this development is told dramatically and with the aid of numerous examples of color reproductions, most of which have historical interest. Also, there are many black and white illustrations. The book is based on the collections of the American Museum of Photography of which the author is Director." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Valerie Bowers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 16 '51 30w

"All who have an interest in the subject are advised to obtain a copy at once, for there are already rumors that it may soon go out of print." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1939 N 15 '51 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:91 N '51

SISSON, ROSEMARY ANNE. Adventures of Ambrose; il. by Astrid Walford. 118p $2.50 Dutton

52-8247

Story of Ambrose the Mouse, who went to London to visit his great-aunt Harriet who lived in Buckingham Palace. He took his friend Simon the field mouse, and all three of them saw the Royal family.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:101 D '52 20w

"The beauty of this very English story is its tender and lovable quality. It will leave a warm and happy feeling in the hearts of the 6 to 10 year olds who read or listen to it." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 12 '52 180w

"With unsophisticated and charming details in story and drawings, this is something to be enjoyed by small children and older members of a family at the same time." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:406 D '52 90w

Kirkus 20:598 S 15 '52 90w

"Recommended." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 80w

"The style is good, yet we feel it moves a bit slowly for the nursery age who will be the ones to believe it. More gently conceived, with less satire than the parallel new story, 'Mouse Manor,' it will appeal to homes where Winnie the Pooh still is loved." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52 160w

"The crucial test of a fantasy about animals is the credibility of the animals as personalities. This gentle, rather old-fashioned story passes that test." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p31 S 7 '52 160w

SITWELL, EDITH, comp. Book of the winter. 114p $3 Vanguard

808.8 Literature—Collections. Winter

51-14890

An anthology composed of excerpts from the literature of many times and places, all concerning the physical and spiritual aspects of the winter season.

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 90w

"A Book of the Winter is a singularly intense parable of the soul's journey. Miss Sitwell succeeds in making her own voice heard through the voices of a great many others and in presenting her own single vision through a multiplicity of eyes. Her choice is extremely judicious and there is hardly an item one would wish away. The only pity is that she does not handle her texts more carefully." Iain Fletcher

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:556 D 2 '50 1100w

SITWELL, EDITH—Continued

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 2 '52 70w

New Yorker 28:127 Mr 8 '52 80w

"Though many well-known favorites are to be found here, Miss Sitwell was not concerned with producing 'a hotch-potch of everything that has been written about winter.' She has rather, made a book out of other poets' words which is very poetically her own and from a bookmaking point of view, too, it is a very pleasing volume." Lawrence Ferling

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 6 '52 150w

"Dr. Sitwell finds passages that are united, whatever their dissimilarities in age, theme or speech, by the rare beauty of their language. She has the finest of ears for the cadences of good writing in whatever medium. So as a bedside book, or merely to be slipped into the pocket against a dull journey, her anthology will be found to contain pleasures to be savoured one by one, and more than once, by anyone who loves poetry." J. M. Cohen

+ Spec 184:472 N 10 '50 750w

SIU, RALPH GUN HOY. Microbial decomposition of cellulose; with special reference to cotton textiles. 531p il $10 Reinhold

589.9 Cellulose. Micro-organisms. Textile fibers 51-13634

"A synthesis of scientific information on the deterioration and destruction of cellulosic materials by bacteria and fungi. The subject is of wide interest. It is a major topic for the soil scientist interested in biological processes in agricultural soils, and also for manufacturers of electronic apparatus built for use in the tropics. The author's discussion of basic matters such as casual organisms are potentially of interest to anyone concerned with the topic but his 'case histories' and his information on prevention of deterioration are largely restricted as the title indicates to cotton textiles. The heavy documentation is indicated by the fact that there are approximately 2,200 names in the author index. The author is Research Director of the Pioneering Research Laboratories of the U.S. Army Quartermaster Corps." N Y New Tech Bks

"Treatment is technical, and the book is suited primarily to chemists and other persons with considerable education in the physical sciences as well as at least a superficial knowledge of microbiology." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1939 N 15 '51 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:83 N '51

"In a considerable number of cases throughout the book, interpretations of a debatable nature are presented, and the reader may wish to consult the original papers. The book does, however, represent a valuable contribution to scientific coordination in a previously uncoordinated field. The contents will prove of interest primarily to those concerned with problems of fiber deterioration, but some of the basic information should be valuable also to research workers engaged in the study of microbial action on cellulose in wood and paper, and in soils."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:101 Mr '52 220w

SKIDMORE, HOBERT DOUGLAS. Years are even. 342p $3.50 Random house

52-7133

The theme of this novel is the peculiar relationship which exists between identical twins. This is explored in the story of Cyril and Cecil Derfey, as their lives are recalled by Cyril after Cecil's tragic death.

Kirkus 20:567 S 1 '52 160w

"The ideas of the book are deeply reasoned and well muscled with metaphor and wit. But Mr. Skidmore explains rather than tells his tale. The women, Cyril's as well as Cecil's, grow incredible to the extent that they grow amorous; and they are very loving most of the time. But supremely disturbing is the author's elaborate flashback machinery; it grinds up his story into little bits of total recall, scatters them wildly across the chapters and leaves the reader in puzzled admiration at such audacities with time. What remains is an acute apprehension of the taut spiritual cosmos of a pair of twins and the genuineness of a special insight." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 5 '52 950w

"In the present reviewer's opinion, most twins will be repelled by the morbid dependency of the Derfey's. They will, of course, own to many points of recognition between their experiences, all the way from being objects of curiosity to objects of odious comparisons. But the Derfey's, besides being overly maudlin in manner and notably foggy in mind will strike them as eccentric if not downright freaks. Or at least they so strike this member of just such an identical relationship." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p37 O 5 '52 320w

"Throughout this complex narrative, which is in essence a suspense story, the author manages to hold the fascinated interest of the reader. His philosophy that emerges is clear, though there may be more than one interpretation of its meaning." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R 35:16 N 15 '52 650w

SLATER, HENRY J. Ship of destiny. 187p $2.75 Crowell

52-817

A tale of world wide disaster in which the "surviving remnant" are the passengers on a huge luxury liner sailing north from South Africa to England.

Booklist 48:248 Ap 1 '52

Kirkus 20:96 F 1 '52 150w

"A bit reminiscent of The Admirable Crichton and of Philip Wylie's When Worlds Collide; quite vivid and exciting. Narrated by the slightly prissy senior wireless operator, who 'pens each word with care' but misuses 'disinterested' along with his literary peers. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:211 F 1 '52 130w

"The situation is an over-familiar one; and Mr. Slater, though he handles technical details reasonably well, casts no fresh novelistic light on it." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 17 '52 80w

"This idea is neither novel nor scientific, and the writing is undistinguished. Action and reaction are on a frenetic scale; even the narrator's love story is so hastily sketched in as to appear an afterthought. There is little attempt at character delineation, and motivation is notable for its absence." V. G.

+ — N Y Times p36 Ap 27 '52 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30 '52 330w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 20w

"It is an excellent story idea, but unfortunately only a Grade B book. Even a fair amount of suspense, wild riots and a gory plague fail to overcome the staginess of the personnel." R. F. H.

+ — Spring'd Republican p21A Mr 23 '52 70w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. East Side General. 311p $3.50 Doubleday

52-5549

A terribly burned man is brought into East Side General hospital. The nature of the burns suggests they are the result of atomic radioactivity. A clever, but untrustworthy young doctor, with a Nazi background, beats the FBI to the discovery of the source of the trouble and thereby loses his life. But the emergency at the East Side General caused by the explosion means a renewed life for the old hospital.

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 30 '52
290w

Kirkus 20:91 F 1 '52 180w

"This reader, for one, couldn't help wishing that 'East Side General' had followed through on its play-by-play description of life in a metropolitan hospital, and turned into a significant study of the role of doctor and nurse in society today. And yet, taken as a medical-adventure novel, with some cogent social comment thrown in for good measure, Dr. Slaughter's latest is the sort of book that pins the reader to the last page." Richard Match

N Y Times p23 Mr 30 '52 350w

Sat R 35:53 Je 7 '52 370w

Reviewed by M. J. Butcher

Survey 88:229 My '52 90w

SLAUGHTER, JEAN. Horsemanship for beginners; riding, jumping, and schooling [photographs by Michael J. Phillips; foreword by John W. Wofford]. 118p $3.75 Knopf

798.2 Horsemanship

52-6390

"The book begins with an explanation of the forward seat, bits and martingales, mounting and dismounting. At the end come chapters on buying a horse of your own, and riding in horse shows. In between, the basic rules of good horsemanship are given." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 49:114 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:555 S 1 '52 70w

"Clearly written and well illustrated with excellent photographs by Michael J. Phillips, this is a good book for anyone interested in riding. Although designed for the young owners of horses, there is a great deal here for anyone who rides, even if only in dreams." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 30w

"The ninety-four photos are very fine, showing well-trained children on good mounts. There are remarkable ones of jumping, shying, the hand gallop, turning your horse the right and the wrong way." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 19 '52 260w

"Attractive volume. The writer, a teacher of riding, makes it plain that it is a gentle art, as applied to the horse, but one that takes a lot of learning, and she uses a very firm hand with the beginner who aspires to master it." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p26 O 12 '52 170w

SLESSER, CHARLES, and SCHRAM, STUART R., eds. Preparation, properties and technology of fluorine and organic fluoro compounds. 868p il $10.50 McGraw

661 Fluorine. Fluorine compounds 51-7377

"Until recent years fluorine, a compound so reactive it was difficult to find a container that would hold it, has been mainly a laboratory chemical. However, recent developments make it clear that fluorine is about to come into its own as an industrial chemical as well. This new volume in the 'National Nuclear Energy Series' contains a wide range of the information on fluorine and its compounds, even including a chapter on the industrial handling of fluorine." (Library J) Index.

"The volume as a whole is primarily of historical interest. Most of this work was published in the March, 1947, issue of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry and has been significantly improved in only a few cases. Had this book appeared five years ago, it would have been of great value in the development of fluorine chemistry. At the present time it serves as a more permanent record than the journal publication. A critical extended summary, eliminating duplication and evaluating the results, would have been very welcome." W. H. Pearlson

Am Chem Soc J 74:2951 Je 5 '52 550w

"The book has been well planned by the editors and is excellently written, although the style of writing varies widely because of the large number of contributors involved. Since the material covered has largely appeared elsewhere and in view of the considerable research in this field which has been published since 1945, the book is recommended to those who are primarily interested in the field of fluorine chemistry or who wish to include in their libraries chemical research of historical significance." O. R. Pierce

+ Chem & Eng N 29:5538 D 31 '51 260w

"Though based on research and experience with work on the atomic bomb, the book is potentially of much interest to chemists engaged in peace time pursuits in laboratories and in industry." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:62 Ja 1 '52 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:86 N '51

"The book will be useful to those handling fluorine or fluorinated compounds, but cannot be recommended for general information on fluoro chemistry. The safety precautions and recommendations noted are valuable to anyone intending to handle elemental fluorine." U S Quarterly Bk R 8:95 Mr '52 200w

SLOANE, ERIC. Weather book. 90p il $3.75
Duell

551.5 Weather

52-14141

A simplified explanation of the whys and wherefores of weather and weather forecasting, suitable in style for reading by interested teen-agers or amateur adults. Partial contents: The human side of the weather; The anatomy of air; Fronts and masses; The warm front; The cold front; The weather map; The world of clouds; Atmospheric antics.

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

"One of the best ways to be weather wise is to study the drawings and read the text of Eric Sloane's new book, because he has had the job of teaching weather facts to air force men and sailors and of building museum exhibits, so that he knows how to make the data of isobars and thermals and cold fronts and cumulus clouds as simple as rain and sunshine. He also has humor and common sense so that he is never dull." Russell MacFall

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 14 '52
80w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52
90w

"Amateur weather forecasters (which includes just about everyone) will find this volume an informative and entertaining account of the why and how of the weather." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:1999 N 15 '52 40w

+ Nation 175:535 D 6 '52 20w

"It is true that even the expert can read a primer with profit, and that principle finds no contradiction here. The book's appeal, however, is not nearly so much to the professional as it is to the great number to whom weather information is useful but who too often find it buried in technical detail." W. R. Connole

+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '52 180w

SLOANE, JOSEPH CURTIS. French painting between the past and the present; artists, critics and traditions from 1849 to 1870. 241p 90il $12.50 Princeton univ. press

759.4 Painting, French

51-13872

"Mr. Sloane divides his work into two parts of approximately equal length. Part I is devoted to the theory developed in the writings of the chief critics of the time, from Delécluze to Zola. This criticism displays a shift in attitude from the interest in the antique and the academic to successive concerns with humanitarianism, realism, symbolism, and the subjective. Dealing with the artists, themselves, from Ingres to the young Degas, Part II is not so much a history as a description of those aspects of the artists' works which were involved in the formation of modern concepts of the function of subject matter in painting."

SLOANE, J. C.—Continued
U S Quarterly Bk R

"Highly specialized but stimulating; recommended if budget permits." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 77:796 My 1 '52 160w

"This book is invaluable as a first chapter to the epic of Impressionism and Modern Art, as already recorded by John Rewald."
+ New Repub 125:19 D 10 '51 130w

"Here is a painstaking study of what the critics—all the critics—of the Second Empire thought of the painting of their day. It is a beautifully printed volume, but, alas, the editing is bad, particularly as the text gives the effect of timid writing. . . There is an elaborate bibliography at the end, and useful short accounts of each of the critics whose writings are referred to in the text. Present location of the paintings illustrated appears nowhere, neither with the plates nor in the listing of the plates according to the salon in which each painting was exhibited." S. L. Faison
Sat R 35:43 F 2 '52 850w

"Mr. Sloane, it should be said, admits to a firm belief in the necessity of subject as well as formal content in art. His well-written and well-illustrated book is furnished with bibliographies of the most important authors cited, and with a rich bibliography."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:17 Mr '52 240w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Our friendly friends.
[24p] $2 Vanguard

51-8263

Verse and doublespread pictures describe the animals on a farm for ages 3 to 5.

Booklist 48:162 Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

+ Kirkus 19:613 O 15 '51 90w

"Recommended for preschool age." V. A. Russell

+ Library J 77:65 Ja 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 3 '52
100w

"A wistful parent may enjoy this calm in the literary hurly-burly of cowboys, fire engines and supermen." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 13 '52 110w

"The animals, especially the two dogs, have the charm and humor that Louis Slobodkin always brings to his drawings for little children. The night scene, when the children and their friends have all gone to bed and to sleep, is particularly effective. It is a charming picture book."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:51 N 10 '51 140w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Space ship under the apple tree. 116p $2.50 Macmillan

52-14184

Science fiction for young readers. It tells what happens after Eddie, a boy scout, discovers a ship and a strange little man in his grandmother's apple orchard.

Booklist 49:161 Ja 1 '53

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"Mr. Slobodkin has with his special inventiveness produced a captivating mixture of pseudo-science, Boy Scout activity and country fun in this short account of Eddie Blow and his new friend Marty from the planet Martinea." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:406 D '52 90w

Kirkus 20:502 Ag 15 '52 110w

Library J 77:1739 O 15 '52 30

"There is plenty of the amusing talk, so true to small boys, that makes the pages look easy. But the style is excellent, and there are lovely big words." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 23
'52 150w

"A delightfully fantastic story." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times pt2, p36 N 16 '52 180w

"Will be accepted with joy by younger boys and girls. It is their own science-fiction." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:45 D 13 '52 160w

Spring'd Republican p13C D 14 '52
100w

SLOTKIN, JAMES SYDNEY. Personality development. 401p $4.50 Harper

137 Personality 51-11955

"Dr. Slotkin, an anthropologist, set out 'to develop a systematic theory of personality development, out of the hypotheses and evidence from various relevant sciences' (p. ix). Seeing personality as 'the product of the responses made by an individual with a particular heredity to the specific sequence of situations confronting him during his life history,' and being a social anthropologist, Slotkin develops his outline around the nature and behavioral implications of inheritance and the results for behavior of the individual's contacts with society and culture. A final section considers the ways in which individuals may become different from one another despite certain common items of heredity and experience." (Am J Soc) Indexes.

"Aside from problems of the strategy of theory-building, the reader will find many valuable things in this treatment. It contains the fruits of wide reading in several disciplines, with the result that the myopias of each are partly corrected by comparisons with the others." G. E. Swanson

+ Am J Soc 58:107 J1 '52 750w

"This book should be widely used in courses which in one way or another take up the interrelation of personality, society, and culture. It is well-written and its extensive quotations and summaries of the pertinent literature are most valuable." Kimball Young

+ Am Soc R 17:514 Ag '52 800w

"Professor Slotkin has every right to write a book on personality drawing chiefly on what the scholastics and other prescientists had to say about human behavior, but at least the book ought to be titled in such a way as to make clear to the purchaser what he is getting. . . The book is written in a most trying style. . . It is possible that the use of this book as a textbook in an undergraduate course in personality would not develop in the student a trained incapacity to be a scientist in the study of personality. But it would come very close to it." Manfred Kuhn

— Ann Am Acad 282:156 J1 '52 850w

SMALLEY, BERYL. Study of the Bible in the middle ages. 2d ed rev & enl 406p il $7.50 Philosophical lib.

220.7 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. [52-2676]

"The author, who has made exhaustive researches in this field, discusses in much detail the work of exegetes and commentators from the Fathers to the end of the 13th century. [The] survey includes not only works that were subsequently printed but a vast body of literature which still exists only in manuscript. The work suggests some of the limitations under which medieval scholars labored in their study of the Bible, but it gives ample evidence of their industry and devotion." Christian Century

"In analyzing Biblical studies from the Carolingian Renaissance to 1300, Miss Smalley has made a real contribution to learning."

+ Cath World 176:79 O '52 160w

+ Christian Century 69:1161 O 8 '52 170w

"The second edition makes a good book even better. It is retouched at all points, refers to recent writings on and around the subject, and, in particular, carries farther the inquiry into the work of the friars in the thirteenth century." C. R. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 25 '52
180w

School & Society 75:416 Je 28 '52 20w

"The first edition of Miss Smalley's book was welcomed as a brilliant piece of pioneer work in a field where there was much pioneer work to be done: the new edition—and it is no small compliment that a new edition should have been called for in little more than a decade—shows how much has been accomplished since 1940, and how much still remains to be done."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p681 O 17 '52 650w

SMILEY, NIXON. Subtropical gardening in Florida. 182p il $4 Univ. of Miami press; for sale by Farrar, Straus

635.9 Gardening—Florida Agr52-15

"Designed as a gardening guide for new Florida residents who are unacquainted with the unique growing conditions of a subtropical climate and a year-round growing season. Methods of soil preparation, fertilization and plant propagation are described but the author is chiefly concerned with the characteristics and cultivation of shrubs, flowering trees, climbers, annuals, bulbs and tropical fruits which have proved most satisfactory in Florida gardens. Special attention is given to the raising of avocados, mangoes and papayas." Library J

"With a warning to give up temperate zone thinking and prepare for all year round gardening, this should be a valuable horticultural guide for its region."

+ Kirkus 19:658 N 1 '51 150w

"The practical helpfulness of this volume more than compensates for its rather limited appeal." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 77:50 Ja 1 '52 100w

Sat R 35:20 Ag 2 '52 20w

SMITH, ALBERT E., and KOURY, PHIL A. Two reels and a crank. 285p il $3.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Moving pictures. Vitagraph company of America 52-11617

One of the earliest movie companies was Vitagraph. This is an account of those days by the man who was president of Vitagraph some thirty years or more ago. Contains glimpses of many actors and actresses famous in the days of the silent films. No index.

"A substantial volume of reminiscences that is at once honest and heart warming, informative, and beautifully nostalgic—and, for a book about the movies, exceptionally accurate. It has only one serious fault, Mr. Smith: There ought to be about a million more pictures, including reproductions, as end papers, of some of those beautiful old Vitagraph posters. I shall never forget them." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 16 '52 260w

"It is an honest story (Mr. Smith adamantly refuses to rationalize or 'second-guess') and completely without rancor. If it is also without chronology, documentation, or style, Two Reels and a Crank remains an amusing and absorbing contribution to our interest in the early movies." Dan Rodden

+ Commonweal 57:289 D 19 '52 240w

Kirkus 20:593 S 1 '52 200w

Library J 77:2178 D 15 '52 30w

"Mr. Smith has assembled his reminiscences and, by exercising considerable ingenuity, fashioned them into as tedious a book as ever slipped into a remainder bin. . . Any admirer of Fowler's 'English Usage' who has the time and a bushel basket will find lavish pickings in 'Two Reels and a Crank,' for here they are in profusion—the slipshod reference, the bowerbird phrase, the elegant variation, and the cast-iron idiom." S. J. Perelman

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 16 '52 800w

"Mr. Smith is so enthusiastic and so affable in his pride that he is inclined to take a little more credit here and there than is unqualifiedly his due. . . However, he has filled his volume with enough lore of the early days of films and of his own wild adventures as a movie maker to fascinate and delight anyone who has the slightest interest in screen history or the faintest taste for the bizarre." Bosley Crowther

+ — N Y Times p4 N 23 '52 600w

Reviewed by A. C. Smith

San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 14 '52 490w

"The style of 'Two Reels and a Crank' is much too rambling and anecdotal, with the result that the book is full of riches never fully explored, episodes recounted with tantalizing brevity. The reader is certain to find himself now and then wishing that the author had tried for more solidity and detail, and had paid more attention to chronology. Mr. Smith, however, has not aimed at being a film historian. He has simply tried to give one man's recollections of a fabulous era and a fabulous industry, and his sentimental journal contains more than its share of pleasant high spots." F. L. Keefe

+ — Sat R 35:33 N 29 '52 500w

SMITH, ARTHUR JAMES MARSHALL, ed.

Worldly muse. 388p $3.50 Abelard

821.08 English poetry—Collections 51-14573

"An anthology of serious light verse." (Sub-title) Arrangement is under such groupings as: Pantry and cellar; Low life; Of gardens and orchards, nymphs and shepherds; A woman is a worthy thing; The animal kingdom; War; On life and letters; Sectarian malice. Poets included range from Chaucer, Shakespeare, Ben Johnson, and Keats, to Oliver Wendell Holmes, Louise Bogan, and Robert Graves. Index.

"I found the book completely delightful."

Edith Fowke

+ Canadian Forum 32:21 Ap '52 420w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 76:2116 D 15 '51 60w

"Mr Smith, not as well known as he ought to be this side of his native Canadian border, is a bright gay poet who has here brought together many different kinds of bright gay pieces to form an altogether delightful anthology."

+ Nation 174:92 Ja 26 '52 70w

SMITH, BLANCHE MARIE. Single woman of today; her problems and adjustment. 130p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

396 Spinsters

[52-11932]

"The main purpose of this publication is to shed some light on the psychological and sociological aspects of the status of the single woman in this epoch of our civilization. . . It cannot offer to banish any of the frustrations, depressions, restlessness, which come from such a disastrous denial of a woman's natural rights to biological and psychological completion. It can only hope to arouse public understanding to take some of the sting out of the terms 'Spinster' and 'Old Maid,' and to point a finger in the direction where lie alleviating and socially acceptable compensations." (Pref) Bibliography.

"One cannot doubt the wealth of material and the seriousness of purpose that Miss Smith has brought to this report. The difficulties, however, of selection and elimination are apparent, and sometimes the text is less logical and coherent than one might wish. Nevertheless it is full of food for thought—and the careful reader can supply transitions and make connections that are not always clear." Jean and Jess Ogden

+ Ann Am Acad 283:209 S '52 750w

"When one thinks her case is established and expects her to bring forward remedies, Miss Smith still goes on telling one about other people's books. This is a pity, because her own observation is good enough and her own feelings are more than generous enough for her to have written her own book. . . It would have been better if Miss Smith had sustained her attack, and had in conclusion told the men and the married women what they ought to do about it." Wayland Hilton-Young

Spec 187:894 D 28 '51 750w

SMITH, BRADFORD. Bradford of Plymouth.
338p $5 Lippincott
B or 92 Bradford, William. Plymouth colony 51-11198
For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Bookmark 11:107 F '52 30w

"On his mother's side Bradford Smith is himself a descendant of the man about whom he writes. His latest work is the first full length biography of his distinguished ancestor and is built upon materials collected through the years since college days." R. M. Pearson

+ Churchman 166:17 My 1 '52 180w

"Much of the book has real merit, and the portrait of Bradford is for the most part convincing. The passage on his effort to learn Hebrew in his old age is touching indeed, and the closing paragraphs are eloquent. But on the whole, in spite of Mr. Smith's love and enthusiasm for his noble subject, his book is a disappointment." T. W. Perry

+ New Eng Q 25:121 Mr '52 700w

Wis Lib Bul 48:35 Ja '52

"A much-needed first life of a very important man. [The author] succeeds in making of the great Pilgrim a very real and human person, but he fails completely to comprehend and therefore to depict the role of the Plymouth settlement in history." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ Yale R n s 41:465 spring '52 500w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Knave-Go-By; the adventures of Jacky Nameless; il. by Ian Ribbons. 187p $2 Oxford

A story of a young boy's adventures in the England of one hundred years ago. Returning home from Jamaica, Jacky Nameless survives a shipwreck but loses his memory. For a year he lives a precarious life in the small sea-coast community, befriended by some, bedeviled by others, until he finally comes into his inheritance. For older young people.

Booklist 48:237 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Mr 9 '52 160w

Horn Bk 28:110 Ap '52 100w

"The first person telling of the story is swift, terse and to the point. Black and white drawings by Ian Robbins are wonderfully full of the atmospheres of sea, town and moor."

+ Kirkus 20:125 F 15 '52 120w

"The plot maintains a reasonable credibility by means of the excellent background and by accomplished story-telling. This is a satisfying tale for boys and girls with a taste for cloak-and-dagger thrills." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p34 F 17 '52 130w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:52 My 10 '52 70w

SMITH, MRS DOROTHY EVELYN (JONES).
Lost Hill. 249p $3 Dutton

52-7786

Story of a lonely young widow living on a remote Yorkshire farm, with servants she cannot manage at first. A Welsh gypsy with a very sick child camps on Jenny's land and the child appeals to Jenny to such an extent that she contemplates marrying the gypsy in order to keep the child. Then the owner of a neighboring farm comes home from the wars and a more conventional love claims Jenny.

Booklist 48:378 JI 15 '52

"Lost Hill evokes authentic English country living, with the tradition of the wealthy farmer always counterpointed by rebellion, here personified by Gethin, the 'noble savage.' Nicely done." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 176:73 O '52 150w

"If the usually vital components of plot, theme, and characterizations are somewhat commonplace, Mrs. Smith's literary style is never so. Rather, it is distinguished and often poetic because of the verisimilitude of Jenny's introspective musings." K. Smith

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 JI 27 '52: 290w

Kirkus 20:305 My 15 '52 220w

"Story is written with simplicity and charm while the individual characters stand out vividly. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 77:1012 Je 1 '52 70w

"A conventional romance, the story of a poor little rich girl, if you will, but with unusual appeal because of the freshness and sincerity of Mrs. Smith's telling. She would seem to have written it simply because she likes and enjoys the people in it and so wants to show them as they are." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 JI 20 '52 390w

"Parts of the story are curiously moving. . . Mrs. Smith, the popular author of 'O the Brave Music,' is perhaps over-earnest and too much inclined to make her characters think and behave as they should. But she has a gift for evoking a face, a landscape and a physical situation." Nancy Lenkeith

+ N Y Times p14 JI 20 '52 310w

"The atmosphere of her story is well rendered, the characterization skillfully done but, on the whole, the story of Jenny and Lost Hill is thinner and less substantial than 'O the Brave Music.'" J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 JI 13 '52 210w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springfld Republican p4C Ag 31 '52 130w

SMITH, EUNICE (YOUNG). Jennifer is eleven; il. by [the author]. 206p $2.50 Bobbs

52-10279

In this latest Jennifer story we have the summer of 1910 as background. Jennifer's pet bull calf causes some of the excitement; the rest is supplied by the extensive remodeling which is going on at the Hill house.

"Fresh, simple reading."

+ Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 30w

"Recommended for grades 5-6." F. M. Hensley

+ Library J 77:2013 N 15 '52 80w

"Jennifer lived in the days when bathrooms and gaslights were innovations; but her always deep feelings are the same as those of girls her age today." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p6 N 16 '52 130w

"Little girls will be delighted to see a new book about charming Jennifer. . . There is less humor and more poignancy in this book about Jennifer, but it is a worthy successor to the other three books." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times pt2, p34 N 16 '52 80w

SMITH, GEORGE MILTON. More power to your mind; a guide to more effective living; pref. by John Chamberlain. 180p $2.50 Harper
150.13 Psychology, Applied 52-6282

"This primer of mental hygiene, aimed at persons who are functioning at less than their maximum level of efficiency, is based on the conviction that body, mind, and spirit must work together as a team, not cultivated separately at the expense of each other. It optimistically assumes that the individual can change for the better at any time, that too often psychiatry has stressed imprisonment by one's past." Booklist

Booklist 48:310 Je 1 '52

+ Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 30w

Kirkus 20:151 F 15 '52 140w

"A popular-psychology essential." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 140w

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:166 JI '52

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. London journal.
288p $3 Doubleday

817

52-10407

"A year or so ago, H. Allen Smith and his wife went to London to see for themselves just what England was all about. And being a professional writer, Mr. Smith naturally got a book out of the experience." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 5 '52
300w

Kirkus 20:442 J1 15 '52 220w

"His efforts to inject life into his tired materials show strain." E. J. Fitzgerald

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 16
'52 170w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p36 O 26 '52 370w

"Mr. Smith is as wonderfully mad as always. Here, however, you get an extra dividend. Because between the lines he does a very neat job of kidding himself and his fellow-Americans too. The book frequently totters on the edge of utter confusion; you're not always sure who is kidding whom. But that's all right too, and it's very H. Allen Smith." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 23 '52
600w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Sat R 36:59 Ja 3 '53 600w

"It's all in fun and, while Mr. Smith takes pains to lampoon British habits and, what he terms 'deplorable cuisine,' it is obvious, reading between the lines, that he enjoyed every minute of his London stay even though he is as mercilessly outspoken about the city's inhabitants as he has been about Americans, Hollywood residents in particular." B. F. K.

+ Springfield Republican p11C O 19 '52
140w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Mister Zip. 252p
$2.75 Doubleday

52-5112

A satire on the Western movie, in which the hero is Mister Zip, the hardriding idol of Hollywood, who was born plain Clifford Humphrey in a small midwestern town.

"As happened before in Smith's flights into fiction, he finds it difficult to get the curtain down. What has been a rough and racy, delightfully irresponsible consumption of energy for 200 pages changes character in the last 50 and becomes an only moderately amusing satire of western stories. The final chapters, loaded with genuine gunplay and reading as if Smith wrote them for possible adaptation into a movie comedy, look like funny screen material, but they haven't the inimitable, happy cynicism that pervades the greater part of 'Mister Zip.'" William Leonard

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 13 '52
330w

Kirkus 19:640 N 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 77:535 Mr 15 '52 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 20
'52 180w

"If the book could be called a satire, it would be a satire on Hollywood westerns. But the special quality—or, rather, lack of quality—which makes it seem like something else instead of a book is just what keeps it from being satire. From time to time Smith rolls up his sleeves and writes carefully and with respect, and satire raises its head, but then it ducks out of sight again for another half hour while the author runs on in a styleless style that fogs all his effects." T. R.

N Y Times p23 Ja 6 '52 360w

"As a story to be read just for fun, 'Mr. Zip' is quite successful. But on another level also, with its many sharp insights into the social psychology of our national character, the novel is a revealing document. Of course this unpretentious novel has no such 'serious' purpose, but in reading of the process by which a highly puerile young man becomes a national hero, one wonders what Hollywood and the advertising man have wrought." Irving Babow

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 12 '52
650w

"'Mister Zip' starts out as satire—in the strictly collegiate sense—and ends up with a burlesque of the Western movie that is supposed to have you in stitches. Unfortunately, not even Mr. Smith can be funnier than a Western movie."

Sat R 35:32 Ja 26 '52 90w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52
100w

SMITH, HOMER WILLIAM. Man and his gods; foreword by Albert Einstein. 501p $5 Little 290 Religion

52-5512

"A number of publishers rejected the manuscript [of this book], three of them twice. The reason: the book debunks religion. Not merely ancient religions, but Christianity as well. Author is not a theologian, but Professor of Physiology at New York University, with a passion for objective observation. He believes that man must be true to his nature as an intelligent animal in acquiring knowledge, power and satisfaction; and that the goal of philosophy is to cherish truth for its uniquely human value." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Ann Acad 284:211 N '52 500w

Booklist 48:258 Ap 15 '52

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:852 J1 23 '52 1000w

Kirkus 20:37 Ja 15 '52 320w

"The book will be anathema to many. But should be acquired by libraries in the interests of impartiality." A. D. Osborn

Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 140w

"His book is a brilliant exposition of knowledge and attitudes which have been current for fifty years, although, so far as I can see, Mr. Smith has contributed no new ideas to the study of religious practices." R. E.

New Repub 126:22 Ap 14 '52 150w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 11
'52 900w

"More scientifically sophisticated, though esthetically less satisfying, this book is the twelve volumes of 'The Golden Bough,' as it were, rolled into one. . . . Our author is too scientific to deal fruitfully with values that are not logical. And through the very operation of his splendid scrupulosity, he proves esthetically less satisfying than Frazer and others, whom he not only succeeds but whom he also logically surpasses." T. V. Smith

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 13 '52 600w

"It would have been altogether consistent for Professor Smith to retain his naturalism while envisaging greater continuity in human thought and aspiration. Here it is also relevant to point to his failure to utilize sufficiently the insights of social anthropology and psychoanalysis with respect to the function of religious thought and action in the integration of social institutions and in the ordering of human emotion. Despite these deficiencies, this is a book to be welcomed. It contains a richness of fascinating material in the history of religions." Joseph Meyer

+ — Sat R 35:20 S 27 '52 900w

"Most of the data will be known to scholars; yet, as reflected in its organization and clarity of expression, it has all the value of a fresh and independent interpretation of a complex and momentous subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:265 S '52 180w

SMITH, IRENE (MRS LOUIS GREEN). Hub-bub in the hollow; il. by Tony Palazzo. (Whittlesey House publication) 48p $2 McGraw

52-8331

Alice and Albert lived in the city but did not like the noise and confusion, so they bought a deserted country cottage and started to put it into livable shape. The little animals and birds had had complete sway there for years and they objected to the grownups at first. But gradually the humans won the confidence of the animals and the hubbub in the hollow ceased. For ages 5 to 9.

SMITH, IRENE—Continued

"An appealing and amusing story for beginning readers. They will love the clever pictures of birds and animals, first in protest at all the changes and then happy as the humans in their now peaceful hollow." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 5 '52 120w

"A simple peaceful charm pervades this tale of adventure in a new way of living." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 11 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:404 J1 15 '52 170w

"Recommended only for large collections." Grace Shakin

Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 40w

"This well-known ex-librarian and her husband are thinly disguised as the new owners of a romantic house so faithfully drawn that it will delight their host of friends. Mr. Palazzo's skill and humor are applied to both the place and the creatures. The many pictures are printed with extra colors, alternately brown and green." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 5 '52 180w

"This story, though slight, has a certain gaiety. And children will be torn betwixt and between—sympathizing with the city folk who want to get away and with the little animals whose lives were so greatly disturbed. The illustrations in woodsy colors are fun." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times pt2, p41 N 16 '52 120w

"Small boys and girls are going to have a lot of fun with this book. . . The dialogue is great fun when you read it aloud. . . Tony Palazzo's drawings in black and green, are amusing and effective."

+ Sat R 35:38 Ag 16 '52 170w

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 60w

SMITH, LINCOLN. Power policy of Maine. 344p $5 Univ. of Calif. press

621.312 Electric power. Maine—Economic policy. Water—Laws and legislation 51-13988

Study of the political and legal aspects of Maine's power policy, which considers its growth, legislation passed concerning it, and the economic aspects within the state. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The book is a good analysis of the unique power policies of a single state but it is burdened excessively with detail that could interest only a state historian." E. W. Clemens

+ Am Econ R 42:993 D '52 650w

"A legal and historical study that is thorough, definitive, and adversely critical." G. J. Grady

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:249 Mr '52 480w

"A competent and well documented study." L. L. Durisch

+ Ann Am Acad 280:199 Mr '52 650w

Harvard Law R 65:1278 My '52 480w

"This substantial book on a subject of great economic importance to all New England is not as dull as its title would imply. Indeed, Mr. Smith has presented his subject very lucidly and documented it meticulously, although a few of the sections seem unduly labored and there is an inclination towards tautology in making some of the points." E. S. Dodge

+ New Eng Q 25:107 Mr '52 750w

"The study as a whole adds up to a considerable contribution to one area of public utility control."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:173 Je '52 170w

SMITH, LOUIS. American democracy and military power. 370p $5 Univ. of Chicago press 342.73 U.S.—Defenses. Civil rights—U.S. 51-13393

"A scholarly historical study of the constitutional provisions for the civil control over military power and establishments in the United States and of how they have worked out in practice since the time of President Washington." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Brown

Am Hist R 57:758 Ap '52 400w

"With all its intelligence and comprehensiveness, this study seems to lack flesh-and-blood reality." McGeorge Bundy

Am Pol Sci R 46:579 Je '52 300w

"The volume is a model of accurate scholarship, careful documentation, and fine writing. Events since its compilation, including the deepening of the Korean War and the recall of General MacArthur, have tended to substantiate the author's thesis." Earl Cranston

+ Ann Am Acad 280:170 Mr '52 340w

Booklist 48:94 N 15 '51

"A very timely book. . . Dean Smith concludes his book with a consideration of the cold war and the existing armament hysteria, which, he admits, hold the possibility of the later institution of a '1984' system here, but he recognizes that all this has been brought about by civil agencies and not by the military establishment, eager as the latter has been to exploit the possibility of a vast increase of its prestige and spending powers. The main weakness of such a conclusion is that Dean Smith seems to regard this situation as almost cosmically inevitable rather than the deliberate product of American partisan political expediency." H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 30 '51 430w

Foreign Affairs 30:675 J1 '52 20w

"American Democracy and Military Power is a triumph in the limited art of analytical political science. It seems a shame that like most books in its class it will probably reach about one-twentieth the audience it so richly deserves." Clinton Rossiter

+ Harvard Law R 65:1082 Ap '52 1100w

"A long closely argued study, largely historical. It contains a great deal that is of high interest, but it is unfortunately solid in a rather forbidding sense and at times needlessly diffuse. Its appeal is mainly to 'politicals' and the academic world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p563 Ag 29 '52 900w

"Although it was written before the occurrence of the controversial dismissal of General MacArthur, this volume answers those who would challenge the President's power and duty to control the military leaders. . . Professor Smith has written a book which is of great importance for Americans today."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:391 D '51 270w

SMITH, MADELINE BABCOCK. Lemon jelly cake. 240p $3 Little

52-9065

Life in a small town in Illinois at the turn of the century is the basis of this novel. Helene, the precocious eleven-year-old daughter of Dr Bradford, one of the town's most influential citizens, is the narrator.

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:10 O '52 30w

"A delightful story." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 10 '52 360w

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 7 '52 50w

+ Kirkus 20:350 Je 15 '52 190w

"A gem of a novel (a first), recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 77:1194 J1 '52 80w

"A book that melts in the mouth. Mrs. Smith's village chronicle is not a volume that you will be apt to find where you lay it down, nor open where you were reading. Some one else will have pounced upon it for browsing. But that is not important, for you can dip into it anywhere with pleasure." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 3 '52
190w

"A sophisticated, even urbane novel written by a woman with a perceptive eye for the facts of life." Jane Cobb
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 3 '52 320w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort.

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 24 '52
500w

"An affectionate, entertaining, and thoroughly endearing novel of small-town life in a pre-Freudian era. Mrs. Smith, the author, a mother and grandmother, has spent all her life in Illinois. A lecturer, free-lance writer, and owner of an antique shop for years, she brings to her first novel, written at sixty-five, a tolerant and wise knowledge of human beings of all ages, in communities of any size." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 9 '52 240w

"Food, fun, and human interest are all here—nothing lacking but the recipes."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:173 Jl '52

SMITH, MARION L., and STINSON, KARL WILLSON. Fuels and combustion. 340p il $6.50 McGraw

662.6 Fuel. Combustion 51-12949

"A college textbook in which is combined a description of the common fuels, an exposition of the chemical and physical bases of combustion and descriptions of the chief fuel-burning devices, including internal combustion engines. The authors have assumed familiarity with basic engineering and chemical terminology and with elementary engineering mathematics on the part of their readers. Problems for the student to solve and literature references are both included. The authors are members of the faculty of Ohio State University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is well written, arranged, and balanced with respect to theory and practice. . . The treatment of flame temperature is unusually good for a book of this type. . . The student will appreciate the generous number of examples and the answers to many of the excellent problems given at the end of each chapter." R. C. Corey

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4420 O 20 '52 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:57 Jl '52

SMITH, ROBERT MILLER. Writing fiction; techniques of the craft. 207p $3.50 World pub.

808.3 Authorship. Fiction—Technique 52-9770

"There are chapters on the mechanics of making ideas into stories (with some observations on what a story is and what it isn't), on the techniques of making a plot move, on drama (which is conflict), on devices by which characters in a story may be made more 'real,' on dialogue and some of its dangers, on style and method, on revision, and finally on the relationship between writer and editor, writer and agent, writer and publisher. All of this is presented on a commonsense basis, most of it is frankly for the beginner." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 49:9 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

Kirkus 20:312 My 15 '52 160w

"Highly recommended wherever there is an interest in the subject." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 77:1189 Jl '52 50w

"Some writers will disagree with some things that Mr. Smith says; their ways of working, being different, will make them see things differently. By and large, however, Mr. Smith's advice is clear and sensible as far as it goes, and will be useful to many who have still to acquire basic techniques." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 24 '52
500w

Wis Lib Bul 48:213 S '52

SMITH, ROBERT PAUL. Time and the place. 245p $3 Simon & Schuster

52-6529

"The story of the career and marriage of Paul Marrane, a gregarious, affectionate, rather juvenile, but likable man who works for a New York publishing house, Mr. Marrane and his wife, Louise, enjoy a very happy union, but as a gesture in defiance of his approaching thirty-ninth birthday, he engages in a love affair with a young girl named Mary." New Yorker

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p31 N 16 '52
350w

"A first novel, by a radio writer, which slips from sincerity to the adolescent obscenity, grapples with issues at a surface level, and confuses free expression with bad taste."

— Kirkus 19:687 D 1 '51 180w

"Robert Paul Smith's first novel, 'So It Doesn't Whistle,' received critical praise. But, more than that, a generation preparing to be drafted found in it their own illusions, their own affection for a city, their own perishable sensuality. The spokesmen for that generation have since been accused of losing their illusions, but in Mr. Smith's new novel, 'The Time And the Place,' some of the charm and brightness has survived." Louis Simpson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 27 '52
450w

"At book's end, Paul's guilty decision to eat his cake in town and have it in the suburbs too leaves a few crumbs of plot scattered around, but makes him sound like a real-life man making up his mind." Robert Lowry

N Y Times p4 F 3 '52 500w

"Mr. Smith's writing is fast, economical, and always to the point, but it is doubtful whether he has ever tried to really write a sentence when he could maneuver a piece of slang into doing the work for him."

New Yorker 27:96 Ja 26 '52 90w

"Mr. Smith still writes in a style that recalls the early Hemingway with glitter added, and his characters all converse with the punchy drive of professional wits. It makes for fast and entertaining reading, but you find yourself wishing that Mr. Smith would slow down and really grapple with some of the ideas he tosses off so briskly." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ — Sat R 35:33 Ap 5 '52 180w

SMITH, SHELLEY, pseud. See Bodington, N.

SMITH, THOMAS LYNN, and HITT, HOMER LEE. People of Louisiana. 272p maps $5 La. state univ. press

312 Louisiana—Population 52-9200

"Two professors of sociology, after two decades of research, present the basic facts about the tremendously varied people of Louisiana. . . It is a serious population study giving the number, the spatial distribution, the composition and migration patterns of the people of the State. There is a chapter on the importance of population study in modern society and also a bibliography." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

"The volume has limitations. Arithmetical numerals, averages, percentages, and rates can give a bare skeleton of facts. . . Even telling where sums originate and why they add up to what they do leaves one hungering for the deeper hidden inner processes of demographic phenomena. This, however, is not a sole weakness of The People of Louisiana; it is a malady of the only known way to characterize populations in quantitative terms. . . Such a volume as The People of Louisiana brings to close range kernels of scientific knowledge extracted by long years of research in a form convenient, useful, and instructive to policy makers as well as to scholars." O. D. Duncan

+ — Am Soc R 17:646 O '52 600w

"I must compliment Smith and Hitt for their excellent analysis and highly satisfactory style of presentation." H. B. James

+ J Pol Econ 60:453 O '52 550w

SMITH, T. L.—Continued

"A first-rate piece of scholarship, the book tells nearly everything one might be interested in knowing about the varied population of that State. So much about the history and the people of Louisiana has been romanticized elsewhere that it is a pleasure to read this well-organized, documented study giving verified information." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '52 220w

"The volume will be suitable for use as a textbook or collateral reading, especially in Louisiana colleges, and it will furnish a valuable fund of information to such non-academic groups as state legislators and executives."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:311 S '52 200w

SMITH, THOMAS LYNN, and MCMAHON, CHALMERS ALEXANDER. Sociology of urban life; a textbook with readings. 331p maps $5.50 Dryden

323.352 Cities and towns 52-6160

"This book is divided into eight major parts (introduction, nature and development, population, structure, institutions, processes, disorganization and welfare, and conclusion), 25 chapters, and 73 separate essays or articles. Each chapter's essays are preceded by a brief introductory statement, and followed by 'Problems and Projects' as well as by 'suggested' and 'supplementary' readings. The 73 essays are the works of 56 different authors or groups of authors." (Am Soc R) Bibliography. Index.

"The separate readings vary greatly in style, content, approach, and level of difficulty. Some consist of detailed factual data and classifications; others present theoretical analyses and discussions. . . . On the whole, the readings seem pertinent and worth while. Some, however, by the sheer weight of their factual data, are better suited to a reference book than to a text." J. A. Quinn

+ Am J Soc 58:107 J1 '52 400w

Reviewed by Richard Dewey

Am Soc R 17:257 Ap '52 360w

"The authors of this volume have prepared a pedagogically sound textbook. . . . Many will feel that a content and an organization of this kind are preferable to the treatises by a single author and specialist in his particular field of sociology. The book must be criticized on at least two counts. There are some 68 readings or essays in the volume. Of these 32 could be identified as having been published before 1940. . . . Finally, at least 10 of the readings reprinted in this book are excerpts from five readily available sociology textbooks, all published in new or revised editions since 1947." M. F. Lewis

+ Ann Am Acad 281:223 My '52 500w

SMITH, WARREN HUNTING. Originals abroad; the foreign careers of some eighteenth-century Britons. 205p il $3 Yale univ. press

920 Eighteenth century. Travelers 52-5358

A series of biographical essays about minor characters of the times found in the course of editing the Walpole letters. These "originals" all lived outside Great Britain, and they represent several classes of society from servants to countesses. Index.

"Smith, as becomes a scholar, has limited himself to facts and acknowledged surmises. Thus at times his material is all too plainly thin. The further step from popular biography to downright historical fiction might make for even better reading. Without imaginative supplement, tho, these sketches are excellent fare, strong in the inherent appeal of highly individualized human nature." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 J1 13 '52 270w

"These sketches, set down in a lucid and often witty style, are an entertaining sampling of the vagaries of the British character. They are not about important people, to be sure—and Mr. Smith makes no immodest claims—but they are solidly constructed footnotes to the text of English social history." Robert Halsband

+ Nation 175:76 J1 26 '52 550w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 29 '52 750w

"Mr. Smith tells their stories with quiet charm. He neither attempts to glamorize nor to debunk them. It is easy to see that they have become his friends, in that miraculous way in which one can fall in love with people of another century. He has an affectionate detachment about the moral lapses of his lovely ladies. He stanchly defends the whole race of dilettante bachelor collectors, with their beautiful homes and their beautiful friendships." J. L. Clifford

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '52 550w

"These portrait studies are well written, are not without humor and irony, and are inevitably chatty."

+ New Yorker 28:118 S 6 '52 150w

"Unpretentious, written with neat grace, these sketches are severely factual, with their pedigree documentation at the back of the book." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 35:42 N 1 '52 130w

SMITH-HUGHES, JACK. Unfair comment upon some Victorian murder trials. 360p $4.50 British bk. centre

343.1 Trials [52-26007]

"Seven British capital cases, '70s-'80s, all likely to be brand-new to American readers, reviewed by legal authority." Sat R

"Dry humor lightens the pages upon occasion, but it is no book for the reader with weak nerves." John Randolph

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 2 '52 60w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 42:630 D 1 '51 700w

Reviewed by Gilbert Millstein

+ N Y Times p43 N 9 '52 190w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:26 S 27 '52 20w

SMOLUCHOWSKI, ROMAN. See Phase transformations in solids; symposium held at Cornell university, August 23-26, 1948

SMUTS, JAN CHRISTIAN. Jan Christian Smuts. 496p $6 Morrow

B or 92 Smuts, Jan Christiaan 52-10783

A biography of Smuts by his son. In his preface he says: "This is not the official life of my father. The time is not yet ripe for that . . . I write this interim biography merely to give a son's point of view." Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53 40w

"The biography is excellent in that it gives full value to the great South African's accomplishments and gives details of family life that probably would not be known to other biographers. On the other hand, the work lacks a critical view which is needed in respect to such a controversial figure as Smuts. The writing also is slowed by the too frequent use of 'my father' did this and did that." Gilbert Twiss

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 23 '52 340w

"Out of all this vitally important and often dramatic material, his son has managed to produce a rather dull biography, and, to the average American reader not versed in South Africa's complex history, a confusing one. He fails to create the charming, warm human being he claims his father to have been. But for many, the heart of the text will lie in the short chapter on racial problems and Smuts' comments on them. The shadowy figure of Dr. Malan, too, stimulates curiosity and interest. All in all, a disappointment."

+ Kirkus 20:538 Ag 15 '52 180w

"The biography, though eulogistic is the most complete to date. Good bibliography. Recommended." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1808 O 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by W. M. Macmillan
Manchester Guardian p4 D 9 '52 420w

"No other writer of equal talent could have written this biography with the charm, insight and intimacy Smuts' son Jan displays. Although the author modestly styles it an 'interim biography' and warns that a 'weighty life' would require years of preparation, this excellent treatment may never be surpassed as a popular, readable account of a great man." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 30 '52 700w

"It must be confessed regretfully than Jan Smuts, who stood closest to his father, has not succeeded in putting enough of him into print... [He] has written his memorial to his father in an admitted mood of eulogy... Some day a writer will appear to present this astonishing Boer in all his many-sided greatness." John Barkham

+ — N Y Times p5 N 16 '52 750w

"This book is by far the best of the biographies of the 'Oubaas' that has yet appeared. The author has not only written well and let his father speak much for himself, but, being confessedly eulogistic and even less liberal than his hero, has been refreshingly frank." E. A. Walker

+ Spec 189:784 D 5 '52 480w

Springf'd Republican p7C D 7 '52 150w

SNOW, DOROTHEA J. Come, Chucky, come; pictures by Joshua Telford. 45p $2 Houghton Woodchucks—Legends and stories 52-5915

Story of a little southern boy and how he and his grandpappy and his pet woodchuck earned the money he needed to buy a fiddle.

Booklist 49:114 N 15 '52

"Although this is not a folktale, it could well grow into one through the years... The artist seems to me at his best with this kind of tale and his illustrations have the humor and friendliness of the story and embellish every detail of it." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:318 O '52 80w

Kirkus 20:547 S 1 '52 60w

"This modern mountain tale follows the traditional folk pattern and is good storytelling material. About fourth-grade reading level. Recommended." N. S. Zipf

+ Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 50w

"The emotional suspense of Lonnie's dilemma is accompanied by plenty of brisk action, which Joshua Telford illustrates with great gusto." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p11 D 28 '52 100w

"Should delight youngsters between six and nine."

+ New Yorker 28:195 D 6 '52 60w

"A very appealing story, and the drawings of Chuck, of Lonnie, and of Grandpappy are so good that no book-lover can afford to miss them."

+ Sat R 35:56 N 15 '52 40w

SNOW, EDWARD ROWE. Great gales and dire disasters. 263p il $3 Dodd

910.45 Shipwrecks 52-8989

A collection of stories of catastrophes along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, with a few foreign water tragedies.

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

"If you like sea tragedies [arm chair variety, that is], Snow's new collection of thrills is highly recommended as exciting entertainment." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 14 '52 170w

"Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 77:1302 Ag '52 70w

"Here is fine browsing for an autumn night, when the wind is rattling the panes."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 28 '52 180w

New Yorker 28:156 O 11 '52 100w

Springf'd Republican p26A S 21 '52 180w

SNOW, EDWARD ROWE. True tales of buried treasure. 272p il maps $3 Dodd

910.45 Treasure trove 51-14199

"The author has dug for, and found, doubloons and pieces of eight along the Atlantic Coast; there are many millions more still underground in this hemisphere—the trick is knowing just where. Mr. Snow's book is both a history of treasure hunting along the Eastern Seaboard and a textbook for those who might like to try their hand at it." New Yorker

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Rod Nordell

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 31 '52 300w

"These are very readable and enough to make one want to start right out treasure hunting. The stories cover a lot of history and include the famous Oak Island mystery. For everyone." M. D. Read

+ Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 40w

"In 'True Tales of Buried Treasure' Edward Rowe Snow tells treasure yarns in a way to make his readers ready to go out and start hunting. Buried treasure is usually associated with pirates, too, which makes the subject all the more exciting."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 13 '52 200w

"Fascinating stuff, and enough to arouse cupidity in a parson."

+ New Yorker 27:165 N 24 '51 170w

"Mr. Snow's crisp conversational style makes mighty easy reading, and again he includes a few photographs and sketches by way of evidence." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p28A N 25 '51 410w

SNOW, HELEN (FOSTER) (MRS EDGAR SNOW) (NYM WALES, pseud). Red dust; autobiographies of Chinese communists, as told to Nym Wales; introd. by Robert C. North. 250p il $5 Stanford univ. press

951.05 [951.042] Communism—China. China —Biography 52-5970

While Edgar Snow was in Yenan in 1937 gathering material for his book Red Star Over China, his wife was noting down the life stories of leaders of the revolution, as told thru an interpreter. This book contains twenty-four such sketches of soldiers, military leaders, teachers, students, actors, doctors, and others. Illustrated with photographs. Bibliography. Index.

"This handsome volume incorporates a great quantity of autobiographical raw material of historical and psychological value—even if many of Miss Wales's characters have dropped from sight during the intervening years, and the passage of time has deprived their stories of current topical interest in 1952." H. A. Steiner
Ann Am Acad 282:186 J1 '52 430w

"Although these brief autobiographies of Chinese Communists of assorted educational and social background were collected fifteen years ago, they are as valid today in helping to understand the present success of communism in China and to evaluate the environmental conditions which encourage conversion to that ideology."

+ Current Hist 22:376 Je '52 60w

Foreign Affairs 31:166 O '52 30w

"Their stories are, of course, heavily charged with propaganda, but they are at the same time revealing for what they tell of life in China during the past thirty or forty years among the poor classes and the disenfranchised intellectuals."

SNOW, H. F.—Continued

+ New Yorker 28:146 My 24 '52 210w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 18 '52 200w

"I am inclined to take issue with the statement on the flyleaf that the book tells us 'why millions have turned—or been driven—to Communism.' This is not the story of the anonymous masses but of the revolutionary elite. In spite of their limitations, however, there emerges from these accounts, varied as they are, a sort of composite image of the revolutionary in modern China." B. I. Schwartz

Sat R 35:26 Je 14 '52 600w

"A splendid Introduction by Robert Carver North sets these narratives within their full historical and political setting. The fruit of scrupulous scholarship, this lucid short essay constitutes the best general introduction to Chinese communism so far available to American readers."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:242 S '52 190w

SODERBERG, GEORGE A. Finishing materials and methods. 320p il $4 McKnight

667.6 Finishes and finishing 52-7180

"A vocational school textbook that is literally packed with information on materials and techniques used in producing modern finishes on metals, wood and other materials. Common painting and industrial techniques are both covered. Unusual materials such as pearl essence are discussed, and unexpected topics as the manufacture of paint brushes are included." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 48:209 Mr 1 '52

"Recommended for practically all libraries."

R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:724 Ap 15 '52 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:44 My '52

SOHL, JERRY. The haploids. 248p $2.50 Rinehart

52-5571

Science-fiction novel.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 29 '52 40w

Kirkus 20:203 Mr 15 '52 50w

"The story is readable enough, if conventional, so long as it sticks to its whodunit angle; when it finally goes completely over the border into science fiction, it degenerates into lurid and unconvincing Mad Scientist nonsense." H. H. Holmes

— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 11 '52 170w

— N Y Times p15 Ag 10 '52 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 20w

SOKOLNIKOFF, IVAN STEPHEN. Tensor analysis; theory and applications. 335p $6 Wiley

517.2 Calculus of tensors 51-14383

"An introduction to tensor analysis written on the graduate level and slanted for those interested in the applications of the subject rather than in its theory. No special field of application is emphasized, however; and in the words of the author, 'Perhaps the best evidence of the remarkable effectiveness of the tensor apparatus in the study of Nature is in the fact that it was possible to include, between the covers of one small volume, a large amount of the material that is of interest to mathematicians, physicists, and engineers.'" N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:147 Ja 15 '52 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:9 Ja '52

"There are a few minor flaws in this otherwise excellent book. The connection between the initial chapter and the tensor viewpoint is not well exhibited; for example, it should at least be mentioned, if not demonstrated, that the similarity transformation of a matrix is identically the tensor transformation of a mixed tensor of rank two. Also, the author is too content with the customary, purely mathematical definition of covariance and contravariance, with no explanation of the semantics of these concepts. Again, applications to crystal physics might well have been mentioned. In general, however, this is a lucid presentation of a notoriously difficult subject and will contribute toward rendering it more accessible."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 8:96 Mr '52 130w

SOKOLOFF, BORIS FEDOROVICH. Cancer; new approaches, new hope. 243p $3.75 Devin-Adair

616.99 Cancer

52-14337

A discussion of cancer, its causes and "the progress and specific achievement in cancer research and treatment." The author is director of the Southern Bioresearch laboratory, Florida Southern college. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 49:137 D 15 '52

"Dr. Sokoloff renders a vital contribution both to the laity and the medical profession by skillfully integrating the myriad research projects into understandable language. Viewpoint is relatively optimistic. . . Essential purchase." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1808 O 15 '52 100w

"Dr. Sokoloff devotes much more space than they deserve to cancer 'cures' that have been discredited or disproved. Those who have followed the evolution of cancer and who know how necessary it is to draw on chemistry, cytology, physics, virology and other disciplines will be astonished at Dr. Sokoloff's objection to group research and at his contention that too many cancer research projects are of purely academic interest." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p6 O 26 '52 360w

SOLOMON, LEO M. There's money in pictures. (Newsweek bookshelf bk) 198p il maps $3 Funk

778 Photography, Journalistic 51-14402

"A veteran news photographer offers amateur and professional cameramen valuable tips on marketing pictures, caption writing and procedures in dealing with various types of publications. Photographs. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:156 Ja 1 '52

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

"Interesting to browse thru even if you never expect to sell anything." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 2 '52 140w

"A highly practical and informative book." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 6 '52 150w

SOPER, DAVID WESLEY, ed. Room for improvement; next steps for Protestants [with chapters by Chad Walsh, and others]. 126p $2 Wilcox & Follett

284 Worship. Protestantism 51-14846

Five essays on the present state of the Protestant faith. Contents: The reform of Protestant worship, by Chad Walsh; Post-critical Protestantism, by N. F. S. Ferré; New Testament faith and the mind of the Church today, by R. E. Cushman; Christianity and work, by D. F. Maitland; Christianity is one world; by D. W. Soper

"The editor, Dr. Soper, presents an excellent statement on Protestantism as a part of Christianity with a gospel to proclaim. Quite rightly he protests against the departure from our central task in Bible worship or state worship or organization worship. His is a ringing plea for a Christocentric faith. Perhaps what we need now is another collection in sequel which points out some of the creative and positive ways in which Protestantism is moving to improve itself in some of these very fields. But this is a good book to read if you thought the battle won." R. W. Loew

+ Christian Century 69:1002 S 3 '52 650w

"Five very uneven and, for the most part, trite, and unedifying contributions to the obvious needs of Protestantism. They add little to our present knowledge. Only Soper's is concise, fine and stimulating. . . A disappointing book; aptly described by its title." J. H. Titus

Churchman 166:16 Ap 1 '52 220w

SOPER, EDMUND DAVISON. Religions of mankind. 3d ed rev 253p $3.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

290 Religions 51-13635

"A rearranged and partly rewritten edition of a book first published in 1921. New material includes reinterpretations of Confucius and of the religions of India." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1921.

Booklist 48:104 N 15 '51

"For a swift over-all view of religion and the principal varieties of religion, the reader can scarcely do better."

+ Christian Century 69:193 F 13 '52 70w

SORELL, WALTER, ed. Dance has many faces. 288p il $5 World pub.

793.3 Dancing. Ballet 51-14804

"This collection of twenty-nine essays by as many different writers on various phases of the dance ranges from history and philosophy through mechanics and technology to personal artistic approaches. . . Its fields cover the ballet, the modern dance, ethnologic and religious dance, the movies, television, therapeutics, education and acting. Even at that it omits the recreational field of folk and ballroom, and such popular theatrical branches as tap, acrobatic and musical comedy, all of which have active and honorable traditions." N Y Times

Booklist 48:181 F 1 '52

"Devotees of the dance will revel in this unusual collection of 29 articles on specific aspects of the art."

+ Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 20w

"A lively, well-planned compendium of information about the dance, in an anthology to which the contributors have brought not only their knowledge but their inspiration."

+ Kirkus 19:556 S 15 '51 210w

"This anthology of articles is a valuable addition to dance literature and is recommended to all dance and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:535 Mr 15 '52 40w

"A rich and provocative symposium in which individual opinions are freely expressed." John Martin

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 27 '52 280w

"This is a collection of first-rate essays on their art by great figures in the dance world today. It is a remarkable job. . . Almost all the pieces are well written, direct, and informative. The illustrations include some exceedingly good photographs of dancers in action. Mr. Sorell and his contributors have plenty of reason to be proud of themselves."

+ New Yorker 27:111 F 9 '52 80w

"If Mr. Sorell had been content to include articles about the different forms and styles of dancing, together with their histories and their effect on the related stage arts of music, setting, and costume, he would have had a bookful. But as he also includes less sound articles on the dance aspects of movies, television, acting, pantomime, book collecting, and even therapeutics, the result is mental indigestion for even the most avid dance lover. . . Several of the articles are interesting and enlightening, indeed." Laura Clandon

Sat R 35:19 Ja 26 '52 400w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. S.O.S. the meaning of our crisis. 177p $2.50 Beacon press

901 Civilization—Philosophy 51-14377

"This book bears a twofold aspect. It is the objective vindication of the author's views proposed in his prior works, and it is an impassioned accusation against the dominant trends of our times as well as a prophetic outlook into a better future. Corresponding to these two aspects, the book falls into two parts. The first 82 pages are what the author calls 'a dramatic, impressionistic portraiture' of our age, for which he claims Erasmus' Praise of Folly, Carlyle's Sartor Resartus, and Nietzsche's Also sprach Zarathustra as predecessors. The second part deals with the 'law of polarization' and with 'totalitarianism.'" Commonweal

"The least that can be said by way of criticism of this book is that it shares the fundamental weakness of most other books that deal with the present crisis. It stresses what should be, but fails to indicate how this can be accomplished." Theodore Abel

Ann Am Acad 281:220 My '52 480w

"One may disagree with the author on several points. But anyone who has preserved some objectivity of judgment and has not been hypnotized by slogans and propaganda will have to recognize that much is true in Professor Sorokin's critique of our times." Rudolf Allers

Commonweal 55:282 D 21 '51 800w

"The satire never quite comes off. It does not hurt; it does not irritate; it does not tickle. This is, I think, because it is too inclusive and too vociferous. It lacks contrast and subtlety. Thus, the effect is bitter rather than sharp. . . It goes without much saying that whenever Professor Sorokin writes he reveals cogent insights, but it is to be hoped that neology and erudition will not too easily be confused with profundity. The present work demonstrates that its author has not yet succeeded in separating himself from those whom he calls the 'word-weavers of scholarship' or the 'scholarly non-mystical mist-makers.'" Luke Ebersole

Crozer Q 29:231 Ap '52 650w

Foreign Affairs 31:153 O '52 20w

Reviewed by R. V. Holt

Hibbert J 50:302 Ap '52 60w

Kirkus 19:511 S 1 '51 160w

SOULE, GARDNER BOSWORTH. This is Ike. See Hicks, W., ed.

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. Economic forces in American history. 568p il $6 Sloane

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions 52-10542

An economic history of the United States which is divided into two periods: the years before 1900, and from 1900 to the present. More attention is devoted to the second section. Bibliography. Index.

"The book has a great many points in its favor. Throughout Professor Soule writes in a judicious tone that is admirable. The economic explanations are generally excellent. . . The selection of charts and tables, many from the National Bureau, is very good. . . Altogether this is an impressive addition to the lists of American economic history texts." D. L. Kemmerer

+ Ann Am Acad 284:186 N '52 390w

SOULE, G. H.—Continued

Booklist 48:353 J1 1 '52

Current Hist 23:191 S '52 80w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:2003 N 15 '52 70w

"Despite criticisms, both the curious and the learned will find it profitable to read Mr. Soule. Though he is more successful with the twentieth than with earlier centuries, his book as a whole is a valuable document." Robert Lekachman

+ — Nation 175:156 Ag 23 '52 300w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

New Repub 127:18 J1 21 '52 1300w

"In the areas of his competence, George Soule is very good indeed and at least three-fifths of his latest book constitutes the best analysis, in little, that we have of the contemporary American economic scene. . . . What Mr. Soule is trying to do in this book is somewhat complicated and his intention is not quite achieved, for he is too much the statistician and not enough the historian." L. M. Hacker

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 29 '52 900w

"The success of the author in dealing with the period before 1900 is not quite up to that which he achieves for subsequent years. . . . Probably readers with a rather limited background in American history will find this treatment interesting and helpful. For the more sophisticated reader it may prove pedestrian and at times, perhaps, repetitious. Mr. Soule clearly is most at home in the twentieth century. Here he is on terrain already familiar from his previous writing. The result is a lucid, informed and well-balanced account of the twentieth-century economic development of the United States, one probably not, in this compass, equaled elsewhere in the existing literature on the subject." G. R. Taylor

+ — N Y Times p29 O 19 '52 500w

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. Ideas of the great economists. 218p il $3.50 Viking

330.9 Economics—History

52-13509

"Within the compass of some two hundred pages Soule of Bennington College surveys the important doctrines of the leading economic thinkers of the Western World. After a brief definition of economics he sets forth the ideas of Plato and Aristotle, then moves on through medieval economic thinking to the proponents of mercantilism, to the exponents of laissez-faire and the 'dismal science' (Adam Smith, Ricardo, etc.), to the socialists, to revived classicism (Marshall), to Keynesian theories, to the institutionalists—Veblen, Commons and Mitchell. A closing chapter on the use of economic ideas discusses economics and planning." Library J

Booklist 49:99 N 15 '52

+ Kirkus 20:539 Ag 15 '52 170w

"A welcome volume written with admirable brevity and lucidity and one for public library collections." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 77:2071 D 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Soule, author of many previous works, popular and learned, has produced a handbook of economic ideas. In some ways the product is appealing. Although Mr. Soule's style is by no means innocent of several varieties of cliché, it is on the whole simple and direct. . . . If the book is really addressed, as the dust cover claims, or rather admits, to the 'intelligent layman who has neither the time nor the desire to read the great source works on economic theory,' it will at least leave him a little the wiser for reading it. The sources of my dissatisfaction with this small essay on large ideas are popularization in general and economic popularization in particular." Robert Lekachman

Nation 175:496 N 29 '52 800w

"In writing this much-needed survey . . . Mr. Soule has supplied a useful springboard for further progress in man's quest for economic understanding. It can be perused with profit by the professional, as well as the amateur, economist." Richard Lester

+ New Repub 127:21 D 29 '52 550w

SOUTH ATLANTIC QUARTERLY. Fifty years of the South Atlantic quarterly [ed. by] William Baskerville Hamilton. 397p $5 Duke Univ. press

051 American literature—Collections

52-7950

A collection of thirty-five representative examples of essays and articles printed in a notable Southern magazine during the last fifty years. A few of them are: The reconstruction of southern literary thought, by H. N. Snyder; Some phases of southern education, by J. C. Kilgo; Stirring up the fires of race antipathy, by J. S. Bassett; Sidney Lanier; reminiscences and letters, by D. C. Gilman; The South Carolina cotton mill village—a manufacturer's view, by T. F. Parker; Walter Hines Page; friend of the South, by Edwin Mims; Mark Twain and the machine age, by W. F. Taylor; The father of modern gynecology, by J. M. Gibson; Thomas Wolfe; two decades of criticism, by Betty Thompson.

"This book is a reminder of the valuable and, it seems to the reviewer, rather broad and normal work done by the South Atlantic Quarterly. Professor Hamilton's insistence in his Fifty Years of the South Atlantic Quarterly that the magazine has maintained an attitude of iconoclasm is possibly post hoc. The journal seems, from Professor Hamilton's own statement, to have announced and pursued no exclusive policy of reform but to have opened its pages to the best articles it could get, and it got a great many good ones, in all lines." Hardin Craig

+ Am Hist R 58:76 O '52 850w

"There are some immensely interesting things in this book. . . . The regional note is struck often but isn't predominant."

+ New Yorker 28:149 Ap 26 '52 170w

SOVIET legal philosophy; by V. I. Lenin [and others] tr. by Hugh W. Babb; with an introd. by John N. Hazard. (20th century legal philosophy, v5) 465p $7.50 Harvard Univ. press

340.1 Law—Philosophy. Law—Russia

51-8768

"The volume presented herewith is, in a sense, a chronicle of the steps taken in the formulation of a Soviet legal philosophy." (Intro) Contains papers by: V. I. Lenin; P. I. Stuchka; M. A. Reisner; E. B. Pashukanis; J. V. Stalin; P. Yudin; A. Y. Vyshinsky; S. A. Golunskii and M. S. Strogovich; I. P. Trainin. Index.

"The text reads clearly and fluently, a not inconsiderable accomplishment in any book on legal theory. In transliterating non-Russian names from the original Russian sources, the translator has occasionally misspelled the names of important non-Russian authors, such as 'Mering' for Mehring, 'Korsch' for Korsch, 'Kunov' for Kunow, 'Kautskii' for Kautsky, and 'Schenier' for Scheuner. But such minor errors do not detract from the generally high standards of style, arrangement, and presentation." William Ebenstein

+ — Am Pol Sci R 46:891 S '52 800w

"As a supplement to the literature in English on Soviet law (some half-dozen books), this anthology is most useful. However, the reader who is not familiar with the concrete legal developments in the Soviet Union over the past 35 years will be misled if he takes the present volume as a guide to what Soviet jurists have really thought about law. This is not to say that the writers here represented are attempting to deceive anyone, but only that their theories are constructed primarily for the sake of meeting certain practical problems faced by the Soviet state and not primarily for the sake of the truth." H. J. Eberman

Ann Am Acad 281:249 My '52 370w

SPAIN, AUGUST ORAN. Political theory of John C. Calhoun. 306p $3.50 Bookman associates

320.1 Calhoun, John Caldwell. Political science 51-14052

"The principle of states' rights is today, again, in the political picture, though on the wider scale of possible international federation. Therefore, this re-examination of the theories of John C. Calhoun, prominent American proponent of that doctrine, is of considerable interest. Except for a brief sketch, the material is not biographical, but rather an analysis of Calhoun's theories on individual rights, sovereignty, secession, the concurrent majority, etc." Current Hist

Reviewed by Bernard Drell

Am Hist R 57:695 Ap '52 650w

Reviewed by N. E. Taylor

Am Pol Sci R 46:557 Je '52 800w

Reviewed by James Hart

Ann Am Acad 280:184 Mr '52 500w

"The author presents Calhoun's reactions clearly—that is, as clearly as they can be presented. His interpretations are bold and they have meaning again at this point in the 20th century, not so much as guides to more functional democracy but as signals that indicate why democracy is not made more functional." T. D. Clark

+ Christian Century 69:1001 S 3 '52 600w

Current Hist 21:354 D '51 60w

Reviewed by J. G. Randall

New Repub 126:18 F 18 '52 400w

"A compact and well-annotated book. . . This is a sound and objective work which can be read with profit by anyone who is willing to approach the philosophy of the austere Carolinian with an open mind. There are many things in it that are still worth thinking about." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Times p33 O 14 '51 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 10 '52 120w

"This scholarly study presents an exhaustive analysis of Calhoun's political thought. Certainly it will be of interest more to the student than to the general reader. More solid, perhaps, than profound, these essays wind slowly through a mass of speeches and writings, impressive but wearying. One may wonder whether Calhoun deserved such treatment." J. C. Cairns

+ Sat R 35:43 F 23 '52 300w

"Without being a tour de force, this work, in its sober interpretation, shows clearly the intellectual and statesmanlike strength of Calhoun's thought as well as its limitations. Mr. Spain offers in conclusion the interesting suggestion that Calhoun's principles, if properly adapted, would even today provide a sound basis for the reconciliation and harmonizing of rural and urban society."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:74 Mr '52 200w

SPANGLER, MERLIN GRANT. Soil engineering. 458p il $6.50 Int. textbook

624.151 [620.19] Soils (engineering) 52-18402

"A comprehensive introduction to soil topics that are of interest in civil engineering. The scope is wider than is usually embraced in soil mechanics, and the style is less technical than is typical of the basic works on soil mechanics. The book is organized as a college text. However, some practicing engineers may find it useful as a simple introduction to such topics as permafrost, especially in view of the selected reference lists that accompany the chapters. The author is Research Professor of Civil Engineering at Iowa State College." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Though designed as a textbook, it will be useful to the working civil engineer who was graduated before the new knowledge of soil mechanics found its way into the curriculum." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:538 Mr 15 '52 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:27 Mr '52

SPECIAL LIBRARIES ASSOCIATION. Science-technology division. Technical libraries; their organization and management; Lucille Jackson, editor. 202p $6 The association

026 Technical libraries

51-5536

"The purpose of this book is to present a description of the function of special libraries in the subject fields of the sciences and related technologies, as represented particularly in the Science-Technology Division of the Special Libraries Association. The main activities of such libraries are discussed in logical sequence from the first stages of organization through all of the more important operations. . . References pertinent to the material presented have been cited in the text, and additional ones have been listed at the end of each chapter as Supplementary References." Pref

"Your reviewer read the dozen chapters of this compendious little volume with steadily growing admiration for a difficult and important job remarkably well done. . . The iconoclastic critic could truthfully allege errors of omission, if not of commission, but this was and is inevitable, and omissions have been held to a minimum." G. F. Purdy

+ Chem & Eng N 29:4208 O 8 '51 200w

"An excellent manual." H. K. Levins

+ Library J 77:134 Ja 15 '52 70w

"The book fills a definite need for general management personnel. The four introductory chapters dealing with staff, budget, layout, and equipment will well repay an executive for the time spent in reading them. An organization considering the establishment of a library can find no better outline and summary of the underlying decisions to be made and steps to be taken than is presented here." F. A. Grant

+ Management R 40:714 N '51 850w

"This volume is a storehouse of workable ideas about such administrative matters as the employment and training of personnel, the budget, space, and the lending, routing, and servicing of library materials. Especially well presented, too, are the highly technical professional methods used to classify, catalog, abstract, and document special information."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:433 D '51 200w

SPEIER, HANS. Social order and the risks of war; papers in political sociology. 497p $4.75 Stewart

301 Sociology. War

52-1841

"A somewhat miscellaneous collection of papers written over the last 20 years, but with a certain emphasis upon war as a normal rather than an abnormal phenomenon for sociological investigation." Foreign Affairs

"While the thirty-two essays do not as such add up to a cohesive whole, the reader is left, nevertheless, with the summary impression of a broad historical perspective in which most papers of this book were conceived. The publication should prove to be of distinct interest to students of political strategy and public opinion and to sociologists in general." Ernest Manheim

+ Am J Soc 58:105 Jl '52 260w

"This book is a convenient vehicle to convey political views of a German scholar who feared the power of Nazism and the congealing of national ideology. So he came to the United States, and did very well. That many practical American politicians will consult his work is doubtful." Howard Woolston

Am Soc R 17:517 Ag '52 400w

Foreign Affairs 31:153 O '52 20w

SPELLER, FRANK NEWMAN. Corrosion; causes and prevention. 3d ed 686p il $10 McGraw

620.112 Corrosion and anti-corrosives

51-13394

"Brings up to date the entire subject as covered in the second edition [Book Review Digest 1935] and adds much new material. Of particular interest are new sections on biological influences and modern prevention methods including catholic protection. A collection of valuable data presented in a useful form. Numerous illustrations." Booklist

SPELLER, F. N.—Continued

Booklist 48:145 D 15 '51

+ Chem Eng 58:323 O '51 950w

"In the present edition there are one new chapter and a fair amount of revision throughout the book. The type has been reset. However, so much has the knowledge of corrosion expanded in recent years that most engineers who want a thorough treatment of specific points will have to turn to the periodical literature or to the more voluminous treatises published in recent years."

N Y New Tech Bks 36:89 N '51

SPENCE, HARTZELL. Big top. See Bradna, F.

SPENCER, ELIZABETH. This crooked way. 247p $3 Dodd

52-7349

Novel of life in the Delta country of Mississippi. The central character, Amos Dudley, is a farm boy who had both religion, and a mean streak. He was determined to marry Ary Morgan, and he achieved his purpose. But success did not bring content, until he brought home some of his poor relations to share his affluence.

"There is a fresh challenge in the work of a new novelist which I wish more American readers would enjoy. . . Miss Spencer is not yet very sure or skillful in setting her scenes, and the reader must pass through implausible or hazy patches before he gets to the clearing of an episode. But once in the clear the dialogue is swift and revelatory, the characterization vigorous and emotionally charged, the environment enveloping and mysterious." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:78 Ap '52 210w

Booklist 48:248 Ap 1 '52

"This Crooked Way is a finely wrought prose ballad. Miss Spencer first tells Amos' story in a third-person narrative, and then both advances it and partly recapitulates it in three first-person narratives from the point of view of the other characters, with the final word to Amos himself. Her device provides amplitude or nuance and suggestion with an economy of narrative line." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 175:153 My '52 200w

Reviewed by Nancy Baker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 20 '52 290w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 20 '52 190w

Reviewed by M. P. McKay

Library J 77:433 Mr 1 '52 90w

"Miss Spencer's second novel is interesting for several reasons; while she is in her own right a talented and skillful member of the Southern regional group who have attracted so much attention during the last decade, she seems perfectly content to work within the confines of a strictly Faulknerian scene, a faithful disciple of the master." Harvey Swados

+ Nation 174:561 Je 7 '52 470w

"Miss Spencer may use any method she likes in writing a novel of rural Mississippi and she will find an avid audience. She knows her state as Faulkner knows his Yoknapatawpha County, Eudora Welty her towns. There's violence in Mississippi weather and in Mississippi natives and Miss Spencer is adept at writing about violence. She is equally adept at describing the stillness before a storm, and in her use of indigenous idiom, an analysis of the soil or the movements of a woman in the kitchen can haunt one's memory like a poem." W. T. Hedden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 16 '52 1100w

"The story, recounted by several eyewitnesses in homely vernacular, makes an odyssey as old as the Yocona hills and as new as the big government dam currently erasing their once-familiar landmarks. It is a story, locally sound and yet universal, about the failure at the heart of success, about the sin of lonely striving and the saving grace of human love." Frances Gaiher

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '52 450w

"Miss Spencer's story is an original one, in both plot and incident, and she handles her ideas about the inward decay of a religious enthusiast with real imagination and invention. But because so much of what she has to say has been put into poor words and so many of her ideas and observations have been decked out in the rags and tatters of intellectual poverty, her otherwise excellent book has all the appearance of being just another Southern novel. . . It is much better than that, and one can only regret that Miss Spencer, with her obvious gifts for doing something finer, should have decided to hide her light under this beat-up old bushel." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:129 Mr 22 '52 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 2 '52 550w

"Miss Spencer writes with perception and sensitivity, often with extraordinary beauty. Yet unlike some of our writers in whom these qualities are found, she never goes off in a fog of lovely words which leave the reader wondering what it is all about. She is close to reality. Her first novel, 'Fire in the Morning,' was good. 'This Crooked Way' is even better." C. R. Sumner

+ Sat R 35:16 Mr 8 '52 650w

"Immature in some ways and a little coarsened for English taste by the rural vernacular of the American South, This Crooked Way has a fresh, direct, unadorned quality that is continuously attractive. . . Miss Spencer is clearly a writer of promise." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 189:78 J1 11 '52 110w

"Her characters seem scooped from Faulkner rather than observed from life. Her technique of letting several characters tell the story in rotation, also reminiscent of Faulkner, is much too complex for her simple materials. And a throbby, portentous style suggests that, so far, she is more concerned with displaying her sensibility than releasing her story."

Time 59:108 Mr 24 '52 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Ag 1 '52 110w

SPERBER, MANES. The abyss; tr. from the German by Constantine Fitzgibbon. 348p $3.75 Doubleday

52-6363

Second in a trilogy of novels dealing with Communists and ex-Communists in Europe during the '30s and '40s. The chief character in this installment is Doino Faber, a Yugoslav who escapes the fate of his friends and finds refuge for a time in France.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:473 S '52 340w

"Taken by itself, 'The Abyss' will not prove widely rewarding. Few will read it except those to whom acute political analysis and the psychology of ex-Communists are of interest. . . The fit audience of 'The Abyss' will find it deeply rewarding, for Sperber is a powerful writer with an important subject. In the overall trilogy, 'The Abyss' has an indispensable place. But its middle position is the least emphatic one, and its theme of despair less exciting than either disillusionment or hope." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 1 '52 410w

"There is not enough which is memorable in this novel to make it a real achievement. The story and the larger theme—of isolation and spiritual desolation—could be genuinely moving, and handled by a more dramatically conscious novelist they would have been. But here we feel little. We are on the periphery of the characters' experience; we know what is happening to them, but we cannot share it. Their anguish and their despair are not ours. Faber's position is clearly articulated but it is not dramatized, and the result is an intellectually rewarding but emotionally unsatisfying book. The Abyss reads more like a Political Science textbook than a novel." Philip Driscoll

— + Commonweal 56:324 J1 4 '52 950w

"Less introspective than Arthur Koestler, this still is for his audience of thoughtful readers and offers a searching evaluation of contemporary conduct at a time when existence and faith sustain a harsh struggle for survival."

Kirkus 20:233 Ap 1 '52 240w

"The Abyss' is not complete in itself, as was 'The Burned Bramble.' It is the segment of a novel, and to enjoy it as such you should meet and know the characters in the earlier volume. But as fiery commentary on today's conflict and as a testament to man's spiritual indestructibility, it can and should receive acclaim." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 1 '52 800w

"Nowadays, when we have often to rebuke our novelists for dealing with trivial and peripheral lives, no such reproach can be made to Mr. Sperber: the experiences of Doyno Faber are at the very center of European history in this century. But what is equally beyond doubt is that Mr. Sperber has not made a novel out of this material. The book has the abstractness of a tract on political ideology."

William Barrett

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 1 '52 700w

Reviewed by Anthony Green

Sat R 35:17 J1 19 '52 400w

Spring'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 13 '52 240w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Thunder country; il. by [the author]. 150p $2.75 Macmillan

52-9410

A father-and-son team of ornithologists find their trip into the interior of Venezuela complicated by a request from the government to search for a missing engineer. Their combined mission results in adventure and hardships but they win through in the end.

Booklist 48:326 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 8 '52 190w

Reviewed by Mary Handy

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 120w

"A swiftly told and gripping story, with a strong on-the-spot feeling." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:111 Ap '52 100w

"While Sperry, for my money, is still at his best in stories of the sea, he is always a first rate spinner of tales, and his tropical backgrounds live."

+ Kirkus 20:76 F 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson

Library J 77:1214 J1 '52 80w

"It's a pure adventure story, a book full of the fears of the deep jungle, of weird suspense and primitive ferocity. Although not as well written as 'Call It Courage,' Mr. Sperry's Newbery Medal book, it is the sort of thriller that will appeal widely to boys around twelve. The dozen or so stunning pictures give interesting jungle details as well as action." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 4 '52 140w

"There is little shading in the characterizations, or, with a few exceptions, in the development of the jungle background. Of action and suspense there is plenty." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '52 120w

"Mr. Sperry knows how to tell an adventure story, as he has shown in his earlier books about New Guinea, but his illustrations do not quite match his writing technique."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 100w

"An adventure story that has an unusual background and a good deal of action."

+ Sat R 35:35 J1 19 '52 180w

SPERRY, MARGARET (MRS BEN RUSSAK).

Hen that saved the world, and other Norwegian folk tales, retold; il by Per Beckman. 63p $2.25 Day

398 Folklore—Norway

52-9611

Six Norwegian folk tales retold by an American who lived in Norway as a child. For ages 7 to 10.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 24 '52 140w

"Charming."

+ Kirkus 20:546 S 1 '52 130w

"Stories were very popular with second-fourth-graders and simple enough for most of them to read. Black-and-white illustrations by Per Beckman are humorous and effective." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 78:70 Ja 1 '53 80w

"Unfortunately, they have been retold and changed considerably. Consequently, much of the simplicity and the original folklore language, which is the strength of these tales, have been obscured." Inger Boye

— Library J 78:70 Ja 1 '53 80w

"The delightful introduction, with its memories of a childhood in Norway, where facts and fables mingled, gives us the author's special quality and reasons for adding another to the many books of Norse folktales. And the pages live up to the promise. . . The type of folk humor remains adult and the points are better understood by a family at the fire-side than by the nursery age. The many pictures are excellent, in a modern style which keeps close to peasant themes." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p2 N 16 '52 170w

"This collection is a very nice addition to folklore, and the book itself is beautifully made, with black and white illustrations that look exactly right." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times pt2, p37 N 16 '52 100w

"The book will have great value to storytellers and to the boys and girls who will strongly approve the drawings by Per Beckman. They are strong black-and-white line drawings, rich with atmosphere and humor." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R 35:47 S 20 '52 180w

SPICER, BART. Long green. 189p $2.50 Dodd
52-8101

Detective story.

"This fourth of Bart Spicer's novels about Carney is at least as good as any of its predecessors and it is even more tightly coiled, an artful and a hair-raising job of work." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 180w

"The most sheerly exciting book in the Spicer canon to date." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 30 '52 170w

"This plot makes its own breathless suspense; narration, background and characterization are good." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 30 '52 80w

"Good short-story idea dragged out by hard-bitten speeches, portentousness, ridiculous misunderstandings—and another 'tec hero who can go without sleep boringly long." Kathleen Sproul

Sat R 35:63 Ap 12 '52 60w

SPIEGEL, HENRY WILLIAM, ed. Development of economic thought; great economists in perspective. 811p $6.50 Wiley

330.1 Economics—History 52-9762

"An anthology of some forty appraisals by notable economists of the work of their fellow-economists. The selections are substantial, and are introduced by the editor in short paragraph placing writer and subject in perspective. They are arranged chronologically as to the subject." Library J

"An excellent idea, brilliantly executed. . . The layman can only wish that economists wrote so easily and brilliantly when discussing economics as they do when discussing their fellow craftsmen."

+ Current Hist 23:396 D '52 80w

"An attractive book that should have an appeal to those interested in economics or the progress of society whether as professional or as amateur." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:1660 O 1 '52 90w

"This collection of intellectual portraits of eminent economists by their peers proves very quickly that economists can write good, even graceful prose when stimulated by thought of their illustrious colleagues, living or dead." Robert Lekachman

+ Nation 175:275 S 27 '52 1000w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. Kiss me, deadly, by Mickey Spillane. 251p $2.50 Dutton

52-5311

Detective story.

"Tough as they come, but expert in the field."

Kirkus 20:574 S 1 '52 80w

"Comes as almost a relief after the interim flood of Spillane imitators. Chief difference, I think, is that Spillane really believes (God help him) in what he's writing, while the imitators are just trying to turn a fast buck." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p33 O 26 '52 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 2 '52 50w

"Old formula still operating; this one just as wild as predecessors." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 O 25 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p9C N 2 '52 90w

SPINOZA, BENEDICTUS DE. Spinoza dictionary; ed. by Dagobert D. Runes; with a foreword by Albert Einstein. 309p $5 Philosophical lib.

199.492 Philosophy 51-14421

"The book is planned as a compendium of selections from Spinoza's works in all fields, arranged alphabetically. It serves, in short, as an index to Spinoza's work, each topic briefly set forth from the primary source. The editor's introduction [is] mainly biographical." Churchman

"A handbook of this kind is no substitute for the consecutive text of the Ethics, but should be an excellent aid to students of it." W. E. G.

Christian Century 69:222 F 20 '52 70w

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher

Churchman 166:17 Mr 15 '52 160w

"If this rather novel arrangement secures new readers for Spinoza, it will achieve its purpose." E. C. Starr

+ Crozer Q 29:253 Ap '52 50w

Reviewed by R. P. Bredan

Library J 76:1567 O 1 '51 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 17 '52 50w

School & Society 74:320 N 17 '51 30w

SPRIGGE, CECIL JACKSON SQUIRE. Benedetto Croce; man and thinker. (Studies in modern European literature and thought) 64p $2.50 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Croce, Benedetto 52-10461

"This small book is at once a biography, an interpretation, and a tribute. . . After Italy's liberation by the Allies, Croce, then an old man, turned down all suggestions that he head the new government. Croce has been called arid and cold, but Mr. Sprigge maintains that a human sympathy underlies even the most detached of his studies." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by Fritz Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 14 '52 90w

"Mr. Sprigge writes primarily for scholars. He has turned out a work of distinction in the higher traditions of criticism that, in its penetrating analysis, has won even the approval of the fastidious Neapolitan himself." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 17 '52 500w

Reviewed by Frances Keene

Nation 175:411 N 1 '52 700w

Reviewed by Rudd Fleming

New Repub 127:21 J1 7 '52 490w

Reviewed by Michael Hamburger

New Statesman & Nation 44:142 Ag 2 '52 140w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 J1 27 '52 1350w

Reviewed by William Barrett

N Y Times p5 Je 22 '52 40w

"All in all, a pretty recondite piece of writing."

New Yorker 28:90 Je 28 '52 200w

Spec 189:80 J1 11 '52 60w

"It would be out of place here to enter into any discussion of the many and difficult problems which this survey raises, but the author is to be congratulated upon the lucidity of his style and the accuracy with which he has fixed his eye upon the main issues. Since Signor Croce himself read this book in proof, as we learn from the 'Postscript,' we may assume that, with the few reservations there set out, it has his approval."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p431 J1 4 '52 390w

SPRING, HOWARD. Houses in between. 550p $3.95 Harper

51-11956

A panorama of English and continental history told as the life story of Sarah Rainborough, an upper class English woman. As a child of three Sarah saw Queen Victoria open the Crystal Palace. After living thru four wars she died at ninety-nine in 1948.

"Sarah is the real achievement of the book, and a lovely and perceptive woman she is—witty, generous, and unafraid. She has the quiet tenacity of English women, and Mr. Spring has, I think, been remarkably successful in conveying the hazard, the heartache, and the disappointment of a great people in the touching concerns of a single being." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 189:77 Je '52 750w

Booklist 48:153; 281 Ja 1 '52; My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:185 My '52 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:314 J1 '52 280w

"One could carp, and doubtless some people will. Some of the episodes are out of the realm of too facile fiction, and not every motive is clear and plausible. But most of the book is out of life, interpreted thoughtfully and compassionately." A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 20 '52 400w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '52 500w

"A meandering, occasionally sprightly, more often tedious novel."

Kirkus 20:83 F 1 '52 200w

"As the story goes on and the characters multiply the interest weakens through being too much diffused. But on the surface and as a personal chronicle, it never fails of incident or of diversity in its social background." H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 S 14 '51 230w

"In 'The Houses in Between' almost everything happens to somebody some time or another, and though this may be statistically defensible in a whole century's annals of a large family, it does not prevent a modern reader's feeling that the story is in places too plotful and melodramatic. But it has many virtues—not the least of which is a sort of dogged readability." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 27 '52 800w

"The fact is that Mr. Spring has labored mightily to live up to the label 'Dickensian,' and has produced a panoramic narrative bustling with people and motion. It is true we have met many of these people in print before, but Mr. Spring is a good guide to have on this grand tour of an England that has vanished. He does it in a style so expansive and so avuncular that you almost come to believe that the good old days were really good." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '52 600w

"Mr. Spring contrives to fill five hundred and fifty pages without ever touching the heart, the mind, the memory, or the funny-bone."

New Yorker 28:142 Ap 26 '52 60w

Reviewed by I. F. Reichert

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 25 '52 550w

"The style rises to a high level just often enough to make its usual banality inexcusable. . . 'The Houses in Between' is honestly conceived and executed frequently with skill. Few historical novels of the year are likely to be more entertaining or less addicted to showing that Hollywood's interpretation of history is God's." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 35:23 My 3 '52 550w

"The novel is old-fashioned in style, it does miss something of life, truth, reality, but it has qualities of imagination and feeling which, alas! newer and more contemporary-minded writers so often lack and without which they perhaps should not write novels at all." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 187:342 S 14 '51 110w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 500w

"At her best, as a character, Sarah has a touch of the laconic undertone which sometimes distinguishes nurses in fiction. Too often, however, she becomes flat and rather pale, and seems to belong to no particular period. It is a pity that Mr. Spring could not have trimmed her story and given it more shape. It remains agreeable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 5 '51 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

SPRING, SAMUEL. Risks and rights in publishing, television, radio, motion pictures, advertising, and the theater. 385p $7.50 Norton

655.6 Copyright. Libel and slander 52-7101

"This book is designed as a legal aid for those engaged in publishing, television, radio, motion pictures, advertising and the theater. It explains the rights of privacy as developed in recent court cases and describes defamation, slander, libel and copyright law. There are also sections on obscenity and censorship and on piracy trials, as well as a discussion of the theories of unfair competition in entertainment and the new monopoly restraints upon organized artists." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:209 Mr 1 '52

"Chief Judge Stephens of the Court of Appeals (D.C. Cir.) acknowledges, in his introduction, that this is 'primarily' a book for laymen which, however, in his opinion will be useful also to lawyers, judges, and legislators. It seems clear that in so highly technical a field as copyright, it is a somewhat hazardous undertaking to explain the law in layman's language and, at the same time, offer a treatise which will prove to be a correct and reliable statement of the present law. In this reviewer's opinion, the Spring book falls short of meeting the author's aim. . . In the light of these and many other inaccuracies, it is difficult to agree with Chief Judge Stephens' concluding statement that 'Risks and Rights is interestingly and dependably written.' While it undoubtedly reflects the author's broad practical experience in this field, it is unfortunately not 'dependable' in the sense that consultation of it by laymen or lawyers will in every instance result in accurate and reliable information." W. J. Derenberg

+ Columbia Law R 52:818 Je '52 1050w

Management R 41:335 My '52 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 16 '52 200w

SPRY, MRS. CONSTANCE. Summer and autumn flowers; arranged by [the author; pub] in assn. with Thomas Y. Crowell co, New York. 116p il $5 Studio

635.9663 Floral decoration 52-7384

Advice on flower decoration and arrangement by an authority. Includes 24 hand-colored photographs and 12 monochrome plates. Appendix for beginners. Index.

"Delightful volume."

+ Bookmark 11:155 Ap '52 20w

"A beautiful book, English in background, but applicable anywhere."

+ Kirkus 20:186 Mr 1 '52 110w

"Pleasant reading, as in earlier books by Mrs. Spry. Sound advice, useful information." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1015 Je 1 '52 90w

"Surprisingly conventional—and delightful—bouquets by a famous English arranger." C. H. W.

+ Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 10w

SPURR, STEPHEN HOPKINS. Forest inventory. 476p $8.50 Ronald

634.928 Forests and forestry—Mensuration Agr52-410

"[This volume contains] a comprehensive report on present-day forest mensuration techniques. It deals with the measurement of trees and stands, the estimation of their volume, the prediction of growth, and sampling problems involved in forest inventory design. A large amount of original material has been added to a critical survey of previous work in the field of forest mensuration." (Pref) The author is associate professor of forestry, University of Minnesota. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:601 Ap 1 '52 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:39 My '52

"The book will furnish the forest manager with a comprehensive review and evaluation of old and new methods in forest mensuration. The extent of the coverage is indicated by the more than seven hundred references in the bibliography."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:186 Je '52 180w

SPURRIER, WILLIAM ATWELL. Guide to the Christian faith; an introduction to Christian doctrine. 242p $2.50 Scribner

230 Christianity 52-554

"This volume attempts to bridge gap between 'theological books' and 'popular religious books'. Written for the average adult reader, it should meet a long and keenly felt need for an adequate explanation of Christian doctrines. Author's long experience as an ordained clergyman, professor of Christian ethics and Christian doctrine, and his firm belief in Christian faith, certainly should qualify him to present this guide to a better understanding of the basic beliefs of Christianity." (Library J) Bibliography.

SPURRIER, W. A.—Continued

Reviewed by O. L. Ice
Churchman 166:17 Ap 15 '52 250w

"The author is an Episcopalian, but the point of view expressed is that of the traditional evangelical faith held in common by most of the major Protestant denominations. Laymen who want to understand the distinction between the 'liberal' viewpoint and the 'neo-orthodox' will find this a fair minded exposition."

+ Kirkus 20:39 Ja 15 '52 220w

"Recommended for all libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 77:209 F 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 9 '52 650w

Reviewed by K. D. Miller
Sat R 35:40 Mr 1 '52 140w

SQUIRE, RUSSEL NELSON. Introduction to music education; with a foreword and an appendix by Karl W. Gehrken. 185p $3.25 Ronald

780.72 School music 52-6191

"The purpose of this volume is to provide an orientation in music education that will be useful to the student preparing to teach music, to the general educator responsible for school administration, and to the in-service teacher responsible for all or part of his school's music program. To help the reader gain a broad perspective on music education in this country, considerable emphasis is given throughout the work to philosophical, psychological, and sociological considerations." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:316 Je 1 '52

"In the author's persistent and rewarding search for a philosophical and sociological basis for his observations and recommendations one recognizes the sure hand of his mentor and associate, Dr. Karl W. Gehrken, whom he generously recognizes." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:1205 J1 '52 130w

"The present volume may be welcomed as a brief but fairly comprehensive exposition of current philosophies and practices. . . . At its best when dealing with practical problems of everyday philosophy and practice, the work deteriorates rapidly in quality whenever the author makes excursions into other areas. . . . Despite these and other weaknesses, the virtues of its organization and its adequate treatment of current practice give this work real usefulness, particularly for school administrators and others who wish a general introduction to music education." A. P. Britton

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:609 S '52 500w
School & Society 75:272 Ap 26 '52 20w

"On the whole, this is a forward-looking, thought-provoking, and challenging book—one well suited to its purposes. It should be in the hands of everyone interested in the enrichment of education and of life itself." V. H. Talley

+ School R 60:502 N '52 700w

STACE, WALTER TERENCE. Religion and the modern mind. 285p $3.75 Lippincott

201 Religion—Philosophy. Skepticism 52-7471

"Here Professor Stace is trying to answer a question that troubles every thinking man: Is there any reasonable and significant place for religion in our modern scientific age? He finds no easy answer, but that is a strength of the book rather than a weakness. The upshot of Professor Stace's argument is that the modern age of science is here to stay, at least for any now foreseeable time." (Sat R) Index.

Booklist 49:134 D 15 '52

Christian Century 69:1503 D 24 '52 210w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 380w

"The book will have a popular appeal, for it is amazing in the clarity of its interpretation of weighty ideas."

+ Kirkus 20:448 J1 15 '52 270w

"The title of this book by a professor of philosophy at Princeton may mislead readers who are in search of spiritual inspiration or solace. . . . Nevertheless, his book contains many challenging ideas, not the least of which is that he believes the moral order is here to stay. Of limited appeal but decidedly worth consideration in any large public or college library." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 77:652 O 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by Hans Meyerhoff
Nation 175:608 D 27 '52 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '52 100w

"It is not often that a book comes along which is as logically and philosophically sound, as scientifically accurate, as intellectually important and yet written so as to inform and even entertain the average educated lay person as this latest book from Professor Stace's pen." P. A. Schilpp

+ Sat R 35:13 O 11 '52 900w

STACE, WALTER TERENCE. Time and eternity; an essay in the philosophy of religion. 169p $3 Princeton univ. press

201 Religion—Philosophy 52-5835

"A confirmed naturalist proposes to reconcile naturalism with religion by deriving all religious experience from mysticism. The mystical element in religion, he argues, is universal, but various cultures channel it differently, and people are mystical in varying degrees. The core of his defense of religion is his contention that God can be known only through intuition not through intellect, and that religious concepts are to be interpreted symbolically, not literally." Booklist

Booklist 48:371 J1 15 '52

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 30 '52 380w

"This is a challenging book and worthy of the attention of all who are interested in the fate of the human spirit in our time." J. W. Nixon

+ Sat R 35:50 Je 14 '52 800w

Time 59:58 My 5 '52 600w

"The book is profoundly suggestive; it is somewhat misleadingly titled, for there is no analysis of temporal experience and its relation to the eternal."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:266 S '52 210w

STAFFORD, JEAN. Catherine wheel. 281p $3 Harcourt

52-6161

"The heroine is Katharine Congreve, rich, lovely, kind and altogether admirable. Her problem is a not uncommon one, in or out of fiction: In her late 30s and unmarried, she gets a proposal of marriage from John Shipley, like herself a rich Bostonian, and the first man she ever loved. The catch is that he is married to her cousin, that all three are old friends, and that Katharine dearly loves the three children of John and Maeve Shipley. The whole thing is settled during a summer when the Shipleys are in Europe and Katharine has the children at her house in Maine." Time

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 189:84 F '52 410w

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

"An exquisitely written unraveling of complexities that will delight the discriminating reader."

+ Bookmark 11:108 F '52 60w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:469 Mr '52 280w

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 13 '52
500w

Reviewed by Ruth Wales
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 24 '52
400w

"Jean Stafford writes, as ever, with an eye to all the implications and resources of the language; her endowments of style, sensibility and imagination, and her rare ability to invest experience with moral value, diminish even the most distinguished of her contemporaries. Occasionally, the Catherine Wheel exhibits the same oppressive concern with elegance and décor which afflicts even the best of Edith Wharton's fiction, but granting this mutual defect, the achievements of both novelists do not seem too disparate. Like Mrs. Wharton, Miss Stafford has written a novel to compel the imagination and nurture the mind, she has also written one in which pity and terror combine to reach us in the secret, irrational places of the heart." Richard Hayes

+ Commonweal 55:404 Ja 25 '52 700w

Kirkus 19:681 D 1 '51 250w

"Sensitive perception, attention to detail, and ability to understand the anxieties of childhood notable in Boston Adventure and The Mountain Lion are here. The intensity of feeling and the tragic ending, however, destroy rather than sustain the mood so intelligently created. Recommended." Beatrice Libaire

+ — Library J 77:144 Ja 15 '52 150w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 O 17 '52 110w

"'The Catherine Wheel' is the most engrossing unsuccessful novel I have read for a very long time. It is unsuccessful because it tries to do too much and because Miss Stafford's attitude toward her subject or subjects is ambiguous." Ernest Jones

+ — Nation 174:136 F 9 '52 800w

New Repub 126:21 Mr 10 '52 290w

"With spirit, with humour, with insight, and without fuss, Miss Stafford creates a situation and resolves it. Her atmosphere of a beautiful place and of a rather self-consciously beautiful 'ambience' is beautifully done; this is a novel of great accomplishment. What did we expect, if we are disappointed? The unexpected, I suppose, which is what a fine talent provides. But that is about the only thing which, in The Catherine Wheel, Miss Stafford hasn't provided." J. D. Scott

+ — New Statesman & Nation 44:489 O 25 '52 120w

"Written like a poem, with a fragile perfection of structure and a fastidious choice of the materials used, it maintains itself delicately, a fakir's ladder to heaven, with every person, every object, every smallest incident contributing its designated part to the total effect. And the sum of this haunting job of novel writing is an ethereal sense of unreality for which Miss Stafford, evidently, has deliberately striven." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 13 '52 500w

"Miss Stafford is a novelist of such stature and of such brilliancy that it is difficult to track down why her story fails finally to be convincing, and so to be the moving experience one looks for. What one has in 'The Catherine Wheel' is a novel of art, a New England Gothic tale (a kind of opposite number to the Southern Gothic of a writer like Eudora Welty) with a stern, rockbound moral: the power of hate, whether sensed or unguessed, to expend the spirit and lay waste the personal life." A. S. Morris

N Y Times p5 Ja 13 '52 600w

"As a story of misunderstanding, and the width that divides children from their elders, it is excellent. But Miss Stafford is continually writing away from the story to matters of larger import. . . . She attempts to invest accurate and precise descriptions of delicate shades of feeling with a greater significance than they can bear, and very simple actions are dwelt upon until their outline is lost in a fluff of words." Anthony West

New Yorker 27:76 Ja 12 '52 600w

"'The Catherine Wheel' is a novel of great restraint and of great beauty." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R 35:11 Ja 26 '52 460w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Spring'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52
240w

Time 59:94 Ja 14 '52 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 24 '52
180w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:139 Je '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:95 Mr '52

Reviewed by James Yaffe

Yale R n s 41:10 spring '52 430w

STAHL, MRS KATHLEEN MARY. British and Soviet colonial systems. 114p $2.50 Praeger
325.31 Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. Russia—Colonies [51-5814]

"A comparison of British colonial policies and those of the U.S.S.R. as displayed in the dependent Central Asian republics." Foreign Affairs

Am Pol Sci R 45:1225 D '52 10w

"This little book presents a clear if brief analysis of British colonial administration, but when it attempts to do the same with that of the Soviets it breaks down. . . . Miss Stahl allots but thirty-five pages to the Russian side of her picture, and the scanty material which she does use consists largely of extracts from Stalin's writings and from the Soviet constitution, all of which we have learned by experience is of dubious value." W. P. Hall

Ann Am Acad 279:230 Ja '52 450w

Foreign Affairs 30:495 Ap '52 20w

Manchester Guardian p4 JI 20 '51 120w

"This is a short book, with few footnotes and a modest reference to bibliographical sources, but it is a distillation of authentic knowledge and understanding, mature in outlook, without pretence, and admirably written. Mrs. Stahl's treatment is as original as it is interesting. Her book is much needed, especially in the United States." W. R. Crocker

+ Pacific Affairs 25:90 Mr '52 400w

"The British half of the book gives a lucid and accurate guide to the constitutional mysteries which surround colonial government."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p355 Je 8 '51
750w

STALEY, EUGENE, and others, eds. Creating an industrial civilization. 368p $4 Harper

973 [917.3] U.S.—Civilization 52-7160

Summary of the round-table discussions of the 1951 Corning conference, conducted by the American council of learned societies and the Corning glass works. Gives the text of the papers circulated before the conference, and the gist of the discussion on the topics of: work and human values; leisure and human values; the individual's sense of community; and confidence in life; all as related to industrial civilization.

Reviewed by C. D. McGlamery

Am Soc R 17:799 D '52 220w

"The book shows every evidence of careful editing by an experienced reportorial staff. It is more readable than most conference reports and is probably the first promising step toward the elaboration of a plan of action for solving the human problems of industrial society." C. W. Coulter

+ Ann Am Acad 284:196 N '52 330w

Booklist 48:376 JI 15 '52

"The object of the book is to present a summarized report of the discussion. This it does in a readable way and much interest is added by frequent quotations from the stenographic record. . . . It is recommended to all who are interested in this fundamentally important, pioneering subject." G. J. Esselen

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3974 S 22 '52 210w

"The reader will find this well-presented report chock-full of stimulating ideas and quotations from top-flight representatives of management, labor, government, the arts and professions, science and the humanistic studies. Creating an Industrial Civilization is a book well worth careful and reflective reading." F. E. Verdin

STALEY, EUGENE—Continued

+ Management R 41:705 O '52 420w

School & Society 75:352 My 31 '52 20w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 300w

STAMP, LAURENCE DUDLEY. Land for tomorrow; the underdeveloped world. 230p $4; to members $3 Am. geographical soc; Ind. univ. press

333.7 Natural resources 52-8993

"Dudley Stamp is a geographer and statistician. His book, derived from lectures delivered at Indiana University in 1950, is a supplement to Josué de Castro's recently published 'The Geography of Hunger.' Long experience as an agricultural consultant in the tropics leads Mr. Stamp to put less hope in undeveloped frontiers than does de Castro, and greater emphasis on soils such as our own. . . Properly farmed, he holds, the United States could easily raise enough to feed 500,000,000 people; and 'staggering results would be achieved if the United States, Canada and Argentina increased their output per acre up to the levels reached in Northwestern Europe.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by Sidney Hoos

Am Econ R 42:995 D '52 800w

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

Kirkus 20:60 Ja 15 '52 240w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown

Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 110w

"While the book is thoughtful, scholarly, and objective throughout, it stays within the limits of the author's chosen discipline, and so raises (by implication) a number of points that seem to remain dangling. . . While leaning toward the neo-Malthusian camp and its habit of analysis in terms of statistics rather than of human problems, Mr. Stamp is laudably and refreshingly careful not to share its well known jitters." E. P. Hanson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 13 '52 700w

"A compact and readable atlas that looks hopefully, on the whole, to the future." Russell Lord

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 30 '52 230w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 22 '52 130w

"It is always a joy to read a clean and luminous book. Reward is multiplied in the present instance, for Dr. Stamp discusses a topic too often muddled in controversy." F. E. Sears

+ Yale R n s 41:638 summer '52 800w

STANDISH, ROBERT, pseud. See Gerahty, D. G.

STANLEY, ARTHUR, pseud. See Megaw, A. S.

STANWELL-FLETCHER, MRS THEODORA MORRIS (COPE). Tundra world; frontispiece by George Miksch Sutton. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 266p $3.50 Little

574.971 Natural history—Manitoba

52-6795

Based on the author's own experiences during a summer spent at Churchill on Hudson's Bay, where she was studying and photographing bird and animal life and sub-Arctic flowers.

Booklist 49:7 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 31 '52 360w

"I approached 'The Tundra World' hoping against possibility that it might match the author's magnificent 'Driftwood Valley.' It does not and cannot. It is a freshly related tale, which in the author's own words 'doesn't pretend to be a profound or detailed study' of an interesting summer, while 'Driftwood Valley' is the deeply lived experience of a man and his wife engaged in a dangerous, thrillingly-rewarding adventure lasting years. Further, 'Driftwood Valley' satisfies a universal longing as realized by these modern scientists. When the blurb promises that we shall be 'equally enthusiastic' over both books, it disallows us any critical sense and infers that we cannot tell the difference between a good book and a great one." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 21 '52 550w

"A first-rate book of its kind." Allan Devoe
+ Commonweal 56:564 S 12 '52 600w

Kirkus 20:359 Je 15 '52 190w

"Highly recommended for its account of wild life and daily living in the sub-Arctic." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 77:1190 Jl '52 50w

"Mrs. Stanwell-Fletcher presents the problems and observations of her heroines, Rosamund and Sue, with vivacity and humor and her account succeeds, where many a scientific report fails, in bringing the tundra brilliantly to life." G. M. Sutton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 17 '52 600w

"Only a few things in the book must be corrected. . . Where Miss Stanwell-Fletcher is on her own she is nothing less than marvelous. Her style is that of a gifted writer, her knowledge of her subject unsurpassed. . . She just enjoys life as it is lived with other people; she dances, she visits Eskimos and Indians, she does not let any tiny part of life in the Arctic pass by unnoticed. Therefore the book is understandable to all readers. It will delight them, too—delight them very much." Peter Freuchen

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 17 '52 460w

New Yorker 28:136 O 4 '52 190w

"As in her other book, the author chooses the diary style; she feels it to be, for her at least, the most natural form in which to put observations on nature and wild life. But, as she also did in 'Driftwood Valley,' she has tempered the rigidity of the form, relaxing it a good bit, and pausing to elaborate as she goes along. The result has the effect of taking the reader by the hand and making him a participant in the author's adventuring." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 9 '52 900w

Springf'd Republican p9D S 28 '52 230w

"Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:170 Jl '52

STAPP, ARTHUR D. Captive of the mountains. 187p $2.50 Morrow

52-5072

Three boys go on a mountain climbing expedition in the Olympic National Park near Seattle. Their mission is to try out a safety device for climbers. A friend of the boys seeing their distress signal from his plane, thinking there has been an accident, lands his plane to help them, and the plane is the 'captive of the mountains.' For ages 13 to 15.

Booklist 48:237 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 130w

Horn Bk 28:179 Je '52 100w

"A sympathetically written mountain climbing story. . . A good adventure story, this is morally and vocationally valuable as well."

+ Kirkus 20:159 Mr 1 '52 160w

"Absorbing reading. The importance of safety precautions and thought for the welfare of others in the forest are emphasized. Authentic mountaineering, feeling for the beauty of the outdoors, and suspenseful plot combine to make a worthwhile book for boys of 13-15." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 77:605 Ap 1 '52 80w

"Mr. Stapp certainly knows the sort of action boys enjoy, and he can make such an adventure as this sound factually true, and at the same time build up suspense as one unexpected danger succeeds another." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 11 '52 130w

"The plot is smartly paced, and characterization is adequate. Deft descriptive touches attest to the author's knowledge of mountain climbing." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '52 120w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen

Sat R 35:58 My 10 '52 140w

STAVRIANOS, LEFTEN STAVROS. Greece: American dilemma and opportunity. 246p $3.25 Regnery

949.5 U.S.—Foreign relations—Greece. Greece—Politics and government 51-8862

A documented survey of Greek-American relations during the years 1946 to 1951. The author is associate professor of history at Northwestern university, and was in charge of the Greek desk with the Office of Strategic services in 1944-1945. Index.

"A serious effort to provide an informative and scholarly survey of the pivotal points in the recent developments in Greece." W. S. Vucinich

+ Am Hist R 57:940 Jl '52 650w

Reviewed by William Yale

Ann Am Acad 282:188 Jl '52 270w

Booklist 48:169 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 26 '52 550w

"Even though this is the best current introduction to the Greek dilemma, the work is not without its weaknesses. In spite of the numberless details scattered throughout the survey, the presentation becomes frequently quite diffuse. . . A good bibliography could have strengthened the book. . . Otherwise, this is a good book, an indispensable book on a little country which has suffered because it has been caught between the pincer movements of the Soviet drive to the Mediterranean." J. S. Roucek

+ Commonweal 55:380 Ja 18 '52 290w

Current Hist 22:103 F '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 30:681 Jl '52 50w

Kirkus 19:597 O 1 '51 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 76:1928 N 15 '51 110w

"The accuracy of Stavrianos's estimate of the past is vouched for both by his meticulous documentation and by the actual course of events. . . It is in its optimism for the future that Stavrianos's book may arouse greater skepticism." Moses Hadas

Nation 174:62 Ja 19 '52 1450w

"Mr. Stavrianos has much to say which merits deep thought and stimulates attention. Indeed there is far too much corruption and inefficiency in Greece today. . . But this book loses much of its value by trying at all costs, in a fashion which has been typical of the Greek mentality since time began, to prove that one cause is white and the other black; that there is little in between. Vigor is not an intellectual substitute for truth or wisdom." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 13 '52 850w

"Few would question the underlying approach of Dr. Stavrianos to the dilemma faced by the United States in many of the Mediterranean and Middle Eastern states, but his discussion of the Greek case is weakened by the polemical tone of the political narrative and by the sketchy treatment of economic problems. . . The problems of the Greek economy are in some respects unique, depending as they so largely do on a few specialized exports. Criticism of current policies can therefore carry little weight unless it is accompanied by a thorough consideration of alternative proposals. These shortcomings weaken the case presented by Dr. Stavrianos, but they certainly do not destroy it. The dilemma for American policy is a real one, and the author has drawn on his extensive knowledge of Greek politics to present issues which are deserving of most serious consideration." C. E. Black

+ Pol Sci Q 67:458 S '52 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 16 '52 300w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman

Sat R 35:14 D 13 '52 350w

"An important contribution toward an understanding of some of the underlying causes of international tension." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D Ja 13 '52 700w

STEAD, CHRISTINA. People with dogs. 345p $3.75 Little

52-5004

The people of the title were the Massines, an old New York family. This is particularly the story of Ed, who is depicted in his various relationships with the members of his large family, and Margot, his mistress whom he will not marry for fear of "closing the door on someone else who had not come into his life yet."

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 13 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. A. Lynch

Commonweal 55:501 F 22 '52 400w

Kirkus 19:643 N 1 '51 250w

"Miss Stead is an established and successful novelist, but her book is a disappointing and thin-blooded thing. . . Apart from such pungent vignettes of New York life as a brief and memorable description of middle-aged women in a Turkish bath, this is a terribly tired novel." H. S.

+ New Repub 126:22 Ap 7 '52 100w

"One closes Miss Stead's book with a sense of regret that it is over and a feeling of wonder about Ed. It may be true that he had made 'a life out of just a backdrop' but the colors of that drop carried a radiance that gave him his special glow." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 13 '52 550w

"What Miss Stead obviously had in mind here was a novel of character rather than of incident. But she has gone to the other extreme and has peopled her pages with groups of odd peripheral persons, who oscillate round Edward and his dogs. Miss Stead can turn a character with a flick of the wrist, and here she drops them all over the place. . . [It] leaves this reviewer more than somewhat disappointed. True, the book has a certain mellowness and movement as of an animated tapestry." John Barkham

N Y Times p4 Ja 13 '52 250w

New Yorker 27:98 Ja 26 '52 90w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 27 '52 400w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8D F 17 '52 200w

"The People with the Dogs has little drama, no memorable characters, and only limited significance. But its minor virtues are attractive. The Massines may be dying out, but they deserve to be noticed before they go."

+ Time 59:100 Ja 28 '52 420w

STEBBINS, HENRY M. How to select and use your big game rifle. 237p il $5 Combat Forces Press, 1529 18th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

799.2 Rifles. Shooting 52-12513

"A retired English professor, drawing on 40 years shooting experience, writes in pleasing fashion from a practical viewpoint, of the many types of sporting arms and ammunition and related matters. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

STEBBINS, H. M.—Continued

Booklist 49:63 O 15 '52

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:1905 N 1 '52 20w

STEBBINS, MRS LUCY (POATE). London ladies; true tales of the eighteenth century. 208p $3 Columbia univ. press

920.7 Woman—Biography. Great Britain—Biography 52-6272

Biographical studies of seven London ladies of the eighteenth century. They are Martha Ray, mistress of the Earl of Sandwich; Elizabeth Inchbald, author and actress; Amelia Opie, converted Quaker; the two daughters of Sarah Siddons; Madame de Lieven, politician and mistress of Metternich; and Jane Carlyle. Bibliography. No Index.

Booklist 48:195 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 30w

"A petit point of character and conduct which is intelligently observed and gracefully accomplished."

+ Kirkus 20:52 Ja 15 '52 160w

"[Her subjects] are like figures in a tapestry—colorful, intriguing and delightful—adding nothing to the knowledge we have, but giving slight biographical essays that will send the reader on to Mrs. Stebbins's pleasant and adequate bibliography. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 130w

"There is no attempt at great profundity, psychological or otherwise, but there is a good deal that is genuinely entertaining."

+ Nation 174:189 F 23 '52 180w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 My 18 '52 500w

"Interesting material, which would have been much improved by the excision of Mrs. Stebbins' moral asides."

New Yorker 27:111 F 16 '52 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 9 '52 220w

STEEGMAN, JOHN. Consort of taste, 1830-1870. 338p il $6 British bk. centre

709.42 Art—Great Britain, Esthetics [51-2974]

A survey of the taste and culture of Victorian England, by the Director of the art department of the National Museum of Wales. Illustrated with photographs of art and architecture. Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:597 Ap 1 '52 120w

"This is a most worthwhile contribution to the history of the last century, and a volume that future historians must consult if they would fully understand the processes of thought, which motivated many of the Victorians." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 10 '52 350w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Their town. 311p $3.50 Doubleday

52-10042

Story of an almost-defunct Colorado silver town during the last years of the nineteenth century, and the early years of the twentieth. It pictures the efforts of a plodding, determined man to rebuild Argentite's fortunes, aided by his gentle wife, daughter of the town's one "rich" man.

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 10 '52 370w

Kirkus 20:351 Je 15 '52 270w

"A folksy, warm-hearted period piece." R. H. Dillon

+ Library J 77:1303 Ag '52 70w

"Written with a directness and laconic humor that also are American gifts, 'Their Town' would be a good book to settle down with in a train speeding across the continent or in the interludes of a crossing by automobile. It would help one to see behind the facades of the town and cities, shabby or prosperous, into past hopes and ambitions and present accomplishments and failures." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 10 '52 600w

"Even Wilbur Daniel Steele's sincerest admirers will be hard pressed to think of 'Their Town' as anything more than a long joke in questionable taste, or an inept social and moral satire." William Peden

N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '52 350w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 21 '52 300w

"Mr. Steele, whose mastery of the tightly knit, solidly plotted short story has long been a feature of the American literary landscape, seems to have trouble when he tackles the novel. He tends to sprawl, and the narrative force with which he builds individual scenes is vitiated by his failure to supply inevitable connections between the various scenes."

Sat R 35:36 Ag 23 '52 220w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

STEELE, WILLIAM O. Buffalo knife; il. by Paul Galdone. 177p $2.25 Harcourt

52-6460

In 1782 two families decided to go down the Tennessee River to French Salt Lick. During the long dangerous trip nine-year-old Andy proved himself as good as a man. For ages 8 to 12.

Booklist 48:217 Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:162 Ap '52 60w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 150w

"Mr. Steele has succeeded in portraying pioneer life simply and spontaneously." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:176 Je '52 110w

Kirkus 20:70 F 1 '52 120w

"Well-written story." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:540 Mr 15 '52 80w

"This is a real find for boys of about nine to twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 11 '52 180w

"Mr. Steele writes so vividly that you feel that you have been right there on the flatboat during the whole trip and have come to know these pioneers as real people." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 150w

"The difficult rapids in the rivers that they followed, the constant menace of hostile Indians, the everyday difficulties of feeding and caring for two families are so vividly described, so warmed with humor and human relationships that the interest never flags."

+ Sat R 35:48 Mr 22 '52 240w

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52 100w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:262 S '52 110w

STEELE, WILLIAM O. Over-mountain boy; il. by Fritz Kredel. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin

52-11823

Story of pioneer life for boys and girls. It shows the part played by Tennessee and North Carolina in the Revolution, during the years 1775-1780.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

Kirkus 20:557 S 1 '52 40w

"Action, adventure, and information are skillfully interwoven to make a good story. . .

While intended for ages 10-11, the interest appeal will reach ages 10-14." Averil Randall
+ Library J 77:1522 S 15 '52 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 30w

"A bang-up story of Tennessee in Revolutionary days." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 20w

STEELMAN, LLOYD WESLEY. Few acres and security; your complete guide to independence with little capital and lots of contentment. 332p il $5 Greenberg

630 Agriculture 51-14950

"Author's 40 years' experience as farmer, research worker with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and teacher have gone into this practical and informative book on many phases of country life. A guide for anyone contemplating buying a country home from which to commute to the city or for those who expect to obtain a livelihood from a farm. Considers poultry raising (a third of the book is devoted to this subject), fruit growing, dairying, livestock, and truck farming. Profusely illustrated with 700 photographs, plans, and charts. No index or suggested references to more detailed treatment of each subject." Booklist

Booklist 48:167 Ja 15 '52

"Here is a well written, highly informative book that will give you the courage if you have the desire to leave the city for life in the country." Lee Shassere

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 2 '52 100w

"An attractive, practical book, simple and concise." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:439 Mr 1 '52 60w

"This is a solidly useful book in its field. But the city man who has never done any farming had better read what the author says, and think about it, before he believes that moving to the country and starting to farm will mean 'security' necessarily, or is 'easy,' or requires 'little' capital." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 19 '51 800w

STEEN, MARGUERITE. Jehovah blues [Eng title: Phoenix rising]. 282p $3.50 Doubleday 52-8051

The third novel in the trilogy begun in The Sun is My Undoing, and Twilight on the Floods (Book Review Digest 1941 and 1949). This is the story of Aldebaran Flood, the last of the great shipping family, and her own personal contact with the "color" problem.

Booklist 48:361 Jl 1 '52

"A great deal of her heroine's adventure is distasteful as well as incredible to most American readers. The first demand that readers should make on any novel is that it be credible. Aldebaran is no more credible as a character than is the plot pattern." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 15 '52 400w

"This will do nothing to enhance Miss Steen's reputation, and contributes little to the Flood saga."

— Kirkus 20:236 Ap 1 '52 170w

"'Jehovah Blues' is a rather sensational novel. But then, the Floods were always sensational people, and the materials which Miss Steen incorporates into this current story about them are full of dramatic possibilities which she exploits to the utmost." David Tilden

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 15 '52 550w

"Miss Steen writes with vigor and inventiveness, mostly so, paradoxically, in the hectic passages having to do with the proverbial languors and luridness of the Deep South. . . It is worth noting that Barry's stunning nymphomaniacal cousin Diamond all but steals the show and suggests that yet another volume about this prolific and dramatic family may be in the offing." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 Je 15 '52 450w

New Yorker 28:85 Jl 12 '52 110w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R 35:20 Je 21 '52 480w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 150w

Time 60:82 Jl 7 '52 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p293 My 2 '52 110w

STEGNER, MABEL. Electric blender recipes. 226p $3 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 52-9653

Recipes for soups, salads, beverages, ice creams, vegetable dishes, dressings and soups, drinks, and many other kinds of foods, all made with the aid of the electric blender. Index.

Booklist 48:333 Je 15 '52

"Some of the recipes sound intriguing, and adjustable to electric mixers, with different timing. Others seemed a bit far-fetched for preparation in a blender."

+ — Kirkus 20:298 My 1 '52 140w

"The more than 500 recipes are varied and interesting and far exceed the cocktail and pre-masticated food concoctions usually associated with the famed blender." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '52 50w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Corpse that refused to stay dead, by Hampton Stone [pseud.]. 215p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 52-2158

Detective story.

"This sleuth works with enjoyable finesse in clever mixup of egotistical young crackpots." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 29 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:240 Ap 1 '52 50w

"This fifth of the cases of Assistant D. A. Jeremiah X. Gibson is a sound addition to a sound company, although Gibby is exceptionally truculent with his half dozen suspects." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 29 '52 150w

"A sound detectival plot, peopled by believable characters, and neatly and surprisingly resolved." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p22 Je 29 '52 170w

"Smart and entertaining work." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 29 '52 50w

"Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:39 Jl 19 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p4C Jl 6 '52 40w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Corpse with sticky fingers, by George Bagby, pseud. 188p $2.50 Doubleday 52-10399

Detective story.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 9 '52 80w

Kirkus 20:388 Jl 1 '52 70w

"It is a fairly theatrical but not particularly distinguished case made palatable as usual by Bagby's sharp ear and brisk typewriter, which has some random remarks to make about the mysteries of merchandising and the dignity of business that are sharp fooling." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 21 '52 40w

"A fine dog-eat-dog picture of the psychology of 'merchandising'—told in the underplayed and

STEIN, A. M.—Continued
economic prose which characterizes all of Inspector Schmidt's cases." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p16 S 14 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 21 '52 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:40 S 13 '52 20w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Mask for murder. 187p
$2.50 Doubleday

52-6353

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 22 '52 60w

Kirkus 20:204 Mr 15 '52 70w

"The sum is more than satisfactory and it suggests once again that Mr. Stein deserves some sort of special prize for supplying entertainment in astonishing quantity, all of it fashioned with warmth and care." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 25 '52 200w

"The blend of Mayan and Spanish civilizations produces unusually absorbing characters and situations—particularly when Yankee tourismo impinges on both. . . All of this is consummately integrated into the story proper; and you're not apt to have a better chance this year to enjoy melodrama and detection while painlessly learning of a whole new way of life." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p21 Je 1 '52 200w

"As rich and fascinating a background as you'll ever see." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:31 Je 28 '52 20w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Murder that wouldn't stay solved, by Hampton Stone [pseud]. 249p
$2.50 Simon & Schuster

51-4593

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:503 S 1 '51 60w

"This is good on all scores from the neat ingenuities of its plot (which the title suggests) to its acute realization of a very grubby milieu, a shabby New York hotel with a furtive lot of customers and a management incapable of surprises. The most remarkable among them is a candid caddy whose just pride in his muscles and their development for all uses is a fascinating thing to watch." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 25 '51 140w

"Old admirers of Stone don't need to be told that his plot is sound and intricate; that his Manhattan background is unusually well realized; and that Assistant D. A. 'Gibby' Gibson and his Watson Mac (who has a much larger role than usual) are notably likable creations." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 9 '51 90w

"Much ratiocination and recapitulation, not enough motion, but Q. and A. technique has its merits." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 40w

Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 110w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Pistols for two. 191p
$2.50 Doubleday

51-14233

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:543 S 15 '51 90w

"Tim and Elsie have been agreeable acquaintances for more than a decade and the closer for being a little irritating from time to time. This, though, is one of their most neatly conceived and amusingly executed chronicles and is at the same time so unobtrusively artful that it deserves some sort of double cheer." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 25 '51 130w

"There's a pretty quasi-Thorndyke puzzle of footprints, a nice job of building suspicion and surprise with a small cast of suspects, and much humor and general likeability." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 D 23 '51 90w

"Quite satisfactory."

+ New Yorker 27:88 Ja 12 '52 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 23 '51 70w

"Ingenious setting, with abundant professional detail; characters in general over-or under-done." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 30w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Scared to death, by George Bagby [pseud]. 185p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5239

Detective story.

Booklist 48:322 Je 1 '52

Kirkus 19:714 D 15 '51 60w

"While the puzzle itself is slight and soluble, the account Bagby sets down is readable on a couple of scores: it is artfully spun from very little indeed and it sustains itself almost entirely on conversation of a circular or about-it-and-about order which has the air of looking as if it had been spoken. It's all managed with a practised typewriter, easily, literally and amusingly." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 140w

"A gratifyingly taut and real story. . . Admirably sketched characters, vigorous plot-movement, and a well-resolved surprise twist make one more score for Bagby as one of the most satisfactory of all professionals." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52 60w

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Mrs Reynolds, and five earlier novelettes; with a foreword by Lloyd Frankenberg. (Yale ed. of the unpublished writings of Gertrude Stein v2) 378p $5 Yale univ. press

52-9574

This volume, the second in the Yale publication of Gertrude Stein's previously unpublished works, contains one long novel, the last she wrote, and five novelettes dating from the early 1930s. Contents: Foreword: On first meeting Mrs. Reynolds; Mrs. Reynolds; Brim Beauvais; Hotel François I^{er}; Bartholomew Arnold; or, After the war is over; Marguerite; or, A simple novel of high life; What does she see when she shuts her eyes.

Kirkus 20:566 S 1 '52 180w

"The five novelettes do not deal in so gregarious a manner with common experience and are no doubt more for the student. . . The important work in this volume, for both the student and the 'ordinary' reader, must be Mrs. Reynolds. It offers little obscurity by anybody's lights and is enormously funny very often, as often as terrible, like war. If not Gertrude Stein's greatest novel, it is surely her handsomest so far and most human." Donald Sutherland

+ New Repub 127:26 O 6 '52 1100w

"Though the shorter works are lesser, one word from the main novel, spoken by Mrs. Reynolds' sister-in-law Hope, will apply fairly to the whole book: 'Bat,' said Hope Reynolds . . . by this she meant to express her very great admiration for Angel Harper.' And 'bat' say I for Miss Stein." W. G. Rogers

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 23 '52 750w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

N Y Times p6 S 21 '52 650w

"Mrs. Reynolds' concerns the state of mind of certain people during the war years. It is a tantalizing and exasperating book, which can also be exhilarating in the measure that a reader likes to be thrown upon his own resources. Even with the guidance of Lloyd Frankenburg's shrewd introduction, it is a difficult book to read." Walter Havighurst

Sat R 35:35 O 4 '52 600w

"Gertrude Stein began as a literary innovator, helping to break the crusts of conventional literary language. But she took her experiments too seriously and, like many another pioneer, refused to budge from her first discovery. Her manner became a mannerism, her break through a limitation. In her last novel, the old revolutionary proves a rather garrulous bore."

— + Time 60:114 S 22 '52 400w

STEIN, HAROLD, ed. Public administration and policy development; a case book. 860p $5 Harcourt

351 Public administration 52-6447

"Textbook for students of public administration, this volume was prepared by the Inter-University Case Program. It offers students, and others interested in the functioning of the administrative aspects of government, an insight into the 'characteristic modes of behavior of public administrators . . . as they go about the task of making their decisions.' An introduction outlines the evolution of certain principles and the body of the book is made up of extensive case studies." Current Hist

"The book is a product of a highly unusual type of collective endeavor. Discontinuity and unevenness are the customary results of collective endeavor in book production, but in this instance the collective effort has resulted instead in a uniformity of quality and flavor—all Grade A, pasteurized and homogenized. This result is the more remarkable because the cases themselves were written by more than a score of persons, at different times and places (and, in some instances, originally for other purposes). But the editing and reviewing process has been remarkably thorough and effective." Dwight Waldo

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:876 S '52 1850w

"Valuable collection of case materials." Philip Selznick

+ Am Soc R 17:523 Ag '52 250w

+ Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 40w

STEIN, RALPH. Sports cars of the world. 174p il $10 Scribner

629.22 Automobiles 52-14143

"Stein has been a sports car addict for more than 20 years in which time he has owned a Bentley, a Bugatti, three Alfa Romeos, an Invicta, a Riley, and others. He lists more than 50 makes of British, French, German, Italian, and American cars, giving specifications and at least one photograph of each, as well as mention of where and how they were manufactured and the names of famous drivers who have raced them." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Anyone who owns a sports car, or has ever gazed wistfully after one of the sleek little beauties as it went purring down the highway, will welcome this authoritative work on the fascinating subject." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 16 '52 170w

"This book is an entertaining and documentary effort to prepare Americans in particular for the mounting invasion of foreign motorcars, to appraise the full impact of the revival of 'motoring for pleasure.'" W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 24 '52 380w

Kirkus 20:586 S 1 '52 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 78:65 Ja 1 '53 30w

"This handsome volume could well become the bible of the growing cult of sports car enthusiasts in the United States." R. M. Cleveland

N Y Times p14 N 23 '52 290w

"Reliable and up to date." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Sat R 35:38 D 13 '52 130w

STEINBECK, JOHN. East of Eden. 602p $4.50 Viking

52-12297

"The saga of more than half a century in the lives of two American families—the Trasks, a mixture of gentleness and brutality doled out in unequal measure, and the Hamiltons, Steinbeck's own forbears, a well adjusted, lovable group who provide a tranquil background for the turbulent careers of the Trasks. The scene is chiefly Salinas, California from the turn of the century through the first World War." Library J

"At the outset Steinbeck has a firm command of his materials, but the novel degenerates as it goes along. The improbabilities grow more flagrant, the sentimentality thicker, the intellectual naïveté more exasperating." Charles Rolo

— + Atlantic 190:94 O '52 350w

Booklist 48:369; 49:33 Jl 15 '52; S 15 '52

"Frank language and treatment of sex."

Bookmark 12:10 O '52 40w

"East of Eden is not without its passages of human warmth, particularly those which characterize old Sam Hamilton (Steinbeck's maternal grandfather). But the impact and impress of the book—whatever the author's intention—are on the side of evil, of an exploitation of a mad, inhuman lust and a cruelty that lacerates and degrades." Riley Hughes

— + Cath World 176:150 N '52 220w

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 21 '52 650w

"In this rambling and ambitious novel spread out over more than half a century, John Steinbeck wrestles with a moral theme for the first time in his career, certainly a hopeful sign of the times. Yet his obsession with naked animality, brute violence, and the dark wickedness of the human mind remains so overriding that what there is of beauty and understanding is subordinated and almost extinguished." R. R. Brunn

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 S 25 '52 600w

"Shock techniques, applied with rapier and not bludgeon, will rule the book out for the tender-skinned. But John Steinbeck, the philosopher, dominates his material and brings it into sharply moral focus."

Kirkus 20:377 Jl 1 '52 340w

"Thanks to a great wealth of fascinating detail woven through the plot, we are given a complete and unforgettable picture of country and small town life during that period. Some readers may object to the brothel scenes and the realistic dialogue, but this is a major novel in almost every respect. No public library should hesitate to purchase it." E. T. Smith

+ Library J 77:1303 Ag '52 150w

"As drama the book falls very much short of a carefully designed classic like 'The Mayor of Casterbridge' (Cathy's husband, Adam Trask, here in a rôle remotely like that of Henchard); as realism it is not to be compared with such a grand book about a bad woman as Balzac's 'Cousine Bette,' or the lesser but still superb 'Belchamber,' by Howard Sturgis, which one person has read for every hundred or more who will read this." Paul Bloomfield

— Manchester Guardian p4 D 5 '52 180w

Reviewed by Leo Gurko

Nation 175:235 S 20 '52 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Mizener

New Repub 127:22 O 6 '52 1000w

STEINBECK, JOHN—Continued

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
New Statesman & Nation 4:698 D 6
'52 230w

"Here is one of those occasions when a writer has aimed high and then summoned every ounce of energy, talent, seriousness and passion of which he was capable. The most unfriendly critic could hardly fail to grant that 'East of Eden' is the best as well as the most ambitious book Mr. Steinbeck could write at this moment." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 21 '52
1800w

"Probably the best of John Steinbeck's novels, 'East of Eden,' is long but not 'big,' and anyone who, deceived by its spread in space and time (c.1860-1920), says that it is 'epical in its sweep,' is merely in the usual grip of cliché. . . . Through the exercise of a really rather remarkable freedom of his rights as a novelist, Mr. Steinbeck weaves in, and more particularly around, this story of prostitution a fantasia of history and of myth that results in a strange and original work of art." Mark Shorer

+ N Y Times p1 S 21 '52 1300w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 28:121 S 20 '52 1500w

"This is certainly his best book since 'The Grapes of Wrath' and, I believe, evidence that he has been thinking more deeply than ever before about life and the human beings who live it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 21 '52
1800w

"It is to be doubted if any American novel has better chronicled our last hundred years, our trek from East to West to discover an Eden that always somehow escapes us and that we as a people yet continue to hope for and believe in." H. C. Webster

+ Sat R 35:11 S 20 '52 950w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 189:744 N 23 '52 300w
Time 60:110 S 22 '52 950w

"Although the total effect is not boring, for there are charming descriptions of scenery and shrewd estimates of personality, Mr. Steinbeck has tried to say too many things at once, and his message is hidden under superfluous decoration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p789 D 5 '52
240w

"John Steinbeck is a highly gifted virtuoso. The writing in this book, at least in the early pages, is lively and engaging; all the way through there are descriptive passages and brief scenes that show his very great skill. Elsewhere he has shown that he can command considerable eloquence in defense of his views. But a novelist must follow the argument where his vision of the world leads him; the strongest will and the noblest motives will not make him see what, for him, is not there." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 42:8 autumn '52 290w

STEINCROHN, PETER JOSEPH. Heart worry and its cure; 3 chances out of 4 your heart trouble is imaginary. 220p $2.95 Funk, W.

616.1 Heart—Diseases. Worry 51-14768

A doctor explains for the layman how heart trouble can be imaginary, and gives common-sense advice for both real and imaginary sufferers. No index.

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 7 '52
500w

STENDHAL, pseud. See Beyle, M. H.

STEPHEN, DAVID. String Lug the fox; il. by Nina Scott Langley. 174p $2.75 Little

Foxes—Legends and stories 52-5005

The life story of a fox from birth to death, told for junior high school age and older. The scene is rural Scotland and the author is a young naturalist.

Booklist 48:302 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 5 '52
180w

"Distinguished for its accurate observation and its clear—often poetic—writing, String Lug is an outstanding book for all nature lovers except those children who cannot bear to read of hurt animals." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:112 Ap '52 90w

"Realistic, beautifully written, perceptive story." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 77:542 Mr 15 '52 80w

"A first book very well written." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 16
'52 230w

"The story is tough-fibered, unsentimental—indeed, it's not for the squeamish. Therein lies its strength, and in the author-naturalist's first-hand knowledge of foxes. It is not always easy to read, although a glossary helps one with the flavoursome Scottish speech, and it is sometimes repetitious. These are minor faults, however, in a story which ranks among the best of recent wild animal tales." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 F 24 '52 180w
New Yorker 28:201 D 6 '52 60w

"David Stephen is a naturalist. The story proves his keen observation and his knowledge of wild life. . . . It is rich in atmosphere and, as the fox meets his friends and his enemies, dramatic in action."

+ Sat R 35:61 My 10 '52 100w

STEPHENS, IRA KENDRICK. Hermit philosopher of Liendo. 402p $5 Univ. press in Dallas

B or 92 Montgomery, Edmund 51-4624

"A biography of one of the oddest figures in the history of American culture. Edmund Montgomery was born in 1835, the illegitimate son of a Scottish lord, educated in Germany, and married to Elisabeth Ney, a brilliant and somewhat erratic German sculptress. In 1871 this singular couple came to America and eventually settled in a tough and remote village of Texas popularly known as 'Six-shooter Junction.' There Montgomery lived in social and cultural isolation until his death in 1911." Nation

"In this admirable analysis of materials drawn from the most diverse sources Professor Stephens has rescued from oblivion one of the keenest minds that ever worked in the Southwest and has given us a well-written and definitive biography of a great pioneer in the history of philosophy." S. W. Geiser

+ Am Hist R 57:1054 Jl '52 280w

Reviewed by J. L. Blau
J Philos 48:727 N 8 '51 850w

"This study of his life and works is painstakingly detailed but fails to add up to a picture of the living man."

Nation 173:408 N 10 '51 140w

STEPHENSON, GEORGE MALCOLM. Puritan heritage. 282p $3.50 Macmillan

277.3 U.S.—Church history. U.S.—Religion 52-1108

"Professor Stephenson defends the thesis that the kingdom of God in our country was planted and nurtured mainly by the Puritans; that it is to them we owe the inseparability of the worship of God in spirit and truth from the cause of civil liberties. He relates to Puritanism not only the establishment in America of Protestant denominations like Methodism, Quakerism, Unitarianism, and Mormonism, but also the founding of such movements as anti-Masonry, anti-slavery, temperance, the American Bible Society, and the American Sunday School Union. Especially detailed are the chapters on eighteenth century religious awakening and nineteenth century revivalism. The presentation throughout is popular in style." Library J

Reviewed by A. W. Elster
Am Soc R 17:801 D '52 230w

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet
Ann Am Acad 281:209 My '52 380w

"A good study of the planting and early development of Puritanism in America, this book should not, however, be counted on for an evaluation of present-day survivals—or non-survival—of that point of view." J. F. Davidson

+ — Churchman 166:12 Ag '52 110w
Kirkus 20:38 Ja 15 '52 170w

"Recommended for general as well as religious libraries." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 77:209 F 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 9 '52 650w

School & Society 76:16 J1 5 '52 30w

STERLING, DOROTHY. Cub scout mystery; 11, by Paul Galdone. 191p $2.50 Doubleday 52-5752

Mystery for grades 4 to 6.

Booklist 48:345 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Kirkus 20:124 F 15 '52 150w

"A slight story but a welcome addition to the mystery collection." O. R. Way
Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 80w

"Boys of ten to twelve will find this a refreshing, funny, real story." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 13 '52 70w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger
N Y Times p29 Je 8 '52 120w
Sat R 35:38 Ag 16 '52 60w

STERLING, THOMAS. Strangers and afraid. 275p $3.50 Simon & Schuster
52-11162

In parallel narratives, one told in the first person, the other in the third, this is the story of two Americans, one a Negro who comes to New York in flight from a southern prison, the other, a nationally known professional "do-gooder," head of the League for the Right to Freedom.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 10 '52 400w

"The theme of this novel and the basic situations confronting the characters hold a real potential; from such a plot one might expect the tension, violence, and lyricism which so many Southern writers have brought to their work. But Mr. Sterling's style is overly cautious and the symbols which suggest themselves do not come forth." D. M. Culhane

+ — Commonweal 56:470 Ag 15 '52 420w

"A lonely, awkward, and rather impotent itinerary of bewilderment which never achieves the ferment of a blooded emotion."
Kirkus 20:378 J1 1 '52 120w

"Though the characters are well-drawn and the novel has a taut, realistic ring, it is sometimes dull since the reader is not always aware of where the story is going. Recommended," Milton Bryan

+ — Library J 77:1194 J1 '52 110w

"The pace of the story is so deliberate that many readers may put the book aside without giving Mr. Sterling the opportunity to unravel these lives completely. Part of the fault is in the unevenness of the writing. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Sterling's two achievements—the creation of an unusually real and memorable human being in the young Negro and the demonstration of his understanding of the complexity of situations that have previously been 'explained' by propagandists in grossly oversimplified terms—should encourage us to expect a great deal from him in the future." Harvey Swados

+ — Nation 175:197 S 6 '52 420w

"In terms of psychological substance, in the penetration of its insights, Mr. Sterling has produced a first-rate work of fiction. Architecturally, however, something seems amiss. The over-all impact of the novel lags behind the perceptiveness of its parts. Somehow the lives of the two protagonists are not fluidly integrated." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 27 '52 500w

"On its own level 'Strangers and Afraid' is a highly successful first novel. . . And yet, many a reader is likely to come away from the book, as this reviewer did, with a feeling of incompleteness. Everything is there, all right, but it is too much bone and too little flesh. Neither Lyle nor Maccabee ever come wholly alive. Both are symbols, however adequate, rather than people, and one never feels deeply about what happens to them as human beings—a failing that mars far too much contemporary fiction." Bucklin Moon

+ — N Y Times p4 J1 27 '52 600w

"A curious, blurry story."
New Yorker 28:84 Ag 23 '52 130w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R 35:43 N 22 '52 140w

STERN, MRS EDITH (MENDEL) and ROSS, MABEL. You and your aging parents. 212p $2.75 Wyn

301.427 Old age. Parent and child 52-5360

Advice to the younger generation on what to do and how to do it, when members of the older generation become dependent, financially or physically unable to care for themselves. Written in informal style with many 'case-histories' to illustrate the problems which demand solution.

Booklist 48:261 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 20w

"A valuable pioneer work in a practical field."

+ — Bookmark 11:214 Je '52 40w

"Primarily designed for the sons and daughters upon whose shoulders the burden of caring for the aged will fall, this is also a good guide for the old folks on how to and how not to act in situations where dependence is thrust upon them."

+ — Kirkus 20:107 F 1 '52 120w

"The authors, mental hygienists, employ a subtle charm to force the reader to be more practical than idealistic." J. M. Scherr
+ — Library J 77:526 Mr 15 '52 130w

"In a friendly and admirably direct way, the authors of this book discuss the problems of living brought about [by] the steadily increasing number of people over sixty-five." Joanna Spencer

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p33 My 11 '52 320w

Springf'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52 140w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Donkey shoe. 254p $3.50 Macmillan

52-10001

A famous London actress and her adoring daughter are the central characters. The mother fails to understand the girl's embarrassing devotion, and the girl turns to drink, but eventually mother and daughter reach an understanding.

Booklist 48:321 Je 1 '52

"'The Donkey Shoe' is, in many ways, a charming book, despite its incorrigible rambling across London and thru the generations. Perhaps, in the last analysis, Miss Stern's special distinction may be that she has devised a literary form for the rattle. There are any number of vivid bits." Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 25 '52 370w

"A disappointing performance from an ordinarily dependable performer."

Kirkus 20:286 My 1 '52 200w

STERN, G. B.—Continued

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 77:1308 Ag '52 50w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 7 '52 160w

"Miss Stern is too fine a novelist to offer any stock solution of their conflict or to cloak the mixture of motives and emotions inherent in the reconciliation of mother and daughter. . . Miss Stern brings her unflinching discrimination and thoughtful insight to this story of the relationship between mother and daughter, a rare major theme in fiction, and tells it with poignancy, playing down the intrinsic glamour of stage life and concentrating on the essentials of human nature. 'The Donkey Shoe' is a wise and, in its quiet way, a witty book."

Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 25 '52 750w

"There are two ways of enjoying this novel; you can relax and let G. B. Stern take you to the party to watch the brilliant colorful figures, hear the wit, mimicry, theatrical cat-cat, enjoy the rich reminiscences and the shrewd reflections for their own sake. Or you may begin worrying about Damaris early on, in which case all the fun and games seem no more than frivolous interruptions to an absorbing theme. Either way it is possible to enjoy G. B. Stern's artistry. But taken as a whole, the book asks us to swallow too much." Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p4 My 25 '52 350w

New Yorker 28:136 My 24 '52 70w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor
Sat R 35:23 Je 7 '52 600w

Reviewed by Mildred Prince
Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 200w

"It is difficult enough to believe that the allegedly charming and perceptive Jessica Marwood, who is as much beloved by women as she is by men, could have developed such a heartless and artificial relationship with her own daughter or that her handling of her domestic situation could have been so inept."

—Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Mr 21 '52 100w

STERN, JULIUS DAVID. Eidolon; a philosophical phantasy built on a syllogism. 246p $3 Messner

52-7410

"The hero of this conversation piece and liberal editorial—Mr. Stern used to own the New York Post—is a haploid, born of a virgin mother. This young prodigy excels at chess, track running, and everything else, even introducing a Black Queen into Through the Looking-Glass where none existed before. An effort to reconcile religion and science; an argument for better housing in Harlem; and a melodramatic, but never dull, piece of semi-science fiction." Library J

Kirkus 20:89 F 1 '52 170w

"Optional; O.K. for rental library." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 90w

"A novel which is as pretentiously ponderous as its unique subtitle." H. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 27 '52 140w

"Mr. Stern's modern miracle may be read as a piece of erudite science fiction built around a haploid superman. Muir becomes involved in newspapers and melodrama and some of the most complicated talk in contemporary literature before the sensational finale is reached. The story, however, is not the main thing in 'Eidolon,' arresting though it be in some respects, and preposterous in others. The central burden of the book is the demonstration of the compatibility of science and religion (the one by research, the other by revelation) in the apprehension of truth." Charles Lee
N Y Times p17 Ap 13 '52 230w

Sat R 35:54 Je 7 '52 250w

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 100w

STERN, SIEGFRIED. United States in international banking. 447p $5.25 Columbia univ. press

332.15 Banks and banking—U.S. U.S.— Commercial policy 51-14805

"In the main a review of the course of activities of United States banking from the outbreak of war in 1914 to the present time. Based in large part on the personal knowledge of the author, acquired while working as head of foreign departments of American banks. . . A final section deals with the functions and organization of the foreign departments of United States banks." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Stern's dispassionate story is objective and reveals a mellow understanding of the thorny problems of today's international commerce. This reviewer feels that the work would have gained by the inclusion of more detail and a larger number of specific examples of practical banking operations. In addition, a more critical appraisal of the extent to which our foreign banking operations sustain America's rôle in world affairs, together with suggestions for future commercial banking action, would have rendered the work more valuable." M. J. Wasserman

+ Am Econ R 42:640 S '52 500w

"The author has performed a distinct service in writing this book. Only a few people will find it of practical use inasmuch as foreign banking is highly concentrated in only a few large institutions; but it contains information which will be found helpful by many others working in the general area of money and banking. . . This is a book for reference, not casual reading." D. P. Eastburn

+ Ann Am Acad 281:216 My '52 400w

Foreign Affairs 31:158 O '52 30w

"The book may be criticized on the ground that many of the recorded events and dates are of very little interest, and no useful purpose is served by including them in the narrative. But the book is written in a lively style, contains helpful summaries of each chapter, and has a good index as well as a useful bibliography of the literature dealing with our international financial relations and United States foreign banking activities." F. H. Klopstock

+ J Pol Econ 60:350 Ag '52 550w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:55 Ja 1 '52 150w

"Although the volume furnishes a good bit of useful information, it is limited in value as a reference by the unevenness of its coverage. The author has not attempted to compile statistics or tabulate historical data. His main contribution is his description of how wartime developments affected the foreign activities of American banks, and of the relations between the government and the banking community on such matters as foreign funds control, economic warfare, and the activities of government corporations."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:62 Mr '52 240w

STERNBERG, FRITZ. Capitalism and socialism on trial; tr. by Edward Fitzgerald. 603p $6.50 Day

330.15 Economic conditions. Capitalism. Socialism 52-6235

"Well known former German, now American writer on economic affairs gives us economic and political history of last hundred years, tracing mainly rise and decline of capitalism, but also following up development in Soviet Russia; a moderate, democratic socialism is seen as possible system of the future." Library J

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 282:121 J1 '52 440w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 J1,15 '52 380w

Foreign Affairs 30:670 J1 '52 50w

"Though most readers will disagree with some of author's ideas, this book should prove stimulating to economists, political scientists and historians." H. H. Bernt

Library J 77:212 F 1 '52 200w

"Sternberg's analysis of modern history not only makes the street cries of world politics seem shallow but casts doubt on the penetration of many who pass for informed statesmen. His well-stocked and fertile mind draws lessons from the continents and the centuries. He gives enough facts, from a wide range of sources, to permit the reader to judge of his conclusions, but primarily this is a work of interpretation." Broadus Mitchell

+ Nation 174:110 F 2 '52 460w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 127:18 J1 7 '52 900w

Reviewed by Richard Winter
New Statesman & Nation 43:133 F 2 '52 330w

"It would be hard to find a book more deeply relevant to our present Time of Troubles than this magnum opus of Fritz Sternberg's." Stringfellow Barr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 17 '52 550w

"The value of the book lies in its individualistic effort to salvage from the scrap heaps of rusty and overgrown Marxist thought elements that might have retained their meaning for our day. . . . The translation by Edward Fitzgerald is admirable." Martin Ebon

+ N Y Times p26 F 17 '52 470w

"Americans, and particularly American businessmen who are disposed to pooh-pooh the Keynesian problem of demand and forget the large contribution made by more than four hundred billion dollars spent on armaments and war in the Forties in support of demand, should do some homework on 'Capitalism and Socialism on Trial'. . . I am not implying that Sternberg has sold me his bill of goods without any rejections. For example, the evidence presented does not prove to my satisfaction that the low wages in 1800-1850 and the high wages and imperialism in 1851-1900 were the decisive factors accounting for crisis and then for prosperity. . . . Even more important, he fails to suggest alternative solutions. . . . [But] Sternberg offers a purgative to the adherents of the automatic school when possibly a laxative might do." Seymour Harris

Sat R 35:13 F 2 '52 1500w

STERNE, MRS EMMA (GELDERS). Printer's devil; il. by Peter Burchard. (American heritage ser) 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin 52-11824

The time of George Washington's inauguration is the background of this story for fourth graders. Johnny Archer, the hero, meets Philip Freneau "the poet of the Revolution," who is fighting for freedom of the press. Johnny is a printer's devil, and the events of the story are seen thru his eyes.

Booklist 49:92 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

Kirkus 20:557 S 1 '52 130w

"Boys and girls will enjoy the mystery of the lost family and will absorb some information on the problems faced by the founding fathers. Not particularly outstanding, but recommended for supplementary material." C. W. Field

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 60w

"This is a good period-story, full of action, and it reveals the political thinking in the new nation." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 40w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen

Sat R 35:45 O 11 '52 10w

STEVENS, WALLACE. Necessary angel: essays on reality and the imagination. 176p $3 Knopf 808.1 Poetry 51-12072

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Booklist 48:183 F 1 '52

"These are rich essays, simply constructed yet richly and elegantly written. They contain many references, an anthology-full of quotations from the most various and delightful authors, all very much to Stevens's purpose, but all exciting and pleasant to come across for their own sake." Hayden Carruth

+ Nation 174:584 Je 14 '52 1300w

"The most welcome attribute of the book is its humane good sense, equally manifest whether Stevens is discussing a desolate Pennsylvania churchyard, Plato's images or the personalities of those who prefer 'a drizzle in Venice to a hard rain in Hartford.'" Rolf Fjelde

+ New Repub 126:19 F 4 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:111 F 23 '52 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Edwards

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 27 '52

900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:134 Je '52 230w

Reviewed by Harry Levin

Yale R n s 41:615 summer '52 290w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Famous men of science. 164p il $2.50 Dodd

925 Scientists—Juvenile literature 52-8988

Brief biographies of twenty some pioneers in varied scientific fields. The sketches are arranged roughly in chronological order. Partial contents: Nicolaus Copernicus and Galileo Galilei; Francis Bacon and Sir Isaac Newton; Benjamin Franklin; Sir Humphry Davy; John Dalton; Michael Faraday; Charles Darwin; Gregor Johann Mendel; Matthew Fontaine Maury; Albert Abraham Michelson. Index.

Booklist 49:36 S 15 '52

"Concise, readable, personalized sketches. . . . Style will hold the attention of all readers, but this is not for the poor reader. High-school level or above." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 77:1214 J1 '52 70w

"This is one of the best recent titles in the Dodd series of 'Famous Biographies.' It has an excellent introduction, 'the beginnings of science.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 9 '52 150w

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA. Molly Pitcher, girl patriot; il. by Sandra James. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 192p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 McCauley, Mrs Mary (Ludwig) Hays—Juvenile literature

Tells Molly Pitcher's story for girls of eight to twelve.

Commonweal 57:175 N 21 '52 20w

"Should prove popular." E. J. Bowland

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 40w

"A well-written, exciting bit of history." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p14 N 16 '52 30w

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA. Wilbur and Orville Wright, boys with wings; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 192p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Wright, Orville—Juvenile literature. Wright, Wilbur—Juvenile literature 51-12392

Story biography of the Wright brothers for grades three to five.

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51

"Boys who were always taking a sewing machine apart or inventing a rat trap or rigging up a giant kite did not surprise their old friends when they grew up to be the Wright brothers, conquerors of the air." F. D. H.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 11 '51 30w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 76:1715 O 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 11 '51 50w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Mrs Tim flies home. 284p $3 Rinehart

52-9598

"Mrs. Tim, leaving her colonel-husband in Kenya, flies back to England to spend the summer with their son and daughter. In the village of Old Quinings she cherishes the peaceful days ahead in her tiny rented house. But, as usual, she has the faculty of becoming involved with people and events." N Y Times

Booklist 49:90 N 1 '52

"D. E. Stevenson's sparkling and resourceful Mrs. Tim is on the bookseller's tables again for the entertainment of her admirers. . . This story possesses the sprightliness familiar in earlier Mrs. Tim novels." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 O 16 '52 190w

Kirkus 20:517 Ag 15 '52 90w

"D. E. Stevenson has the pleasant habit of not putting too much sugar in her brew, and she keeps her characters moving at an undemanding pace."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 23 '52 120w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke

N Y Times p31 O 26 '52 100w

"Whether she is writing about lilac gingham, meadows with beech trees or a lost letter of Lord Byron's, Mrs. Stevenson stamps her work with her own original flavor. In a sense, she is a minor Angela Thirkell." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 110w

"By some magic D. E. Stevenson is able to make these mild tempests in tea-pots into readable prose. By even greater magic she keeps her heroine from appearing either a fool or an offensive busy-body." E. J. F.

+ Sat R 35:46 O 25 '52 160w

STEWART, DAVENPORT. They had a glory. 311p $3.75 Tupper

51-9128

Historical novel of the Kentucky frontier during the early post-Revolutionary years. The hero, Munro Dunbar, is a veteran of Marion's band who finds himself cheated of his inheritance when he returns to his South Carolina home and so joins the train of westward migrants.

"Fantastic bit of sordid foolishness, over-written in the best historico-mammary school tradition." B. C.

+ Canadian Forum 32:167 O '52 230w

Kirkus 20:198 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Adventure, romance and concrete details of life on the frontier make this story of Kentucky pioneers highly readable." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p31 My 11 '52 400w

"Mr. Stewart's story has obvious standard elements: gallant heroes, unscrupulous villains, period detail and assorted horrors. But his description of man's day-by-day battle for survival in the brush-choked reaches of the Wilderness Trail has the ring of authenticity. The same is true of his gory, man-to-man combats, which really succeed in being novel." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p22 My 18 '52 290w

"Standard stuff this, with maybe a shade more sober scholarship than is usual in the genre." E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:35 Ag 2 '52 150w

STEWART, DESMOND STIRLING. Leopard in the grass. 317p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-5793

"John Stirling, a young English archeologist, came to Cyropolis, the principal city of Media, simply because he had been offered a job there. But once in the Middle East he found the answer for which he had been groping all of his life. Stirling had always been weak, passive and overly sensitive. What he needed was a strong leadership and the violent emotion of hatred. He found these in the fierce Arab nationalism of Nimr, the young Bedouin chief." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The long and mistimed reverie on [Stirling's] schooldays in which he indulges contains a piece of indecency which shows that the censoring of novels is now, for good or ill, a thing of the past." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 4 '51 120w

"[This] somewhat Nietzschean philosophy is not a particularly attractive one, nor is Mr. Stewart's hero. He requires passion because he himself has none and the kind of passion which eventually appeals to him, is both arid and defeatist. Stewart, who, presents his ungratifying characters with no apology, seems to know the Middle East and its effect on Westerners. In spite of a somewhat verbose style, he manages to give a vividness to the streets, the minarets, the brothels and the European-style hotels of his background. But this is not enough to redeem his novel from an ultimate sterility."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 10 '52 360w

"Evident throughout this ambitious novel are Mr. Stewart's experience and his honesty of eye and perception. Also, less happily, there is a literary donnishness in the prose that clouds some of his best passages. . . The odyssey of young John Stirling is that of a stock English neo-classicist nostalgically raking the charcoals for lost values, wherever he happens to be." Joseph Hitec

N Y Times p5 Ja 20 '52 550w

"In spite of his sneers at the values of suburbia the dissipations which Master Stirling samples in the mysterious East have about as much exoticism as those which may be found in East Orange." Martin Levin

+ Sat R 35:12 F 9 '52 270w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud). One-man show [Eng title: Private view]. 192p $2.50 Dodd

52-7215

Detective story.

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Ag 10 '52 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 100w

"It all tends to demonstrate once again that Mr. Innes is the most adeptly and allusively elephantine wit presently committed to the English language." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Jl 13 '52 160w

"One-man Show is a perfectly straightforward and sober Scotland Yard detective story, with hardly a glimpse of the dazzling Cloud-cuckooland which Innes has so often revealed to us. Needless to say, it is still erudite and well-written. . . The non-detective characters of the plot, however, are faceless pawns. The plot itself is a capable but conventional one—with one agreeably fantastic twist at the end, but that twist introduced too late to be developed with true Innesian relish." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p13 Jl 20 '52 200w

"An excellent book to read while lying in a hammock and eating an apple."

New Yorker 28:68 Ag 2 '52 50w

"Less involved than usual, and lovely stuff."

L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 27 '52 50w

"Coincidence is trumps, but handling characteristically suave, knowledgeable." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:44 Ag 9 '52 20w

"The reader has to do no work in this book; he has just to sit back after a long and tiring day and enjoy this pageant of blood and thunder. And very good enjoyment it is, as good, if not better, than A Journeying Boy and Operation Pax. One need not say more. The only disappointment is for those who, like myself, prefer detective stories to thrillers." Dilwyn Rees

+ — Spec 188:724 My 30 '52 110w

"[This] is not one of Mr. Innes's more successful books, nor is the theme one that offers the happiest use for his talents."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 25 '52 140w

STEWART, JOHN LINCOLN, ed. The essay; a critical anthology. 645p $4.65; to schools $3.50 Prentice-Hall

824 52-9201

"The essay as laboratory specimen for dissection finally comes into its own with this anthology, which includes many more selections from modern writers than usual. Divided into three main sections: facts and explanations, interpretations and evaluations, literary art and the creative imagination. The editor has prefaced each section with an introductory comment, and singled out certain essays for special analysis. For both the beginning student and the general reader." Booklist

Booklist 48:293 My 15 '52

"With country weather coming up, this is an unqualifiedly good book to have at the elbow." Harvey Brett

+ N Y Times p28 My 18 '52 100w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 10w

STEWART, WILL, pseud. See Williamson, J.

STEYERMARK, AL. Quantitative organic microanalysis. 389p 155il $7 Blakiston

545.8 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative. Microchemistry 51-7664

"Most of the analytical procedures described in this book have been not only tested but have been used extensively in the micro-chemical laboratories of Hoffmann-LaRoche, Inc., Nutley, New Jersey. They are, therefore, not college laboratory procedures but procedures suitable for use by the graduate chemist working in an industrial laboratory where micro-analytical methods are appropriate. Both apparatus and procedures are described specifically." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 37:68 S '52

"During the past twenty years, the use of microchemistry has increased rapidly in this country, and there have been modifications of Pregl's basic methods of forty years ago, and of other original ones. In this textbook, Dr. Steyermark brings the subject up to date. . . The order of the chapters is that in which the procedures are taught to the new members of the author's staff."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:95 Mr '52 160w

STICK, DAVID. Graveyard of the Atlantic; shipwrecks of the North Carolina coast; ill. by Frank Stick. 276p $5 Univ. of N.C. press 910.45 Shipwrecks 52-10253

Factual narrative accounts, more or less brief, of some six hundred shipwrecks that have earned the Outer Banks of North Carolina its grim nickname. The time covered is from 1526 to the present. Index.

Booklist 48:358 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 22 '52 170w

"David Stick, who lives on the outer banks, captures the spirit of this treacherous coast. He has done a major research job. His sources are forgotten reports, faded newspapers, the tales of descendants of shipwrecked seamen and of the 'bankers' to whom in older days stranded vessels meant salvage and a measure of wealth." W. S. Hayward

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '52 650w

"An engrossing account."

+ New Yorker 28:119 Je 14 '52 120w

Reviewed by T. E. Cooney

Sat R 35:34 Jl 26 '52 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p662 O 10 '52 110w

STIERI, EMANUELE. Home owner's complete outdoor handbook; drawings by John G. Marinac. 578p $6.95 Prentice-Hall

635 Gardening. Horticulture. Landscape gardening 52-1317

"Provides for use of home grounds for recreation and profit by giving instructions in building outdoor furniture, making sidewalks, drives, terraces, pools, and small structures, gardening, raising poultry, bees, pigeons, and rabbits, and laying out or constructing game and sport areas. A miscellany that may offer suggestions as well as specific instructions to owners of large or small properties." Booklist

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 22 '52 90w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 20 '52 70w

Springf'd Republican p8D My 11 '52 200w

STILES, BERT. Serenade to the big bird. 216p $2.75 Norton

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 52-239

"Author, a bomber pilot in Europe during the last war, was killed in 1944 at the age of 23. This book, completed before he died, contains his account of missions, his reaction to them, and his hopes and fears for a better world after the war. Mixed with somewhat coarse impressions of his various girl friends are his highly sensitive and youthfully idealistic thoughts on the world around him." Library J

Booklist 48:211 Mr 1 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 2 '52 300w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 6 '52 480w

"Some of the airmen's language is rough; war was not pretty. But this is a book that should speak directly to young people who, like Bert Stiles, wonder how to build a peaceful world." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:127 Ap '52 80w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 28:234 Ag '52 200w

Kirkus 20:53 Ja 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

+ Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 110w

Reviewed by W. R. Laidlaw

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 F 17 '52 1800w

"The serenade is a simple and moving story of the war in the air." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p16 F 17 '52 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 13 '52 370w

Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52 130w

STIMPSON, GEORGE WILLIAM. Book about American politics. 554p $4.95 Harper

973.076 U.S.—Politics and government—Examinations, questions, etc. 52-5472

"Arranged in question and answer form, this is an authentic collection of miscellaneous facts about 'American political life in terms of the odd, the unusual and the interesting.' Index." Bookmark

STIMPSON, G. W.—Continued

Booklist 48:337 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 30w

"It is a book that can be amusing to scan, and it's valuable to have on the shelf. George Stimson, a Washington correspondent of long standing, has also been a fact-finder. This is his fourth 'fact' book." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 9 '52 180w

"A painstakingly accurate and constantly entertaining work."

+ Current Hist 22:378 Je '52 130w

Kirkus 20:151 F 15 '52 120w

"A good source for out of the way questions. Recommended." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 90w

"Many of Stimson's questions are worth the asking and are, as a rule, satisfactorily answered. . . There may be some who do not know what Coxey's Army was, or who Thaddeus Stevens was. If so they should have their answer even though they could find a better one in any high school history textbook. . . But where outside of the quiz program, is some one going to ask: 'When were the most ex-Presidents living?' or 'What man was Representative, Senator-elect and President-elect all at the same time?' . . . All this is odd enough and perhaps interesting enough but it is not important, nor does it add up to a 'non-partisan history of American politics.' It is little more than a collection of little-known facts brought together in a volume for relaxation." Avery Craven

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 15 '52 500w

"As a notable Washington correspondent since the mid-Twenties, George Stimson has spent most of his adult life close to the political scene. His book is not only good reading but valuable source material for writers, students, politicians." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p12 Je 1 '52 420w

"You don't read George Stimson page after page, sopping up one collection of facts after another. Rather, you rifle through the book, stopping at the short essay under a heading that catches your fancy. . . But, over all, this is a book for relaxed reading and enjoyment."

+ Sat R 35:13 Jl 19 '52 320w

STIRLING, MONICA. Dress rehearsal. 210p $3
Simon & Schuster

52-10116

Story of a young girl, whose parents are stage folk, and her years in an English boarding school. Tho written in the first person, the author declares in a prefatory note that the story is not autobiographical.

Booklist 48:361 Jl 1 '52

"This is a report on the territory of childhood as revisited by an adult explorer with strong memories. A slightly fictionalized autobiographical essay rather than a novel, it has a pawky charm." Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:71 O '52 230w

Kirkus 20:234 Ap 1 '52 180w

"There is really very little that is astonishing about Dress Rehearsal except that one wonders how Miss Stirling has managed to make so witty a book out of such hackneyed material." John Raymond

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:414 O 13 '51 220w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stallings

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 1 '52 350w

"Rather than a novel this is a series of sprightly episodes, some of them gems, almost any one of which could stand on its own merits." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p16 Je 29 '52 350w

"Monica Stirling's second novel tells the slightest of stories but a most agreeable one, describing the transformation of a very nice child into an attractive young woman." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 28:116 Je 14 '52 700w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques

Spec 187:486 O 12 '51 80w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Theatre Arts 36:5 Jl '52 310w

"Whether enacted as a piece of autobiography or fiction, it has a freshness and originality that mark it out from the product, however competent, of the average lady novelist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 28 '51 180w

STIX, THOMAS LOUIS, and STIX, THOMAS LOUIS, jr, eds. Slightly underwritten; a collection of cartoons about insurance. 64p $1.50
Simon & Schuster

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 51-14036

"A collection of cartoons about insurance by the country's foremost cartoonists, including Gluyas Williams, Jo Bishop, Thurber, Hoff, and plenty of others." Library J

"Warranted to tickle agent, insured and beneficiary indiscriminately." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:55 Ja 1 '52 30w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 2 '51 50w

"If you know anyone in the insurance business, this is a must for your list." Allen Worth

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 25 '51 70w

STODDARD, HOPE. From these comes music; instruments of the band and orchestra; il. by Ava Morgan. 256p $3.50 Crowell

785 Musical instruments 52-7865

Discusses the origin and history of forty musical instruments and explains the place of each in modern bands or orchestras. Copiously illustrated. Junior and senior high schools. Index.

Booklist 49:110 N 15 '52

Kirkus 20:456 Ag 1 '52 110w

"Highly recommended for high school." C. A. Hulton

+ Library J 77:1910 N 1 '52 80w

"The style is delightfully readable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p10 N 16 '52 110w

STOLZ, MARY SLATTERY. Leftover elf; drawings by Peggy Bacon. 57p $2 Harper

52-5473

The only elf left in the world sets out to discover who it is who believes in him, because as long as there are people who believe in elves, there will be elves. This story for ages 6 to 10 tells about the little elf's adventures.

+ Horn Bk 28:172 Je '52 100w

Kirkus 20:188 Mr 15 '52 120w

"This odd little fable is illustrated by a distinguished artist Peggy Bacon, who has been missing too long from the children's book field. . . Though the book has charm, we doubt its wide appeal to younger children." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 15 '52 180w

"It is a freshly imagined tale." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 16 '52 190w

"Peggy Bacon's drawing for this original story have great distinction. . . The humor in both text and illustrations is a constant delight."

+ Sat R 35:60 Ap 12 '52 230w

STONE, HAMPTON, pseud. See Stein, A. M.

STONE, ISIDOR F. Hidden history of the Korean war. 364p il $5 Monthly review press, 66 Barrow st, N.Y. 14; for sale by Citadel

951.9 Korea—History—War and intervention, 1950-. U.S.—Foreign relations 52-9751

"Mr. Stone, columnist for the New York Daily Compass, has relied 'exclusively on United States and United Nations documents, and on respected American and British newspaper sources' for this history. His interpretation results in surmises that the war was created purposely by South Korea; that it was not the surprise attack that Tokyo and Washington made it out to be; that skin-saving and skeleton-hiding account for much current history; and that peace is not actually being sought." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by W. B. Ziff

Ann Am Acad 283:188 S '52 340w

"Generally speaking, Mr. Stone's thesis is that the United States, in conspiracy with South Korea, deliberately sought war in Korea. Mr. Stone does not actually make this charge in so many words. He uses a device familiar to many who are not entirely and legalistically sure of their ground; he presents his documentation and then, instead of drawing a positive conclusion, poses his conclusion in the form of a highly provocative question." Gordon Walker

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 24 '52 380w

Foreign Affairs 31:167 O '52 70w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton

Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 140w

"It is a pity that Mr. Stone's theorizing about the origins of the war is so tendentious, for when he goes on to analyze the conduct of the campaign and of the truce talks his reasoning steadily gains in persuasiveness and strength. . . Mr. Stone's theories about the failure to achieve an armistice are perhaps more important than anything else in this book." W. M. Ball

Nation 175:14 Jl 5 '52 1500w

"There are grave questions to be asked about Korea. Stone has not asked them. There are sharp criticisms to be made of MacArthur; they are not helped by caricature. Dissent is a tonic in an age of conformism. But this is not reasoned dissent." Michael Straight

New Repub 126:21 Je 2 '52 440w

"[The] definitive history of the war has not yet appeared and is not likely to appear soon. A new book, by one of America's most acute, well-informed and perceptive journalists, cannot hope to be that history. But it is one of the most brilliant attempts at describing contemporary events and shows an outstanding technique of analysis." G. A. Grun

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:691 Je 14 '52 1550w

Springf'd Republican p4C Jl 6 '52 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Ag 22 '52 100w

STONE, RICHARD. Role of measurement in economics. 85p $2.50 Cambridge

330 Economics. Index numbers (economics) A51-9962

"This volume, small in size but not in scope or interest, offers the economist a look into each of several areas where measurement is indispensable to good economics. These areas range from the axiomatics of utility theory, through difference equations, social accounting, and the theory and practice of empirical searches for demand curves, to some intelligent remarks on the collection of statistical data and the use of empirical economic knowledge." Am Econ R

"The book will be able to widen the horizons of nonquantitative theoretical economists and nontheoretical quantitative economists alike. It will also furnish good fodder for the foraging student." C. F. Christ

+ Am Econ R 41:953 D '51 650w

"This slender volume—an expanded version of the four Newmarch Lectures delivered by the director of the Department of Applied Economics in Cambridge at the London School of Economics—is packed to the brim." Wassily Leontief

J Pol Econ 60:168 Ap '52 750w

STONIER, GEORGE WALTER. Round London with the unicorn; drawings by Lynton Lamb. 142p $3 Roy pubs.

942.1 [914.21] London—Description

[51-33915]

Jottings from a Londoner's notebook describing for an American friend what to see in London. The notes include aspects as widely diversified as London pubs, and St Paul's.

"Quietly humorous and good reading." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 20w

"Written in polished sentences around rather than about London." J. S.

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 19 '51 30w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 41:659 Je 9 '51 900w

"Both the concept of the book and the writing are highly artificial, which is, of course, nothing at all against them, providing that the artificiality comes off, that it produces the effect it is meant to produce—and that Round London with the Unicorn only occasionally and intermittently does."

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 20 '51 900w

STOOPS, JOHN DASHIELL. Integrated life. 180p $3 Smith, Richard R.

301.15 Social psychology. Individualism 51-14847

"This book presents the ideal of an integrated mode of thought and life which has as its purpose the overcoming of our traditional Western dualism. It is rooted in the prayer of the Platonic Socrates that our inner and our outer life may be one and in the teaching of Jesus of a kingdom of righteousness in which the fullest possible life of the individual may be realized." (Introd) No index.

"Except for some of the vocabulary, Hegel said most of this, and quite as repetitiously. But the partial integrations which have stemmed from Hegel are threatening as never before to submerge the hard-won individualism upon which Professor Stoops heaps so much obloquy. To his 'world community of righteousness,' no one will take exception. But the direct path to it through organic theories of the state may well prove to be the long way to nowhere." H. A. Larrabee

J Philos 49:512 Jl 17 '52 500w

"A diligently and clearly written book." G. A. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D F 10 '52 80w

STORCK, JOHN, and TEAGUE, WALTER DORWIN. Flour for man's bread; a history of milling; il. by Harold Rydell. 382p $7.50 Univ. of Minn. press

664.72 [679.131] Flour mills 52-7482

This book is based on materials gathered for a museum of milling history, a museum which, because of post-war costs, has not materialized. Beginning with pre-historic man, the author traces the history of the use of grains and their processing down to the present. Illustrations include diagrams, line drawings, maps, reproductions of old prints. Appendix includes: Vocabulary of milling terms; References and notes; Picture credits; Index.

"Like a museum, the book offers the results of painstaking scholarship in words and illustrations comprehensible to anybody who is interested. The illustrations, by Harold Rydell, have the clarity of dioramas." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 31 '52 130w

STORCK, JOHN--Continued

"The significance of bread in the story of mankind is the contrapuntal theme in this history of milling and the improvement of its technical processes. The book is well documented and indexed. The book is very beautifully designed and illustrated."

+ Special Libraries 43:378 N '52 40w

STORY; the magazine of the short story in book form [no. 1] ed. by Whit Burnett and Hallie Burnett. (Story Press bk) 236p $3 McKay

Short stories—Collections

This is the first issue of the magazine Story, in a new format, a biennial publication in boards. Contents: Sam and the dean, by Teresa Foley; The door between, by James Wyckoff; The St George Ball, by E. D. Nelson; The science teacher, by William Wiegand; The beautiful house, by D. V. Baker; Olaf the magnificent, by W. C. Sayres; The long pike, by Rearden Conner; The let-down, by D. B. Dodson; The vise, by W. D. Magnes; Little flute, by Shen Ts'ung-wen; The wonderful automobile, by Turnley Walker; The strange notion, by Harold Helfer; The miserly emir, by Touvia Ashkenazi; The devil's tail, by Graham Brooks; Fog and the saints, by Merrill Anderson; The blond dog, by L. C. Stoumen; Margie Passes, by Joseph Shalit; The captive, by A. J. Burks; Holohan's hoist, by Ed McNamara; Act of God, by R. L. Tobin. Biographical notes.

"Although a few of the stories are banal and some are merely slick, the general level is one of unexciting competence."

+ — Nation 174:17 Ja 5 '52 140w

"To take first things first, the new collection maintains the high level of craftsmanship and feeling which have distinguished the selections over the last twenty years. . . . There is a gratifying variety in theme, mood and setting. . . . In all, there is writing here of real, if generally quiet, distinction, and reading which will appeal perhaps not to every taste but to all who value the contribution that 'Story' magazine is continuing to make to literary standards." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 6 '52 410w

"The reappearance of Story Magazine in book form is something of a literary event for those of us who mourned its passing several years ago." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 27 '52 450w

"This revival is an auspicious event. It is difficult to overestimate Story's contribution to the literature of the Thirties and Forties. To turn the pages of its more than one hundred numbers re-creates part of the literary history of those decades." William Peden

+ Sat R 35:14 F 23 '52 900w

STOTZ, CARL E., and BALDWIN, M. W. At bat with the Little League; with a foreword by Paul S. Kerr. 271p il $2.95 Macrae Smith co.

796.357 Little League Baseball, inc. Baseball 52-6764

Describes in fictional form the founding of Little League Baseball and its operation.

Booklist 49:53 O 1 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 16 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:369 J1 1 '52 180w

"Real games are described, and an attempt is made to weave a plot, but story is slight and characters are wooden. Will not be of much interest to young people, but should be in the library because, as far as I know, it is the only book dealing with the Little League." M. D. Read

Library J 77:1413 S 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by I. H. Marsh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52 30w

"The idea of the book is excellent, but the actual presentation misses its mark. The story lapses into an oversentimentalized thesis on the harmonizing effect of Little League Baseball on the community, the home and the individual player and parent. Some sections read like a sociology case-book." M. L. K.

N Y Times pt2, p34 N 16 '52 110w

STOUT, REX. Prisoner's base. 186p $2.50 Viking

52-13719

Detective story.

Booklist 49:126 D 1 '52

Kirkus 20:667 O 1 '52 70w

"This is a pretty good example of the prestidigitation of Rex Stout and an astonishing example of how, with the assistance of Archie's pungenencies, a short story can be made to look like a novel. Archie, of course, is livelier standing still than most of his contemporaries are trying to race like greyhounds." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 16 '52 100w

"The solution is surprising, the construction tight; in this particular vein only Mr. Stout himself is apt to produce a better book." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p58 N 9 '52 70w

"An expert job, tailored to the last detail to the demands of Mr. Stout's admirers."

+ New Yorker 28:134 N 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 60w

"Archie Goodwin and cops work hard to bring this one off. Good." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:43 N 1 '52 20w

STOUT, REX. Triple jeopardy. 216p $2.50 Viking

52-8408

Three detective stories of novelette length.

Kirkus 20:97 F 1 '52 70w

"An entertaining volume and a pleasantly diverse one." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 13 '52 140w

"Archie Goodwin is as lively a narrator as ever, and rather more active an independent detective; and the sum in entertainment and story value is well above that of any three average $2.50 novels." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p35 Ap 6 '52 140w

New Yorker 28:136 Mr 22 '52 100w

"The Communist one seems pretty dull and talky, but the other two are right up to standard with some fine odd characters and Archie's usual lively narration. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 13 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:47 My 3 '52 40w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52 100w

STOVER, HERBERT ELISHA. Copperhead moon. 310p $3 Dodd

52-10918

Historical novel of the Civil war. It deals particularly with the Union deserters, known as Copperheads, who tried to sabotage the war, and finally were defeated at their game. The scene is Pennsylvania.

Booklist 49:90 N 1 '52

"Author has included a rather detailed account of the battle of Gettysburg. Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 100w

"Mr. Stover has provided plenty of fast action for his somewhat juvenile characters, and he's kept his story moving at a pleasant pace in this routine costume piece."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p 12 N 23 '52 110w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney
N Y Times p48 D 7 '52 310w

STOWE, LELAND. Conquest by terror; the story of satellite Europe. 300p $3.50 Random house

940.55 Central Europe. Communism 52-5167

A study of the countries behind the Iron Curtain: Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, and Bulgaria. The author, an American newspaperman, bases his work on his own knowledge, plus material gained from journalists in exile, recent refugees, former officers, specialists of various kinds, and the underground. Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 284:215 N '52 220w
Booklist 48:257; 279 Ap 15 '52; My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 11 '52 250w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 10 '52 800w

"It is a terrifying book, but one we should read thoughtfully, its challenge accepted, its facts faced. Leland Stowe has been right too often to be discounted."

Kirkus 20:172 Mr 1 '52 340w

"I am not denying merit to Mr. Stowe's book. It deals with most phases of satellite life in a systematic manner. Where it is based on genuine Communist material, it is informative, persuasive, and a bit frightening. But I found his Messianic, five-alarm tone irritating, and many of his 'underground' facts unconvincing." Mark Gayn

+ Nation 176:135 Ag 16 '52 900w

"Mr. Stowe has written a book to alarm the West, to make it aware of the important changes which five to seven years of Soviet control have already produced, not in the satellites alone but also in the balance between East and West in Europe. It is a grim story and one which needs to be widely reflected on." Philip Mosely

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 18 '52 370w

"For the first time a first-rate newspaper man with direct knowledge of the area has made an over-all survey of intelligence files, underground reports and other revealing materials which have long been crying for competent inspection. Mr Stowe's analysis relies here and there, as it must, on circumstantial evidence and shrewd guesswork. His formula of direct exhortation to the reader, with pieces of sentences running off as chapter subheadings in sensational italics, may not suit everyone's taste. . . . But the total result is authoritative, readable—and justifiably frightening." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '52 800w

"Mr. Stowe is a reliable, careful man; his reputation is high. When it comes to reporting, you can believe him. Yet this is only part of the story. This book tells the rest of the dreadful tale of conquest by terror."

J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 5 '52 850w

Reviewed by E. A. Mowrer
Sat R 35:10 My 17 '52 1200w

STRACHEY, EVELYN JOHN ST LOE. The frontiers. 250p $3 Random house

52-9579

"The story of a British flier shot down over occupied France early in World War II and of his perilous attempt to evade capture by the Nazis and their French collaborators." (Publisher's note) Publication of the novel was delayed until after the war, for "security" reasons.

Booklist 49:33 S 15 '52

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 7 '52 340w

"Despite scattered passages of great feeling and poetic insight, The Frontiers remains a tract, with the main male characters apparently representing the frontiers Strachey personally crossed in his political and philosophical journeys." P. V. Farrell

+ Commonweal 56:587 S 19 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:421 J1 15 '52 170w

"However authentic the subject matter of the novel, its style is unbelievably awkward and amateurish; really awful—like Dreiser's." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 120w

"The chief weakness of the book is the disjointed nature of the episodes; the reader's eye tells him they are connected because they all happened to the same man, but his mind does not perceive any of that subtle, organic connection by which the novelist conjures up an illusion of real life. Nevertheless, the book will interest many readers, for among many of the episodes which can be read with pleasure for their own sake are two of historic importance, both vouched for in Mr Strachey's preface." Elizabeth Jenkins

— Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 22 '52 170w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 127:30 O 20 '52 240w

"The best novels about politics have not been written by politicians, and the best novels by politicians have not been about politics, and The Frontiers does nothing to change this position." J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 44:216 Ag 23 '52 290w

"The story of how Madeleine helped James escape the Germans and the Vichy French is a fine adventure story. It has suspense and it ends dramatically. This has to be said at once. For 'The Frontiers' is immensely more than an adventure story." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 7 '52 750w

"Mr. Strachey, author of 'The Coming Struggle for Power' and other contemporary tracts on socialism, communism, capitalism and fascism, brings the reader the full force of his political knowledge and opinions from the Spanish Civil War onward. The result is a novel that at times talks itself into fictional hot water, that says some philosophical things well, but that is often dragged down by the weight of its own erudition." Herbert Mitgang
+ N Y Times p28 S 7 '52 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '52 180w

"The story, for all its unanswered questions, erratic movement, and abrupt finish, has some good lines. . . . However, there is no effective thinking in the book. If Mr. Strachey has nothing more to say than is embodied in James's amiable British stalwartness, Jean's glum Communism, and the Abbé's mild and tardy act of affirmation, then why say it? Over the whole book, in fact, there is such an air of unreality, that I almost wished the story hadn't stopped where it did. I'd like to have known how the war came out." Edmund Fuller
+ Sat R 35:12 S 6 '52 450w

"Mr. Strachey writes sensitively and with restraint, catching the flavour of the French countryside in a way that made me long at once to cross the Channel. The form of his story commits him to his one improbability that Laval (Nordenac in the story) should hold so confidential and compromising a conversation out of doors, as he must if James and the others are to overhear him. I think too, that many readers will share my anxiety to know what happened to Madeleine." L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 189:250 Ag 22 '52 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Ag 29 '52 230w

STRANGE, JOHN STEPHEN, pseud. See Tillett, D. S.

STRAUMANN, HEINRICH. American literature in the twentieth century. 189p $2.25; text ed $1.80 Longmans

810.9 American literature—History and criticism [52-664]

"From the vantage point of Zürich University, the author categorizes American literary events from William James to Arthur Miller and provides a sensible, objective introduction to the relation of life and letters in America." Sat R

"The general tone is pleasantly humane. Yet Professor Straumann leaves the reader unsatisfied. His achievement, and his limitation, may be seen by comparing his book with H. S. Commager's recent The American Mind." + New Statesman & Nation 42:291 S 15 '51 230w

"There is noticeable enthusiasm in this hand-book and a telescoping of content and thought of American media of expression without sacrifice of accuracy or reader's interest." + Sat R 35:29 My 31 '52 70w

"Professor Straumann is remarkably encyclopaedic but he suffers from disadvantages that are inevitable to a professor at Zurich University; though he knows much about books and authors he does not appear to be familiar enough with the American environment to give his book value as a continuous study of the relation between American life and American literature, nor does he seem to understand his audience (presumably mainly British) well enough to appreciate their interests and the lacunae in their knowledge or understanding."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Ag 10 '51 320w

STRAUS, NATHAN. Two-thirds of a nation; a housing program. 291p $4 Knopf

331.833 Housing 51-11991

"The former administrator of the U.S. Housing Administration reviews housing problems throughout the country and offers a workable remedy. Needs of the middle income group are stressed, but the goal set is a comfortable home for every American which, in the author's opinion, is feasible because we have techniques, experience, and financial resources to make it possible. The author recommends legislation to remove obsolete building codes, amortization spread over longer periods, and better construction. Connecticut is cited as having accomplished much with its housing program. Suggestions are made whereby local communities may institute plans. Documentary footnotes, graphs, and index." Booklist

"Neither Mr. Straus nor his collaborators seem to be careless of the facts. The book is intended to be not only informative, which it is, but to be provocative—on the theory, no doubt, that discussion of pros and cons increases the public intelligence. Mr. Straus's own chapters are distinguished by a challenging brevity and conciseness of style that should arouse much interest and argument." B. J. Hovde

+ Ann Am Acad 283:213 S '52 330w

Booklist 48:166 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:107 F '52 30w

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 3 '52 140w

Kirkus 19:655 N 1 '51 280w

"Highly recommended to all as a readable and practical guide." J. M. Scherr
+ Library J 77:212 F 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by Dorothy Rosenman
Nation 174:234 Mr 8 '52 1400w

Reviewed by Catherine Fauer
New Repub 126:20 Ap 7 '52 550w

"No one reading Nathan Straus' book on the housing needs of our country can fail to be stirred by the challenge it presents." Elinore Herrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 17 '52 650w

"The case has been made concisely, clearly and well. The book should lend itself to effective propaganda for better housing in the United States. No one reading Mr. Straus can doubt the desperate need for such propaganda—and no one can remain indifferent to the issues involved." Peter Blake

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '52 650w

"Mr. Straus writes a simple, forceful, horse-sense book, and one which the average American voter may read to his profit." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 29 '52 700w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p22A Mr 2 '52 350w

STRAUSS, ERIC. Irish nationalism and British democracy. 307p $4.25 Columbia univ. press

941.5 Ireland—Nationality. Ireland—Relations (general) with Great Britain. Great Britain—Relations (general) with Ireland A51-9706

Attempts to interpret Anglo-Irish relations, during the period of the Union, emphasizing Irish social and political influences in Britain. Index.

"A work so discursive and dogmatic will serve the historian very little. Its antireligious bias will certainly offend the Irish Catholics. It will please chiefly those who have already accepted the Marxian view of history and whose sympathies warmly identify them with the 'oppressed masses' of Ireland." R. G. Cowherd

Am Hist R 57:954 J1 '52 550w

Am Pol Sci R 46:260 Mr '52 10w

"Despite the author's disclaimer, the main part of the book is devoted to Irish grievances. Oft told tales are rehearsed, and Ireland's ills are attributed to the English conquest, to colonialism, and to absentee landlordism. Oddly enough, England is blamed for 'the destruction of mining' in Ireland (p. 76). On this point one might think that the lack of minerals ought to be worthy of consideration." Paul Knaplund

— Ann Am Acad 280:224 Mr '52 500w

"The approach is a valuable one and has been ably handled; the result is a book which, though controversial, is stimulating and attractive to read. Mr. Strauss is to be congratulated upon entering so boldly the virtually uncharted seas of Irish economic history, and though some of his generalizations may be modified by subsequent research he deserves full credit for stressing an aspect of the national movement which has been too much neglected by Irish historians." F. S. Lyons

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 N 13 '51 230w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Picture story of Britain; pictures by Ursula Koering; ed. by Helen Hoke. [64p] $3 Bell pub.

942 Great Britain—History—Juvenile literature 51-14254

An introduction to the history and customs of the United Kingdom for grades five to seven.

Booklist 48:187 F 1 '52

"There is much here that is new and useful—for school projects and, especially, for the individual child who has a British pen-friend or is about to travel to the British Isles." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:40 F '52 90w

Kirkus 19:678 D 1 '51 90w

"A famous author does a good job for a prospective traveler of about twelve to fifteen. The lack of subdividing headings, the blatant flat colors are not appealing, but the text does cover a great deal of interesting information.

Miss Streatfeild writes as one knowing children of both countries, and adds many imaginative touches that are lacking in the O'Neill book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 27 '52 160w

"Excellent and sensible book." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p52 N 25 '51 150w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Theater cat; il. by Susanne Suba. 30p $1.25 Rand McNally 52-818

"The elegant Pinky was a most unusual cat. Employed as a mouser in the Ballet Theater, he had a great reputation as a balletomane, but was a sad failure at his job, because he was terrified of mice. When a mouse wrecked the dress rehearsal of a new ballet and the leading ballerina sprained her ankle, Pinky was promptly fired. How he coached a frightened understudy into a brilliant performance and won fame for himself makes a lighthearted extravaganza." N Y Times

"Pinky will take his place among literature's beloved cats just as soon as small children make his acquaintance in this unusual and completely engaging little book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 1 '52 140w

Kirkus 20:280 My 1 '52 80w

"Attractive, but probably of limited appeal... Third or fourth-grade reading ability." E. E. Frank

Library J 77:908 My 15 '52 70w

"Miss Streatfeild captures the glamour and the bustle of theatre and Susanne Suba has emphasized this with her charming, pastel colored pictures. This well-designed book contains a Slottie cut-out toy." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '52 130w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:48 My 10 '52 90w

STRECKER, EDWARD ADAM. Basic psychiatry. 473p $3.75 Random house

616.89 Psychology, Pathological 52-5553

Comprehensive survey of psychiatry, its principles and practices. The author is professor of psychiatry and chairman of the department of psychiatry, School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania. Index.

Booklist 48:261 Ap 15 '52

"Popular in the best sense of the word, this book does not pretend to do what a book cannot do—namely, cure people by way of the printed page. But it does present an interesting, sound, abundantly illustrated survey of psychiatry for lay readers in their own language." Rollo May

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '52 700w

"Highly readable volume. . . This book is an excellent introduction to the field, and it is to be highly recommended not only for parents, teachers, doctors and social workers, but especially to those legislators who cannot appreciate the need for improving and expanding facilities for prevention and treatment of mental disease." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 9 '52 150w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Death in Wellington road. 208p $2.50 Dodd

52-8986

Detective story.

Booklist 48:379 Jl 15 '52

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Jl 6 '52 250w

"The puzzle is over-simple, but offers some pretty dice issues with an obscure alkaloid and a poisoned pig; and it's pleasant to see Superintendent Jimmy Waghorn doing well on his own, with almost no assistance from Dr. Priestley." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '52 30w

"Not exactly inspired, but still a solid and conscientious job."

+ New Yorker 28:91 Ag 16 '52 60w

"Although the story could easily have been told in 8000 words, it is slightly more mystifying than some recent Rhode productions, and not quite so staggeringly unfair. C minus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 6 '52 40w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Secret meeting. 240p $2.50 Dodd

52-6504

Detective story.

"Fascinating as an example of patient detecting, designed especially for admirers of Dr. Priestley's round table processes of deduction." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 9 '52 90w

"It is all set forth in leaden prose, possibly with the notion of bringing it down to earth." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 3 '52 110w

"Only for those who enjoy the methodical plodding investigations of Dr. Priestley and Superintendent Waghorn—and even those may find the denouement singularly unconvincing." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p12 F 3 '52 20w

STREETER, EDWARD. Skoal Scandinavia; maps and drawings by A. Sheldon Pennoyer. 238p il $3.50 Harper

948 [914.8] Scandinavia—Description and travel 52-5474

The author with his wife and another couple shipped a car to Norway, flew across the Atlantic and took a 3,700 mile trip thru Norway, Sweden, and Denmark in the car. This is a very personal and sometimes witty account of their journey. Many illustrations and sketch maps, with a final chapter containing advice on how to prepare for such a trip, what to take, what to do about maps, etc. No index.

Booklist 48:263 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:182 My '52 30w

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 4 '52 270w

"Norway is perhaps treated with greater freshness than the other two countries—possibly reflecting the varying degrees of an enthusiasm which was at its peak at the beginning of the trip. But Mr. Streeter has also covered Sweden and Denmark comprehensively and perceptively. And the whole is flavored by his irrepressible instinct for the amusing in people, places and events which gives warmth to his descriptions and makes 'Skoal Scandinavia' very easy reading." Edith Prudden

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 17 '52 430w

Kirkus 20:142 F 15 '52 230w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:902 My 15 '52 60w

Reviewed by K. John

New Statesman & Nation 44:18 Jl 5 '52 490w

"It is all pleasant enough; there are illustrations and maps; there is a carefully worked out itinerary for any one who wants to follow in the Streeter path; there are useful hints about what to see, what to eat, what to wear. But don't expect Mr. Streeter's book to supplant either the older guides or the more recent sociological studies."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 4 '52 390w

STREETER, EDWARD—Continued

"'Skoal Scandinavia' is an unpretentious, extremely personal book with occasional flashes of humor and affection. It may remind one of a family motion picture—to be run through for intimate friends back home after dinner." Hudson Strode

N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '52 450w

"Told amusingly and includes a surprising amount of factual information, though you will hardly realize as you read how much you are learning. The book is illustrated with photographs and sketch maps that provide a good idea of the country covered." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 31 '52 450w

"No guide book, this is simply a wonderfully amiable diary of a somewhat more elaborate-than-normal ride through three more-different-than-normal countries." H. S.

Sat R 35:41 Ap 5 '52 230w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p10C My 4 '52 300w

"Mr. Streeter in Skoal Scandinavia writes to make his readers laugh, but, as the true humorist should, he often touches the heart of the matter. . . Under his adorning wit is much practical information. His personality integrates the book and he describes Norway's magnificent scenery with an unhackneyed vision which must make even those who have never seen it catch a glimpse of its beauty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 3 '52 120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:171 J1 '52

STROMBERG, ROLAND N. Republicanism reappraised. 93p $2 Public affairs press

329.6 Republican party 52-10642

"Written from a viewpoint sympathetic to the Republicans. A firm-believer in the two-party system, he strongly urges the revitalization of the G.O.P. However, he speaks frankly and boldly about the shortcomings of Republicanism in recent years." (Publisher's note) The author is assistant professor of history, University of Maryland.

Am Pol Sci R 46:899 S '52 30w

"Any one who follows American politics will find the discussion extremely interesting." D. D. McKean

Ann Am Acad 283:191 S '52 480w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 7 '52 410w

"I like this book, although it has some serious shortcomings." J. K. Javits

+ Commonweal 56:393 J1 25 '52 1250w

"Fine reading for the general voter as well as the professionally involved politician, though doubtless a strong family lecture for old guard members of the party to take."

+ Kirkus 20:334 Je 1 '52 240w

"Mr. Stromberg is at his best in dealing with Republican strategy after World War I. When it comes to advising how the Grand Old Party is to be revitalized, however, the book trails off into the usual table-thumping. . . As words go these exhortations sound fine, but they remain little more than words." Samuel Lubell

N Y Times p9 J1 6 '52 450w

"A critique of the Republican Party that is written in a friendly spirit but may not be received with great enthusiasm by all Republicans. . . Professor Stromberg, a strong proponent of the two-party system as a safeguard of democracy, believes that a revival of an enlightened Republicanism is necessary. . . His proposals for a constructive Republican policy seem intelligent; how realistic they are is another matter."

+ New Yorker 28:86 J1 12 '52 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ag 17 '52 370w

"The trouble with Mr. Stromberg's analysis is not his partisanship. It is his discounting of historical facts. In fastening sins around the Republican neck, it is a doubtful practice to replace a historical context with an 'iffy' solution demonstrated by hindsight. . . In truth, if the G.O.P. were as bad in the past as Professor Stromberg says, it should now be an extinct curio like the Whigs and the Federalists." P. R. Levin

— Sat R 35:38 J1 19 '52 360w

STRONG, GEORGE TEMPLETON. Diary; ed. by Allan Nevins and Milton Halsey Thomas. 4v $35 Macmillan

B or 92 New York (city)—Social life and customs. U.S.—Politics and government—19th century 52-11147

In 1835 the author, a sophomore at Columbia, aged fifteen, decided to keep a diary. From that time until almost the day of his death in 1875 George Templeton Strong kept a record of his life among the professional upper classes of New York city. These volumes give a picture of New York life during those forty years. Illustrated. Indexes.

Booklist 49:65 O 15 '52

"This will become one of the great American diaries. . . Such an accounting would mean little if it were only a record of events, but Strong was a man of the sharpest sense of people and, fortunately, of the sharpest prose in which to set down his insights. It is improbable that we have any other personal record of those years which is so detailed, so varied, and so humanly warm." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 14 '52 700w

+ Kirkus 20:525 Ag 15 '52 240w

"For its period, it is a unique social record. Chiefly for large public libraries, university libraries and historical societies—considering the price." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:2001 D 1 '51 180w

"Altogether Allan Nevins and Milton Halsey have performed their task with so much devotion and intelligence that you are left with no doubt that this is one of the great diaries, a peer of the most celebrated examples of a difficult and fascinating art." J. R. Newman

+ New Repub 127:19 D 8 '52 1550w

"Strong's diary is an important addition to our sources for the social history of New York. The editors have provided excellent notes, identifying people mentioned and otherwise clarifying the text. The gratitude of this reviewer would have been even greater, however, had they suppressed many of the tedious reports of Columbia and Trinity board meetings, and instead given Strong's accounts of the numerous social scandals and other human dramas to which their introductory summaries of deleted text often allude." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 14 '52 2150w

"Strong left a record of mid-century New York that is unequalled, a record so sharp, so detailed, that any reader must conclude: 'This was New York.' . . Historians will be quoting Strong from now until the end of time. This doesn't mean that Philip Hone's diary of New York life from 1828 to 1851, hitherto the only source of gossip about the metropolis in the nineteenth century, is any less delightful than it was the day Allan Nevins edited its riches twenty-five years ago. But Strong supplements Hone and carries the story on through another generation." Wayne Andrews

+ N Y Times p5 S 14 '52 2000w

"Wherever you glance in the diary, so many things touching or funny, so much delight! Buy it in spite of the price. It will last you a lifetime." Brendan Gill

+ New Yorker 28:129 O 4 '52 1400w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 28 '52 700w

"Vehement, voluble, detailed, occasionally indiscreet, 'The Diary of George Templeton Strong' is one of the richest veins of the raw materials of social and political history to have been opened for many years." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R 35:26 S 13 '52 1950w

+ Time 60:116 S 15 '52 900w

"Because the author was a man of great curiosity and innumerable interests, who had, moreover, an eye to posterity, this amazing social document, reporting both trivia and events of moment, is a veritable mirror of the American society of its day."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:241 S '52 340w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

Yale R ns 42:311 winter '53 1250w

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE.

Which I never. 249p $2.50 Macmillan 52-7091

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

"A puzzle of divers proportions and solutions. British to the bone, and prevailingly good-humored as well."

+ Kirkus 19:714 D 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:210 F 1 '52 80w

"If you pick this up demanding a tidy plot you'll not get it although it ought on several other scores to be more than sufficiently diverting." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Mr 2 '52 180w

"A charming novel of rural life with a wondrous depiction of a village fete; a fine exposé of the just-legal methods of vanity publishing, and a fascinatingly involved, and even terrifying, story of espionage. All this is integrated with adroit characterization, highly entertaining writing, and the dominant figure of composer-detective Ellis McKay—of all the inspectors of fiction's Scotland Yard the man I would most enjoy meeting." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p31 F 24 '52 170w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 2 '52 70w

"Slightly loose-ender, but amiable handling of characters and pleasant if non-pertinent asides provide sound entertainment value. Diverting." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:48 Mr 15 '52 40w

STRUPPECK, JULES. Creation of sculpture; photographs by the author. 260p $6.95 Holt 731 Sculpture 52-7020

"Offers beginning students a basic plan for producing sculpture through 'a series of problems involving various technical means and demonstrating the functions of materials and techniques in the creative process.' Quarto, with photographs. Appendixes, index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:374 Jl 15 '52

Bookmark 11:233 Jl '52 40w

"As a guide to home study this book should prove stimulating. Jules Struppeck is an instructor of sculpture at the Newcomb college school of art, Tulane university." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Jl 27 '52 70w

"An excellent overall reference book."

+ Kirkus 20:272 Ap 15 '52 180w

"Recommended for those that yearn for armatures and/or plastics." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 77:1510 S 15 '52 90w

"In a work of high artistic integrity and insight, an active sculptor and teacher of sculpture at the Newcomb College School of Art at Tulane University presents both a thorough manual on that art and a strong reassurance of the healthy future of it in America." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ag 17 '52 230w

STUART, FRANK STANLEY. Wild wings. 222p $3.50 McGraw

Ducks—Legends and stories 51-13128

Tale of a flock of wild ducks, describing their migration from the south of England in the spring to their breeding grounds in the north. The story is particularly of the rivalry of a male pintail and a white mallard for the affections of a female pintail.

Booklist 48:192 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:132 Mr '52 20w

"Should appeal to anyone who enjoys the outdoors." John Bayless

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 10 '52 370w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 13 '52 500w

Kirkus 19:719 D 15 '51 200w

"A novel of high literary quality, vivid imagination, tense dramatic sense and exquisite detail. . . Highly recommended for general reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:209 F 1 '52 110w

"The story is graphically and excitingly told; too much so, some students of birds may think, for the author attributes to these ducks thoughts and fears which are possibly quite beyond their powers." A. W. B.

Manchester Guardian p4 N 2 '51 150w

"Mr. Stuart claims that his story is based on sound ornithological observation, but in telling it he certainly falls into the pathetic fallacy. Nor can he safeguard himself by claiming that 'nobody can yet tell the point at which instinct and imitativeness in birds merge into genuine intelligence.' That may be so, but Mr. Stuart, in his well-written book, goes misleadingly far in the humanisation of his hero and heroine." Geoffrey Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:506 N 3 '51 90w

"'Wild Wings' is not as overwritten as Mr. Stuart's 'City of the Bees.' But there is still a straining for effect which results in a rather sentimental manner. . . It is unfortunate that this approach could not have been sustained throughout the volume. When he is at his best, Mr. Stuart writes in the tradition of his calling. Simplicity and clarity have always characterized the writings of the great English naturalists." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p6 F 17 '52 370w

"There's not much science about it, and the literary style strains for effect, but the violent action of the story gets the reader through without difficulty. If one were asked to judge this as a yarn, turned out for the old animal-story fans, one could honestly say it was pretty good. Mr. Stuart, however, insists that his work be judged by high literary and scientific standards alike. . . The author's avowed standards, unfortunately, leave no room for judgment." L. J. Halle

+ Sat R 35:19 F 23 '52 360w

"It is a fascinating story and the author claims in his foreword that each instance is built from actual observations, but in the details he is bound to draw freely on his imagination. . . The book is full of anthropomorphisms which most serious naturalists will find rather tedious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p825 D 21 '51 260w

STUART, MATT, pseud. See Holmes, L. P.

STUART, MURIEL. Classic ballet; basic technique and terminology [historical development by Lincoln Kirstein; descriptive text by Muriel Stuart; ill. by Carlus Dyer, with a pref. by George Balanchine]. 243p $6 Knopf 792.8 Ballet 51-11993

"Muriel Stuart, an instructor at the American School of Ballet and the last protégé of Anna Pavlova, took four years to compile this work. Her Collaborator, Carlus Dyer, has furnished 156 pages of illustrations to accompany every movement. Because of variance of terminology, terms used by various theorists—Cecchetti, Vaganova, Nicolaeva-Legat—are incorporated into the text. Stylistically, Miss Stuart leans toward the Franco-Russian school rather than the Italian." Sat R

Booklist 48:316 Je 1 '52

STUART, MURIEL—Continued

"For soundness, for clarity, for succinctness, this manual of basic ballet is the best there is anywhere. It is the hardest to misunderstand." Edwin Denby

+ Nation 175:334 O 11 '52 450w

"In recent years several texts on the technique of classic ballet have been published, but none as thorough or elaborate as this. Naturally one is not going to learn ballet dancing through this book, or any book. . . As a supplement to classroom work, however, 'The Classic Ballet' should prove an invaluable aid to all students and teachers, for not only are basic technique and terminology treated in a logical, clear manner, but also—what is even more important—a detailed, illustrated analysis of posture and muscular control is presented. . . The book's the thing; and the book is Miss Stuart's—a grand, virtually definitive job." Rosalyn Krokover

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 30 '52 290w

STUBER, STANLEY IRVING, ed. Christian reader; inspirational and devotional classics. 514p $4.75 Assn. press

230 Christian literature—Collections

Anthology composed of the teachings of Christian leaders from the time of Jesus to that of Phillips Brooks and Walter Rauschenbusch. The excerpts from the works of each writer are introduced by biographical sketches. Indexes.

"Valuable contribution to Christian devotional literature. . . The indexing is thoro, with aids for everyday use and topics, name, and sources listed. This is a valuable part of the book." John Evans

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 S 14 '52 400w

"The book is admirably adapted to the purpose for which it was designed. The selections are brief, pungent and pertinent. They will average not more than five or six lines in length, and many are much less." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:1321 N 12 '52 180w

"This is a volume which will be a treasured addition to any library, particularly for those of the Christian faith, Protestant or Catholic."

+ Kirkus 20:629 S 15 '52 180w

"Recommended for its sincere approach and spiritual insight as assistance to ministers, Sunday School workers and students of theology—not for the average lay reader." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 77:1399 S 1 '52 90w

STUDENSKI, PAUL, and KROOSS, HERMAN EDWARD. Financial history of the United States; fiscal, monetary, banking, and tariff, including financial administration and state and local finance. 528p $6.50 McGraw

332 Finance—U.S. 51-12649

A textbook for college students written by two professors at New York University. Financial developments are covered from the early colonial period to 1950, embracing the history of federal, state, and local expenditures, taxation, borrowing, and financial management. The book also covers the development of the American monetary and banking system and foreign trade controls.

"There may be some differences of opinion on the relevancy of some of the material examined in the book to an understanding of public financing. The analysis of the presidential campaign of 1932 and the reorganization of government agencies and bureaus in the 1930's are cases in point. Though its interpretations and judgments are open to doubt, this book is an excellent descriptive and statistical account of the history of public financing and of the growth of the banking system." Julius Grodinsky

+ Am Econ R 42:976 D '52 750w

"The authors properly assume that the readers should learn the general facts of economic and political history elsewhere, but here and there a few additional words of explanation would be most useful. . . In other instances the authors seem to have mislaid their own knowledge of general American history. . . While the authors are eliminating the puzzles in a later edition, they should also correct the numerous liberties they took in alterations of people's names." F. A. Shannon

Ann Am Acad 283:204 S '52 500w

"Fills a definite need for an up-to-date book in the field." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 77:896 My 15 '52 50w

STUDY GROUP ON BUSINESS INCOME.

Changing concepts of business income; report. 160p $2 Macmillan

339 Income 52-7370

"The present book summarizes in a comprehensive but incisive manner the history and background of the problem of financial accounting of corporate business income, and makes specific recommendations for handling this problem in the future." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. No index.

"It is a useful summary and analysis of the major issues which have long concerned accountants. The level and tone of the volume reflects considerable thought and competence." J. F. Weston

+ Am Econ R 42:662 S '52 1650w

Reviewed by Maurice Moonitz

Harvard Law R 66:563 Ja '53 1150w

Reviewed by Jesse Burkhead

J Pol Econ 60:441 O '52 750w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 77:597 Ap 1 '52 80w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:148 Je '52 290w

STUMP, AL J. Champions against odds. 255p $2.95 Macrae Smith co.

927.96 Athletes 52-6766

Sketches of champions in various fields who had to overcome some obstacle, physical, social, racial or financial. The men and women presented are: Bob Mathias, Eddie Arcaro, Vicki Draves, Sam Snead, Johnny Pesky, Eddie LeBaron, Nancy Merki, Jackie Price, Johnny Longden, Mell Ott, Bobby Jones, Gil McDougald, Pat McCormick, Bill Kyne, Ralph Kiner, Lloyd Mangrum, Gus Zernial, Bob Richards, Gretchen Fraser, Earl Sande.

"The author's selection has breadth and a good sense of contrast, and his skill with the necessary on-the-scene material makes for some exciting reading."

+ Kirkus 20:416 J1 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1409 S 1 '52 20w

"The articles, though definitely of the hero-worship type, make a good little book to read." Irving Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 14 '52 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 31 '52 160w

STURE-VASA, MRS (ALSO) (MARY O'HARA, pseud.) Son of Adam Wyngate. 440p $3.75 McKay

52-8410

Bartholomew Wyngate, a devout Episcopalian clergyman, rector of a Brooklyn church in the early 1900's is the hero. His beautiful wife and his five small children were his pride until he was confronted with the proof of his wife's infidelity. Bart's nervous breakdown and his long struggle back to a normal life ends in a new understanding between husband and wife.

Booklist 48:248 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:185 My '52 50w

"An uneven, unconsciously lengthy study. . . The book has many unpleasant, even faintly nauseating scenes." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 175:232 Je '52 280w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 6 '52
550w

Kirkus 20:161 Mr 1 '52 270w

"Thought-provoking, challenging. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:595 Ap 1 '52 140w

"An excellent novel, both in its spacious intent and, with certain small reservations, in its actual accomplishment." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 30 '52 800w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither
N Y Times p23 Mr 30 '52 650w

"This is a staggeringly ambitious theme. To deal objectively with a priest is one thing, but to enter into his moments of mystic trance, his meditations, his temptations, and more than that to explain his utter inability to grapple with the evil which besets him, is indeed hard. Miss O'Hara (who writes, incidentally, with complete regard for anachronisms of detail) resolves her hero's tragedy with a sentimental denouement which is deeply disappointing." Pamela Taylor

Sat R 35:40 My 17 '52 300w

"Novelist O'Hara has seized on a solid theme, but has not written a novel fully worthy of it. The Son of Adam Wyngate is a meandering, overstuffed family saga, all too full of the human tedium which the skilled novelist suggests without reporting in grim detail. Clumsily written and badly in need of saving irony, The Son of Adam Wyngate reads more like an unedited transcript of family disaster than a dramatic portrait of it."

— Time 59:112 Mr 31 '52 390w

SUCKLING, NORMAN. Fauré. (Master musicians: new ser) rev ed 229p il $2.50 Pellegriani & Cudahy

B or 92 Faure, Gabriel Urbain

"The Faure is presented as the first full-sized study in English of a composer whose prominence seems to move with the tides, yet whose music is unfailingly rewarding to listeners who 'meet him, as in Mozart, with an ear tuned to the reception of his musical, not sentimental, design.' . . . Mr. Suckling places Faure firmly in a position of eminence in French music which has always managed to hold aloof from the Italo-German orbit by its strong attachment to the theater, and although Faure came to the opera late—in his 60's—he brought to it that French strength, so common to many of his contemporaries, for recreating the past without committing the sins of 'period' expression." San Francisco Chronicle

"It is good at last to have a book written in English (though Koehlin's standard study has been translated) and that it is a provocative one. Whether or not it serves its purpose, however, remains to be seen, so completely does Mr. Suckling find it necessary to destroy Romanticism, especially German Romanticism, in order to set off Fauré's achievements. Even the seasoned Fauréan will want to argue." P. L. Miller

+ — Library J 77:532 Mr 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Minnie Elmer
Music Lib Assn Notes 9:418 Je '52 110w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 16 '52 140w

SUCKOW, RUTH. Some others and myself; seven stories and a memoir. 281p $3 Rinehart 51-14899

Seven sketches of Iowans, most of them women; with a memoir of the author's father, a Congregationalist minister, which partly explains the author's outlook on life.

Booklist 48:171 Ja 15 '52

"With perhaps one exception, these stories have little air of plot contrivance; vexing, even tragic family situations are portrayed, with an art that conceals art, as working themselves out. And in all the stories, and in the memoir, too, the accent is on love and courage." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 174:469 Mr '52 230w

"This device of the first person observer, in the hands of so fine an artist as Ruth Suckow, carries so great a conviction that there is no change of tone when the writer turns to telling of her own parents. The characters of the stories are nearly all women, unspectacular and normal women in rural or small town settings. The tragedy, pathos, and nobility of these lives are here expressed simply and movingly, by a woman who believes in the courage and dignity of the human race and whose belief is contagious." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 6 '52 440w

Kirkus 19:641 N 1 '51 150w

"Baffling for the classifier but a fine book that is worth the effort and one that may be generally purchased." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:47 Ja 1 '52 130w

"Ruth Suckow continues to write with inexhaustible interest and gentle perception of people who cherish keepsakes of the past—laces, ribbons, snippets of cloth, faded photographs—a 'squirrel's hoard' of sentiment recalling events that need no reminder. . . . The seven pieces that Miss Suckow has chosen for publication after a long interval are still in this mood, and some are hardly stories at all, merely glimpses of people in the twilight of life whose destiny was dramatic in detail but not fashioned for climax." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ja 13 '52 420w

"Art and religion merge in this memoir revealing Miss Suckow's gift for communicating faith in life. The seven stories that precede the Memoir have the quiet realism that distinguishes all Ruth Suckow's work. As always, she is more interested in capturing the essence of character than in plotting a story. She has the gift of summing up a life in a few phrases, as in 'Aunt Amy,' the story of a middle-aged woman to whom nothing had ever happened: 'She was a princess in a tower of innocence whose door had never been opened.' In the old, the shelled, the mediocre, in seemingly drab, colorless lives, Ruth Suckow finds color and drama." Anzia Yezierska

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '52 600w

New Yorker 27:82 Ja 12 '52 30w

SUGRUE, THOMAS. Catholic speaks his mind on America's religious conflict. 64p $1 Harper 282.73 Catholic church in the U.S. Church and state in the U.S. 52-6283

"Forthright discussion of the evils of sectarianism in social and spiritual life and an earnest plea for religious toleration among all creeds." Bookmark

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 20w

"Only a Roman Catholic who deeply loves his church could have written such a book as this. . . . Many Roman Catholics have doubtless been deeply shocked to see one of their own number appear to turn state's evidence and say things that are expected to be said only by critics on the outside. Some Protestants have been moved to chortle with glee. In my judgment, these are both mistaken attitudes. On the Protestant side, I am in no chortling mood as I read Sugrue's penetrating criticism of his own church's preoccupation with the externals of religion and the manifestations of institutional power and importance, but am stirred to ask whether, mutandis mutatis, Protestant churches do not succumb to the same temptations." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:433 Ap 9 '52 800w

"This little book arouses diametrically conflicting reactions. A Catholic reviewer must be struck with the author's sincerity and should be moved by his zeal. The objective of easing religious tensions in this country is obviously both timely and laudable. And I, for one, am in hearty agreement with Mr. Sugrue that the Church and American Catholics could do with a lot more self-criticism (although the author has to spoil this point by contending that there simply isn't any). But where did Thomas Sugrue get his notions about theology?" E. S. Skillin

SUGRUE, THOMAS—Continued

+ — Commonweal 55:644 Ap 4 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:221 Mr 15 '52 320w

"Brief but important statement bound to arouse some discussion, healthy and otherwise." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 77:481 Mr 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by W. H. Kilpatrick

Nation 175:34 Jl 12 '52 500w

"I feel that Sugrue's book is disappointing not because it is critical—vigorous, straightforward inquiry was never more needed than it now is—but because it dashes along in a trigger-happy sort of way, disposing of grave and complex issues by blowing them up with verbal gunpowder to the tune of 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' . . . Perhaps when Sugrue has calmed down a bit he will remake his book into something worthier of comparison with what his critical forebears have long since written." G. N. Shuster

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 13 '52 900w

"The 'conflict' which Thomas Sugrue dwells upon most in this troubled and impressionistic essay resides in his own mind and memory and heart. The book is more autobiography than argument, and its colors and tones and meanings present a private history more convincing than an objective and comprehensible criticism of how American Protestantism and Catholicism confront each other." Philip Burnham

N Y Times p33 Mr 30 '52 900w

New Yorker 28:144 Ap 5 '52 200w

School & Society 75:254 Ap 19 '52 20w

SULLIVAN, HERBERT, and FLOWER, SIR NEWMAN. Sir Arthur Sullivan; his life, letters and diaries, new and rev ed 306p il $3 British bk. centre

B or 92 Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour

"This is the quasi-official, 'family' biography of Sir Arthur, written as it was by a nephew in collaboration with the distinguished stylist Newman Flower. . . . The jacket claims the volume to be a 'new and revised edition' and on the verso of the title page 'Second edition 1950.' This appraiser compared it with the New York edition, c1927, and found a new paragraph on p.268, a slightly altered index, the earlier bibliography lacking, and the number of illustrations considerably reduced." (Library J) First published in 1927 (Book Review Digest 1928).

"Highly readable and, of course, a 'must' for any true Savoyard." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:720 Ap 15 '52 90w

"Based on the Sullivan family archives and the personal recollections of the composer's nephew and long-time companion, as well as on other available materials, this book does offer much that is interesting and valuable on the composer's career and, to some extent, on his personal life. . . . There is little critical or even merely objective discussion of Sullivan's music. The revisions in this 'second edition' are difficult to discern, unless elimination of bibliography, of Arnold Bennett's inconsequential introduction, and of all but seven of the thirty-one illustrations can be placed under that heading." William Lichtenwanger

Music Lib Assn Notes 9:401 Je '52 170w

"An excellent biography written in 1927." Newman Levy

+ Sat R 35:19 Mr 29 '52 60w

SUMMERS, HOLLIS SPURGEON. Brighten the corner, 217p $2.75 Doubleday

52-5542

Novel about life in a rural Kentucky Baptist parsonage.

Booklist 48:265 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:185 My '52 20w

Kirkus 20:44 Ja 15 '52 160w

"This is pretty fluffy and slight but also rather engaging. It is fiction not personal history. Chiefly useful for younger teen-agers just learning about adult books."

Library J 77:1216 Jl '52 40w

"Transmuted into fiction, these fond recollections lack sparkle. Nonetheless, the book is a pleasant period piece for those who were young with the Ford touring car." Charlotte Capers

N Y Times p23 Mr 16 '52 190w

"In this autobiography of childish memory Mr. Summers writes well. His frame of reference is excellently maintained, and his characters walk the streets of every town in Central Kentucky, and crowd the pews of the Baptist churches every Sunday morning." T. D. Clark

+ Sat R 35:18 Ag 16 '52 750w

SUMMERS, ROBERT EDWARD, ed. America's weapons of psychological warfare. (Reference shelf) 206p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

301.152 Propaganda, American. Psychological warfare 51-8338

"The latest addition to the Reference Shelf examines our nation's entry into the field of psychological warfare. The Smith-Mundt Act of 1948 created the legal basis for this new function of the State Department and it is the purpose of this volume to describe the media, the strategy and the difficulties encountered in entering a field already so well controlled by Russia. There are a number of critical evaluations of the effectiveness, to date, of our new weapon and suggestions for its extension and improvement." Current Hist

Booklist 48:172 Ja 15 '52

Current Hist 22:230 Ap '52 80w

"Important compilation of expert opinion."

+ School & Society 74:416 D 22 '51 20w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 76:201 S 27 '52 90w

SUMNER, JAMES BATCHELLER, and MYRBACH, KARL, eds. Enzymes; chemistry and mechanism of action. 2v in 4pts v 1 pt 1 $14.50; v 1 pt2 $13.50; v 2 pt 1 $14.80; v 2 pt2 $14 Academic press

612.0151 Enzymes (51-95)

This is an encyclopedic work consisting of 78 chapters written by 75 authors, all authorities in their field. "The general plan of the work is to present information about the various classes of enzymes in separate chapters, most of which use the following subdivisions: historical introduction, occurrence, preparation and purification, activity determination, kinetics, general properties and significances. Hydrolytic enzymes are the principal subject of Volume I. . . . Volume II deals primarily with the enzymes of cellular respiration and metabolism." (U S Quarterly Bk R)

"It is impossible to evaluate in a brief review all these chapters. The organization of the individual discussions is clear and shows a surprising extent of uniformity. The general caliber of the discussions is high and the documentation adequate. The illustrations and printing are excellent." Z. I. Kertesz

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:284 Ja 5 '52 420w

(Review of v 1, pt 1)

"The book is not only of great value for reference purposes, but also provides informative reading to chemists and biologists. The tendency of most of the authors to enumerate work without weighing its importance is no doubt based on the wish to be fair and objective." G. T. Cori

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:284 Ja 5 '52 800w

(Review of v 1, pt2)

Reviewed by O. A. Bessey

Am Chem Soc J 74:4982 O 5 '52 650w

(Review of v2)

"Volume I of 'The Enzymes' appears to contain all the good features of value in a reference book." Henry Tauber

+ Chem & Eng N 29:3113 Jl 30 '51 300w

(Review of v 1, pt2)

Reviewed by Henry Tauber
Chem & Eng N 29:4208 O 8 '51 350w
(Review of v2, pt 1)

Reviewed by Henry Tauber
Chem & Eng N 30:1232 Mr 24 '52 150w
(Review of v2, pt2)

N Y New Tech Bks 36:8 Ja '51 (Review of v 1, pt 1)

N Y New Tech Bks 36:36 My '51 (Review of v 1, pt2)

N Y New Tech Bks 36:70 S '51 (Review of v2, pt 1)

"Completion of this monumental work, planned in two volumes of two parts each, will fill a critical gap in scientific monographs. No extensive compilations of the knowledge of enzymology have previously appeared in the English language, and the rapid developments in this field have outdated the valuable earlier German ones. The editors of The Enzymes deserve much commendation for organizing the efforts of over seventy contributing specialists into an outstanding volume."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:317 S '51 400w
(Review of v 1)

"As the most extensive and modern work of its kind, The Enzymes, now completed, will undoubtedly be the outstanding reference work in the field for some time."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:207 Je '52 280w
(Review of v2)

SUMNER, WILLIAM LESLIE. The organ: its evolution, principles of construction and use. 436p il $10 Philosophical lib.

736.6 Organ [52-2152]

A history of the pipe organ, and its structure. Contains photographs, technical line drawings, and an appendix giving various organ specifications, a bibliography and index. The author was formerly organist at King's College, London.

Christian Century 69:1225 O 22 '52 230w

"Covers far too much ground, and covers it unevenly. But it is written by a cultivated man and responsible scholar, former organist of King's College, London; and can not be dismissed lightly even though a more firmly integrated discussion might have been more welcome. . . The only recent book of its kind, and a real addition to the field." C. K. Miller
Library J 77:1513 S 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Granville Hill
Manchester Guardian p4 My 13 '52 240w

"Mr. Sumner is a purist who knows what he is writing about and writes it well." David Hebb

+ Sat R 35:34 O 25 '52 550w

"Dr. Sumner is an authority on organs who has spent more than a quarter of a century in diligent research, and he has given us a most readable book. Containing in himself the qualities of scientist, historian and artist, he presents his facts in a form that is partly historical, partly constructive and partly practical."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p471 J1 18 '52 450w

SUMPTION, MERLE RICHARD. How to conduct a citizens school survey. 209p $3.95; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

379.15 Educational surveys 52-10023

"Dr. Sumption, associate professor of education and executive officer for field services, University of Illinois, has provided a survey plan, flexible in design, that should be readily adaptable to different types of communities and different types of educational problems." (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 48:373 J1 15 '52

School & Society 75:336 My 24 '52 40w

SUNSET MAGAZINE. Patio book. 174p il $3 Lane pub. co.

717 Garden ornaments and furniture

52-7391

"An idea of what this book covers: Patio size, shape and orientation; integration with the house and garden; paving (important and, to many, one of the most useful sections of the book); fences, walls, sun-shelters, together with wind control, cooling and even, if you want to go that far, methods of heating. Along with this there is discussion of related subjects—swimming-pool construction, barbecues, hillside patios and terraces, electrification, patios especially for children's play, and even the matter of lawns. There is a separate discussion of the Hawaiian 'lanai,' in which the terrace comes at least halfway indoors, and there is good advice on outdoor furniture." (San Francisco Chronicle) No index.

"This is a beautiful book that will make every reader want to move to California, for that is where it was prepared and published and most of its illustrations photographed. However, it should have nation wide appeal and value, for its ideas can be adopted anywhere." Anne Douglas

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 18 '52 70w

"The kind of information the reader can use. The discussion of materials for patio surfacing, indeed, can be worth the price of the book many times over. There are 185 photographs of patios, terraces, lanais and details connected with them. . . It is an idea-book. A reader could very well wind up with a patio not exactly like any shown here, but at the same time owe his final shape, design and arrangement to the stimulating effect of looking at the photographs and reading the text. As a matter of fact that's one of the most valuable phases of any 'How To' book; the good ones like this are 'self-starters.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 26 '52 450w

SUTCLIFF, ROSEMARY. Armourer's house; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 235p $2.50 Oxford

52-11471

Story of a little Devonshire girl who comes to live in London in the time of Henry VIII. For grades 5 to 7.

Booklist 49:21 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Isabelle Lawrence

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 16 '52 110w

"Girls who loved The Queen Elizabeth Story are sure to like this as well or better." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 28:326 O '52 120w

Kirkus 20:503 Ag 15 '52 140w

"Fascinating details of life of the time are interwoven with the moving narrative. . . Particularly valuable for schools." Elizabeth Mitchell

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 80w

"So rich in Tudor detail that one begins to long for homely things like Football Pools, road-drills and Heinz's baked beans. . . Prolonged reading has the effect of a double helping of cherry conserve pasty thickly daubed with honey." Arthur Marshall

New Statesman & Nation 42:628 D 1 '51 390w

"Such a fully documented story of old England is not for every younger American reader, but it will be richly rewarding to those attracted by the delightful child on the jacket. For Hallowe'en, the story of Tam Lyn is well retold, and much else of song, folk-lore and history is woven in. Girls of about twelve who like 'Master Skylark' will like this, too, even though it is less adventurous." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 12 '52 220w

"The richly detailed atmosphere of Henry VIII's London is the main attraction of this book. For young people this is unlikely to be enough. The author's emphasis upon background deprives the story of full development; there are numerous events but no real plot."

SUTCLIFF, ROSEMARY—Continued
 Irene Smith

N Y Times p32 O 26 '52 140w

Sat R 35:62 N 15 '52 190w

"The artist remains decorative, though not perhaps at his best; the writer is disappointing. Miss Sutcliff has already over-pretified history, and the habit here seems stronger."

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 N 23 '51
 170w

SUTTON, HORACE. Footloose in Switzerland; with photographs mostly by the author. 342p $4 Rinehart

914.94 Switzerland—Description and travel
 52-5556

An informal guidebook to Switzerland, which contains much specific information. Illustrated with many photographs taken by the author. Index.

Booklist 48:245 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:182 My '52 30w

Kirkus 20:21 Ja 1 '52 190w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison
 + Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by Beach Conger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 27
 '52 290w

"The author is a pleasant, witty, inquisitive, and knowledgeable traveling companion. He never feels constrained to display his erudition, so he happily eliminates any material which doesn't stand up as good copy or as useful information in planning or thinking about your visit to Switzerland." Richard Joseph

+ Sat R 35:34 Ap 19 '52 750w

SUTTON, RICHARD JOHN, comp. Stamp collector's encyclopaedia. 263p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

383.22 Postage stamps—Dictionaries and encyclopedias
 51-14234

For experts and beginners this is a "new, concise, illustrated encyclopedia, alphabetically arranged, its contents including a brief gazetteer, a glossary, coinages, populations and translations of many foreign phrases and words found on stamps." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

"Should be a real addition to all collectors' equipment."

+ Kirkus 19:172 Ag 15 '51 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 F 17 '52
 30w

SWANSON, WILLIAM ELMER. Camping for all it's worth. olympic ed 154p il $2.95 Macmillan

796.54 Camps and camping
 52-9878

Written for the amateur camper with a limited budget. Contents: Hiking; Travel; Woodland shelters; Tents; Cabins; Building details; Heating; Light; Cooking stoves; Food; Fishing; Sanitation; Protection of camp; Boats; Medical and personal care; Miscellaneous.

"Filled with succinct, practical details. . . . Innumerable, helpful drawings."

+ Bookmark 11:233 Je '52 20w

"To anyone who has done much camping, the suggestions in this book may seem a little obvious, but to a total greenhorn they may still be news. Possibly the best hands in which to place this handbook would be those of the eighth-grader or young high school student with a yen for the outdoors, but not much knowledge of woodcraft." R. H. D.

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 7 '52
 140w

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE, SWARTHMORE, PENNSYLVANIA. William J. Cooper foundation. Civil liberties under attack, by Henry Steele Commager [and others; Clair Wilcox, editor]. 155p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press

323.4 Civil rights. Liberty
 51-12905

"This small volume presents six lectures, originally delivered at Swarthmore College, by men who have written and dealt practically with various aspects of civil liberties. The titles and authors are as follows: The Pragmatic Necessity for Freedom, by Henry Steele Commager; Progress in Civil Rights, by Robert K. Carr; Investigations of Radicalism and Laws Against Subversion, by Zechariah Chafee, Jr.; Security, Secrecy, and the Advancement of Science, by Walter Gellhorn; Censorship and the Arts, by Curtis Bok; Freedom in Education, by James P. Baxter III." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The present volume is evidence that the convictions and the determination that characterized the men who signed the Declaration of Independence still exist after a century and three-quarters. It should be read by every citizen who has children who will have to live in tomorrow's world." R. H. Gabriel
 + Ann Am Acad 280:185 Mr '52 550w

Booklist 48:60 O 15 '51

Foreign Affairs 30:674 Jl '52 20w

Reviewed by Harold Lancour

Library J 76:1805 N 1 '51 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 8 '52 90w

Reviewed by David Spitz

New Repub 126:17 Ja 21 '52 360w

"Anyone interested in the vital question of preservation of our liberties—and that ought to include every thinking American—should take the brief time necessary to read this little book. It may help to bring into focus some of the subtler and less obvious problems affecting our basic rights. It may also help us to realize that there is nothing static about liberty; it has to be rewon in each generation." J. B. Oakes

+ N Y Times p26 N 4 '51 900w

Spring'd Republican p8D F 17 '52
 120w

Reviewed by George Soll

Survey 88:138 Mr '52 650w

"For the general reader no less than for the specialist, the lectures offer a most useful single source from which to gain insight and perspective on civil liberties today."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:69 Mr '52 210w

SWEARINGEN, RODGER, and LANGER, PAUL FRITZ. Red flag in Japan; international communism in action, 1919-1951. 276p $5 Harvard univ. press

335.4 Communist party of Japan. Communism—Japan. Japan—Politics and government 52-6434

"Two scholars (one of Harvard, the other of Columbia), with established competency reinforced by Japan background and language facility, have used official party documents, government reports and a multitude of other sources to compile this record of the Japanese Communist Party. Following a concise description of prewar activities, they devote the last three quarters of the book to the period since 1945, with important sections on organization and administration, biographies of leaders, case histories of converts, and the national and international aspects of the problem." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Kazuo Kawai

Ann Am Acad 284:220 N '52 380w

"Here is a book which should be a best seller. It is, without doubt, the best book ever written on the Japanese Communists—one of the two most important of Asia's rising Red movements. It is unquestionably among the top two or three serious books on post-war Japan. And, because of the authors' unusual access to official information—including that of the Japanese Communist Party itself—it is one of the most exhaustive and revealing books ever written on the Communist Party of any single nation. And yet, because it may be classified as a 'research' or scholar's book, it will probably escape the general public attention which it deserves." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 21 '52 550w

"To anyone who wants to understand the strengths and weaknesses of Communism in what is, even after a catastrophic military defeat, the strongest non-Communist nation in Asia, Red Flag in Japan is highly recommended. There is no other work on the same subject which can compare with it in scope and objectivity." H. C. Hinton

+ Commonweal 56:370 Jl 18 '52 550w

Reviewed by C. B. Rasmussen

Current Hist 23:126 Ag '52 220w

Foreign Affairs 31:167 O '52 40w

"Earmarked as a valuable source book for the study of a critical topic," H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:1190 Jl '52 110w

"Written by two careful and competent scholars who are well equipped for their task by residence in Japan, by unusually rich sources of information and by exceptional linguistic equipment, it derives a special authority from this rare combination and is a unique study." George Sansom

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Jl 20 '52 1650w

Reviewed by Lindsay Parrott

N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '52 700w

"The book is a model of scholarship, if not of easy reading."

+ New Yorker 28:85 Ag 23 '52 200w

Reviewed by J. B. Cohen

Sat R 35:28 O 4 '52 650w

Reviewed by G. E. Taylor

Yale R n s 42:158 autumn '52 1700w

SWEENEY, FRANCIS W. Bernardine Realino: renaissance man. 173p $2.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Realino, Bernardino, Saint

51-14334

Biography of the Italian Jesuit, Father Bernardine Realino, who was born in 1530, and died in 1616. He was beatified in 1896 and canonized in 1947. The last forty-two years of his life were spent in the Italian city of Lecce. Index.

Reviewed by F. K. Murphy

Cath World 175:395 Ag '52 100w

"No one need complain about Father Sweeney's brilliant biography of the very human Bernardine Realino. The author has put to good use the standard studies by Germier and Venturi. More than that, he has essayed his own interpretation and has caught the warmth of a saint who belongs as much to the twentieth as to the sixteenth century." H. G. J. Beck

+ Commonweal 55:379 Ja 18 '52 330w

"This reviewer had never heard the name of Bernardine Realino until this book came to his desk. The list of new Roman Catholic saints grows very long. Yet one would not gainsay the value of a life like Realino's, even though the miraculous element will often make the non-Catholic reader stumble. . . . Father Sweeney writes very gracefully indeed, and one may guess that his scholarship is thorough and reliable." J. W. Brush

Crozer Q 29:249 Ap '52 270w

Kirkus 19:563 S 15 '51 210w

"The book shows well St. Bernardine's work with the rich and poor, his powers of prophecy, the work with prisoners and galley slaves, the many miracles attested and unattested, and the long hours in the confessional, in which the saint's crowning characteristic, kindness, shines out. The Renaissance and life in 16th century Italy are also well portrayed. Recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 130w

"Father Sweeney, a member of the English faculty at Boston College, has written a mellow, sunny book about this golden headed boy whose native city voted him a saint before he died, and to whom, with due ceremony, the Mayor and corporation came as he lay in agony, to ask him to continue to defend and protect Lecce in heaven as he had on earth." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Times p29 Ja 13 '52 270w

Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 60w

SWEET, WILLIAM WARREN. Religion in the development of American culture, 1765-1840. (History of religion in America, v2) 338p $3.50 Scribner

277.3 U.S.—Church history. U.S.—Civilization 52-9960

"Volume two of a proposed four-volume History of Religion in America, of which Religion in Colonial America [Book Review Digest 1942] was volume one. The central theme is the part played by organized religion in the transit of civilization westward. The period is that during which the American churches were most atavistic." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:724 Je 18 '52 350w

"It is impossible even to summarize the contents of the book, for every page is factually packed with significant details which are essential in their own right. The book is both a reference volume and an adventure story, in which any religionist may look for his own communion's part in the total tale and find a sane, urbane and sympathetic bird's-eye view of the particular and the inclusive terrain of American faith and works." P. E. Osgood

+ Churchman 166:12 Jl '52 150w

"Students of American history, and especially church historians will find this book illuminating. A well documented book, it is nevertheless very readable."

+ Kirkus 20:277 Ap 15 '52 160w

"Recommended for all libraries except the smallest public ones, and special libraries with no interest in this subject." E. H. Weeks

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ag 17 '52 170w

School & Society 75:400 Je 21 '52 20w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:280 S '52 210w

SWENSON, ERIC PIERSON. South Sea shilling: voyages of Captain Cook, R.N.; il. by Charles Michael Daugherty. 224p $3.50 Viking

B or 92 Cook, James—Juvenile literature 52-8716

Partly fictionalized biography of James Cook, the eighteenth century English explorer. Index. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 48:285 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 27 '52 140w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 140w

"This account of his three long journeys, 1769-1779, is a distinguished one, representing a splendid collaboration of author and artist, who share a real excitement about their subject. The artist's full-page drawings, decorative head and tailpieces and pictorial maps add much to the narrative." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:180 Je '52 130w

+ Kirkus 20:160 Mr 1 '52 110w

"Highly recommended." C. W. Field

Library J 77:911 My 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 11 '52 240w

SWENSON, E. P.—Continued

"Mr. Swenson writes in a brisk, masculine fashion. He evokes the sense of danger as Cook sails through the Strait of Le Maire, the excitement of discovery when he touches the unknown shore of Australia and the green islands of Hawaii." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '52 140w

"The drawings in black and white are first-rate, and the story brings alive an era of adventure and discovery."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '52 150w

"Eric Swenson's story of Captain Cook, with special emphasis on his voyage to Tahiti on the Endeavour with the British scientists, is notable for its vitality and its clarity."

+ Sat R 35:29 Je 28 '52 160w

Wis Lib Bul 48:180 Jl '52

SWIGGETT, HOWARD. Extraordinary Mr Morris. 483p $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Morris, Gouverneur 52-5540

A full length biography of Gouverneur Morris, one of the leaders of the American Revolution. The work is based on extensive use of materials only recently made available to scholars.

Booklist 48:280 My 1 '52

"Mr. Swiggett's style is suggestive of a documentary film. . . Morris and his contemporaries are allowed to speak for themselves as much as possible; when Mr. Swiggett abridges he has attempted to express his abridgement in a selection of words from his sources. He has marked carefully the places where he disputes earlier biographers or offers conjectural interpretation of motives or unknown circumstances. So well does the biography succeed in creating the illusion of closeness to the events that a reader may regret that Mr. Swiggett did not publish an edition of the diaries rather than this biography. One hopes that he will complement this volume by a scholarly edition of Morris' 1794-1816 diaries." G. R.

+ Canadian Forum 32:141 S '52 360w

Reviewed by Clarence Ver Stegg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 1 '52 200w

Kirkus 20:26 Ja 1 '52 230w

"With fine technique Swiggett interweaves, in chronological sequence, biographical details of various persons, so that contacts with Morris are smoothly and understandingly made. Has the flair of an historical novel on a grand scale. Well documented without index numbers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:527 Mr 15 '52 140w

Nation 174:436 My 3 '52 80w

"One of the favorite charges against Gouverneur Morris was his love of high society and famous people, his weakness for feeling in touch with great events. On his behalf, his biographer has it too. It sounds like a small thing, but by continuous indulgence in it Mr. Swiggett has come perilously close to ruining a book based on much careful research, warmed by special enthusiasm and sympathy and written (when he relaxes) in a smooth, interesting, and attractive style. He is an incorrigible name-dropper." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 30 '52 700w

"Mr. Swiggett restores a great and charming American to the place he rightfully occupies in the pantheon of the founders. . . Unfortunately, Mr. Swiggett adheres to a modern school of historical composition, which rations sentences, generally two to a paragraph and often only one at a time. The effect is a series of staccato jerks. . . Yet, if one can adjust his reading tempo to Mr. Swiggett's rapid-fire paragraphing, he finds a narrative full of color and movement. . . Though the book glides over surfaces, and appears to have been written in too great haste, it does make Morris real." Perry Miller

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 30 '52 800w

"Mr. Swiggett has extracted not only the flavor of his subject but that of many of his subject's great contemporaries, whom he presents as creatures of flesh and blood instead of those familiar statues so boring to schoolboys."

+ New Yorker 28:148 Ap 26 '52 190w

Reviewed by Merrill Jensen

+ Sat R 35:14 Ap 26 '52 800w

Time 59:102 Ap 28 '52 1200w

"Historians will regret the relatively scanty treatment accorded in this book to Morris' important activities as member of the Continental Congress, as public financier, envoy to Europe, senator from New York, and land magnate. A wider reading public will, however, enjoy this very rapidly paced biography of the most dashing of the founders of this country."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:120 Je '52 230w

SWINBURNE, ALGERNON CHARLES. Lesbia Brandon [with] an historical and critical commentary, being largely a study (and elevation) of Swinburne as a novelist, by Randolph Hughes. 583p $7.50 British bk. centre

[52-42046]

"The existence of an unfinished Swinburne novel, allegedly too scandalous for publication, has long been known. The manuscript, or most of it, was acquired by the eminent forger Thomas J. Wise, and is now in the British Museum. Several sets of galley-proof, pulled when Swinburne had most of the fragments put into type in 1877, have also survived. In these forms, a number of critics and biographers have read it, but this is the first time it has become available to the public. . . As it now exists, 'Lesbia Brandon' consists of seventeen chapters, or scraps of chapters, plus some fragments which Mr. Hughes believes to be parts of two other unwritten novels." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"This bulky volume, one-third Swinburne and two-thirds editor, raises [a] question—that of the value of relevance, restraint and urbanity in literary controversy. That Mr. Hughes collectively trounces the great majority of his predecessors in the Swinburne field as grossly incompetent, shockingly ignorant and without sense of letters, and warns off anyone who thinks of entering the lists in their defence—this calls for some protest alike on the score of good manners and common sense." John Bryson

New Statesman & Nation 44:190 Ag 16 '52 650w

"Despite Mr. Hughes' eloquence in its praise, it seems unlikely to bring either new fame or new scandal to its author." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 O 12 '52 800w

"My own view is that Swinburne should not be judged by so fragmentary a piece of writing. 'Lesbia Brandon' remains a literary curiosity interesting mainly to Swinburne scholars, and perhaps to those professionally interested in the psychology of sex. Indeed, it is difficult to see how the current English controversy on the authenticity of the work can fail to create far more interest than the novel itself." H. F. West

N Y Times p4 N 30 '52 700w

"Mr. Hughes was faced with a task which would have defeated most scholars. Only great devotion could have made an accurate text in collecting and collating from chaos. Homage must be rendered to an enterprise so successful. Readers may feel gratitude to Mr. Hughes for rescuing this literary curiosity from oblivion. Whether the ghost of Swinburne will thank him from the shades is doubtful. In some respects he has done the poet a disservice by an advocacy which outruns the bounds of criticism. . . Mr. Hughes is in raptures over Swinburne's style, but it is never clear what he means by style." Philip Tomlinson

+ Spec 189:104 Jl 18 '52 900w

"On all that concerns Swinburne he speaks with unequalled authority. Nobody, least of all Gosse or Wise, has taken such pains to give a correct account of what Swinburne did and felt and said. . . Hero worship is not so common in our time that we must dismiss it with a patronizing smile, and Mr. Hughes deserves our respect for coming so gallantly to the rescue of his hero and for the great devotion and scrupulous care which he has given to this work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p434 J1 4 '52
650w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Bookman's London. 161p il $3.50 Doubleday

$20.9 Literary landmarks—London. London—Description. London—Intellectual life 52-6362

Essays on authors, publishers, and book-sellers of London's past and present. Illustrated with old prints and cartoons, and with photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

"Mellow, entertaining chapters."

+ Bookmark 11:233 J1 '52 20w

"Both the memories and the history are as informal as tho Frank Swinnerton were sitting comfortably before his own fire, with the reader opposite, talking about the subject which interests both—for readers who are not interested in books and writers would scarcely pick up one titled 'The Bookman's London.' Those who are interested will find it filled with gentle charm, with a great deal of vivid information about writers concealed in casual comment." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 25 '52
380w

Reviewed by J. A. May

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 19 '52
550w

"A fresh and admirable work." J. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 J1 6 '52
280w

"This is a rambling, chatty, discursive account, with more than fifty plates illustrating the text. The Londons of Shakespeare, of Defoe, of Lamb, and of Dickens blend into one another and emerge as the London of Wells, Bennett—and Swinnerton." A. E. Jensen

+ N Y Times p10 My 25 '52 450w

"Though it contains many rewarding fragments, the work as a whole is a hodgepodge affair. There are, however, fifty or more photographs, etchings, and drawings that are definitely attractive, and these excel the text in interest."

+ New Yorker 28:142 My 24 '52 140w

"A very nice little mood-book for bibliophiles, for those who like to look back at the writers of a generation or so ago, and for those who have a personal fondness for literary London." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 17 '52
400w

"Although he writes with charm and accuracy about the literary men of earlier times, so have many other commentators; the chief value of his book lies rather in his first-hand reminiscences, or those he has heard firsthand, about writers and publishers. . . A few years ago in these pages I greeted a collection of Mr. Swinnerton's essays with a loud razz; I am happy now to sound a loud huzza." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R 35:55 O 4 '52 200w

"A work no living being other than Swinnerton could have written. Its fault, if it has a fault, is to be over-lavish with historical fact and personal reminiscence, to have, in other words, attempted too much. . . Apart, however, from a certain unevenness, deliberately risked by the writer when he agreed to the scope suggested for his work, The Bookman's London is an impressive tour de force."

+ Spec 188:60 Ja 11 '52 500w

"Both a scholarly and a quickening discourse; and one who follows the journey with [Swinnerton], round and about, might be unaware that this guide has some decided opinions of his own, not invariably of general acceptance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p788 D 7 '51
750w

SYDNOR, CHARLES SACKETT. Gentlemen freeholders; political practices in Washington's Virginia. (Institute of early American history and culture. Publications) 180p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975.5 Virginia—Politics and government

52-3497

Chronicle of the political practices in Virginia in colonial times, when George Washington was young. The author is dean of the graduate school of Duke university. Index.

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 13 '52
380w

"Mr. Sydnor's admirable study, written with thorough knowledge and ease of manner, is filled with entertaining and apt quotations and gives a fine picture of the Virginia aristocracy in action. . . The considerable amount of information in this small volume will make it an extremely useful addition to history collections." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1658 O 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by Carl Bridenbaugh

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 7 '52
650w

Reviewed by R. B. Morris

N Y Times p20 O 19 '52 550w

"An authentic piece of Americana, dealing with aspects of Colonial life about which little has been written."

+ New Yorker 28:116 S 27 '52 200w

Reviewed by J. M. England

Sat R 36:21 Ja 10 '53 230w

Reviewed by L. W. Labaree

Vale R n s 42:287 winter '53 360w

SYKES, GERALD. Center of the stage. 290p $3 Farrar, Straus

52-12286

A novel of life in a Long Island summer home in 1950. The principals are Carlotta, a middle aged actress, brilliant and dominating, and her quiet, reserved husband, who returns home after several years of government work in Europe.

Kirkus 20:422 J1 15 '52 140w

"This is one of the most exciting novels I have read in a long time, probably because it is written realistically but with complete lack of sensationalism. . . It is both brilliant and believable. Recommended for paid circulation and for fiction and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 100w

"Mr. Sykes has mastered his craft as well as comprehended and illuminated the society he lives in. Perhaps the real virtue of the American way of encouraging too many writers and supporting too many publishers is that once in a while this system permits the emergence of a writer of the stature of Mr. Sykes." H. C. Webster

+ New Repub 127:22 D 15 '52 250w

"If you don't mind Mr. Sykes' habit of being tirelessly significant and of doting over his characters' epigrams as though they were prizewinning angora cats, 'The Center of the Stage' can give you an evening of reading fun. Come to think of it, it's a good comedy of mannerisms." Frederic Morton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 21
'52 650w

"Of the novelists now coming to the fore, Gerald Sykes is one of the most promising and exciting. He is that rare being, a thoroughly civilized writer, devoid at the same time of preciousness and affectation. With his keenly observant eye, he could be a satirist as savage as Evelyn Waugh or the early Huxley. But his sharp insight is wedded to a quiet compassion. He sees his characters in all their incredible complexity and depths of good and evil; he faithfully reports what he sees." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p5 S 28 '52 400w

"Filmy and often tedious novel."

+ New Yorker 28:126 S 20 '52 90w

SYKES, GERALD—Continued

"The secondary characters are wittily drawn but more superficially realized than are the principals, and the roman à clef effect created by giving some of them characteristics and histories paralleling those of some prominent contemporary figures was distracting to this reader. In general, however, Mr. Sykes has again produced a witty and readable novel with some overtones of meaning which are thought-provoking if not quite as serious as some of the characters seem to believe." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ — Sat R 35:42 S 20 '52 200w

"A quiet and thoughtful novel. . . While the book is written in too muted a pitch, it is clearly a serious effort to describe, and prescribe for, the Carliottas of this world. Novelist Sykes has an enviable gift for writing cultivated dialogue and intelligent reflection; his book, even in its limp spots, reveals the controlling presence of a grown-up mind."

+ — Time 60:94 S 29 '52 350w

SYLVESTER, ROBERT. Indian summer. 310p $3 Random house

52-5142

Frank Linken, the central figure, is a New York night club proprietor of forty-six. In a period of boredom he falls in love with a young girl who comes into his cafe. The novel tells the story of the effects upon Frank, his wife, and the girl.

"In bare outline it sounds like just another Indian summer escapade, but it is a good deal more than that. Sylvester's central situation, which might easily evoke either laughter or scorn, arouses neither, but full sympathy instead." J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 20 '52 350w

"Mr. Sylvester has, indeed, composed a narrative so spiritless and turgid, so inadequately conceived and superficially characterized, that one is at a loss to comprehend the motives which prompted Random House to issue it. Its dullness is mitigated by no acuteness of social perception, that awareness of nuance which gives at least the illusion of significance to the work of, say, someone like Mr. John O'Hara." Richard Hayes

— Commonweal 56:394 J1 25 '52 550w
Kirkus 20:289 My 1 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 13 '52 480w

"Mr. Sylvester has conceived some pretty sturdy characters. Abe, Mollie, and Sue are as nice a group of people as you'd like to see involved in a triangle. You believe in them and, at least while reading about them, you find yourself concerned with how they are going, to work out their concerns and conflicts."

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 9 '52 200w

SYME, RONALD. Champlain of the St Lawrence; il. by William Stobbs. 189p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 Champlain, Samuel de—Juvenile literature 52-5070

"A brisk biography in which Champlain's discoveries, his relations with the Indians, and his efforts to colonize New France reveal his independence in thought and intrepid vigor in action." Library J

Booklist 48:253 Ap 1 '52

+ Kirkus 20:77 F 1 '52 180w

"Unfortunately, no map. Highly recommended for ages 12-16. Of particular value in schools." E. S. Mitchell

+ Library J 77:542 Mr 15 '52 90w

"Fine, short biography." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 6 '52 120w

"Mr. Symes writes briskly, evocatively, recreating both the personality of the man and the rugged life in the silent forests of seventeenth-century Canada and New England." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 J1 13 '52 90w

Wis Lib Bul 48:180 J1 '52

SYME, RONALD. Columbus, finder of the New World; il. by William Stobbs. 70p $2 Morrow

Columbus, Christopher—Juvenile literature 52-5933

A brief fictionized account of the life and voyages of Christopher Columbus. For grades 4 to 6.

Booklist 49:53 O 1 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p8 O 16 '52 120w

"For young children this makes an exceptionally fine introduction to the reading of biography. The dramatic events of Columbus' life and voyages are presented in simple but live narrative and illustrated with drawings of distinction." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:417 D '52 50w

"A tremendous pull and push of diagonals in William Stobbs' drawings almost overpoweringly conveys the urgency of the period."

+ Kirkus 20:408 J1 15 '52 120w

"Handles a familiar story capably." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 100w

"It is a pictorial record as well as a text. The story is told in a direct, simple wording with clear continuity."

+ Sat R 35:72 N 15 '52 50w

SYMONDS, JOHN. Great beast; the life of Aleister Crowley. 316p il $4.50 Roy pubs.

B or 92 Crowley, Aleister [52-28519]

"Aleister Crowley, poet, mountaineer, and drug addict, was reviled by the World's Press, and expelled from Italy and France because of his notorious black magic masses and sexual orgies. On the other hand, Crowley gathered about him a devoted following of scholars and seekers after the spiritual life who believed him to be a Messiah. . . This book is an account of an unbelievable life." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Symonds has done his work pretty thoroughly; but, except as a pathological study, the life of Aleister Crowley was hardly worth writing." A. D. Howell Smith

+ Hibbert J 50:307 Ap '52 220w

Kirkus 20:615 S 15 '52 140w

"For larger libraries which collect biographies of British eccentrics or works on theosophy and Rosicrucianism." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 77:1652 O 1 '52 120w

"In his account of the Beast's career he has relied very largely on Crowley's own account of himself, rather than on any less biased evidence; there is no attempt at exegesis, the material is churned out in the clumsiest of Sunday-paper journalese; and all that emerges from this book is a clumsily drawn portrait of a particularly nasty psychopath." Jocelyn Brooke

— New Statesman & Nation 42:674 D 8 '51 250w

Time 60:114 O 13 '52 600w

"Mr. John Symonds writes in a jaunty, journalistic style, but his book covers the ground and conveys a good deal of information."

Times [London] Lit Sup p803 D 14 '51 900w

SYMONDS, JOHN. Magic currant bun; il. by André François. 38p $2 Lippincott

52-8790

Adventures of a small boy in Paris. He stole a currant bun (with good intentions) and found himself in the midst of some fantastic adventures.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran

Atlantic 190:100 D '52 230w

Booklist 49:75 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 5 '52
150w

Commonweal 57:170 N 21 '52 20w

Kirkus 20:402 J1 15 '52 130w

"Recommended for the picture-book age."

Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 77:1519 S 15 '52 60w

"The pictures match the tale in mood, giving us Paris and its people in a very modern style that is masterful and amusing, but generally quite hideous. It combines the brilliance of this artist's teacher, Picasso, with the exaggerations of a clever child. We welcome such art work for an individuality much needed in modern illustrating. But, as with his work for 'Little Boy Brown,' we think the book it produces more a collector's item than one for the average American younger child." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 14 '52
200w

"The story has all the tense complications of a dream and the same inexplicable reasonableness, plus a deadpan humor seldom found in dreams." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 S 14 '52 190w

"Involves a number of very French and very amusing characters. We wonder, though, how much it will all mean to American children who have never seen Paris. The tendency to burlesque is strong and it includes Pierre himself, who looks in some of the drawings like a decrepit little old man." M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:47 S 20 '52 130w

SYMONS, JULIAN. Charles Dickens. (English novelists) 94p $2 Roy pubs.

823 Dickens, Charles 52-3614

"Starting with the thesis that Dickens can be shown to have exhibited 'marked manic-depressive traits' throughout his adult life, [the author] traces with great skill the effects for good and ill of these traits upon 'the radical-social strand, the comic and sentimental strand, [and] the horrific strand' in everything Dickens wrote." N Y Times

Booklist 49:107 N 15 '52

"A brisk and acute survey of Dickens." N. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 19 '51 250w

"All in all, this little book must be considered the best short introduction to the greatest of English novelists that exists; indeed, it is so good that one hopes Mr. Symons will one day give us a full-length study."

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:471 O 27 '51 240w

"One of the best short critical studies in English." H. C. Webster

+ N Y Times p30 N 9 '52 300w

"All this would not be worth a critic's indignant attention were it not that this book belongs to a series which has provided good introductions to most of the great novelists. The book, therefore, is addressed to inexperienced readers, and it is essential that they shall not conclude that madmen make the best authors or, alternatively, that genius is merely a more convenient form of derangement... Anyone turning to this book for serious judgements on the novels will do so in vain." J. M. Cohen

— Spec 187:550 O 26 '51 550w

SYMONS, JULIAN. Thomas Carlyle; the life and ideas of a prophet. 308p $3.50 Oxford B or 92 Carlyle, Thomas 52-11589

"Julian Symons is a photographer. For him Carlyle is a sort of 'Lost Leader,' and the task he sets himself is to decide why the man whose French Revolution rose to 'a paean of praise as the life-giving forces in society sweep away the detritus of the past and look forward hopefully into the future' deteriorated into the dull panegyrist of Frederick the Great, whose biography cost him thirteen painful years. It is possible not to share Mr. Symons' belief in the life-giving forces behind the Reign of Terror, and yet to deplore Carlyle's retreat into dullness and frustration." Spec

"In spite of the dark colors, and the author's disagreement with Carlyle's ideas, this is a fascinating story, told with sympathy and a sense of drama. One agrees that tho Carlyle 'rubbed the wrong lamps, he was a great magician.'" F. E. Paverty

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 12 '52
250w

Reviewed by Theodore Maynard

Commonweal 57:43 O 17 '52 420w

"For all but the scholars, this intelligently written and well planned evaluation of 'the life and ideas of a prophet' should suffice."

+ Kirkus 20:481 Ag 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 18 '52
200w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis

New Repub 127:22 S 29 '52 240w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:70 Ja
19 '52 1550w

"It is as a biographer, rather than as a critic of Carlyle's ideas, that Mr. Symons is at his best. One must turn elsewhere for an adequate exposition of Carlyle's thought, but aside from a few trivial blemishes he has written what is, all things considered, the best short biography of that burly, unkempt old genius." George Genzmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 S 21 '52
1000w

Reviewed by Donald Barr

N Y Times p18 O 5 '52 800w

"Mr. Symons resists the temptation, which has seduced so many biographers, to deal with Carlyle in terms of his long, unhappy marriage; instead, he meets his man face to face, reviews his major works (the essay on 'The French Revolution' is particularly fine), and re-creates a human being."

+ New Yorker 28:128 S 20 '52 190w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 17
'52 700w

"Mr. Symons focuses his attention upon Carlyle as a person rather than as a thinker, and with this aspect of his subject he is fully competent to deal. . . For the most part Mr. Symons makes his way through the jungle of nineteenth-century social history with ease and adroitness. . . For readers unacquainted with Carlyle, Mr. Symons provides an engaging first glimpse. For those already well versed in things Victorian, he presents little in the way of fact or interpretation that will not already be familiar." G. N. Ray

+ — Sat R 35:18 Ag 23 '52 700w

"It is possible to distrust Mr. Symons' ready-made psychology and yet see that some sort of thwarted hatred of humanity underlies all Carlyle's ranting, that his worship of the hero was founded on a contempt for the common man. Mr. Symons' portrait, indeed, is in many ways well-proportioned and illuminating. Yet his colouring is false." J. M. Cohen

+ — Spec 188:180 F 8 '52 400w

"His Thomas Carlyle, if competent rather than inspiring, has the merit of being honest, straightforward and, within its terms of reference, intelligent. It adds nothing to what was already known about Carlyle, but expounds him in contemporary terms."

Times [London] Lit Sup p124 F 15
'52 1300w

Reviewed by A. D. Culler

Yale R n s 42:316 winter '53 390w

SYMPOSIUM ON THE THEORY OF ELECTROMAGNETIC WAVES, NEW YORK UNIVERSITY, 1950. Theory of electromagnetic waves; a symposium. 393p il $6.50 Interscience

537.5 Electromagnetic theory 51-14016

"A collection of original papers on advanced topics in electromagnetic research. As the titles of the papers show, a diverse range of topics is covered. Most of the papers, the work of scientists engaged in advanced research, are addressed primarily to scientists of similar rank." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 37:5 Ja '52

"The problems investigated, and the analytical manner of handling them, make the symposium report a well-rounded exposition of the recent trend of research in electromagnetic wave propagation which will be of more than passing interest and usefulness to physicists and applied mathematicians. For many scientists, the value of the book will be enhanced by the inclusion among the authors of many of the famous pioneers in the field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:210 Je '52 190w

SYSONBY, FREDERICK EDWARD GREY PONSONBY, 1st baron. Recollections of three reigns; prepared for press with notes and an introductory memoir by Colin Welch. 509p il $5 Dutton

B or 92 Great Britain—Court and courtiers. Victoria, queen of Great Britain. Edward VII, king of Great Britain. George V, king of Great Britain 52-8262

"Frederick Ponsonby served the English royal family most of his life. He did everything exceedingly well and was always amusing. His work was important—assistant private secretary to Keeper of the Privy Purse from Queen Victoria to George V—but he did it with a light hand and never made himself important. His greatest contribution was to Edward VII. Sir Frederick died three months before his beloved King George. He had asked that this manuscript be not published until after the death of the last of Queen Victoria's children." Library J

"Rarely has history been served up so well. Ponsonby must have been one of the raconteurs of his era. We are lucky that so many of his tales were written down before death finished the career that he made into a great vocation—that of being a good, faithful and charming servant of his king." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 176:237 D '52 250w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 5 '52 550w

"With the Coronation of a British queen in the offing, several books on Britain's Royal Family are making their appearance, but few are likely to be as delightfully readable as Sir Frederick Ponsonby's memoirs." W. H. Stringer

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 25 '52 700w

"All in all, Ponsonby's bits and pieces recreate the almost fairytale atmosphere of royal life in years that are farther away than they seem chronologically. It's fun—and it will have a certain cachet."

+ Kirkus 20:437 J1 15 '52 220w

"It is timely, enlightening, and a far too short account of the little things that make the best social history. There is no discussion of political situations. For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1189 J1 '52 130w

Reviewed by John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 42:761 D 29 '51 1100w

Reviewed by Robert Pearsall

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 21 '52 700w

"His recollections are illuminating. They reveal royalty in action, dealing with ministers of state, resolving delicate constitutional problems, handling other potentates. The whole is shot through with pointed anecdotes and the humors of life in the Royal Household. A man of discretion, Sir Frederick repeats no scandal." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p38 S 28 '52 800w

"Despite its occasional stuffiness, the large opening section devoted to Queen Victoria, for whom Sir Frederick acted as Equerry, Assistant Keeper of the Privy Purse, and Assistant Private Secretary, should have an irresistible fascination for the lover of personal reminiscences. He does not mince words, and is far from flattering... At times, the chronicle becomes positively hilarious, assuming the proportions of pure farce. Nonetheless, Sir Frederick considers Victoria a great Queen. It is odd to note that with her death and the accession of Edward VII, and, later, with the accession of George V, his story progressively diminishes in humor and vitality. Quite unintentionally, the work turns into a satire on the King and Queen business."

+ New Yorker 28:129 S 20 '52 230w

"Here in Sir Frederick's book is a priceless record of a time, a way of life which has, one imagines, changed so that Edward VII would not recognize it. The appalling boredom of many of the functions, the uselessness, the triviality, and the petty malice will strike most readers as intolerable. But Sir Frederick—badly treated though he was by a senior colleague—contrived somehow to enjoy himself." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R 35:13 S 27 '52 650w

"Apart from the wit and gaiety there is permanent value in his memoirs; and no greater disservice could have been done to his book than the decision to sell a 'pre-view' to a Sunday newspaper. Some books may respond to such treatment in some newspapers. The effect of the pre-view on Sir Frederick's was to suggest a total triviality which is not there, a vulgarity to which he was a stranger. The soul of his book was sold for a mess of pottage, but the now published memoir will redeem it in due course." John Gore

+ Spec 187:743 N 30 '51 1250w

Spring'd Republican p11C O 19 '52 440w

Time 60:108 O 6 '52 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p776 D 7 '51 900w

T

TABER, MRS GLADYS (BAGG). When dogs meet people. 237p il $3 Macrae Smith co.

Dogs—Legends and stories 52-6765

Contents: You can't buy a dog; The unwanted one; Never a dull moment; The man at the gate; Little goat; Honey and the home front; Best of breed; Christmas gift; Just a little havoc; Sometimes a man needs a friend; Top hat goes to town; The champion comes home.

Booklist 48:315 Je 1 '52

"Delightful stories... A sure knowledge of dogs plus a nice twist of plot keep these from falling into sentimentality." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 28:342 O '52 40w

"Gladys Taber has an extensive following for her non-fiction. To many her short stories will be a surprise, but they have the same warmth and emotional quality, backed by knowing her dogs."

+ Kirkus 20:201 Mr 15 '52 190w

"Dog lovers, generally a sentimental group, will probably welcome this collection of twelve stories... Miss Taber has a limited number of plot devices, but she works these for all their worth. The ugly duckling theme is apparently her favorite."

Sat R 35:42 Ag 9 '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:169 J1 '52

TALBOT, KATHRINE, pseud. See Barker, I. E. L. G.

TALLANT, ROBERT. Louisiana purchase; il. by Warren Chappell. 183p $1.50 Random house

973.46 Louisiana purchase—Juvenile literature 52-7229

"This stirring tale of the Louisiana Purchase and its importance in the development of the security and growth of the United States recounts the part played by Jefferson, Livingston, and Monroe in the purchase, the history of Louisiana under the French and Spanish, the importance of New Orleans, and the Mississippi River as a shipping lane." Library J

Kirkus 20:459 Ag 1 '52 120w

"Altogether this makes a colorful and exciting chapter in American history that has not been previously told in a separate title for 10-14 year-olds." Elizabeth Burr
+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 50w

"Provocative historical writing for children."

+ New Yorker 28:205 D 6 '52 30w

TALLANT, ROBERT. Pirate Lafitte and the Battle of New Orleans; il. by John Chase. (Landmark bk) 186p $1.50 Random house

B or 92 Lafitte, Jean—Juvenile literature. New Orleans, Battle of—Juvenile literature 51-13894

An account, in fiction form, of all that is known about the pirate, Pierre Lafitte. "His bold undertakings are evaluated in the light of the customs of the times and places in which he lived. Emphasis is on background material and events in his career that explain why he was on the American side in the Battle of New Orleans." (Library J) For grades 5 to 7.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 11 '51 70w

"A disappointing, and, we think disturbing departure from the generally wholesome emphasis of the Landmark Books."

— Kirkus 19:440 Ag 15 '51 200w

"A carefully written, exciting account of a mysterious and controversial figure. . . There is nothing comparable in print on this episode in our history, and this book is recommended for all libraries." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 77:68 Ja 1 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

N Y Times p36 N 11 '51 50w

"An authentic and well-written account of one of the most colorful episodes in our history. The background is so skillfully handled that events fall naturally into their proper perspective, leaving a lasting impression of the period." M. P. Allen

+ Sat R 35:53 F 16 '52 190w

Wis Lib Bul 48:44 Ja '52

TALLANT, ROBERT. Ready to hang; seven famous New Orleans murders. 241p $3 Harper

364.15 [364.38] Murder 52-5475

True stories of seven New Orleans murders, covering in time from 1833 to 1933.

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 27 '52 490w

"Garish reading."

Kirkus 20:176 Mr 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '52 450w

New Yorker 28:152 Ap 26 '52 120w

"All seven of these narratives are excellently done. . . Mr. Tallant knows his job, and readers who like true crime writing will look forward to more in the same field from him." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 12 '52 400w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:47 My 24 '52 30w

"Most of [the stories] are unfamiliar, and real additions to murder collections." R. F. H.
+ Spring'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52 200w

Wis Lib Bul 48:181 Jl '52

TALMON, J. L. Rise of totalitarian democracy [Eng title; Origins of totalitarian democracy]. 3v v 1 366p $4 Beacon press

321.6 Democracy. Totalitarianism (52-8914)

"[The study] seeks to show how totalitarian ideas grew out of Utopianism; how the extreme democrats of the French Revolution turned into the most ruthless dictators." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"A book of great wisdom which I recommend to anyone who not only wants to broaden his knowledge of the French revolution but also wishes to understand the basic—that is the intellectual—causes of the modern world crisis. Dr. Talmon's work meets the highest academic standards." S. T. Possony
+ Ann Am Acad 282:177 Jl '52 750w

"A valid theme, admirably worked out."

A. J. P. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 6 '52 200w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 44:578 N 15 '52 850w

"J. L. Talmon, London-trained professor in the Hebrew University at Jerusalem, makes clear in this admirable analysis of political ideas that what he calls 'democratic totalitarianism' is, like our 'balanced' moderate, empirical democracy, a child of the eighteenth-century belief in the potential goodness and reasonableness of man." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '52 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p350 My 30 '52 2000w

TALON, HENRI ANTOINE. John Bunyan, the man and his works. 340p il $5 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Bunyan, John [51-5400]

A biography and a study of the literary works of Bunyan, by a French scholar, professor of English literature at the University of Dijon. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:195 F 15 '52

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 3 '51 90w

"There are two Bunyans—Bunyan the convert, the soul in torment, 'the chief of sinners' as he proudly called himself, the persecuted leader of a local resistance movement, and Bunyan the prose artist. The critic must decide where to lay the emphasis, which Bunyan he wants to study. M. Talon bravely attempts to cover both and he brings all the academic virtues to the task. His book is very thorough, very scholarly, very fair; what it fails to do, like so many of its kind, is to stimulate. It answers the question why Bunyan wrote but not why we should read him. If only M. Talon were as good on Bunyan's prose as he is on his thought." Anthony Curtis

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:105 Jl 28 '51 850w

"Professor Talon gives as brilliant a picture of the social and the theological background as of Bunyan's religious experience and his artistry. His book is a product of knowledge tempered by wisdom, pleasantly written, ably translated and a most remarkable contribution by a Frenchman to English letters." J. M. Cohen

+ Spec 187:274 Ag 31 '51 800w

TANNENBAUM, LIBBY. James Ensor [pub] in collaboration with The Institute of contemporary art, Boston, The Cleveland museum of art, The city art museum of Saint Louis. 27p il col il pa $4 Museum of modern art

759.9493 Ensor, James, baron 51-14662

"Catalog of first definitive showing in this country of brilliant and fantastic work of Belgian painter who died two years ago. Pictures loaned by Belgian government to be shown in New York, Boston, Cleveland, and St. Louis. Text is study and running commentary on interesting colorist who lived 'to be his own heir' and to 'speak to the men of tomorrow.' Reproductions of paintings, drawings, and etchings illustrate the grim, satiric, realistic, and mystical elements of the artist's work. Notes and chronology." Library J

"Important because there is little at hand on James Ensor."

+ Library J 77:53 Ja 1 '52 90w

"A well-prepared and produced monograph."

+ New Repub 125:21 D 10 '51 100w

New Statesman & Nation 43:282 Mr 8 '52 150w

TANOUS, HELEN NICOL. Designing your own dress patterns. 208p il $5.95 Bennett

646.4 Costume design 51-13744

"A comprehensive guide for the home dress-maker in making patterns for women's clothes. Directions for basic patterns and variations. A few children's garments are included." Booklist

Booklist 48:118 D 1 '51

"Designing Your Own Dress Patterns is a presentation of pattern drafting that is rather clever. . . The book should be especially helpful to the person who makes her own patterns as well as to the designer who registers her ideas through the medium of pattern manipulation. It should help many users of patterns, including teachers and students, to understand them better." M. S. Morse

+ J Home Econ 44:304 Ap '52 110w

TANSILL, CHARLES CALLAN. Back door to war; the Roosevelt foreign policy, 1933-1941. 690p $6.50 Regnery

327.73 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Foreign policy. World politics 52-9622

"Author, professor of American diplomatic history at Georgetown University, has several important monographs to his credit. . . Now he presents a [volume] on origins of Second World War, based on extensive research as he had access to confidential files of State Department and also to many other important sources of information. . . Prof. Tansill sketches briefly American foreign policy from Versailles to 1933, then gives many details and biting comments on actions and attitudes of F. D. Roosevelt, Hull, Stimson, Ambassador Dodd, etc." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Pratt

Am Hist R 58:150 O '52 1200w

Booklist 48:312 Je 1 '52

"I know of no volume which has appeared since the war ended that provides the literate citizen with so clear an account of the forces that have been at work since the ending of World War I. I cannot refrain from noting what seems to me to be one defect—and that is the author's omission of any sufficient account of the immense anti-war movement which preceded Pearl Harbor. . . This observation, however, must not be taken as a serious blemish on this clear, faithful and honest—and absorbing—narrative of the tremendous and tragic epoch through which we have lived." J. T. Flynn

+ Cath World 175:235 Je '52 450w

Reviewed by George Morgenstern

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 11 '52 700w

"Opinions and deductions apart, here is a highly documented narrative of events which will have to be taken into account by anyone who wants to form an intelligent judgment on the ticklish questions that are here raised." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 69:1226 O 22 '52 160w

Current Hist 23:63 Jl '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 31:150 O '52 90w

"His material is usually sound, but his evaluation is often open to question. . . His observations are often intriguing, but caution as to his conclusions is advisable, since he is sometimes as unjust as Charles A. Beard was in his last works. This book should be read in conjunction with William Langer's recent Challenge to Isolation, which does more justice to F.D.R. and his collaborators. Recommended for larger libraries, but only with serious reservations." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:788 My 1 '52 220w

"No student of the subject today can honestly support the partial and inadequate accounts of our pre-war diplomacy current during the war. Books like the present volume have contributed toward the questioning of assumptions and a reconsideration of accepted attitudes. They are therefore valuable, even to those who cannot accept their conclusions or approve their methods." C. C. Griffin

Nation 175:305 O 4 '52 1400w

Reviewed by Michael Straight

— New Repub 126:23 Je 16 '52 220w

Reviewed by Basil Rauch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 1 '52 1150w

"When he is at his best, he is unfolding a diplomatic narrative with considerable skill, and with an excellent command of his sources. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Tansill is not always at his best. . . Yet let it be cheerfully conceded that speculative though Mr. Tansill's judgment must be, the discussion which he will stimulate may be useful. The only real pity is that he writes with such bitterness. Urbanity is one of the first duties of scholars." Dexter Perkins

+ N Y Times p3 My 11 '52 1300w

Reviewed by F. H. Harrington

Pol Sci Q 67:620 D '52 800w

"This book is not history. It is awkward special pleading." M. S.

— San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 27 '52 410w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R 35:13 Ag 2 '52 950w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springfld Republican p17A Je 15 '52 350w

"Dr. Tansill's judgments and attributions of motives will certainly cause disagreement. . . A reader of Back Door to War who lived through nineteen-thirties will at times have the feeling that Dr. Tansill must have in mind a set of events different from those the reader remembers."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:290 S '52 300w

Reviewed by Charles Griffin

Yale R n s 42:127 autumn '52 1000w

T'AO CH'EN. Sixty poems; tr, introduced, and annotated by William Acker. 157p $3.50 Thames

895.11

"[The translator] has wisely concentrated on a translation of sixty poems by the 'Hermit' T'ao Ch'ien (365-427 A.D.) who lived 'in a sort of medieval period between classical China, on the one hand, and the cultural and political renaissance of the T'ang dynasty on the other.' The translations are simple texts, expertly carrying into English a poetry beyond the need of commentary." N Y Times

"Most Chinese poetry, Mr. Acker points out, is reflective and meditative; T'ao Ch'ien is gentle, quiet, a little repetitive, now and then platitudinous, occasionally troubled, more often composed and serene. Whether he draws pictures or conclusions, his work is done simply." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 175:217 S 13 '52 50w

"The complexity of the background is one reason for Mr. Acker's brief but packed book deserving careful reading and the highest praise. At first reading, the poems should be taken simply in themselves, without reference to the monstrous growth of explication that has grown up around them. However, no reader should leave Mr. Acker's pages without studying the scholarly material that surrounds, even though it cannot embellish, his translations." Robert Hilley
+ N Y Times p22 S 7 '52 350w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 7 '52 110w

"Ta'o Ch'ien was a writer of immense originality, the perfecter of the standard five-syllable metre and the creator of Chinese poetry as it existed down to the present century. About 150 of his poems survive, so that what Mr. Acker gives us is a considerable proportion of his work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p482 J1 25 '52 800w

TAPPAN, PAUL WILBUR, ed. Contemporary correction. 434p il $5.50 McGraw 365.6 Prisons 51-7319

A symposium which "is designed to cover the major aspects of contemporary correction. The subject matter is extensive, covering as it does such widely diversified matters as general administration and policy, the varied types of correctional institutions, the highly specialized methods employed in them, and the field of treatment outside the institution." (Pref) Index.

"As is inevitable in a book of this type, there is considerable unevenness in presentation as well as some overlapping and redundancy in treatment, but on the whole, the editorial job has been sufficiently well done to eliminate most of the objections to this procedure. As is to be expected, the authorities frequently give their opinions and interpretations in connection with many problems about which there is little or no factual information. The emphasis is on contemporary practice, or on what is believed to be desirable practice at the present time." G. B. Vold
Ann Am Acad 280:208 Mr '52 400w
School & Society 75:383 Je 14 '52 20w
Social Forces 30:483 My '52 110w

"There is full discussion of such new conceptions as Reception or Classification and Receiving Centers now so integral a part of the modern prisons, the new Casework Services being developed at present through Service Units in some leading institutions, and Group Therapy. In the discussion of Crime Prevention, we have a brilliant disquisition on our confused goals, but little presentation of the processes now used in the field. In the consideration of Parole, there is an excellent analysis of federal parole with consideration of selection and supervision in general but less attention is given to parole preparation." L. T. Stern
+ Survey 88:238 My '52 400w

TASAKI, HANAMA. Mountains remain. 408p $3.75 Houghton
52-5256

"Novel of post-war, occupied Japan, giving good insight into the social and political forces operating. Concerns Ko-ume, a geisha, her brother Takeo, children of simple country folks, and their relations with the son and daughter of Count Imayama, Minoru and Michiyo. Although the love stories, one happy and the other tragic, dominate the novel, the chief attraction of this book for readers in this country will be the substantial picture it gives of the breakdown of the old patterns and the development of the new in Japan today." Library J

Booklist 49:14 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52 400w

"Mr. Tasaki has no ax to grind. He simply presents his country and its people as he sees them in this very important period of transition. And he does it with seriousness, with meticulous attention to detail and with power, at times, to be deeply moving." Edith Weigle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 3 '52 320w

Reviewed by Takashi Oka
Christian Science Monitor p7 J1 24 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:306 My 15 '52 280w

"Recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 77:1012 Je 1 '52 90w

"Even top-notch reporting by foreigners cannot hope to expose the inner thoughts and feelings of the Japanese. A novel by a native can do that. Mr. Tasaki's book, even apart from its literary merits, is valuable evidence on the state of mind of the Japanese." Bradford Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 J1 27 '52 750w

"'The Mountains Remain' is broad in scope, dealing with political, social, human and economic problems. Its abundance of subject-matter does not, however, overcrowd the tapestry. It all has a bearing and is woven into a strong fabric. This broad pattern allows the reader to enter a variety of homes, meet a wide selection of people and encounter thought patterns in varying stages of advancement from feudalism up to the present day. One thing that will not please the Western readers at first sight is Mr. Tasaki's dialogue. If it sounded other than stilted and sterile to us... it would be less than valid. The novelist's technique allows us to know the feeling behind the words." Trudie Osborne
+ N Y Times p5 J1 27 '52 500w

"Mr. Tasaki's writing is stilted, but his feeling for his people is so strong, and his desire to explain them so determined, that there are times when his story seems to write itself."

+ New Yorker 28:74 Ag 9 '52 100w

"'The Mountains Remain' will do much to help American readers get a better idea of life in the new Japan. And its story, I believe, will keep the reader interested and sympathetic while he is making the discoveries the author wants him to make." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 J1 27 '52 700w

"The book glows with flashes of philosophical observation that are doubtless the result of much soul-searching on the part of its author. After so many reports on postwar Japan from our own point of view, it is enlightening to have this highly objective report from a Japanese. The author might well have been tempted to present, with demolishing delicacy, the unfortunate impression many of the conquerors must have made upon the Japanese, but Tasaki is concerned with human problems far too tendering for there to be room for easy ridicule." L. H. Crockett
+ Sat R 35:17 Ag 9 '52 600w

+ Time 60:82 Ag 4 '52 430w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

TASHLIN, FRANK. World that isn't. 76p il $2 Simon & Schuster

741.5 Humor, Pictorial 51-14037

"There's very little reading matter in the book, but a lot to look at. It is an ingenious history of the world, which had been created only this morning, and as man found it complete with juke boxes and subways, Hollywood cuties and ice cubes, fur coats and cigaret lighters, high prices and scarcities, atom bombs and taxes. The Age of Exploration then began and man discovered nature hidden behind the signboards. Then he began to question the sense of everything—all that he had seen and heard and learned about this world he was destined to live in. Then he did something about it." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Told with simplicity and brilliance of wit that make Mr. Tashlin one of the greatest

TASHLIN, FRANK—Continued
drawing board satirists of our day." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 18 '51 170w

"In prose all this is dark and serious; on Mr. Tashlin's drawingboard it comes out as a hilarious sequence with tears of laughter and of pain intermixed. There is very little reading matter and there are not too many drawings, but the text and the pictures can be gone over again and again, each time with more profit. The doublepage delineation of modern religion is worth all the books in print concerning Christian sectarianism; the sketch of an American husband at table with his family should not be looked at unless strong drink or smelling salts is at hand. Please, Mr. Tashlin! Have mercy! A book so easy to read shouldn't be so hard to forget." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 23 '51 410w

"Although Mr. Tashlin's major premise may be a shade dubious—he thinks we all have far too many luxurious items in the lavish gadgetry of sin—it leads to an enjoyable sort of paradise on earth, without poison ivy (we hope), and obviously without guns. 'The World That Isn't' is a jest that's not." C. P.
+ N Y Times p14 D 2 '51 150w

TATUM, ELBERT LEE. Changed political thought of the Negro, 1915-1940; with a foreword by Lawrence A. Davis. 205p $3 Exposition

323.1 [325.26] Negroes—Politics and suffrage 51-11870

Contents: The political significance of Negro migration to the North, 1915-1940; The political significance of the great migration of the Negroes to the North, 1915-1940; The Negro and the Republican party, 1865-1932; The Negro and the Republican party, 1932-1940; The Negro and the Democratic party; The Negro; Independent of party labels. Bibliography. No index.

"Those who are searching for a definitive work on the political thought of Negroes in the United States will not find it in this volume... In this reviewer's opinion, the one contribution which the present study makes is that of pointing up the need for a scholarly investigation of Negro political ideas in America from 1619 to 1952." J. E. Miller
— Ann Am Acad 282:141 J1 '52 650w

"A very readable and informative book."
Jack Abramowitz
+ Social Educ 16:297 O '52 350w

TAX, SOL, and others. Heritage of conquest: the ethnology of middle America. 312p maps $5 Free press

572.972 Acculturation. Ethnology—Central America. Ethnology—Mexico 51-13787

"In September, 1949, the Viking Fund gathered together in New York City thirty-one scholars from Mexico, Guatemala, Puerto Rico, Germany and the United States. These men and women had been working, many of them for ten or twenty years, among various peoples of Mexico and Central America. . . . Now they sat down for a week and talked. No 'papers' were presented. Field notes and other documentation were not at hand. They exchanged the kind of information and of impression which is slow to get printed and which indeed often never gets printed. . . . This book represents the conclusions tentatively reached at the conference and later threshed out in correspondence." N Y Times

"The verbatim discussion creates the disadvantage of diffuseness and the advantage of completeness. In the main, the latter outweighs the former, and the volume is the better for it." A. R. King
+ Am Anthropol 54:533 J1 '52 1050w

"This remarkable product of group effort contains eleven signed chapters by twelve specialists." C. P. Loomis
+ Am Soc R 17:643 O '52 700w

"This is an unusual volume. . . . It is to be hoped that it sets up a model for publications of similar type in other social science fields, for it tells more about the existing state of knowledge and represents more truly the method of science than do the usual neatly packaged symposia." E. H. Spicer
+ Ann Am Acad 282:162 J1 '52 550w

"All in all this constitutes an invaluable vade mecum for the traveler in, say Mexico or Guatemala who has any intellectual interests at all. It is both authoritative and mercifully brief. Those who have historical leanings will find excellent background material; those who are curious about ritual dances can turn to Kurath's chapter; the psychologically inclined not only get a systematic treatment from Gillin but also many other diverse and intriguing facts and clues scattered throughout the text." Clyde Kluckhohn
+ N Y Times p30 F 24 '52 470w

Reviewed by Oscar Lewis
Sat R 35:34 Ag 9 '52 600w

"The volume will be of greater interest and value to professional anthropologists and students than to laymen."

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:267 S '52 210w

TAX INSTITUTE, INCORPORATED. Taxation and business concentration, by J. Keith Butters [and others] symposium conducted by the Institute, June 15-16, 1950, New York. 264p $5 The institute

336.2 Taxation—U.S. U.S.—Industries and resources 52-9753

"This volume contains twenty-one papers presented at a symposium conducted by the Tax Institute in New York City, 1950, on the question of the effect of the present tax structure upon industrial concentration. The majority of the papers were given by lawyers or representatives of various business groups; only three of the speakers were unaffiliated economists." J Pol Econ

"The economist is likely to find the volume disappointing, more so than the paucity of basic data absolutely require. Yet the volume is stimulating. It does bring some of that knowledge we need so badly—the experience of men facing the actual problems of the business world. In fact, I can strongly recommend the volume for anyone who has the slightest doubt that today's high taxes produce many unexpected and undesirable results. Yet the scholar will yearn for more depth, more thoroughness." C. L. Harriss
+ Am Econ R 42:972 D '52 1100w

"It may be well to forewarn the prospective reader that this symposium, despite its many merits, does not make any major theoretical contribution to the field. The volume does, nevertheless, serve a useful purpose, and it deserves to be widely read." Leo Fishman
+ Ann Am Acad 284:189 N '52 350w

"Throughout, where views conflict, both sides are presented and the reader is permitted to resolve the conflict for himself. Though at times technical in its terminology, this study should prove valuable not only for the specialist but for the casual reader as well, as the problems with which it deals are of concern to every member of our society."
+ Columbia Law R 52:322 Je '52 170w

"As a readily available reference for particular points of view on the issues involved, the volume serves a purpose. But its contribution toward advancement of knowledge of the effects of the tax structure upon concentration is slight." J. F. Due
+ J Pol Econ 60:357 Ag '52 400w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 77:1307 Ag '52 70w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:276 S '52 210w

TAYLOR, ALFRED EDWARD. Socrates. 192p $2.50 Beacon press
B or 92 Socrates 51-12869

A biographical sketch of Socrates, published in this country in 1951, the 2,350th anniversary year of his death. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by Ernest Nagel

Ann Am Acad 230:217 Mr '52 400w

Christian Century 69:1353 N 19 '52
180w

"Taylor's book is well worth reading." H. L. Crosby

+ Crozer Q 29:215 Ap '52 1000w

"A biography of the Athenian philosopher is a rather ambitious undertaking, considering the sparsity of source material and the contradictory nature of what little there is, but the author, a professor of philosophy at Edinburgh University, is well equipped for the task and has done an endless amount of scholarly detective work in reconstructing Socrates from the fragments that have come down to us."

+ New Yorker 27:80 D 22 '51 160w

School & Society 74:320 N 17 '51 20w

TAYLOR, ALLAN, ed. What Eisenhower thinks, interpreted [by the editor]. 186p $2.75 Crowell

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David. Campaign literature, 1952 52-7032

"The purpose of this book is to present through Eisenhower's words—selected for their bearing on particular topics—his attitude toward some of the most vital problems confronting this nation today. It does not pretend to be a complete picture of the Eisenhower mind; it is based entirely on the thoughts that he has put on the public record. Some necessary biographical background has been added. The result, it is hoped, may help the reader to understand more clearly the kind of leadership to be expected from Dwight Eisenhower." (Pref) No index.

Reviewed by M. S. Stedman

Ann Am Acad 282:127 J1 '52 420w

Booklist 48:223 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:130 Mr '52 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 16 '52
250w

Christian Century 69:782 J1 2 '52 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 28 '52
600w

Reviewed by Roger Shaw

Churchman 166:16 Ap 1 '52 130w

Foreign Affairs 30:674 J1 '52 20w

"An excellent scissors and paste job, with competent editorial transitions."

+ Kirkus 20:102 F 1 '52 210w

"This is a political book; and regardless of one's political stand, it is therefore a poor book, flat and without taste, shadow and no substance. . . The book will be in wide demand more so if Eisenhower is nominated." R. S. Taylor

— Library J 77:208 F 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by W. V. Shannon

New Repub 126:20 Je 9 '52 300w

"What Eisenhower thinks—what he thinks about the great issues relevant to his candidacy—is undoubtedly the most gripping question of the day. Mr. Allan Taylor has done an expert and impartial job in gathering together the general's public utterances, editing them so as to make them fall under major headings, and providing a restrained but enlightening commentary. His book deserves to be widely read." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 24 '52
1050w

"Here is an attempt to give us General Eisenhower's philosophy by drawing on and interpreting his public statements. It is scarcely a blinding illumination. . . The trouble, though, is that we can get no idea of how he would apply his convictions to specific national problems. Nor do we know how he reconciles what he thinks about A with what he thinks about B, and in his case, as in the case of most candidates, some of his ideas need plenty of reconciling." R. H. Rovere

N Y Times p3 F 24 '52 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 30 '52
160w

"Altogether Eisenhower's public utterances are well packaged under Mr. Taylor's editorial hand, but the General's opinions on numerous items of public debate are still private." P. R. Levin

Sat R 35:49 Mr 15 '52 300w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52
550w

TAYLOR, ARCHER. English riddles from oral tradition. 959p $10 Univ. of Calif. press

398.6 Riddles

51-2752

"Professor Taylor has listed all the riddles in oral circulation as recorded by collectors from earliest times in all English-speaking countries. There are 1,749 such riddles; Professor Taylor has classified them according to method of statement—that is, comparison of thing to person, or plant, comparison of thing to another thing, and the like—and given an index of answers or solutions. . . A preliminary discussion considers each riddle and its central idea as it appears in other languages throughout the world, from Abyssinian to Zulu." U S Quarterly Bk R

"A formidable work of scholarship of nearly a thousand pages, which nevertheless makes very good hunting; undergraduates will enjoy ferreting out the frequent erotic riddles. . . For folklore and linguistic collections." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 76:777 My 1 '51 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 4 '52
120w

"The bibliography of riddle collections for all languages is probably definitive. In sum, what Child did for the English folk ballad Professor Taylor has done for the humbler riddle; but the work of two generations of folklorists since Child has given Professor Taylor access to worldwide materials."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:184 Je '51 220w

TAYLOR, DENIS. Measurement of radio isotopes. 118p il $1.50 Wiley

539.7 Isotopes. Radioactivity

52-6151

"Because of the usefulness of radioactive materials in various fields of scientific research, many scientists who have only slight familiarity with radioactivity are being compelled to learn something about the subject. Here is a book written for scientists that covers the high spots and can be read in a single evening. It deals with measurements, measuring instruction, and health hazards, subjects that are of primary interest to the intended audience." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book will serve as a good introduction for the chemist who has little idea as to the possibilities and problems of the measurement of the more common radioisotopes with which he wants to work. Parts of the book may also serve as review information for the experimenter in the nuclear field. Its main limitation seems to be that it is too condensed to make a good reference book on the subject and yet on the other hand it is somewhat specialized for the reader with only a cursory interest in the field of radioactivity or tracer reactions." W. W. Meinke

+ — Am Chem Soc J 74:3460 J1 5 '52 310w

"Dr. Taylor, head of the Electronics Division at Harwell, has made an interesting and timely contribution to the well known Methuen's monographs on physical subjects." Jack Schubert

+ Chem & Eng N 30:1453 Ap 7 '52 170w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:26 Mr '52

TAYLOR, GEORGE ROGERS. Transportation revolution, 1815-1860. (Economic history of the United States, v4) 490p il $4.50 Rinehart

385 Transportation—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions

51-14038

"Within a generation and a half—the period 1815-1860—America was metamorphosed from a limited agricultural nation to a mighty industrial power. George R. Taylor, Professor of Economics at Amherst College, shows how it happened. His book is no mere recital of technical innovations in transportation; the burden of his study concerns the implications for the advancing economy of the changing modes of conveyance." N Y Times

TAYLOR, G. R.—Continued

"This reviewer has found very few statements of fact or of interpretation with which to quarrel. The book is well written and pleasingly set up. It is a valuable contribution to the synthesis of our economic history." J. G. B. Hutchins

+ Am Econ R 42:622 S '52 650w

"Professor Taylor has produced a book that is not only informative and superbly integrated but which stands as the most challenging and provocative work to appear in this field in many a year." R. C. Overton

+ Am Hist R 57:701 Ap '52 850w

"This book is useful to anyone who desires a more detailed treatment of the period than is found in the general economic histories that are available, but agriculture is not covered since it is to be covered in another volume of the series. . . Professor Taylor has done a workmanlike job. His book is adequately documented, and a classified and annotated bibliography is included. Newer literature as well as the standard primary and secondary sources for the period is included. The illustrations are well selected for providing the atmosphere of the period." F. M. Jones

+ Ann Am Acad 280:178 Mr '52 390w

Booklist 48:179 F 1 '52

"Fragments of the story have been told before in hundreds of special treatises but here is the first attempt at a readable synthesis, for laymen and students, of perhaps fifty years of scholarly digging. Statistics for pre-Civil War days, often unreliable, are, at best, difficult to handle but George Taylor, in putting flesh and bone on them, gives us a remarkable portrait of men in the mass, furiously at work, too busy to identify themselves as individuals, too busy adjusting to the modern society they were forging." H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p32 D 9 '51 500w

Reviewed by Lorraine Colville

+ Social Educ 16:185 Ap '52 410w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:165 Je '52 280w

TAYLOR, GORDON RATTRAY. Are workers human? 273p $3 Houghton

658.3 Industrial relations. Personnel management 52-140

"The British social scientist, Gordon Ratray Taylor, has chosen an ironic question for his title—his premise being that management too frequently fails to consider the attributes distinguishing men from machines. The theme of his book is that management must have 'a profound respect for the individual worker and recognition of his fundamental dignity as a human being.'" N Y Times

Booklist 48:179 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 30w

Chem Eng 59:364 F '52 50w

"A practical, profitable demonstration of personnel problems for those concerned."

+ Kirkus 19:657 N 1 '51 120w

"The trade unionist—member or executive—will do well to study this book for it has many pointers to new ways of dealing with grievances and of improving work conditions in a factory. Recommended for libraries wanting new material in this field." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:56 Ja 1 '52 160w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 2 '52 90w

"Mr. Taylor has written a stimulating and provocative book in non-technical language. It should interest not only the general reader but the progressive factory manager and trade union leader." Louis Stark

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 27 '52 450w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52

130w

"Management and employee will find the book useful."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:88 Mr '52

TAYLOR, JACK. Economic development of Poland, 1919-1950. 222p $3.75 Cornell univ. press

943.8 Poland—Economic conditions 52-8541

A study of the economic history of Poland during the inter-war years, the Nazi-Soviet occupation, and the postwar development of the planned economy. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Arthur Mandel

Am Econ R 42:950 D '52 750w

"A concise but well-documented study."

+ Foreign Affairs 30:680 J1 '52 20w

Reviewed by P. A. Baran

J Pol Econ 60:450 O '52 390w

"An economist and a thorough student of his subject, Mr. Taylor writes with authority on the many facets in the 1919-1939 period of Polish economic history. It is an especially instructive story, for Poland was among the first nations to practise a 'mixed economy' of private enterprise joined to governmental ownership and widespread regulation." P. R. L.

+ Sat R 35:40 Ag 23 '52 300w

TAYLOR, OWEN REESE. Fourth republic of France; constitution and political parties. 221p $3 Royal inst. of int. affairs

342.44 France—Constitutional history. Political parties—France 51-14208

"[This book aims] to be 'a simple, concise description of the origins and nature of the present constitution of France and a guide to postwar French political parties.'" Foreign Affairs

"Mr. Taylor has written of a five-year-old regime a highly valuable study, characterized by real 'feel' for the subject." R. K. Gooch

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:257 Mr '52 330w

"The mass of detail presented by the author does not make for exciting reading; an interpretation of political trends with a broader sweep of the brush would have made the book a more interesting contribution. Nor are the English translations of French terms always well chosen. Even so, the study will remain for some time a valuable handbook of reference for those concerned with the beginnings of the latest attempt of France to function as a national democracy." W. R. Sharp

+ Ann Am Acad 283:228 S '52 390w

Canadian Forum 32:116 Ag '52 330w

Current Hist 22:378 Je '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 30:501 Ap '52 30w

"The Fourth Republic of France' conveniently and lucidly gives in two hundred pages a great deal of valuable information that is not so easily available in any other publication." D. R. Gillie

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 11 '51 300w

TAYLOR, ROBERT LEWIS. Winston Churchill; an informal study of greatness. 433p il $4.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer 52-7606

"A romp through the life of the British Prime Minister. Mr. Taylor has subtitled his book 'An Informal Study of Greatness,' and has taken considerable pains throughout to keep his subject off the conventional pedestal." New Yorker

"Taylor's book says nothing of much consequence. What the author has given us is an anecdotal biography written in the vein of a New Yorker profile; and it is, for my money, a highly entertaining job every inch of the way. I have slight misgivings—possibly unjustified—as to whether Taylor has always separated legend from fact." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:82 Je '52 600w

Booklist 48:338 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by Robert Wilberforce
Cath World 176:77 O '52 180w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 1 '52 550w

"A raconteur's embellished life of a marvelous person who has never approached an enterprise at half-throttle, this book is heady reading. Having read it, one should quickly turn to Churchill's own splendid prose or to a pedestrian but well-rounded biography of the man as a sobering antidote." W. H. Stringer
Christian Science Monitor p15 My 29 '52 750w

"Mr. Taylor's book has its points. He has obviously done considerable research, and it seems unlikely that a single Churchill anecdote has escaped him. . . Its political insights are negligible and its critical analysis almost nil, but the book is entertaining and very readable. Pictures, too." James O'Gara
Commonweal 56:302 Je 27 '52 240w

Kirkus 20:216 Mr 15 '52 180w

Reviewed by R. S. Taylor
Library J 77:789 My 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 174:603 Je 21 '52 900w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman
New Repub 127:22 S 1 '52 220w

"Churchill is a tough subject for biography. For one thing, he has so largely written his own; for another, he is so far beyond all the ordinary categories and formulae that it is hard to get a handle on him. Mr. Taylor has, with obvious industry and not inconsiderable wit and discernment, applied the formula of a 'New Yorker' profile expanded to book length. It must have looked like a natural when he began. . . The result is certainly most entertaining, but to the present reviewer it doesn't quite work out." Walter Mills

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 25 '52 950w

"Mr. Churchill's character is considerably more than a collection of conflicting impulses hardening out into policies, speeches, quips. It is a poetic mystery. And the best account of it will come from someone who is far removed from the seductions of its characteristic style. It is not Mr. Taylor's fault, of course, if this is not what he was trying to do. But it is a pity that such an entertaining and well documented book should begin and end with the assumption that its subject is a slightly exasperating and essentially comic Superman." Alistair Cooke

N Y Times p7 My 25 '52 900w

"In the course of his researches, which were apparently enormous, Mr. Taylor amassed what is unquestionably the definitive collection of anecdotes illustrating these traits, and he has woven them into his narrative without noticeably slowing its remarkable forward pace."

+ New Yorker 28:136 My 24 '52 160w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p20, Je 1 '52 700w

"Mr. Taylor has written an amusing book about everybody's favorite character. It was difficult to do because the subject himself has written it all out at exhaustive lengths, as have others. The merit of the work is twofold: it summarizes many volumes which all of Winston's admirers do not have time to read, and it does so in what seems to be an American dialect. It is a fable in slang, and as such deserves the success it will have." Vincent Sheean

+ Sat R 35:19 My 31 '52 750w
Time 59:100 Je 2 '52 340w

TAYLOR, SAM S. No head for her pillow. 219p $2.50 Dutton

52-5286

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:714 D 15 '51 60w

"This trying tale is remarkable proof of the fact that a good deal of violence and a flurry-

ing of action doesn't make for speed, excitement or interest. . . It might, by the way, be expected that a writer about murder could spell homicide and be familiar with the function of a gunsel even though he might be excused for not knowing how to spell papaya." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 9 '52 150w

"Sounds like too many other imitators of the imitators of Raymond Chandler." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p29 F 17 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 2 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w

TAYLOR, TELFORD. Sword and swastika; generals and Nazis in the Third Reich. 431p $5 Simon & Schuster

943.086 Germany—History 52-14289

"Traces the period from Versailles to the German invasion of Poland. Here we have the full story of the rapid recovery of the German officers' corps after the defeat in World War I, the systematic subversion of the Weimar Republic, the betrayals of the senile Hindenburg, the intrigues of Junkers and industrialists, the alliances between generals and Fascists, and finally the rise of the organized gangsters, chiefly Hitler, Himmler and Goering." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Hal Foust

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 21 '52 230w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 17 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:583 S 1 '52 240w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 128:25 Ja 5 '53 410w

"A tendentious book, and the record which it gives of the activities of the military in the Third Reich is presented fairly." G. A. Craig
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 23 '52 1000w

"A grim book and a very important one. Mr. Taylor has put us all in his debt for documenting a shocking period of modern history, for exposing its full horrors, and for highlighting questions that may be with us for a long time." S. K. Padover

+ N Y Times p3 N 23 '52 1100w

"The author, who, as a brigadier general, was chief counsel for the prosecution at the Nuremberg trials, has overwhelmed his book with facts and circumstantial data, but he has provided just about the whole story, and it is an important one."

+ New Yorker 28:56 Ja 3 '53 160w

Reviewed by Percy Knauth

Sat R 35:26 D 6 '52 1250w

TEALE, EDWIN WAY, ed. Green treasury; a journey through the world's great nature writing; with an introd. and interpretive comments; il. by Michael H. Bevans. 615p $5 Dodd

808.8 Nature. Literature—Collections 52-10917

An anthology of nature writings containing selections from sources as diverse as the Bible, Aristotle, Pliny, W. H. Hudson, Thoreau, Fabre, Amiel, Thomas Hardy, Joseph Conrad, Rachel Carson, and many others. Arranged under such headings as waters, land, sky, plants, animals, etc. Index of authors.

Booklist 49:120 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53 20w

"Michael H. Bevans' illustrations are worthy of the book in which they stand, a book as beautifully manufactured as it is enthusiastically and thoughtfully edited." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 9 '52 270w

TEALE, E. W.—Continued

"A very pleasant bedside book. Delightful for a browsing collection." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 77:1900 N 1 '52 60w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 9 '52 80w

"He gives us more than 600 pages of wise and noble observation, of contemplative exaltation, of quiet spiritual passion. Although he includes no verse and makes no mention of one of our greatest naturalists and most fluent writers—William Morton Wheeler—it is impossible to quarrel with the editor's selections." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p45 N 9 '52 320w

"There is something for everybody. This is a book to keep at hand, to pick up and lay down and pick up again, a read-at-night book, a come-back-to-it book of the best kind." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 13 '52 650w

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. Life and good times of William Randolph Hearst. 386p 54 Dutton

B or 92 Hearst, William Randolph 52-8258

"An exploration of what the author describes as the imposing and infinitely complex 'continental mass' of William Randolph Hearst. Mr. Tebbel has divided this mass into districts and taken them up one at a time, so that we see Hearst as houseowner, businessman, politician, parent, collector, publisher (or, rather, 'salesman of paper'), spendthrift, and ladies' man." New Yorker

Booklist 49:156 Ja 1 '53

Reviewed by Delos Avery
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 19 '52 400w

Kirkus 20:494 Ag 1 '52 190w

"Candour, humor, skilfull marshalling of facts and intensive research characterize this chronicle. . . Recommended for most libraries, not excluding the theological." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 110w

Nation 175:535 D 6 '52 90w

"A fascinating tale and Mr. Tebbel has dealt competently with its dramatic potentialities." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 26 '52 550w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p36 N 23 '52 400w

"The method [of the book] leads to a troublesome chronological jumpiness, but the appraisals of Hearst are clear-sighted, witty, and, on the whole, charitable. If the author hasn't quite succeeded in putting his finger on the force that led a man who was brought up in luxury to flog himself along at about twice the pace of the average self-made man, he has at least managed to resolve a good many of the contradictions in Hearst's character."

+ New Yorker 28:153 O 11 '52 120w

"The Tebbel book must be recognized at once as the best of the several biographies of Hearst. It is extremely readable, it is comprehensive, and it presents the assets and liabilities in the balance-sheet of WRH, his life and character, with apparent candor." F. L. Mott

+ Sat R 35:14 N 1 '52 250w

Springf'd Republican p11D O 26 '52 140w

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. Touched with fire. 447p $3.50 Dutton

La Salle, Robert Cavalier, sieur de—Fiction 52-5317

Historical novel based on that part of the life of La Salle, which he spent in the New World.

"A fine historical novel." A. F. Otis
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 1 '52 250w

Kirkus 20:134 F 15 '52 210w

"I suspect that 'Touched with Fire' would have gained considerably in suspense and power if Mr. Tebbel had been content to build his novel on a few dramatic incidents instead of giving us, conscientiously, the whole story. But despite this fault of artifice, 'Touched with Fire' is a vivid and on the whole satisfactory story of an extremely interesting time, place and man." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 25 '52 550w

"The La Salle story, as historians know it, needs little embellishment. Here was one of the great, unconquerable explorers of the New World. His personal saga over two decades is corking adventure stuff, whether he is fighting Indians, Jesuits, court intrigues, embittered voyageurs—or the rigors of frozen Canadian tundra and steamy Mississippi bayous. Mr. Tebbel stitches all these together with obvious affection and admiration." Stuart Keate

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 20 '52 280w

Sat R 35:32 Ag 16 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p6D J1 27 '52 180w

TEILHET, DARWIN LE ORA. Steamboat on the river; with drawings by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 256p $3.50 Sloane

52-12479

"After three years with wealthy relatives in Philadelphia, the narrator of this historically based, flavorsome tale returns home to Cincinnati and serves as mud-clerk on his father's new steamboat, the 'Talisman,' as it makes a hazardous journey on the Sangamon, aided by young Abe Lincoln and William Herndon." Bookmark

Booklist 49:49 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:10 O '52 30w

"Teilhet has been fascinated by the voyage of the Talisman and he has built up an eventful story of how young Jim Owens proved himself a man during that memorable season. His struggle with a couple of villainous characters and with the backwoods river brought out all his best capacities. But his acquaintance with Abe Lincoln was his best experience." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 21 '52 260w

Kirkus 20:426 J1 15 '52 210w

"Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 90w

"A vivid little frontier romance of the year 1832-33. The story holds your interest if you like historical adventure based on fact. There is enough romance in it to make you turn the next page with keen anticipation." S. L. Eskew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 5 '52 800w

"There are two improbabilities in the story. The sordid Cincinnati pictured was a town of 25,000 in 1832, a sizable town for the time and one of the most cultured in the West. The other is Lincoln, on whom the author has obviously done some research. As presented here, he is much too solemn for a youth of 23 and in his jeu d'esprit he is also much too solemn. But these are minor faults in a highly interesting tale—or 'yarn' as Lincoln would have called it." Phil Stong

+ N Y Times p30 S 21 '52 500w

"Darwin Teilhet is a Californian who knows how to write a yarn that holds up just as a story, that could be a boys' book but is also one an adult can read just for the sake of the color and adventure." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 29 '52 650w

"The best part of the book is the account of the trip up and down the troublesome Sangamon. Skilfully, the author brings in the friends and acquaintances of Lincoln's young manhood. . . Unfortunately the author apparently had no faith in the abilities of the tale of the Talisman to hold the reader, and so he must throw in a second story which well nigh ruins the first." Harriette Arnow

+ — Sat R 35:36 O 4 '52 500w

Springf'd Republican p5C D 21 '52 100w

TEILHET, MRS HILDEGARDE (TOLMAN).

Private undertaking. 183p $2.75 Coward-Mc-Cann

52-11702

"[This novel] whisks the reader from Nice to Belgrade and back, and introduces him on the way to any number of fascinating people, including a young poet, who somehow figures out the central mystery of the nerve gas contained in the cigarette lighter; three beautiful young women, one of whom dies rather horribly; and a sizable congregation of men, very few of whom are precisely what they seem to be." New Yorker

Booklist 49:126 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:10 O '52

Kirkus 20:387 J1 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 21 '52 160w

"Less powerfully plotted and written than the author's noble 'Rim of Terror,' this novel has its own peculiar charm in a unique not-quite-farical three-sided love story, which is less a triangle than a perfectly proper ménage à trois." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p26 S 21 '52 110w

"A conventional spy story, in which, naturally, the Communists get what's coming to them, but on the whole livelier and more ingenious than most."

+ New Yorker 28:131 S 20 '52 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '52 60w

"Ingenious." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:38 O 4 '52 30w

TEMPLETON, EDITH. Proper Bohemians [Eng title: Summer in the country]. 272p $2.75 Houghton

51-8852

Novel about a way of life, the scene of which is a country estate not far from Prague; the time is between the two world wars. "The Birk-Borovec household was pretty run down but still clinging to the pretensions and forms of its earlier splendor. The complications by which they kept going, their slips and stratagems, provide the scaffolding on which Miss Templeton hangs her gallery of eccentric portraits." (Sat R)

Reviewed by E. S. Plisko

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 3 '52 370w

"The story and the characters are extravagantly alive, but there is none of Turgenev's or Tchekov's redeeming tenderness in Miss Templeton's handling of her group of frustrated eccentrics." H. I. A. Fausset

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '50 200w

"It is a narrative of humor and pathos, with the author maintaining an air of impartiality that misses none of the underlying irony. Disaster is averted by a device clearly beyond the bounds of what can be described as proper. But in times like these, when the once-proud landowners of once-aristocratic Bohemia have lost so much, why let a few scruples stand in the way of opportunity?" Lisle Bell

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 1 '52 280w

"There is a near-Pickwickian quality about some of the dramatic arrivals, departures, and scenes of minor violence. Characters emerge in a fresh, unexpected way, largely as a result of the author's chatty style and her ability to point up significance as well as appearance of subjects at hand. Going deeper into the novel, one discovers a brisk but sympathetic discourse upon human folly and the blind fanaticism of people determined to preserve an outmoded way of life." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 F 17 '52 120w

"Miss Templeton occasionally gives an indication of wanting to say something a little more substantial than she has allowed herself to do, but mostly she's content to amble along in an amiably frivolous manner, which should cause you no pain."

Sat R 35:32 Ja 26 '52 140w

"Comedy of a spirited and accomplished order." R. D. Charques

+ Spec 184:524 N 17 '50 170w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p6D F 10 '52 250w

"Mrs. Edith Templeton was born in Prague and her clear, flexible style has the merest trace of a foreign accent. In spite of a superficial resemblance to Turgenev and Chekhov, this accomplished first novel is no pastiche."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 20 '50 250w

Wis Lib Bul 48:37 Ja '52

TEN BROEK, JACOBUS. Antislavery origins of the Fourteenth amendment. 232p $3 Univ. of Calif. press

973.71 U.S.—Constitutional history. Slavery in the U.S. 51-61927

"The Fourteenth Amendment, forbidding any state to deny privileges and immunities, equal protection, or due process of law, has long been a focus of constitutional debate. Professor tenBroek here traces the origins of the Fourteenth Amendment back to the constitutional arguments of the abolitionists in the eighteen-thirties." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"Whether Professor ten Broek has proved his case more adequately than his competitors have proved theirs is at least debatable. For my part, the combined research efforts to date suggest mainly that those who gave us the Fourteenth Amendment were as divided on its meaning as we are." Wallace Mendelson

Am Pol Sci R 46:579 Je '52 360w

"There are [a few] extremely significant conclusions that the author draws from his historical studies. To say that some of them will be viewed as controversial is only to point up the need to give them careful consideration. In most instances, I believe, students of the subject will agree with the author and will be grateful for his scholarly presentation of the evidence and his cautious formulation of the argument." M. R. Konvitz

+ Am Soc R 17:519 Ag '52 380w

Reviewed by H. H. Simms

Ann Am Acad 280:175 Mr '52 400w

"This excellent little book will be indispensable to both specialists and general readers seeking insights for technical constitutional interpretation or perspective on the use of the Constitution in social reform."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:75 Mr '52 170w

TENENBAUM, JOSEPH LEIB. Underground; the story of a people. 532p il $4.50 Philosophical lib.

940.547 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. Jews in Poland 52-7945

"This is an unusually detailed description of the mass extermination of Jews in Poland, western Ukraine, White Ruthenia, and Lithuania after the Nazi invasion and of the heroic though almost hopeless struggle of the Jewish underground against their powerful and ruthless persecutors. The battle for the Warsaw Ghetto is already well known, but this book contains much hitherto unavailable material about many other underground groups." Am J Soc

"To the literature of Nazi genocide is added not a masterpiece of scholarship or eloquence,

TENENBAUM, J. L.—Continued
but nonetheless a most valuable document."
D. W. Treadgold

+ Am Hist R 58:184 O '52 350w

Reviewed by Florian Znaniecki
Am J Soc 58:112 J1 '52 550w

Am Pol Sci R 46:595 Je '52 10w

"This book is a very valuable contribution to the history of the martyrdom of the Jews in Poland under Nazi tyranny. Many books dealing with this subject have already appeared during the last few years, but this appears to me superior to them all in various respects."
Israel Cohen

+ Ann Am Acad 282:176 J1 '52 550w

"Annotated, with a bibliography and index, it is an impressive monument to an important segment of world culture that can never be replaced."

+ Kirkus 20:141 F 15 '52 120w

"The enormous factual research done and presented here by New York's Dr. Tenenbaum (formerly of Poland) is paralleled only by John Hersey's historical fiction, The Wall. Highly recommended for better-world ethics."
J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:594 Ap 1 '52 130w

"'Underground,' a well-written, well-documented book, is the obituary of a heroic group of people." A. W.

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 10 '52 200w

TENNIEN, MARK A. No secret is safe; behind the bamboo curtain. 270p $3.50 Farrar, Straus 951.05 Communism—China 52-13933

A Maryknoll missionary who has worked in China since 1928, and has suffered house arrest and imprisonment from the Communists, writes this story of the effect of Communism on the ordinary Chinese. The work is based on notes he took and secretly smuggled out of China.

"A forthright, objective, powerful record of what is going on in China today." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 176:316 Ja '53 160w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 16 '52
240w

"A must for all Americans as a description of what the forces of freedom must fight against and of the dread result if those forces fail."

+ Kirkus 20:527 Ag 15 '52 210w

"His account . . . seems pretty straightforward and credible. It makes very good reading." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 77:1502 S 15 '52 110w

"The book is an invaluable one." Christopher Rand

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 2 '52
700w

"He writes vividly. . . As a first-hand document it makes an important contribution to our knowledge of certain stages in the Communist revolution." K. S. Latourette

+ N Y Times p16 N 2 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:201 N 22 '52 170w

"No book has yet appeared which compels more belief than does Father Mark Tennien's account of the ordeal of contemporary China. Speaking as both observer and victim, Father Tennien, a Maryknoll priest, provides us with a model of dispassionate reporting." Julien Steinberg

+ Sat R 35:42 N 29 '52 600w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 170w

TENSEN, RUTH MARJORIE. Come to the city [photographs by Henry C. Staehle, drawings by Phyllis J. Graff]. 37p $2 Reilly & Lee

51-14770

Large photographs and simple text tell what Tom and Susan saw and did when they visited their city friends Jack and Patty.

Reviewed by Eleonora Alexander
Library J 77:149 Ja 15 '52 70w
N Y Times p24 F 24 '52 130w
Wis Lib Bul 48:96 Mr '52

TERESA OF JESUS, SAINT. Letters; tr. and ed. by E. Allison Peers from the critical edition of P. Silverio de Santa Teresa. 2v $10 Newman press

B or 92 [52-2313]

"These volumes complete the undertaking of Professor Peers to provide English translations of the complete works of Saints Teresa and John of the Cross. In his introduction to this collection of almost five hundred letters Father Silverio, who is now General of the Discalced Carmelites, writes of Saint Teresa as letter-writer: 'Even more vividly than in her other works, her style reflects her vital personality.'" (Commonweal) Indexes.

Commonweal 56:102 My 2 '52 150w

"Every person and place in the letters is clear to the reader. These letters are a work of scholarship of particular importance in that they may and will interest the non-scholarly." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 15 '52 300w

"These letters give a most detailed picture of the priestly world of her day. It was a sufficiently small community for Professor Peers or his Spanish predecessor to have been able to identify almost all her correspondents and elucidate most of her—often cryptic—references. She herself calls many of her friends to life by the intimate details she gives of their affairs. For she was incapable of remaining on formal terms with anyone. So warm and friendly are they all, and so real is their piety, that one almost forgets that in the squares of the cities through which they walked relapsed heretics were burnt for the salvation of their immortal souls. There is nothing in her writings to suggest that Teresa or her friends saw the devil's hand in this." J. M. Cohen

+ Spec 188:150 F 1 '52 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 1 '52
1900w

TERMAN, FREDERICK EMMONS, and PETTIT, JOSEPH MAYO. Electronic measurements. 2d ed 707p $10 McGraw

621.38417 Radio 51-12650

"This successor to Professor Terman's Measurements in Radio Engineering [Book Review Digest 1936] is both a text for engineering students and a reference tool for practicing engineers. It covers the principles, instruments, and techniques of making measurements in radio and electronics." (Library J) Index.

"The discussions are exceptionally full, and they are supplemented by footnote references to the related literature. The index of authors whose works are cited runs to 1,000 names. The books will be essential in all collections used by communications engineers. Parts of it may be of value to the more advanced radio and television servicemen." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1309 Ag '52 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:61 J1 '52

TERRIEN, SAMUEL LUCIEN. Psalms and their meaning for today. 278p $3 Bobbs

223.2 Bible. Old Testament—Psalms 52-5808

"Mr. Terrien, associate professor of Hebrew and Old Testament at Union Theological Seminary and one of the editors of The Interpreter's Bible, explains the original purpose [of the Psalms], points out the religious truths which they express and calls attention to their poetic beauty and significance, all with brevity and clarity of expression. For treatment he divides the psalms into three groups—songs of praise, prayers, and songs of faith, and then subdivides these groups. In the first chapter he reveals their origin and in the last he emphasizes their meaning for the present day." Springf'd Republican

"A clear, careful, authoritative and most engaging explanation of the Psalms." M. E. Chase

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 9 '52 600w

"His book is well worth while to all who desire a fuller understanding of the psalms." O. J. Aldrich

+ Spring'd Republican p7D Ap 13 '52 140w

TEY, JOSEPHINE, pseud. See Mackintosh, E.

THACHER, RUSSELL. Tender age. 277p $3 Macmillan

52-12575

The scene of this novel of adolescence is a small New Jersey town on a hot summer week end. The hero is Bunny Dedrick, who has to face a series of crises rather upsetting to a seventeen-year-old. His father is involved with a questionable blonde; his mother takes her marital problems to her children; his sister is in love with a racketeer; and Bunny is upset at the prospect of a heavy date.

Booklist 49:68 O 15 '52

"Russell Thacher has managed to capture a handful of teen-agers in this novel and, with some reservations, he has done a whale of a job with them." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 19 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:423 J1 15 '52 220w

"It is a modern story with all of the modern day emphasis on the urgencies of sex in all its phases. The heartaches are typical although the total scene does not seem to be. Though about a seventeen-year-old it is written primarily for the adult." H. L. Roth

Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 140w

"Into a couple of days of Bunny's adolescent life Mr. Thacher weaves many of the experiences of youth in a comfortable suburban environment." Margaret Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 2 '52 350w

"'Tender' is the meaningful word in the title. This is not a soft book. Certainly it is not sweet. It is often indelicate rather than delicate in its phrasing. Yet it is shaped and written with a fine, honest tenderness. Every line of its sturdy prose is charged with sympathy and compassion." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p37 O 5 '52 500w

"The adult writer, working from observation illuminated by his memory of himself at the same age, needs a fine and sensitive hand to avoid the grotesque or the sentimental. In 'The Tender Age' Mr. Thacher shows that he qualifies for the job. His boy, Bunny, at the upper end of his teens, is thoroughly natural. . . This is a believable and satisfying tale." Oliver La Farge

+ Sat R 35:13 S 20 '52 550w

THAYER, MRS ANNA (CHITTENDEN). Holiday in England; il. with photographs. 239p $2.75 Dodd

942 [914.2] England—Description and travel 52-7211

A guidebook which is intended to help in the planning of a trip to England. Can be used with any age from twelve up. Bibliography. Index.

"This book is a delightful companion for an armchair traveler, but we warn you that before you come to the last page you will very likely have begun to plan a trip to see for yourself." E. C. Ince

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 15 '52 80w

"It is pleasant reading for would-be travelers at home. Quotations are well chosen, and many odd, unusual facts are included." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 29 '52 120w

"Recommended for larger libraries, perhaps—not an essential purchase, but a pleasant one."

+ Wis Lib Bul 48:180 J1 '52

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Blood on the knight. 240p $2.50 Dodd

52-8985

Detective story.

"Lightly diverting murder puzzle seeps thru numerous and often extraneous conversational passages." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 29 '52 50w

"It's all certainly easier on the eyes than Spillane but it's all hopelessly contrived and turgid." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 J1 6 '52 40w

"The murder of the high school principal should have been solved immediately if Peter Clancy had asked the obvious question on Page 60; instead, the case drags on for 50,000 more words, with some knowledgeable information on philately and some astonishing misinformation on football." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p12 J1 6 '52 40w

"An innocent and ramshackle affair, likely to satisfy only Mrs. Thayer's most faithful admirers."

— + New Yorker 28:91 Ag 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 6 '52 40w

THESLEFF, HOLGER. Farewell windjammer; an account of the last circumnavigation of the globe by a sailing ship and the last grain race from Australia to England; with a preface by Alan Villiers; tr. from the Swedish by M. A. Michael. 240p il $3.50 Thames

910.41 Voyages around the world A52-10766

"Another 'last' circumnavigation of the globe by a windjammer, (the 'Passat') and a Grain Race from Australia to Britain. The Swedish author tells us the events of a somewhat routine voyage but the background is the man-sized proposition of sailing a large ship around the world depending on a green crew and primitive devices in this power age." Library J

Reviewed by Al Chase

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 2 '52 210w

"A genuine book which gives the reader a chance to share the experience. Recommended, where the interest in the subject justifies."

H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Harry Raehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 J1 6 '52 500w

"Thesleff, a Swede, is something of a philosopher. He has an eye for the grandeur of the sea: dark tropic nights, sprinkled with distant stars; the sudden burst of sunlight at daybreak, the sweep of the trade winds, the violence of the Roaring Forties. If he puts too much emphasis on sail-shifting and deck routine, he can be excused on the ground of youthful enthusiasm." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p14 F 24 '52 210w

"Any addition to the limited amount of material on the sea and ships is welcome these days and Thesleff's account is very readable." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 13 '52 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p23 Ja 11 '52 90w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). Happy return. 307p $3.50 Knopf

52-8510

The great news in Barsetshire is the general election and the "happy return" of Churchill to power. Eric Swan, Master of Priory School, is one of the chief characters in this section of the chronicle.

THIRKELL, A. M.—Continued

Booklist 49:33 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:56 D '52 30w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 21 '52
450w

Reviewed by Edith Prudden
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 25
'52 240w

Kirkus 20:426 J1 15 '52 200w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
+ Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 44:246 Ag
30 '52 40w

"Some of Mrs. Thirkell's more recent novels have been uncomfortably acid on the subject of the late British government. This source of satire has now been removed and one feels that Mrs. Thirkell, as well as her characters, almost misses it. All that remains is the unpopular Bishop, and even he is nearly shipwrecked at sea." Anne Brooks

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 21
'52 400w

"The quick wit and the happy turn of phrase of the earlier novels are here in good measure, but what is happening to the innate good sense and taste that could formerly be expected of this popular writer? Mrs. Thirkell's most ardent admirers must wish that she would forget politics, which she admits 'are not in our line.'" Nancie Matthews

+ — N Y Times p6 S 21 '52 450w

New Yorker 28:126 S 20 '52 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 9 '52
210w

"Alas, her telling is mannered, her method sometimes obsolete, but she has her usual skill, so in this latest Thirkell chronicle we gladly meet once more the friends we loved and admired and laughed at in twenty-two preceding volumes." K. H. Rogers

+ — Sat R 35:16 S 27 '52 380w

"Mrs. Thirkell is in triumphant form in her latest return to Barsetshire and its rituals. She is one of the subtlest of social historians, in that the reader can seldom be quite sure which of the county values she endorses and which she is laughing at." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 189:250 Ag 22 '52 40w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p529 Ag 15
'52 180w

Wis Lib Bul 48:216 S '52

THOMAS, BENJAMIN PLATT. Abraham Lincoln. 548p il $5.75 Knopf
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 52-6425

A one-volume biography of Lincoln based on and utilizing the research of the last three decades. Index.

"His book is authoritative—a whole posse of Lincoln specialists have glowingly endorsed it; and at the same time it is highly readable, forceful in its portraiture, and comprehensive. The author has managed to assimilate vast knowledge without letting it blunt his sense of which, among thousands of lesser details, are of the greatest interest." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:94 D '52 240w

Booklist 49:57; 88 O 15 '52; N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:32 N '52 20w

"It is the best one-volume life of Lincoln ever written. And I'm not at all sure that that assertion needs the 'one-volume' qualification." P. M. Angle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 9 '52
350w

"The work as a whole is admittedly excellent. There is no doubt that the author knows Lincoln extremely well, better than this reviewer. The book is as interesting as it is scholarly, despite the absence of footnotes. The little that is known of Lincoln's earlier years is given. . . . However, in the critical period between the election and the inauguration, when Lincoln's attitude was a great, perhaps the great, determinant for peace or war, it seems to some students of the period that Lincoln was woefully lacking in judgment and perception." Paul Kiniery

+ — Commonweal 57:262 D 12 '52 600w

"An exciting book, which fills a very vital need."

+ Kirkus 20:579 S 1 '52 360w

"The literary style of this work lacks the touch of genius that characterizes the biographies by Lord Charnwood and by Sandburg, but it is straightforward, accurate and a pleasure to read. . . . Highly recommended for all libraries as a popular and as a reference book." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:1652 O 1 '52 110w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

Nation 175:470 N 22 '52 120w

"The most intelligent single-volume life of Lincoln that has yet been produced, and one of the most charming." G. W. Johnson

+ New Repub 127:19 D 15 '52 550w

"The ambition of this book, according to its author and its publisher, is to become for at least a generation the standard, indispensable one-volume biography of Lincoln, serving in the place, for example, so long held by Charnwood's classic work. Mr. Thomas, who knows more about Lincoln than Charnwood did, recognizes the excellence of his rival but counts on the fact, which anybody will admit, that he is a member of the 'modern' school. . . . Mr. Thomas knows more surface than his predecessor knew, and renders it with enviable skill. And he too goes down among the mysteries. The sensible thing would be to keep both books upon the shelf. Neither discredits nor displaces the other." Mark Van Doren

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 9 '52
700w

"Probably nobody could be found who was better qualified to do this job than Mr. Thomas. Deeply conversant with Lincoln sources and scholarship through his own research and his connection with the Abraham Lincoln Association in its project of preparing the 'Complete Works,' he unites the factual mastery of the realists with the perception and literary skill of the idealists." T. H. Williams

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '52 550w

"The publication is a well-written one, highly valuable to the general public, and a book which has answered a great need." Austin Blair

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '52
500w

"This is much the best single-volume life of Lincoln yet written. The reviewer is frankly prejudiced in favor of this work." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R 35:15 N 8 '52 1150w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 28 '52
360w

Time 60:132 N 10 '52 200w

THOMAS, DYLAN. In country sleep, and other poems. 34p $2 New directions

821 52-7569

This collection contains all of the new poetry which Dylan Thomas has written since the publication of his Selected Writings in 1946.

Booklist 48:293 My 15 '52

Bookmark 12:81 Ja '53

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 13 '52
140w

"The new book has the poet's customary resonance, vitality and exaltation. Its typography has a curious kinship to the sound of his poetry, when he reads it himself—like a great trumpet blasting on the day of judgment." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 174:389 Ap 19 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. L. Sweeney

New Repub 126:18 Mr 17 '52 1650w

"If nothing here quite matches such poems as 'Elegy for Ann Jones,' 'The Hunchback in the Park,' or the earlier birthday lyrics, there are pages that rock with a stormy music, flash with thunderous lights, and so renew our pleasure in Dylan Thomas' very personal performance and in the world it opens to us." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 23 '52 750w

"Readers of 'The Selected Writings' know the fiery, controlled abandon of his style. Each poem seems to be casting itself loose, yet all are contained within strict, often quite elaborate, forms. No two of these forms are exactly alike, except in the exact way the emotion permeates them." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 6 '52 300w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 28:65 Ag 2 '52 650w

Reviewed by Winterset Rothberg
Poetry 81:184 D '52 600w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 9 '52 550w

"Never mind the famous Thomas obscurity. There is meaning enough and to spare in these poems, but, mark you, of the sort that defies translation into prose and therefore is true poetry." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R 35:17 Je 21 '52 700w

THOMAS, ELEANOR. Becky's boarding house; a Brownie scout story; il. by Gertrude Howe. 119p $2 Scribner

52-9133

Brownie Scouts and their doings make up this story book for girls of 9 to 10.

Kirkus 20:226 Ap 1 '52 70w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 40w

"Miss Thomas' well-intended but disjointed narrative may appeal to the Brownie age group. Beyond that age, however, be wary, because despite editorial assurances that the book has the approval of Scout officials, new Scouts are a class-conscious lot, totally unwilling to show interest in Brownie stuff." S. C. Gross

+ — N Y Times p28 My 25 '52 100w

Wis Lib Bul 48:177 Jl '52

THOMAS, GEORGE FINGER. Poetry, religion, and the spiritual life. 113p $2 Elsevier

248 Spiritual life 52-5649

"In this volume George F. Thomas of Princeton has rounded out his philosophy of spirit. In a former work, 'Spirit and Its Freedom,' he analyzed the activities of human spirit in general; now he turns his attention to the specific phenomena of poetry and religion. Taken together, the volumes are a remarkable testimony to the vitality of the idealistic tradition; both are 'joyful affirmations' of 'present good.'" N Y Times

"Beautifully conceived and executed volume. . . . Scientific naturalists may object to having the empiricism of I. A. Richards represented by a work which he composed in 1926 and repudiated in 1941. Catholic naturalists will not agree with the author that Spinoza is the culmination of the Aristotelian-Aquinian approach, though they may be gratified to find a friendly use made of the Aquinian doctrine of analogy. . . . But in the broken world of Gabriel Marcel, in the faceless era of W. H. Auden, it is very rewarding to listen to an adept in the spiritual life." T. S. K. Scott-Craig

+ — N Y Times p15 Ap 13 '52 400w

"This small book contains the Rockwell Lectures delivered at the Rice Institute in 1951. . . . Although these are sermons rather than serious philosophical essays, they are admirably suited to the function of the Rockwell foundation, which is the promotion of religion." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R 35:35 My 10 '52 230w

THOMAS, GWYN. World cannot hear you; a comedy of ancient desires. 288p $3 Little

52-5362

Tale of life in a Welsh valley, the main theme of which is the rivalry between the heir to the valley's leading family and the unscrupulous Picton, who had a truck farm.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

"Gwyn Thomas, the Welsh author, is not widely known or read in this country. The traits of a best seller are not to be found in his prose; but, for the discerning reader wishing an original style, flecked with a strange humor, he is a welcome personage. . . . Recommended." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:528 Mr 15 '52 80w

"Gwyn Thomas [is] an inspired Welsh oracle, a magician with words, unveiling his strange Celtic people to the world." Edith Crosse

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '52 450w

"Every page of this village comedy is enlivened with the fantasy and fierce humor of the grubby, passionate people of Meadow Prospect. . . . Part of the uniqueness of this novel comes from the presence of tenderness in the midst of daftness and derision." Walter Havighurst

Sat R 35:15 Mr 29 '52 420w

THOMAS, JOAN GALE. If Jesus came to my house [il. by the author]. [new ed] [18p] $1.75 Lothrop

51-14698

"Easier to repeat than it is to apply, the Golden Rule is difficult for little children to understand without concrete illustrations related to their own lives. This book, originally published in England where it has sold nineteen editions, supplies in verse and picture just such an explanation. A little boy imagines that the boy Jesus is his guest and dreams of sharing with Him his own everyday pleasures, his pets and toys. He also knows that by doing these things for others he is doing them for Jesus." N Y Times

Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 11 '51 30w

Kirkus 19:432 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Although not a necessary library item, this has a certain charm, and some libraries will find it useful if serving church schools, etc. Fragile white board covers, so should be bought prebound." D. M. Blasco
Library J 76:1433 S 15 '51 80w

"The singsong verses are undistinguished in style, but because they are so simple in structure, as well as in concept, they will be easy for the very young to grasp and to remember." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p32 S 30 '51 130w

THOMAS, LEWIS VICTOR, and FRYE, RICHARD NELSON. The United States and Turkey and Iran [maps by R. L. Williams]. (American foreign policy lib.) 291p $4.25 Harvard univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with Persia.
U.S.—Relations (general) with Turkey. 51-12394
Persia. Turkey

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"Government officials and all other Americans interested in Turkey and Iran, but whose information in the main is drawn from the press, will find this current synthesis worth reading." S. G.

+ Am Hist R 57:750 Ap '52 450w

"A very timely and important book." A. O. Sarkissian

+ Ann Am Acad 279:243 Ja '52 320w
Foreign Affairs 30:507 Ap '52 30w

Reviewed by J. C. Hurewitz
Nation 174:111 F 2 '52 900w

Reviewed by Taraknath Das
Pol Sci Q 67:461 S '52 850w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:392 D '51 290w

THOMAS, MRS RUTH H. Crip, come home; with drawings by Aldren Watson. 175p $2.50 Harper

598.2 Thrashers 51-11959

The story of a crippled brown thrasher who nested year after year in the author's Arkansas garden.

Booklist 48:243 Ap 1 '52

THOMAS, R. H.—Continued

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 20w

Reviewed by Anna Campbell

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 My 25 '52
120w

"Crip's story is one of careful observation, and it is full of humor. There is a rich, warm background of country days and ways, romping dogs, rollicking goats, and fond human relationships. There is, as well, a poignancy which touches the heart and gives deeper meaning to a wild bird's singing." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 5 '52
190w

"Of definite appeal to amateur ornithologists. . . A book of great warmth and of natural beauty."

+ Kirkus 20:107 F 1 '52 180w

"Under the frills of whatever sentimentality in the writing, one finds here the strong and honest structure of authentic sentiment. By the end of this unusual memoir, the reader is poignantly moved, and feels rewarded to have known two such people as the Thomases, to say nothing of their birds." Alan Devoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 6
'52 260w

Reviewed by W. M. Teller

N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 16
'52 180w

THOMAS, WILLIAM ISAAC. Social behavior and personality [his] contributions to theory and social research; ed. by Edmund H. Volkart. 388p $3 Social science res. council

301 Sociology 51-5300

"This volume reviews and integrates W. I. Thomas' major contributions to sociological and social-psychological theory and method, and makes available a selection of his out-of-print and unpublished materials. It also includes many sections of his work which have acquired the status of sociological classics. In an introductory essay, Mr. Volkart presents a systematic analysis of Thomas' basic theory, showing the development of Thomas' thinking, and placing his contributions in the pattern of the behavior disciplines." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Every sociologist is indebted to Dorothy Thomas, to the Social Science Research Council, and to the editor of this book for a valuable statement of the work of one of our illustrious scholars whose influence is stronger today than ever before." Ellsworth Paris

+ Am Soc R 16:875 D '51 1300w

"This volume of theoretical essays and selections from Thomas' larger works should go far to correct the prevalent one-sided views of his work. It is to the credit of the editor, Edmund H. Volkart of Yale, and of his editorial committee that the work was done and well done." J. L. Blau

+ J Philos 49:479 Jl 3 '52 900w

Reviewed by F. N. House

Social Forces 30:235 D '51 410w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:404 D '51 200w

THOMPSON, JAMES MATTHEW. Napoleon Bonaparte. 463p maps $6 Oxford

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French 52-9576

"A new biography of Napoleon. . . The author, one of the leading modern authorities on the French Revolution, is interested not so much in the Napoleon who conquered Europe as in the Napoleon who conquered the Revolution and codified its laws and institutions within the framework of a monarchy. He is as aware as anybody of Napoleon's fatal weaknesses, but regards him as the architect of a state, whose work enabled France to survive three invasions and a century and a half of political unrest." New Yorker

"This book is beautifully written, and at the same time a brilliant piece of scholarship, a worthy sequel to Thompson's fine study of the French Revolution. I fear, though, that it is not a work for a beginner. It is rather for those who already know something of the era of the French Revolution and Napoleon for considerable knowledge is assumed. Given that anyone will find this new life of Napoleon a tremendously stimulating and valuable book. It will stand for a long time as the most up-to-date and scholarly treatment of the subject in English." R. M. Saunders

+ Canadian Forum 32:210 D '52 460w

Reviewed by R. M. Brace

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 19 '52
300w

Kirkus 20:616 S 15 '52 150w

"Recommended for educational and bigger public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 77:1812 O 15 '52 100w

"Mr Thompson's Napoleon is not only a competent and scholarly performance, it is a most interesting and readable book. Mr Thompson tells the story no less effectively for telling it soberly and concisely. His comments are on the whole brief and to the point." P. Geyl

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 18 '52 550w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 175:583 D 20 '52 480w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:160 F 9
'52 750w

"Napoleon belongs to history; and Thompson writes like the professional historian that he is by training. His book is as much a modern version of the old-fashioned life and times treatment as it is a personal biography. But the two sets of emphases are dextrously joined, the two angles of vision well co-ordinated." Leo Gershoy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 12 '52
850w

"This sound biography offers valuable aid to the history student and hours of entertainment to the general reader." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Times p12 O 12 '52 700w

"Professor Thompson makes no attempt to dramatize his man, and the result is one of the best biographies of Napoleon in English." + New Yorker 28:178 O 18 '52 120w

"Mr. Thompson's 'Napoleon' is almost in a class by itself, for it is the only book written in English that is abreast of the latest scholarship in this intensively tilled field. And it gains a great deal from the fact that Mr. Thompson is so learned in the history of the French Revolution, for only that background makes Napoleon intelligible." D. W. Brogan

+ Sat R 35:25 O 11 '52 850w

"Mr. Thompson relies to a great extent upon the famous Correspondence, of which vast compilation his knowledge is profound and indeed unrivalled. He presents a portrait at once lively and original—a most unexpected pleasure at this time of day. The legends, indeed, are put to flight so decisively that one hankers, sometimes, to call them back—on the principle, perhaps, that a lie may constitute the more agreeable form of truth." R. McN. Wilson

+ Spec 189:196 Ag 8 '52 300w

Springf'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 100w

"Mr. Thompson draws a lifelike picture of history's greatest epic. As he confesses, it was difficult for one who has deeply studied events in France between 1789 and 1794 not to wonder what happened afterwards, and well-nigh impossible to resist the temptation offered by so magnificent a subject. The result is an achievement of a high standard."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 21
'52 2150w

THOMPSON, LAWRENCE ROGER. Melville's quarrel with God. 474p $6 Princeton univ. press

813 Melville, Herman. Religion and literature
52-5825

"Mr. Thompson; in a careful study of Melville's books, letters and miscellaneous writings, traces his gradual rebellion against his Calvinistic heritage and the development of a bitter questioning of the Deity. Extensive quotations from Melville's works are introduced to show how the author of Moby-Dick practiced literary deception and wrote at different levels to introduce his anti-Deist philosophy and yet not offend the reading public of his day." Library J

"Thompson is ingenious and persuasive, and I should hesitate to declare that there is nothing in what he has to say. At the very least, he has importantly illuminated Melville's irony. . . 'Melville's Quarrel with God' is a magnificently made volume, one of the most original examples of book design I have encountered in some time." Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 13 '52 390w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 69:497 Ap 23 '52 1250w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Stone
Commonweal 56:152 My 16 '52 1000w

"A detailed and thorough study of an aspect of Melville's work that has generally escaped the attention of his numerous biographers and commentators. . . The reader may quarrel with Thompson on some of the findings, but will certainly find the book a stimulating contribution to American criticism. Recommended for college libraries." Herbert Cahoon
+ — Library J 77:595 Ap 1 '52 150w

Nation 175:99 Ag 2 '52 130w

"Mr. Thompson is admirably objective in presenting his thesis, but he does not disguise his opinion that Melville's failure to come to terms with life argues a degree of intellectual and emotional immaturity. . . But whatever judgment we pass on Melville's negation, it produced some remarkable books, into whose murkier depths Mr. Thompson has turned a revealing light." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 22 '52 700w

"It is safe to say that this book will upset Melville readers more than any book about his mind and art published in many years. . . Mr. Thompson's contribution to Melville studies, consists of more than a startling thesis ingeniously argued. One is rewarded by his fine studies of the influence of writers like Bayle, Milton, Montaigne, Camoens, and Carlyle upon the art and thought of Melville. . . It is also a pleasure to find several excellent analyses of important, if neglected, Melville poems. . . The final failure of 'Melville's Quarrel with God' may be attributed to the super-subtlety of its author, who perceives a bear where there is but a bush." H. P. Vincent

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '52 900w

"One feels a pang of conscience in not singling out the virtues of 'Melville's Quarrel with God,' however much one may be tempted to dismiss the book by renaming it 'Thompson's Quarrel with Melville.' These virtues are the author's liveliness and audacity, his readiness to accept the obvious fact that Melville's books do contain ironies, puns, symbols, and myths, his emphasis on the Rabelaisian and Voltairean influence. It is too bad that he has committed himself to a method which is indefensible in itself and which is so admirably calculated to pervert and obscure his real virtues as a scholar-critic." Richard Chase

Sat R 35:14 My 31 '52 800w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:135 Je '52 240w

THOMPSON, NELLIE ZETTA. Vitalized assemblies; 200 programs for all occasions. 160p $2 Dutton

371.33 High schools—Assemblies 52-7803

Material on assemblies for junior high and secondary schools and junior colleges. Index.

Booklist 49:17 S 1 '52

"This book contains over 200 suggested programs; but better still, it helps the teacher to plan such experiences with the pupils and to carry them through in an educational way. . .

A valuable section on evaluating the assembly programs concludes this helpful volume."

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 N 15 '52 140w

Kirkus 20:335 Je 1 '52 130w

"Will be invaluable to administrators and teachers."

+ School & Society 76:128 Ag 23 '52 20w

Wis Lib Bul 48:212 S '52

THOMPSON, WALTER HENRY. I was Churchill's shadow. 200p il $2.75 British bk. centre

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer. World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain [51-13875]

The author, a retired Scotland Yard inspector, was assigned as bodyguard to Churchill in 1939. He describes with many anecdotes his years when he was responsible for the Prime Minister's safety.

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 16 '51 180w

"It is easy to see that Inspector Thompson's book can hardly fail to be a great storehouse of anecdotes, inside glimpses of a great man's day-to-day life, and many footnotes to history. It is all of this, and more, for Mr. Thompson is a keen-eyed reporter with a pleasant style." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 250w

"This sort of personalia will be of use to Churchill's biographers (and over the centuries he is likely to have several), and it makes entertaining reading now." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R 35:72 Mr 8 '52 230w

THOMSON, JAMES ALEXANDER KERR. Shakespeare and the classics. 254p $4 Macmillan

822.33 Shakespeare, William. Literature. Comparative [52-2934]

"As a classical scholar, J. A. K. Thomson examines the classical elements and allusions of Shakespeare, 'gentle, never school'd, and yet learned.' In the course of his study he considers the standards of Elizabethan England's classical scholarship, the attitude of Shakespeare's contemporaries toward his learning, the pitfalls of evaluating Shakespeare's indebtedness to classical originals, his treatment of classical myths, his debt to Plutarch, and understanding of Greek tragedy." Sat R

"It is rich in material of high value for interpretative and critical purposes. But in form it is so loose and inchoate that much of its value will be wasted." H. B. Charlton

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 My 20 '52 450w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis

New Statesman & Nation 43:503 Ap 26 '52 1300w

"Mr. Thomson confirms the standard scholarly consensus on Shakespeare's learning but his fresh treatment of an old theme has its rewards." S. M.

+ Sat R 35:34 N 15 '52 60w

"Since Professor Thomson emphasizes at the outset that he is not an Elizabethan specialist, the reader of his book expects to find occasional errors or misinterpretations. And it is true that if Professor Thomson had read O. J. Campbell's books he might not have referred so off-handedly to 'the strange view . . . that Troilus is a comedy,' or have answered so dogmatically, 'Of course it is not.' . . But his knowledge of Elizabethan literature is much wider than he admits, and it does not often let him down; and his knowledge of classical literature is greater than is common to-day among Shakespearean scholars. There is a great deal of interesting material in his book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 11 '52 850w

THORNE, ANTHONY. Young man on a dolphin. 254p $3 Lippincott

52-10931

Satirical novel about a young Englishman who goes to Venice in festival time and has some unorthodox amorous experiences.

Kirkus 20:424 J1 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 110w

"Begins shrilly and mirthlessly in Venice. Once the author has got his poet away from the Grand Canal and shipwrecked him among the fishermen's wives of Pescano, his book becomes witty, ribald and light-hearted." John Raymond

+ New Statesmen & Nation 43:594 My 17 '52 40w

"Mr. Thorne's latest amiable satire. . . Mr. Thorne's touch is happily light enough to keep this bit of fluff in the air."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 21 '52 200w

"Only when he contents himself with telling an unembellished story, a comic tale in the Thorne Smith vein, does the novel attain anything like the pace demanded by its essentially frivolous nature. These passages—especially the solution of the vexing problem of how Burnett's attentions to the scores of husbandless wives on Pescano are to be divided—are superb. Regrettably, they are also infrequent." D. M. Mankiewicz

+ N Y Times p31 S 21 '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 19 '52 500w

"The stay on the island, more than half the bulk of the book, is fine, tried comedy, and throughout it Billy Burnett comes alive, as does his corporal's guard of charming temptresses. The island idyl, unfortunately, is long in coming and is prefaced by a rather dreary section." Al Hine

+ Sat R 35:17 S 27 '52 490w

"From start to finish, for anyone who isn't uncompromisingly puritanical in his literary tastes, this novel is consistently jolly." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 158:624 My 9 '52 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 23 '52 120w

THORNING, JOSEPH FRANCIS. Miranda: world citizen; introd. by Galo Plaza; foreword by Sumner Welles. 324p il $5 Univ. of Fla. press

B or 92 Miranda, Francisco de 52-10002

"Dr. Thorning's biography gives us a very graphic picture of the Venezuelan patriot who came to be known as the 'Precursor' of Latin American independence. The career of Miranda was indeed an extraordinary one, and the author tells the story in a way that throws a clearer light upon the history of the period than a dozen histories of broader scope could do." Commonweal

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 J1 27 '52 330w

"Miranda emerges from Dr. Thorning's work—which shows exhaustive research and scholarship—as a monumental American. The volume is not, however, an apologia. Dr. Thorning, a graduate of the (Roman) Catholic University of America who is well known in Latin America for his cultural and literary works on Spanish and Hispanic-American affairs, points out Miranda's failings, and the reader is free to form his own judgments." Robert Hallett

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 J1 23 '52 480w

"It is rare to find a biography in which scholarly research and dramatic presentation are so happily combined. A foreword by Sumner Welles speaks of the volume as 'an immensely valuable contribution to the cause of inter-American understanding,' and the comment is fully justified." C. G. Fenwick

+ Commonweal 56:299 Je 27 '52 340w

"Of the several ways of telling Miranda's story, Father Thorning has chosen the lyrical

. . . Father Thorning does not gloss over Miranda's shortcomings. He gives more space to his tasteless lecheries than does any other biographer with whom the reviewer is familiar.

Despite such reservations as to his stature as 'World Citizen,' Francisco de Miranda still offers fine material for any aspiring biographer. Meanwhile, modern readers will find meat in the older 'Life of Miranda,' by William Spence Robertson." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 29 '52 1000w

"Father Joseph F. Thorning has told this fascinating story of one of the first 'citizens of the world' in a compact, scholarly book. He has had access to new documentation which complements, improves upon and rectifies, in part, the work of William Spence Robertson (1929), which was the first important contribution of North American historians to the study of Miranda." German Arciniegas

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '52 800w

"The form is here but it lacks substance; the real flavor of this remarkable man, typical of the eighteenth century, has eluded Dr. Thorning. At every turn in the book Miranda is 'the standard bearer of democracy,' the 'knight errant of liberty' the 'future world citizen,' until one forgets that Miranda was an ensemble of all the forces of that Age of Reason in which politics, debauchery, intellect, fashion, and brutality seethed and bubbled together in so extraordinary a potpourri." V. W. von Hagen

+ Sat R 35:32 Ag 9 '52 800w

THORNTON, FRANCIS BEAUCHESNE. Alexander Pope: Catholic poet. 312p $4.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Pope, Alexander

51-12760

A biography of Pope written by the book editor of the Catholic Digest. The author writes with the express purpose of emphasizing the Catholic influence on Pope's life and works. Index.

"The theses that Pope's devious tactics were a natural result of anti-Catholic discrimination and penalties and that his ideas largely are compatible with and derivative from church doctrine are plausibly urged. It will be interesting to see the extent to which subsequent Pope scholarship accepts them. Unhappily, Thornton's own writing lacks his subject's qualities of grace and precision. 'Alexander Pope: Catholic Poet' is sadly undisciplined—at times repetitive and florid, never tersely efficient." A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 2 '52 160w

Nation 174:532 My 31 '52 200w

"Father Thornton's is a full interpretive biography which tries to show Pope as 'an aggressive Catholic,' and is written with uncommon felicity of expression and observation, and with a sympathetic appreciation of the poetry." Robert Halband

+ Sat R 35:19 My 3 '52 250w

THRING, MEREDITH WOOLRIDGE. Science of flames and furnaces. 416p il $6.50 Wiley

536 Furnaces

52-9141

"A treatise on the scientific aspects of industrial furnaces, including such widely different devices as sulphuric acid stills and soaking pits for steel billets. Thermodynamics, the chemistry of combustion, heat transfer, and gas flow are considered. In addition, there are valuable chapters on furnace design and construction. The author is associated with the British Iron and Steel Research Association." (Library J) Index.

"This valuable book is recommended to student and industrial engineer alike. It is clearly written and amply illustrated." Bernard Lewis

+ Chem & Eng N 30:4984 N 24 '52 250w

Reviewed by B. K. McKee

Chem Eng 59:414 J1 '52 550w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1211 J1 '52 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:40 My '52

THROM, EDWARD L., ed. See Popular mechanics magazine

THURBER, JAMES. Thurber album; a new collection of pieces about people. 346p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

818

52-10216

A collection of articles about the author's relatives and friends back in Ohio. Almost all of the sketches have appeared in the New Yorker. Illustrated with photographs.

"I should call [this] his most endearing book: portraits of his mother and father, recollections of his huge clan of Fisher and Jackson relatives, the account of his boyhood in Columbus, of his favorite professors at Ohio State, and of his cub reporting under Kuehner of the Columbus Dispatch—lively and affectionate writing without a trace of softness." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 190:80 J1 '52 420w

Booklist 48:335 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:234 J1 '52 50w

"As a morning wind refreshes, so does the outlook of this book. James Thurber's was a goodly heritage and he knows it. With infinite wit, gentleness, dexterity and a total recall, he turns a major American talent to picturing mid-western Americans of fifty years gone by." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 175:397 Ag '52 200w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 8 '52 380w

Reviewed by Neil Martin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 5 '52 1000w

"The loving care with which he handles his people marks Thurber as a very rich biographer. This fact alone would make his work great, even without the extraordinary deftness of phrase and line that has been the bold sign of the Thurber talent for making us smile during these many melancholy years." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 56:275 Je 20 '52 750w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:343 O '52 20w

Kirkus 20:243 Ap 1 '52 170w

"Highly recommended." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:832 My 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '52 120w

Nation 175:18 J1 5 '52 110w

"A work of complex fascination, brilliant, funny, pious at one and the same time, it captures the feel of nineteenth-century middle-class American life in a way reminiscent in its effect of novelists like Miss Alcott and W. D. Howells; and it relates Mr. Thurber himself firmly to the American past." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:396 O 4 '52 700w

"It makes quite a story in the hands of a man of Thurber's vivid recollection. I have never set foot in Columbus, Ohio, but everything he mentions I recognize instantly, not by its contours or its setting, but by the touch of the uncanny, the blatant impossibility, and the wild humor that informs it all." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 1 '52 1100w

"Somewhere, some time, some person is sure to say of this book, 'Thurber has done it again.' So let's say it now and get it over with." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p3 Je 1 '52 1150w

"For the Thurber enthusiast the book is a 'must,' of course. For others it is a marvelously vivid evocation of our Middle West in a day when things were more tranquil than now, and when a good, well-developed eccentric was regarded more with affection than, as in these days, with suspicion." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 2 '52 450w

"Joe Taylor is reported to have said, 'A straight line can also be the dulllest distance between two points.' A straight line through this 'Album' is about the pleasantest journey I have made in a long, long time." David McCord

+ Sat R 35:17 Je 7 '52 1000w

Reviewed by C. E. Vulliamy

Spec 189:438 O 3 '52 180w

Spring'd Republican p8D Je 29 '52 280w

Time 59:98 Je 2 '52 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 10 '52 600w

Wis Lib Bul 48:170 J1 '52

TICKELL, JERRARD. Island rescue [Eng title: Appointment with Venus]. 256p $2.75 Doubleday

52-5232

A gently humorous satire on the wartime tale of adventure, this is the story of how a British secret service agent engineered the removal of a valuable cow from one of the Channel Islands occupied by the Germans in 1940.

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

Bookmark 12:57 D '52 30w

"With such intriguing theme, Mr. Tickell has woven a novel of considerable charm and ever mounting suspense. The writing is so easy and polished that the finished product is deceptive, and almost conceals the craft that went into the composition and plotting."

Seymour Korman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 24 '52 300w

Kirkus 20:329 Je 1 '52 200w

"Good reading for your high-school clientele." M. D. Read

+ Library J 77:1525 S 15 '52 40w

"This is an able thriller of quite exceptional charm and if this seems an unlikely or even undesirable coincidence let me engage to promise that Mr. Tickell will persuade you." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 10 '52 250w

"It is most difficult to describe the variety, humor and pathos and drama of this story without uncritical enthusiasm. It is fine in writing, structure and conception. The best thing about it is that, though it is an animal story, the animal is absent. She has only about three moos and a calf in the whole story, but she is just off stage all the time." Phil Strong

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '52 550w

"The adventures seem too quick and easy for solid suspense, but the deeper plot behind the frivolous-seeming cow project makes it more credible, and you'll enjoy every word of it. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 Ag 17 '52 60w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald

Sat R 35:38 Ag 23 '52 110w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p6D Ag 24 '52 350w

"This is a quite exciting and competently told adventure story which lays stress on the gallantry—to the point of folly—of the English."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 19 '51 200w

TILLET, MRS DOROTHY (STOCKBRIDGE). Deadly beloved, by John Stephen Strange, pseud. 192p $2.50 Doubleday

52-511

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ja 20 '52 100w

"Entirely acceptable."

+ Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 41:526 N 1 '52 60w

TILLET, D. S.—Continued

"There is small doubt as to probabilities and John Stephen Strange avoids examining them closely by this dispersal of attention about the cast, staying carefully on the surface and keeping one rather grimly entertained. It's all very smoothly managed and all pretty familiar, too." James Sandoe
 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 13 '52 140w

"By far the best Strange since the memorable 'Look Your Last,' this deftly sketches life in a brownstone near Sutton Place as the background for an ironically convincing picture of murder which sounds like an unusually good adaptation of a true case." Anthony Boucher
 + N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '52 90w

"It is a sound and interesting work, very much worth your attention. The dentist is finally brought to justice by Barney Gantt and his wife, Muriel, who are one of the more tedious couples in the detective business but not really hard to ignore."
 + New Yorker 27:88 Ja 19 '52 100w

"Real-sounding people. Strange's sensitive touch and well-handled suspense keep you interested." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 80w

"Rates plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 30w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
 Spec 189:451 O 3 '52 20w

TILLYARD, EUSTACE MANDEVILLE WET-ENMALL. Studies in Milton. 176p $2.50 Macmillan

821 Milton, John [51-12753]

"This is a collection of ten essays (plus two brief appendices) not all closely related to one another except for their common relevance to Milton. Four essays and the two appendices have been printed before; six are new. One of these new studies, 'The Crisis of "Paradise Lost"', constitutes more than a fourth of the volume and is followed by three brief pieces (also new) with closely related arguments: 'A Note on Satan,' 'Satan, Gabriel and the Plowman,' and 'Adam and Eve in Paradise.'" Sat R

Reviewed by J. S. Diekhoff

Sat R 35:14 Ja 5 '52 450w

"Dr. Tillyard is a mature literary scholar bent on 'seeing the object as in itself it really is.' He deals with large problems of interpretation which have been the subject of discussion for generation after generation of students. There is nothing startlingly new, but the issues are deeply meditated and the conclusions always interesting. Of the essays which appear for the first time in this collection 'The Crisis of Paradise Lost' is the most notable." J. H. Hanford

+ Yale R n s 41:635 summer '52 290w

TILMAN, HAROLD WILLIAM. China to Chitral; with 69 photographs taken by the author. 123p maps $4.75 Cambridge

951 [915.1] China—Description and travel. Sinkiang. Mountaineering [52-6710]

Account of the author's trip across China from Shanghai to Urumchi, and beyond to Chinese Turkestan. The purpose of the trip was to attempt to climb two mountains in Central Asia. Tho he did not succeed in his assault on the mountains he returned safely with this record of adventures and hardships, and entertaining glimpses of strange ways of life. Illustrated with many photographs.

Booklist 48:245 Ap 1 '52

"H. W. Tilman's reputation as a mountaineer is secure... The climbs described in 'China to Chitral' add nothing to his stature as an alpinist, but reveal him more than ever before as a wit, essayist, and charming tale teller." Ernest Richter

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 16 '52 340w

Kirkus 19:652 N 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
 Library J 77:142 Ja 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by Alastair Hetherington
 Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '51 100w

Reviewed by P. D. Smith
 New Statesman & Nation 43:74 Ja 19 '52 280w

Reviewed by Hal Borland
 N Y Times p23 Ap 13 '52 320w

"He is, as he puts it, a traveller, who 'uses travel as an end in itself,' and not a passenger, who 'is merely carried as a means to an end.' He is also an entertaining writer who misses nothing."

+ New Yorker 28:95 Mr 1 '52 160w

"His book offers fireside pleasure for all mountain lovers who enjoy dry British humor, and far places with strange-sounding names like Urumchi, Bogdo Ola, Kashgar. There are excellent pictures with lighthearted captions." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 150w

"If ever better travel books are written in the lifetime of H. M. Tilman, it will probably be he who will write them. This is his best book since the 'Ascent Of Nanda Devi,' which was consummate good writing." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R 35:32 J1 5 '52 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p78 Ja 25 '52 800w

TIMMERMANS, FELIX. Perfect joy of St Francis; tr. from the Flemish [by Raphael Brown]. 344p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Francis of Assisi, Saint 52-10903

Somewhat fictionalized version of the life of St Francis of Assisi.

Booklist 48:378 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:235 J1 '52 20w

"This book has the utter simplicity of a medieval morality play, and is as deeply intentional in its message." Fanny Butcher
 + Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 22 '52 650w

"The Perfect Joy of St. Francis is so beautiful a work of art as almost to reconcile me to accept it in place of a scholarly study in which sources are investigated and problems formally weighed. After all, though the scholarship is not allowed to appear, it underlies everything. This may well come to be the book by which St. Francis will be best known to the mass of readers." Theodore Maynard
 + Commonweal 56:323 J1 4 '52 600w

"A story that never states is here rendered in devout and simple terms that will touch the believers."

+ Kirkus 20:330 Je 1 '52 220w

"Not nearly so restrained as Theodore Maynard's recreation of the saint of Assisi published some years ago, this narrative more closely resembles a prose lyrical poem than a novel. It will thus appeal more to readers of devotional books than to those who seek entertainment in their fiction. Felix Timmermans writes with sympathy, enthusiasm and warmth, as one who is eager to convey his own love of the thirteenth-century saint to others." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p16 J1 13 '52 290w

"The whole is set down in a simple, almost childlike prose that has moments of naive beauty and is generally suited to the spiritual message the author would deliver. Often, however, its simplicity seems self-conscious, which may be a fault of translation rather than of the author's original Flemish."

+ Sat R 35:37 Ag 23 '52 190w

TIRATSOO, ERIC NESHAN. Petroleum geology. 449p 11 maps $7.50 McGraw

553.28 Petroleum—Geology 52-8154

Contents: Introduction to petroleum geology; The origin of petroleum; Migration; Accumulation; The geological and geographical distribution of the world's oilfields; U.S.S.R. and Europe; Oilfields of Asia and Africa; The United States; Canada and Mexico; Caribbean Islands and South America; Surface indications of oil; Surface oil-finding; Subsurface exploration (geophysics); Exploitation geology; Drilling mud; Methods of correlation. Bibliography. Index.

"It is heavily documented with literature references. It was designed chiefly for use as a text at the Royal School of Mines in London, but it will be useful also as a general treatise or book of reference." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:1517 S 15 '52 60w

"The descriptions of the world's oil fields occupy almost one-half of the volume. They are concise but are supplemented by literature references. The chapters on oil finding and geophysics provide a readable short review of current techniques. Paper and illustrations are of good quality, and the format of the book is excellent."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:10 Ja '52

TITTLE, ERNEST FREMONT. Gospel according to Luke; exposition and application; with a foreword by Halford E. Luccock. 274p $3.75 Harper

226.4 Bible. New Testament—Luke 51-13352

"A nonscholarly commentary on the third gospel. His effort is not primarily that of historical research but of putting into current language the Teachings of Jesus as recorded by Luke. He quotes the familiar sidelights, including Clarke, and on the whole he has made the reader more appreciative of Luke's superiority over John in writing on the same topic." Wis Lib Bul

"Dr. Tittle was not concerned with technical matters in this rich book but with Luke's spiritual values. These are set forth with his customary discernment, clearness, and persuasive charm." Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 23 '51 120w

+ Christian Century 69:102 Ja 23 '52 180w

Reviewed by P. S. Minear

Crozer Q 29:248 Ap '52 160w

"In this book, as in all of his preaching and writing, Dr. Tittle reveals a warm Christian faith and a vital concern for social and humanitarian causes. Ministers especially will welcome this book for its homiletic value."

+ Kirkus 19:660 N 1 '51 100w

Wis Lib Bul 48:29 Ja '52

TOBEY, CHARLES WILLIAM. Return to morality. 123p $2 Doubleday

364.973 Crime and criminals—U.S. Corruption (in politics). U.S.—Moral conditions 52-5121

"When the Kefauver committee hearings were making their remarkable televised penetration of American thinking and emotion, no small part of the impact came from the little sermons preached every so often by Senator Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire. Senator Tobey was the old-fashioned conscience of the American people, speaking like a Greek chorus. Now the Senator has put his sermons into a small book." N Y Times

Booklist 48:191 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:234 Jl '52 30w

"Not only does Senator Charles W. Tobey (R) of New Hampshire present a startling picture of corruption that demands the attention and action of every right-thinking citizen but he points out confidently that the most effective method of bringing about needed reforms is the application of fundamental religious principles to everyday problems." D. O. J. Messenger

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 19 '52 1050w

Current Hist 22:320 My '52 60w

"An appealing thesis, undoubtedly, but better handled in deeper and more thoughtful detail by clergymen and sociologists, in whom the suspicious aura of opportunism is not so apparent."

Kirkus 19:671 N 15 '51 190w

"When the Kefauver investigations were holding the nation's attention, some impatience was expressed over Senator Tobey's time-consuming speeches. But no one can read the present little book without recognizing his genuine concern that criminality on so huge a scale has been allowed to develop unchecked. Those who would refresh their memories on what the investigating committee unearthed as to gambling and big-time racketeering, even to murder, the lawlessness ignored, if not actually connived at by enforcement officials and high-ranking politicians, will do well to read what the Senator has set down."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 6 '52 190w

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

N Y Times p6 Ja 20 '52 500w

Reviewed by R. J. McCracken

Sat R 35:44 Mr 1 '52 700w

Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 130w

TOBOLDT, WILLIAM KING, and others. Automatic transmissions. 248p il $4 Laurel publishers, 325 Ash St, Scranton 9, Pa.

629.24 Automobiles—Transmission devices 51-13638

"The automatic transmissions now available on eleven makes of cars are discussed from the point of view of practical automobile mechanics. Main points covered for each are operating principles, principal parts, servicing operations, trouble shooting, and repairs. The material is organized into short sections and paragraphs and is so written that it is easy to understand." (Library J) Index.

"There are around a dozen illustrations for each transmission but more are needed. The book will be particularly useful to student mechanics and to mechanics in independent garages where the official repair manuals for each make of transmission are not all available." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:538 Mr 15 '52 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:82 N '51

TODD, RUTHVEN. Space cat; il. by Paul Galdone. 69p $2 Scribner

52-12576

Story for seven to ten-year-olds which tells about a kitten who was so flight-minded he became the first cat to visit the moon.

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

Horn Bk 28:320 O '52 50w

"Firmly shaded drawings by Paul Galdone add further worlds of enjoyment to a book for all cat lovers and stratosphere addicts."

+ Kirkus 20:657 O 1 '52 130w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 77:1819 O 15 '52 30w

"It is not as funny as 'Miss Pickerell Goes to Mars,' but boys of 8 to 10 will greet it with joy." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p18 N 16 '52 30w

"The visit to the moon is the best and most imaginative part of the story, sounding real and serious, and also lively. Paul Galdone's illustrations are witty and solid." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times pt2, p38 N 16 '52 60w

"It is possible that 'Space Cat' is more entertaining when considered as a satire on current science fiction than as a child's book." Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 16 '52 90w

TOLEDANO, RALPH DE. See De Toledano, R.

TOLSTOI, EDWARD. Living with diabetes. 90p $2 Crown

616.46 [616.63] Diabetes 51-11992

A New York city physician who has treated some four thousand diabetics since 1937, discusses the various methods of treatment for the disease. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:44 O 1 '52

"A very readable lay text that carefully explains the reputable author's 'scientific evidence.'" J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1400 S 1 '52 130w

TOMPKINS, JANE F. (MRS BURT MORTON MCCONNELL). Black bear twins; il. by Kurt Wiese. 112p $2.25 Lippincott

52-7460

Relates the lively doings of two black bear cubs during their first few months of life.

Bookmark 12:13 O '52 20w

"Though sentimentally styled in the extreme humanization of the animals, this is informative in the ways of the forest."

Kirkus 20:367 J1 1 '52 110w

"The book has more conversation and story element than some of the other twin books, but the nature facts are realistic and good. Recommended for grades 3-6." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 80w

School & Society 76:159 S 6 '52 20w

TOOKER, DOROTHY. Beatrice Perry, X-ray technician. 250p $2.50 Dodd

52-8990

"A career as an X-ray technician had been Bea Perry's ambition all through high school, and she was fully prepared for the year of hard work which lay ahead of her when she enrolled in the course in radiography at Beechwood General Hospital. What she could not foresee was the adventures and the fun she would have, her friendship with Pansy Brown, the helpfulness and understanding of her instructors, her exciting romance with Dr. Sanders." N Y Times

"Since the story is secondary to the career and its terminology, this book is recommended for the older teen-ager." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 77:912 My 15 '52 50w

"A career book that cannot be recommended for style or story, this offers unusually detailed information about a field of great interest." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 17 '52 100w

Reviewed by Alberta Eiseman

N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '52 120w

TORRENCE, FREDERIC RIDGELY. Poems; new ed., with new poems. 127p $2 Macmillan

811 52-3721

"Mr. Torrence was a member of the staff of the New York Public Library for six years, and it was during this period that his first book of poetry appeared—a half century ago. His Poems was published in 1941 and received the Shelley Memorial Prize for that year. The new edition contains additional poems written before his death on Christmas Day, 1950, and one turns to a phrase from what may be the most recent poem in the volume, 'The bow be green in a new beginning.'" Library J

Booklist 49:71 O 15 '52

"His work is finished and it now begins its trial by time. It will be through this volume that his work will be kept green, as new readers turn to the best of his poetry, and make their own discovery of its excellence." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:1514 S 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 175:391 O 25 '52 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal

New Repub 128:28 Ja 5 '53 120w

"His best poems practically compel a second reading, and after a third, the reader finds they are memorized. In poems like 'Adam's Dying' and 'The Son,' complex thought is so compressed into simple language that one does not think, 'That is said well.' One thinks, rather, 'That could not have been said otherwise.'" John Brooks

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '52 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 12 '52 70w

"A true American mystic, heir to the Transcendentalism of Emerson and Thoreau, Ridgely Torrence was of his time. Not oracular, he was a see-er, who endured the political distemper of the age, its violent world wars, its social outrages. To these themes he brought the incandescence of his rare intelligence and vision." I. L. S.

+ Sat R 35:21 D 27 '52 230w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Jim Bridger, American frontiersman; story and pictures. (Pioneer bk) 48p $1.50 Whitman, A.

B or 92 Bridger, James—Juvenile literature 52-1181

Short biography of an American frontiersman who discovered Great Salt Lake in 1824, guided various expeditions, etc. He died in 1881. Written for ages 9 to 12.

Kirkus 20:227 Ap 1 '52 80w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 77:731 Ap 15 '52 30w

"A brief, crisply written biography." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 J1 13 '52 20w

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52 40w

Wis Lib Bul 48:177 J1 '52

TOWN HALL, INC, NEW YORK. People in your life. See Hughes, M. M., ed.

TOWNSEND, GILBERT, and DALZELL, JAMES RALPH. How to plan a house. 2d ed rev 584p il $6.95 Am. tech. soc.

728 Architecture, Domestic 52-10904

"Brings together in conveniently arranged form much information fundamental to a successful home-building plan—selection of proper site, styling, foundations and loads, materials, room plans, and budget requirements. The second edition aims at modernizing the text and brings it into conformity with today's changing building designs." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943.

Booklist 48:381 J1 15 '52

"This book is both a text for practical students and a guide for those prospective homeowners who like to sweat out all the details of planning their own houses. Most aspects of the subject are at least touched upon, but the book is valuable chiefly for its wide range of information on structural details and the technical aspects of planning and construction."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:51 J1 '52

TOWNSEND, JACK, and MCBRIDE, TOM MOORE. Bartender's book; being a history of sundry alcoholic potations, libations, and mixtures . . . relating certain adventures that befell those who mixed them [etc] with the aid of Bernard Seaman, artist, who has decorated sundry pages with appropriate drawings. 148p $2.95 Viking

663.8 Beverages, Alcoholic 51-13876

"[In this book] the average reader will find, carefully arranged in recipe form, practically any mixed drink he'll want to make. Like any such book, this one will provoke arguments among individuals who have their own notions about a julep or a Martini, or what-not, but the text allows for such variations in taste and for specific devotion to a private formula." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 19:343 J1 1 '51 140w

"The first twenty pages of this book are fascinating reading... Two indexes—one by recipe, one by ingredient make this complete guide to drinks doubly valuable to the amateur." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 76:2008 D 1 '51 30w

"The book is well arranged and indexed doubly—once by the name of the drink and again according to the main ingredient used, so that you may look something up when you cannot remember its name, provided you remember that the base is whisky, gin, rum or whatever." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 20 '51 120w

Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 29 '51 140w

TOWNSEND, WILLIAM CAMERON. Lazaro Cardenas, Mexican democrat; with a foreword by Frank Tannenbaum. 379p il $4 Wahr

B or 92 Cárdenas, Lázaro 52-7122

"The Californian author of this appreciative biography has passed most of his life among the Indians of Guatemala and Mexico. In 1935 while he was teaching the Aztec Indians of a village to read their own language, President Cárdenas came upon him. A long continued friendship dates from that year. Although no bibliography or bibliographical footnotes appear, this volume is obviously based on research in addition to personal knowledge of the subject." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by J. L. Mecham

Ann Am Acad 282:184 J1 '52 600w

"The author is an unabashed admirer of Cardenas and of Mexico, but a candid observer who reports sorrowfully rather than objectively the shortcomings of his hero and of the country where, as a linguist, Mr. Townsend has spent most of his professional career." L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 10 '52 320w

"The Mexican revolution is one of the most dramatic developments in 20th century Latin America. Controversial in many aspects, there is no doubt, however, that it has made substantial progress toward forging a nation out of all the diverse racial and social elements of that country. And the role Lázaro Cárdenas has played in that historic and continuing revolution-turned-evolution is bound to come more and more to the fore. For this reason Mr. Townsend's book is valuable, giving a warm, sympathetic view of Señor Cárdenas, with whom the author has a close personal relationship." R. M. Hallett

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 24 '52 600w

"A highly laudatory account of one of Mexico's most dynamic presidents."

Current Hist 22:169 Mr '52 50w

Foreign Affairs 31:168 O '52 10w

"Recommended, especially as it is the only full-length Cárdenas biography in English." J. A. Borome

+ Library J 77:530 Mr 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by R. C. Lewis

N Y Times p12 Je 15 '52 310w

School & Society 75:95 F 9 '52 20w

"If the author adds little to what is known about the Mexican Revolution and the advances made during it, he does succeed in portraying Cárdenas as one of the truly great public men of the era. . . . The author has had the advantage of friendship and collaboration with Cárdenas, an association which lends to this biography both the validity and the faults of an eyewitness account."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:121 Je '52 220w

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH, and ASHTON-GWATKIN, FRANK TRELAWNY ARTHUR, eds. Survey of international affairs, 1939-1946; v 1, World in March, 1939 [issued under the auspices of the Royal Inst. of int. affairs]. 546p maps $9 Oxford

940.532 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history. World politics (52-2741)

"This is the first of some 12 volumes to be issued under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs which will attempt to provide a detailed documentary history of World War II from 1939 to 1945. As Historian Toynbee points out in his preface, the world slid into World War II by degrees, the creeping agony being drawn out for more than ten years. March, 1939, was chosen as the date to launch this project because it marked an effective turning point in history." San Francisco Chronicle

Foreign Affairs 31:150 O '52 50w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '52 700w

"This is a laudable project, written by historians who know how to bring clarity to the confusion of the times." D. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 1 '52 270w

"Though restrained in compass, Mr. Gillie's contribution is very nearly perfect. . . . Miss Duff's essay on Italy has a similar quality, though she is not so close in feeling to the people of Italy as Mr. Gillie to the people of France. . . . Closing this volume, the enthralled reader may nevertheless ask himself whether this picture of the world in March, 1939, is in every way as accurate as the evidence we possess allows."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Je 13 '52 1000w

TRAGER, HELEN GIBSON, and YARROW, MARIAN RADKE. They learn what they live; prejudice in young children. 392p $4.50; pa $3 Harper

136.7 Child study. Antipathies and prejudices 52-5729

"In a recent study of racial and religious prejudice in young children, 250 primary children in the Philadelphia public schools were made the subject of a three-year experiment. Purposes of the study were to determine when prejudices start, how they are learned, who is responsible for them, and what the schools can do about them. This book describes the experiment in detail and makes an honest attempt to evaluate its results. Bibliography. Index." Library J

Booklist 48:331 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:234 J1 '52 20w

"A valuable documentary for the more assiduous teacher, social worker, therapist."

+ Kirkus 20:215 Mr 15 '52 150w

"A thought provoking and helpful book, pointing out a serious need and showing one way of meeting it." Elizabeth Hodges

Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 130w

School & Society 75:336 My 24 '52 10w

"The immediate and practical value of 'They Learn What They Live', a study of prejudice in your children, cannot be overestimated." Mildred Prince

+ Springf'd Republican p17A Je 15 '52 150w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:311 S '52 210w

TRAVEN, BRUNO, pseud. Rebellion of the hanged; tr. from the Spanish. 377p $3.50 Knopf

51-11974

Novel based on the lives of the exploited Indians in a Mexican jungle lumber camp. The time is 1910, at the time of the rising against the rule of Diaz. The Indians revolt and massacre their exploiters, and go to join the army.

Booklist 48:281 My 1 '52

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 27 '52 490w

Reviewed by Seymour Krim

Commonweal 56:250 Je 13 '52 750w

"An important, searching book."

+ Kirkus 20:133 F 15 '52 200w

"An outright call for revolution, by the downtrodden, this is not a subtle work. The dreary life of the mahogany workers is vividly portrayed; however, the unrestrained cruelty of this uneven tale may be too shocking for some. Recommended." M. S. Byam

TRAVEN, BRUNO—Continued

+ Library J 77:717 Ap 15 '52 170w
Nation 175:18 J1 5 '52 110w

"There are appalling scenes,—though B. Traven somehow avoids the shudder of sadism. His dialogue has a stilted naivety that can't be a sheer invention of his circular relay of translators, from English via Swiss-German and Costa-Rica Spanish back to English." G. D. Painter

New Statesman & Nation 43:161 F 9 '52 200w

"The background is authentic, and the story an intense monotone of misery, corruption and oppression, objectively, almost casually written, but hypnotically impelling." E. L. Acken

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 20 '52 400w

"Here is the making of a minor Anabasis. From what I'd heard of Traven's earlier books (among them 'The Treasure of Sierra Madre') I would have thought him the man to write it. But somehow his people turn to lay figures once Candido and his family become lost in the mass. Only Traven's rare power saves the book from becoming another of the dreary proletarian novels of the Twenties and Thirties." Harry Sylvester

N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '52 1000w
New Yorker 28:137 My 10 '52 80w

"Mr. Traven' has shown once more that he can tell a story, so long as he keeps it within the bounds of his special talent. It is when he begins to belabor the moral of his tale, to make it so unnecessarily obvious, that he falls down as a novelist, regardless of how right he may be in principle." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 2 '52 500w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Sat R 35:15 Ap 26 '52 550w

"The feeling behind the story, which has its moments, is patently genuine, but the narrative style is explanatory to excess, the irony is blunt, the conclusion over-didactic." R. D. Charques

+ — Spec 188:122 Ja 25 '52 100w
Time 59:114 Ap 21 '52 750w

"For those who like horrors there are floggings and tortures to satisfy the most insatiable. No detail of the sufferings of the wretched Indians, represented as possessing every virtue—just as their oppressors are lacking all humanity—is spared. So long as the Indians are in subjection the book moves rapidly to the echo of evil laughter from 'the bosses,' and screams of violated girls or children whose ears are cut off; but when the Indians finally rebel the style falls back on clichés inseparable from the novel of propaganda."

Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 8 '52 300w

TRAVERS, PAMELA L. Mary Poppins in the park; il. by Mary Shepard. 235p $2.50 Harcourt

52-10066

"The adventures in this book should be understood to have happened during any of the three visits of Mary Poppins to the Banks family." (Author's note) "Animals, London parks, country gardens, Nannies and nurseries and tea and jam. All these materials were in the earlier Mary Poppins books and they are still here. Mary Poppins herself is a Nannie transfigured, the dreamboat of all parents and all children." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R)

Booklist 49:130 D 1 '52

Bookmark 12:35 N '52

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 176:205 D '52 20w

"Vain, self-satisfied, indestructible, Mary Poppins again goes serenely on her way, thru these and other adventures, regarded with awe and admiration by one and all—from the lowly Park Keeper to the great Lord Mayor himself. May a west wind never carry her off for good." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 16 '52 140w

Commonweal 57:171 N 21 '52 10w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 28:395 D '52 110w

"The rejoicing with which children will greet the appearance of this fourth Mary Poppins will be followed by their pure satisfaction and refreshed sense of wonder as they re-enter her special realms of magic. . . The drawings with their happily careful details, further the book's inimitable spell." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:406 D '52 130w
Kirkus 20:681 O 15 '52 100w

"Recommended." M. J. Meade
+ Library J 78:68 Ja 1 '53 70w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis
New Statesman & Nation 44:692 D 6 '52 220w

"Mary Poppins with her blend of fantasy and nonsense, pervades this book, which is at once poetry and fun and wisdom. The pictures consort well with the gay, wise text." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p1 N 16 '52 310w

"When Mary Poppins is about her young charges can never tell where the real world merges into make-believe. Neither can the reader, and that is one of the hallmarks of good fantasy." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times pt2, p36 N 16 '52 140w
New Yorker 28:194 D 6 '52 70w
+ Time 60:106 D 8 '52 200w

TRAVERS, ROBERT JOHN. Funeral for Sabella. 249p $3.50 Harcourt

52-9860

"A novel about politics, union rivalries, and death in a big city. His main character is Harry Cooke, the undertaker in charge of the body of Pete Sabella, a longshoreman who has been found at the bottom of a harbor in a casing of cement. Between the time of the discovery of the body and the funeral, Cooke learns a good deal about the city and its workings." New Yorker

"Travers writes with a certain smooth proficiency, but his novel is going nowhere, plot-wise or saleswise."

Kirkus 20:471 Ag 1 '52 170w

"Without melodrama Mr. Travers has written a thriller; without exaggeration he has described one of the most sinister aspects of gang warfare in the labor movement and in political life. We need not question the publisher's statement that the author has spent time on the waterfront. Only one thoroughly familiar with it could so skillfully introduce it to his readers. Recommended for all adult collections. Young people might find it interesting also." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:1402 S 1 '52 170w

"The author makes it plain that this grim story is based on reality."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 21 '52 190w

"Mr. Travers writes straightforwardly, and there is hardly ever a false note in his dialogue. Although none of his characters is interesting, the factual background and competent plotting give the story good pace." John Brooks

+ — N Y Times p34 S 28 '52 330w

New Yorker 28:126 S 20 '52 70w

"In contrast to the high-pressure, topical novel usually produced by angry writers bent on exposing a wrong, this is cool, precise, dispassionate. Its end-effect is far stronger because of the author's restraint." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 1 '52 650w

Sat R 35:54 N 8 '52 130w

TRAZ, GEORGES DE (FRANCOIS FOSCA, pseud). Eighteenth century: from Watteau to Tiepolo; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. (Great centuries of painting ser) 150p 68 col il $12.50 Skira

759 Painting—History

52-10822

"This volume [is] the third in a series on great centuries of painting. . . It was inevitable that 18th century painting, directed so much toward the pleasures of the aristocracy, should have its greatest flowering at the French court. Other notable centers were the pleasure loving city, Venice, and England. Fosca begins with Magnasco, the brilliant Genoese painter, who carried on from the style of Tintoretto and in his incisiveness is called the forerunner of Goya, the great Spaniard who, interestingly enough, marks the introduction of the 19th century and is the last artist treated in this book." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Fine book design, good printing and above all the finest quality in color reproductions have won for Skira a very high reputation in the printing field. 'The Eighteenth Century' is a worthy addition to the series not only because Fosca's text offers us a brilliant interpretation of the period but also because the illustrative material, all in color, is well-chosen to bring out the many facets of this luxurious century." F. A. Sweet

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 14 '52 450w

"Skira's second new art book of the season is disappointing. For one thing it deals with material that has been carefully explored; it neither brings to light new data nor evolves new concepts. It does not even resemble old facts and ideas in a manner calculated to interest and inform readers new to the field. . . In addition to errors of fact and judgment the book is also replete with statements that are misleading and arguable. . . Handsomely reproduced in the book are paintings by Watteau, Chardin, Fragonard, Tiepolo, Gainsborough, Hogarth, Magnasco and many others." Emily Genauer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 10 '52 500w

"M. Francois Fosca has selected nearly 70 sparkling color plates to illustrate his very competent analysis of this chapter in the development of Western art." V. J. Papanek

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 17 '52 350w

"The choice of illustrations is refreshing, for many are of works in rarely visited museums and private collections. A corollary as to this point is furnished by the author's admirable treatment of Liotard. . . Wide reading and the sensitivity of a man intensely interested in his subject are only two of the qualities that make this work valuable. . . Yet, because of this very preoccupation with the matters peculiar to the painter's craft, I turn now to what I cannot regard as other than a fault in this able critic's judgment. When he says, 'Why, then, are Chardin's canvases so vastly superior to those of Jan Steen, Metsu, or Terborch?' I must answer (omitting Metsu) that they are not." Walter Pach

+ Sat R 35:46 N 1 '52 650w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 5 '52 80w

"It is perhaps unfair to complain of M. Fosca's inclusions or omissions. Clearly the illustrations are the raison d'être of this book. . . Round these the author has had to weave his story—indeed, almost literally so, for illustrations obtrude awkwardly into his text on almost every page. Sometimes, in order that a trickle of text may meander beneath a plate, a painting, like the Wallace Collection's most ravishing de Troy sketch, is mutilated, though the reader is given no indication that this has been done."

Times [London] Lit Sup p530 Ag 15 '52 800w

TREASE, GEOFFREY. Web of traitors [Eng title: Crown of violet]. 190p $2.50 Vanguard

52-11124

A novel of ancient Athens at the time of Socrates, for teen aged boys and girls. "Young Alexis' thirst for knowledge brings him to Socrates and his circle. To prove to his father that Socrates is a great thinker, Alexis writes a comedy and enters it in the Drama Festival. Inadvertently he also discovers a plot to overthrow Athens, but with the help of the mysterious girl Coriinna, he is able to bring the conspirators to justice." (N Y Times)

Booklist 49:110 N 15 '52

Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 16 '52 100w

Kirkus 20:563 S 1 '52 150w

"Recommended for junior and senior high school." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 77:1910 N 1 '52 90w

"Skilful Mr. Trease! He is to be congratulated." Naomi Lewis

+ New Statesman & Nation 44:388 O 4 '52 80w

"It is humorous, exciting, and cleverly informative about the era when the wars with Sparta were drawing to a close. . . Some young people who might not be easily lured into a book with this ancient setting will like it if they take one glimpse at the conversation, which is modeled on fairly colloquial, and very lively, boys' talk of our time." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p18 N 16 '52 120w

"A stepping stone to more adult material, 'Web of Traitors' is a good mixture of information and excitement." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times pt2, p14 N 16 '52 80w

"Only a writer with a deep love of Athens could have produced a story in which the characters and the setting are so perfectly integrated. Because it is so true and so convincing and because the love of freedom is in the minds and hearts of all men today, this is a story for our time." B. W. S.

+ Sat R 35:64 N 15 '52 240w

Wis Lib Bul 48:221 S '52

TREAT, ROGER L. Bishop Sheil and the CYO. 211p $3 Messner

B or 92 Sheil, Bernard James, bp. Catholic youth organization 51-14642

The story of the Catholic Youth Organization and its founder, Bishop Sheil.

"Treat, obviously, is a sincere admirer of the bishop. And this puts the author in a well-populated category, since there are many thousands of such admirers in both Chicago and the rest of the nation. And Treat has succeeded, probably as well as anyone could, in setting down on paper the personality and spirit of one of this city's outstanding figures." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 9 '51 450w

Reviewed by L. J. Trese

Commonweal 55:332 Ja 4 '52 650w

Kirkus 20:38 Ja 15 '52 180w

"This book is slight, of little permanent value, and should be bought only by those libraries having a large Catholic clientele." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 76:2001 D 1 '51 90w

"The story is breezily told, but the Bishop is a breezy individual, and his life story needs to be told in this fashion to get people to appreciate that clergymen are not all stuffed shirts and that the church can and often does reach down and meet the real issues of life." K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 35:41 Mr 1 '52 150w

TRECKER, HARLEIGH BRADLEY, and TRECKER, AUDREY R. How to work with groups. 167p $3 Womans press

301.155 Group work. Leadership 52-9623

Advice for both the beginning and the experienced group leaders. "The authors outline the fundamentals of democratic group leadership, then translate these into the day-to-day

TRECKER, H. B.—Continued
handling of group matters, telling how to: recruit members; develop committees; plan successful programs; lead discussions; conduct business meetings; take minutes; secure publicity; raise funds." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 48:313 Je 1 '52

Bookmark 11:234 Jl '52 40w

"Highly recommended." M. E. Monroe
+ Library J 77:1195 Jl '52 100w

TREFOUSSE, HANS LOUIS. Germany and American neutrality, 1939-1941. 247p il $3.75 Bookman associates

940.532 World war, 1939-1945—Causes. U.S.
—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—
Foreign relations—U.S. 51-14039

"A study of the development of Germany's policies toward the United States during the years immediately preceding the outbreak of war between the two countries." Foreign Affairs

"Under a drab title Dr. Trefousse presents us with a workmanlike inquiry into this intriguing paragraph of history." D. C. Poole

+ Am Hist R 57:968 Jl '52 550w

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:267 Mr '52 40w

Reviewed by E. E. Nobleman

Ann Am Acad 282:125 Jl '52 750w

"Despite the obvious bias of his book, Prof. Trefousse has read widely and done much patient research in compiling his work. It contains valuable information hitherto not readily accessible. Nowhere else can one obtain so complete an account of Nazi attitudes and reactions with respect to American policy and opinion during the years covered. It is unfortunate that so potentially useful a book could not have been guided by more objective historical ideals. It is high time that we regard a liar as a liar, whether a Nazi or an American, and a warmonger as a warmonger, whatever his nationality." H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ja 20 '52 460w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 18 '52 600w

Reviewed by C. B. Rasmussen

Current Hist 21:296 N '51 400w

Foreign Affairs 30:332 Ja '52 20w

"It is very well done. Part of it we have met before in other studies. The synthesis of all the available evidence and the reconstruction of the German-American duel as a unit were well worth the effort. As clearly as any case study to date, it shows how totally inept the men around Hitler, the party bully-boys and non-professionals in slick Foreign Ministry uniforms, could be in estimating the forces opposed to them." J. C. Cairns

+ Sat R 35:63 Ja 19 '52 410w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:62 Mr '52 200w

TRESSELT, ALVIN R. Autumn harvest; il. by Roger Duvoisin. [24p] $2 Lothrop

51-8824

"In short sentences, large print, and Roger Duvoisin's bold, colorful pictures, the story of late summer and fall on the farm is told for the children of kindergarten and pre-school age." Library J

Booklist 48:175 Ja 15 '52

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Kirkus 19:661 N 15 '51 140w

"Pictures are full of the details which small children enjoy." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 77:65 Ja 1 '52 40w

"The big pictures and gay autumn colors, the borders and endpapers with added details, the frontispiece with a roadside stand, all carry an interpretation that children will understand and like." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 3 '52 70w

"There is a subtle interplay between text and pictures, which makes one sharply aware of the mellow light of Indian summer, the sharpness of first frost, the smell of bonfires. In a few instances the borders surrounding the pages of text distract the eye from the facing illustrations, but as a whole this book is lovely to look at and to listen to." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p40 N 11 '51 100w

Wis Lib Bul 48:97 Mr '52

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY. Illustrated English social history; 4v; v3, The eighteenth century; il. selected by Ruth C. Wright. 209p $5.50 Longmans

942 Great Britain—Social conditions. Great Britain—History (50-5391)

"The picture editor indicates that for this period contemporary sources afforded a wider range of choice and she has chosen the less familiar pictures of the new industrial age, the as yet unstandardized rural life, and town life, rather than better known studies of eighteenth-century elegance." (Booklist) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1950, 1951.

Booklist 48:198 F 15 '52

"The wealth and variety of the illustrations in this volume, mostly from contemporary sources provide an invaluable accompaniment to the author's own genius for revivifying the way of living in the ages as they pass." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 31 '52 800w

Current Hist 22:170 Mr '52 70w

"The copious notes at the back of the volume indicate the sources, and drive home all the points made by these excellently chosen pictures."

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:20 Ja 5 '52 140w

"These volumes are a distinguished contribution to English historical and pictorial literature. It is hardly venturesome to predict that they will appeal for years to come both to the general reader and to the student. A great historian has been fortunate in securing the expert services of a skillful and enthusiastic collaborator." R. L. Schuyler

+ N Y Times p7 D 21 '52 650w (Review of v 1-4)

TREYNOR, BLAIR. Silver doll. 212p $2.50 Holt
52-11049

Crime story in Hollywood setting.

Kirkus 20:523 Ag 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 2 '52 140w

"Blair Treynor's Silver Doll misses distinction fairly narrowly. The characters are too diagrammatically black-and-white to be convincing, and the final third of the book turns maudlin just when it should acquire bite." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 N 16 '52 30w

"Good material, handled with effect of realism and honesty." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '52 60w

"Smooth job, with authentic ring; good humorous touches. Breezy." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:56 N 22 '52 10w

TRIMBLE, JOE. Yogi Berra. (Most valuable player ser) 184p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Berra, Lawrence Peter—Juvenile literature 52-6334

A biography of the good-natured Yankee catcher, Yogi Berra. Illustrated by photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:343 Je 15 '52

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 27 '52 80w

+ Kirkus 20:302 My 15 '52 80w

"A well-written anecdotal biography." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1208 J1 '52 10w

"This reader nominates Yogi as the most eventempered American for his behavior in the face of those constant and so clever remarks by sportswriters and players about his appearance." W. C. F.

+ N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 70w

TROTTA, GERI. Veronica died Monday. 245p $2.50 Dodd

52-7351

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 Mr 16 '52 130w

"Well constructed vocational and regional mystery novel with the feminine touch. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:211 F 1 '52 100w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 16 '52 90w

"The murder plot is a bit hard to take seriously, especially since all relevant evidence is carefully kept off-stage; it's to be hoped that later Trotts will combine the same carefree spirit with a more solid story." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 2 '52 110w

"Style bright and easy; events turned out of a fairly conventional mold. B minus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 16 '52 80w

"Progress of story is impeded by excess of digressions, divertissements, wisecracks. Chatter." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w

TROY, GEORGE. Headland. 268p $3 Bobbs

52-10274

Character study of Ethan Greenleaf. Coming back to his family and his newspaper job after the war Ethan finds he has lost contact because of his war experiences. When he has almost reached the point of breaking away from his wife, a visit to a fine old lighthouse keeper, who is his uncle, gives Ethan the courage he lacked to face life.

Booklist 49:33 S 15 '52

"Well done first novel." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 77:1303 Ag '52 40w

"Mr. Troy tells his story in a sensitive polished prose that is often reminiscent of Willa Cather. There is another resemblance to Miss Cather. In 'The Professor's House,' she, too, explored the mind of a man who had lost his desire to live. But here the resemblance ends. For Miss Cather not only painted a powerful psychological portrait but told a deeply moving story as well. In Mr. Troy's book, the mood, the emptiness of spirit, the desperation and frustration are there but the incident, the drama to give them vitality and substance seem too slight to carry their weight. Nevertheless, the book is rewarding as the portrait of a man who was a refugee from the once-familiar country of his spirit." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 24 '52 500w

Reviewed by W. M. Teller

N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '52 280w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 21 '52 700w

"Mr. Troy writes with a kind of overwhelming sincerity. He not only makes his reader share the suspensive inner action of his main character, but also makes him part of the household, its delights, its anxieties, and its hopes. . . . Some will say that 'Headland' is thin in story, and so it is if cloak-and-dagger tempestuosity are the desiderata; but a crisis involving life and death in the soul of a man is no little thing and is itself a flashing sword-play of the forces of good and evil on the stage of self." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 35:23 S 13 '52 700w

TROY, SIMON. Road to Rhuine. 244p $2.50 Dodd

52-7352

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Je 29 '52 100w

"Troy makes a bold attempt to manage a fresh sort of mystery here but his capacities are considerably short of his intention. . . . The characters do not, in appearance, live up to their billing, and while the attempt is not without interest it can't be called a memorable first novel." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 Mr 9 '52 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 2 '52 130w

"Unusual and agreeably told. B plus." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 9 '52 80w

"Story not too convincing, but atmosphere is pleasant and characters reasonably authentic." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:36 Ap 5 '52 40w

TRUAX, RHODA. Doctors Jacobi. 270p il $3.50 Little

B or 92 Jacobi, Abraham. Jacobi, Mary (Putnam) 52-5014

Joint biography of two American doctors of the nineteenth century. Mary Putnam, daughter of the publisher, George Palmer Putnam, was the first woman admitted to the Ecole de Medicine in Paris. Dr Abraham Jacobi was a Jewish refugee from Germany who became a leading figure in pediatrics.

Booklist 48:246 Ap 1 '52

Bookmark 11:183 My '52 40w

Kirkus 20:22 Ja 1 '52 230w

"Their story suffers from banality of style but its interest and integrity give it momentum and it is well worth reading. Recommended." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 77:360 F 15 '52 140w

"Endlessly quotable, still good company and still useful (if you'd like to evaluate your doctor, try the Jacobi yardstick), both the Doctors Jacobi have deserved a lay audience as well as a professional one. Miss Truax's book should provide it. The author of several novels with a hospital background, she is still a novelist in this biography as in her 'Joseph Lister.' She adheres to the important facts and dreams up dialogue and details." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 23 '52 550w

"Rhoda Truax' 'biography,' particularly in the larger part which is devoted to Mary, is fictionalized—a genre which is never so satisfactory as the real thing. Even with this extra treatment Mary Jacobi remains rather cold and uncompromising, which perhaps she was. Abraham Jacobi is treated more factually, and from his own writing, and comes off considerably better." T. H. Maren

N Y Times p26 Mr 23 '52 470w

Wis Lib Bul 48:93 Mr '52

TRUEBLOOD, DAVID ELTON. Your other vocation. 125p $1.50 Harper

261 Church work 52-11078

"The professor of philosophy at Earlham College stresses the importance of lay religion, suggesting a possible course of study for adults and other practical ways of participating in 'the centralization of the Christian movement.'" Bookmark

Bookmark 12:33 N '52 20w

Kirkus 20:763 D 15 '52 140w

Wis Lib Bul 48:211 S '52

TRUMAN, HARRY S. Mr. President, by William Hillman; pictures by Alfred Wagg. 253p $5 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—1945- 52-6976

"The first publication from the personal diaries, private letters, papers, and revealing interviews of Harry S. Truman." (Subtitle) Many photographs, 62 of them in color. No index.

"This very novel book justifies itself. It is not edited; it is hardly organized; it is repetitive. (Mr. Hillman candidly describes himself as a reporter.) Better editing would have made it a better book but we must take the goods the gods provide, hoping that Mr. Truman will get down to his memoirs and see that they are a better-organized job than this is." D. W. Brogan

+ — Am Hist R 58:152 O '52 650w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 189:79 Ap '52 550w

Booklist 48:264 Ap 15 '52

Bookmark 11:156 Ap '52 60w

Reviewed by F. C. Hanighen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 23 '52 650w

Foreign Affairs 30:673 Jl '52 50w

Kirkus 20:172 Mr 1 '52 200w

"Highly recommended for all libraries."

Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 77:593 Ap 1 '52 140w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 12 '52 110w

"Like Harry S. Truman, this is a wonderful human document. It is not really a book by Hillman so much as a newspaperman's dream realized, a publisher's delight, a journalistic beat of stupendous proportions." Willard Shelton

+ Nation 174:304 Mr 29 '52 800w

Reviewed by Norman MacKenzie
New Statesman & Nation 44:326 S 20 '52 390w

"This is without doubt the most lifelike picture of a President in office that has ever been presented. To those who hold determinedly to the opinion that Truman is not worth looking at it is, no doubt, valueless; but to those who like to examine any man who holds his position it is rewarding. But opponents should be warned—if they do read this book, they may wind up like my tolerant Republican friend, for it is awfully hard to see Truman at close range and still hate him." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 23 '52 2550w

"There is public as well as private justification for the President's presenting himself as he sees himself. Here the volume is taken sincerely for what it is: an honest attempt to picture the mind of Harry S. Truman in a high, difficult and on the whole lonely office of vast importance." A. A. Berle

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 23 '52 2750w

New Yorker 28:141 Ap 5 '52 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 21 '52 600w

"Altogether in many ways it is an amazing book, though one sometimes as diffuse and disjointed seeming as the ranging interests of Truman from music and architecture to governmental administration and military history. There runs through it all, however, a basic unity in the simple, shrewd, hard-headed, and sentimental man who has been doing his level best—which is of a pretty high order—to be the kind of President America needs in these most difficult American years." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R 35:13 Mr 22 '52 1100w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 189:137 Jl 25 '52 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 19 '52 700w

"As a fragment of Americana it is warm, lively, and very sound."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:121 Je '52 250w

TRUSS, SELDON. Death of no lady. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

52-8055

Detective story.

"A sparkling set of characters in a tale of ingeniously meshed situations, written with a suave sense of humor." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 19 '52 90w

Kirkus 20:291 My 1 '52 90w

"This [is] intermittently amusing and ultimately pretty tiresome." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 29 '52 70w

"There is less easy humor than in previous Truss novels. But Inspector Gideigh is in high gear, as usual—and the contrapuntal plot-structure would have delighted Wilkie Collins." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '52 80w

"Lively and ingenious in a scatter-brained sort of way."

+ — New Yorker 28:91 Ag 16 '52 60w

"Hard to make head or tail of this until Gideigh calmly clears it up in the penultimate chapter, but who cares when it's such fun?" L. G. Olford

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 13 '52 70w

"Amusing in spots." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:40 Jl 5 '52 20w

TSCHEBOTARIOFF, GREGORY PORPHYRIE-WITCH. Soil mechanics, foundations and earth structures; an introduction to the theory and practice of design and construction. 655p il $6.50 McGraw

624.151 Soils (engineering) 51-6355

"Although designed as a textbook for graduate and advanced undergraduate courses, this volume presents many ideas and data not to be found conveniently, if at all, elsewhere. First-hand experience of the author in the United States and abroad is combined with published and unpublished findings from many countries. . . . A wide range of topics is covered in the nineteen chapters, including geology, soil physics and chemistry, soil tests and engineering properties, permeability, consolidation, stability, lateral earth pressure, compaction, exploration and foundation and highway engineering." U S Quarterly Bk R

"The book should prove useful to practicing engineers."

+ Eng N 148:70 Mr 13 '52 90w

"From the very practical question of how to drive piles or how to design the foundation of a refrigerator warehouse to the theoretical elastic and plastic stress distributions behind retaining walls and under footings, practically all subdivisions of soil mechanics receive at least passing attention. The list of 448 references, many of them very recent, are an invaluable aid to further study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:432 D '51 160w

TUCKER, LAEL. Lament for four virgins. 368p $3.50 Random house

52-5169

The four virgins were the young daughters of the four leading families of Andalusia, Georgia, in 1927. The new rector of the Episcopal church found that all four were in love with him, and he fled to a Colorado parish. The novel traces results of this disappointment upon the four women during the next twenty years.

"Here is a novel of the South with a fresh and refreshing accent. It is free from the luridness and the extremes of oddity so often found in Southern fiction; and though its heroines' lives give cause for lament, it is not another of those threnodies celebrating decay to an insistent counterpoint of nostalgia." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 190:83 Jl '52 450w

Booklist 48:349; 361 Jl 1 '52

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 176:73 O '52 240w

"There is unusually subtle writing in this novel, unusual promise, a kind of swift, eagle-like pouncing on the exact word, the exact idea to illustrate a mood, even if, as it seems to me, the individual characters seem less real than types. There is a kind of bitter satire about the town's quarrels which is at once both convincing and funny." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 J1 13 '52 750w

"The style of Lament for Four Virgins is marked by a kind of anarchic individualism: never less than herself, Miss Tucker often attempts to be something more, and the result is eccentric rather than distinguished. What possible direction her talent may take at this point, it is difficult to say. But here, for the present, is an introduction to a striking if undisciplined novelist, who has made an admirable fiction out of the South of fact." Richard Hayes

Commonweal 56:468 Ag 15 '52 420w

Kirkus 20:237 Ap 1 '52 210w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 J1 13 '52 800w

"It is to the author's great credit that, despite an intricate compounding of individual character complexities and plot complications, nearly all the actors come through with lifelike clarity. On the other hand, they are more recognizable for familiar attributes . . . than for more generalized traits which would serve to picture with greater accuracy the community life they represent. The result is that nearly all appear finally as a pretty, sad and sorry lot in a sad and sorry society." Henry Cavendish

+ — N Y Times p16 J1 13 '52 360w

New Yorker 28:85 J1 12 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p13 J1 14 '52 650w

Reviewed by C. R. Sumner

Sat R 35:17 J1 19 '52 650w

Time 60:100 J1 14 '52 500w

TUCKER, WILSON. Long loud silence. 217p
$2.50 Rinehart

52-8742

Science-fiction novel.

Bookmark 12:67 D '52

Kirkus 20:522 Ag 15 '52 70w

"As one of the many writers currently oscillating between mystery novels and science fiction, Wilson Tucker has attempted to combine the appeals of the two fields in this novel. . . . Tucker tells Russell's story with tight vigor and simplicity, in his best novel to date in either field." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 19 '52 180w

"'The Long Loud Silence' is weak in plot, but strong in characterization."

+ — N Y Times p29 O 12 '52 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 12 '52 110w

"Brilliantly presented minor detail and good characters make it credible; neat twist at end makes it novel." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 30w

TUFTS, ANNE. As the wheel turns; il. by Robert L. Doremus. 246p $2.50 Holt

52-9045

An historical novel of the early nineteenth century in New England, dealing particularly with the origins and development of machine weaving of textiles. The hero is an Englishman who comes to America as a lad of eighteen after his father, an inventor, was killed by a mob in an English mill town. For older teen-agers.

Booklist 49:127 D 1 '52

Kirkus 20:510 Ag 15 '52 150w

"Background information on New England in 1814 is interesting and helpful. Should interest ninth-tenth-grade girls as a love story and boys as the story of a young man's efforts to make his own way." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 77:2015 N 15 '52 60w

"The historical background is excellent and a vivid picture is drawn of the religious intolerance of the period. But essentially it is a warm-hearted tale of family life told against the background of the toddling days of New England manufacturing." L. T. Bulman

+ N Y Times pt2, p12 N 16 '52 150w

TUNIS, EDWIN. Oars, sails and steam; a picture book of ships; il. by [the author]. 78p $3.50 World pub.

623.82 Ships. Shipbuilding 52-5174

"From the first boat in the world, which probably was just a log with a man astraddle it, down to the magnificent new American liner United States, the largest vessel ever built in this country, water transportation is covered by word and sketch in this 'picture book of ships.' The author's delightful and authentic pen and ink line drawings and descriptions include canoes, Egyptian boat models, Greek war galleys, Roman trireme and merchantman, and a Norse Oseberg ship." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:259 Ap 15 '52

"'Oars, Sails and Steam' is one of the most attractive and comprehensive pictorial and textual histories of sailing published." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 16 '52 150w

Horn Bk 28:248 Ag '52 100w

"Distinguished drawing, excellent details, American emphasis, should have wide appeal for young or old, expert or novice ship model builder. It is especially fine on sailing ships. Glossary of nautical terms. A beautiful book." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 77:529 Mr 15 '52 30w

"There are several good color picture books for children about boats and ships. But this was not made chiefly for children, rather for all ship lovers over twelve and adults. It makes a remarkable reference book for authors and artists. It will also be useful in school libraries, in connection with the great sea battles in which some of these ships took part." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 11 '52 310w

Reviewed by Scott Newhall.

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 4 '52 160w

"This is a book that will absorb anyone, young or old, who is interested in ships."

+ Sat R 35:34 J1 19 '52 100w

TURNBULL, MRS AGNES (SLIGH). Gown of glory. 403p $3.75 Houghton

52-967

Life in the home of a Presbyterian minister in a small Pennsylvania town is the theme of this novel. The time is the early 1900's.

Booklist 48:189; 230 F 15 '52; Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52 50w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 175:154 My '52 160w

Reviewed by Clarence Seldenspinner

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 16 '52 460w

"This is a well intentioned and happy tale, and is a pleasant antidote, both in language and in philosophy of living, to a literary type which just at present is over-concerned with the morbid, the abnormal and the profane." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 69:781 J1 2 '52 210w

Reviewed by Edith Prudden

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 20 '52 260w

"It is an old-fashioned simple love story combined with the tale of the working out

TURNBULL, A. S.—Continued
of daily problems that most parsons, whether in city or country, have to face." G. F.
Taylor

+ Churchman 166:16 Ap 15 '52 170w

"An appealing novel slightly laced with sentimentality." M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 28:188 Je '52 90w

"Nostalgic, pleasantly romantic, with, and please take this as a compliment, a faint aura of an adult Little Women. There's the same sort of staunch family loyalty. There's the same sort of gallant acceptance of poverty, with only occasional rebellions."

+ Kirkus 19:708 D 15 '51 260w

"Well-written though too long drawn out novel." . . . Recommended for general collections." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 77:211 F 1 '52 80w

"The Gown of Glory" will delight those who enjoy a tranquil and warming glimpse of the past." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 20 '52
410w

"Mrs. Turnbull tells her story with an old-fashioned richness of episode and emotion.
Her portrait of the delightful family life of the Lyalls is both nostalgic and challenging; in a day of split atoms, split personalities, and split families there is something at once heartening and healing in the social cohesiveness of Ladykirk." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 16 '52 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 8 '52
460w

Reviewed by Josephine Lawrence
Sat R 35:49 Ap 19 '52 420w

Reviewed by U. K. Alpert

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 20 '52
290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p577 S 5 '52
90w

Wis Lib Bul 48:95 Mr '52

TURNER, JULIUS. Party and constituency: pressures on Congress. 190p pa $2.50 Johns Hopkins press

329 Political parties—U.S. 52-839

"Building on the work of Lowell, Rice, and others, Turner has worked over a considerable body of historical and comparative material, but the heart of his study is the analysis of roll call votes in four sessions of the House between 1921 and 1944. . . . Following an introductory chapter, two chapters, nearly one-third of the book, deal with the effects of party identification upon voting in the sample sessions. These are followed by four chapters which deal with the effects upon the voting of representatives of, successively, metropolitan and rural constituencies, the specialized demands from constituencies dominated by 'foreign' and native stock, and sectionalism. A final chapter discusses the incidence of legislators' independence of both party and constituency group." Ann Am Acad

"The authors are frequently superficial and occasionally naive in assigning explanations for the uniformities and divergences which their statistics identify. But despite these and similar limitations, with most of which the authors are probably far more aware than this reviewer, these monographs represent important contributions to the literature of social and political measurement." S. K. Bailey

+ Am Pol Sci R 46:379 S '52 250w

"Careful empirical studies of American legislatures are unfortunately rare. . . . Professor Turner's excellent study of some of the correlates of voting in the House of Representatives is, therefore, a contribution of great importance." D. B. Truman

+ Ann Am Acad 282:132 Jl '52 400w

"Party and Constituency fills a gap in the literature of political parties. The statistical methods are clearly explained and the conclusions forcibly presented. Turner deals with the implications of the data he has collected and does so with real sophistication and astuteness." J. A. Rosenthal

+ Pol Sci Q 67:480 S '52 370w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:302 S '52 160w

TURNER, ANNETTE. Choosing the right college. 149p $2.50 Harper

378 Colleges and universities—U.S. 52-5730

This book is addressed primarily to the high school boys and girls who are trying to decide whether to go to college and which kind of college to choose. Partial contents: Why college? Ways without means; Personal and practical; Getting admitted; The university;
The independent coed college; Colleges for men only, for women only; The junior colleges.

Booklist 48:283 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"It is not a thorough treatment of the subject nor is there any comprehensive list of schools given, but it is a good little volume for the boy or girl just beginning to think about education beyond high school." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 12
'52 110w

"Helpful for clarification and human in its consideration, this should be useful in clearing the way for those catalogues."

+ Kirkus 20:108 F 1 '52 150w

Reviewed by B. W. Schein

Library J 77:801 My 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p38 N
16 '52 60w

"This is a very useful guide." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 6 '52
190w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel

Sat R 35:38 S 13 '52 30w

School & Society 75:191 Mr 22 '52 20w

Reviewed by Miriam Peters

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 3 '52
230w

TURVILLE-PETRE, GABRIEL. Heroic age of Scandinavia. 196p $2.25; text ed $1.80 Longmans

948 Scandinavia—History 51-14881

"The author has written a compact and useful study of the Norsemen, from the first account of Scandinavia by Pytheas, a Greek geographer of the fourth century B.C., down to the death in 1030 of that strange saint, Olaf, who began to 'redden the headlands with blood' as a Viking at the age of 12." Times [London]
Lit Sup

"Turville-Petre is concerned primarily with
'the tangled web of history and fiction' in the eddas, the scaldic poetry, and the sagas. His knowledge and his judgment create confidence.
He is well aware of the mysteries and contradictions in his literary sources; he sprinkles his text with doubts and with phrases like 'if the sources can be trusted'; and he checks the northern legends with the records of the English, Germans, and French. . . . Turville-Petre wrote about what he wanted to write, yet his book is narrow in scope and heavy in style."
F. D. Scott

+ Am Hist R 57:951 Jl '52 320w

"Mr. Turville-Petre is fully aware of the obscurity of the Heroic Age, whose sources lie almost entirely in legends and poems which were not recorded until the Middle Ages. . . .
With patient scholarship [he] follows the slender thread of fact through the rich layers of fiction. What he aims at showing is that the legends and cult of such heroes as St. Olaf, Ermanaric and Hairy Brecks have had a greater influence than the historical figures themselves."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 1 '52
400w

TUVE, ROSEMOND. Reading of George Herbert. 215p il col il $5 Univ. of Chicago press
821 Herbert, George 52-13786

"Professor Rosemond Tuve devotes the first half of [her book] to an examination of Herbert's poem 'The Sacrifice,' and incidentally to exposing the inadequacy of Mr William Empson's critique of it through his ignorance of the symbolic tradition, liturgical and iconographic, within which Herbert wrote, and which was as familiar to him as it is esoteric to us. . . In the second part of her book she examines other poems by Herbert with equally fruitful results." (Manchester Guardian) No index.

"Hers is a vital scholarship and, combined with critical insight, a pithy style, and some fascinating illustrations, it has produced a book of absorbing interest to students of seventeenth-century literature." H. T.A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 2 '52 200w

"Professor Tuve has done a great service to lovers of Herbert and of poetry in bridging a pseudo-historical gulf which in no genuine way heightened the stature of the 'Metaphysical' poets who were stranded on the near side of it." Louis MacNeice
+ New Statesman & Nation 44:293 S 13 '52 1650w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen
Spec 189:548 O 24 '52 500w

"Professor Tuve's volume might be described as a gorgeous gallery of dainty devices built on to the poetical edifice of The Temple. That description would comprehend the eloquence and elaborateness of her criticism and then the array of illustrations chosen from old devotional books, stained glass windows and other 'iconographical' legacies from our forefathers. By these pictures she means to make her conclusions concerning what Herbert had in his mind still more persuasive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p551 Ag 22 '52 600w

TWAIN, MARK, pseud. Clemens, S. L.

TWEEDSMUIR, JOHN NORMAN STUART BUCHAN, 2d baron, Hudson's Bay trader. 195p il $3 Norton

971.22 [1919.8] Baffin land, Eskimos 52-527

This book contains the diary kept by the author (son of the writer John Buchan) during the year he spent at Cape Dorset in Baffin Land as an employee of Hudson's Bay Company.

Booklist 48:212 Mr 1 '52

"There is an attractive sparseness and dignity to the prose which recalls the ragged ribs of rock that make up the land of which he writes. The book is illustrated with some excellent photographs." John Nicol
+ Canadian Forum 31:205 D '51 150w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p13 J1 3 '52 260w

Commonweal 55:503 F 22 '52 200w

"This unpretentious book sets down with easy spontaneity the passing day. It is not an ethnological treatise and no attempt is made to psychoanalyze Eskimos who are treated as old friends rather than sociological or scientific specimens. Harrowing adventures, which are so much a part of books of this nature, are treated as straightforward, matter-of-fact recitals of experiences." W. S. Carlson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 16 '52 650w

"A keen observer, Lord Tweedsmuir tells lively tales about animals and plants that naturalists would do well to pick notes from. His story is full and convincing." Peter Freuchen
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 2 '52 330w

"All in all, a very likable little book." Albert Hubbell
+ New Yorker 28:141 Ap 26 '52 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p32 Ap 20 '52 100w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden
Sat R 35:18 Je 28 '52 380w

Reviewed by Lovat Dickson
Spec 187:218 Ag 17 '51 350w

"Hunting and trapping, navigating and exploring, are matters of routine to a Hudson's Bay fur-trader at such a post as Cape Dorset. It is the factual recording, the direct observation of the details, which is of the greatest interest. The larger events, such as walrus-hunting, are portrayed not more brilliantly than the less dramatic (yet important) hunting of the arctic hare. . . It is fair to say that the human characters involved in this year of Arctic adventure are seen only in outline; yet sometimes they show up vividly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p455 J1 20 '51 800w

TYRE, NEDRA. Mouse in eternity. 215p $2.50 Knopf

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

+ Kirkus 20:17 Ja 1 '52 80w

"There is on the whole more plausibility in the milieu than in the plot of this still-refreshing tale. It seems to be the work of a talented amateur, as clearly acquainted with the exaltations and depressions of social service as with the mystery story." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 6 '52 230w

"The detailed vivid picture of Atlanta, Ga., is only one of numerous reasons for hailing Nedra Tyre's first novel with loud cheers. Miss Tyre can, in the absolute, write. Her extraordinary ear for the rhythms of speech, her feeling for precise visual detail, her economy in projecting fully realized characterizations of even the smallest roles should commend her not only to the murder enthusiast but to any general reader interested in fresh novelistic talent." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p34 Mr 30 '52 190w

"Background and case-histories alone are worth the price; this first novel is also well plotted and written. B plus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 6 '52 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R 35:36 My 17 '52 40w

"It is in her portrayal of the life of the office and the people who come and go there that Miss Tyre is at her best. Her social workers live and breathe and talk like human beings. . . Miss Tyre has demonstrated once again that social work writing need not be dull." Gertrude Springer
+ Survey 88:235 My '52 400w

TYRRELL, GEORGE NUGENT MERLE. Man the maker; a study of man's mental evolution [Eng title: Homo faber]. 311p $3.75 Dutton

151 Intellect. Psychology 52-6138

"The main thesis of Mr. Tyrrell's work is that the mental characteristics of primitive man which fitted him to function in a small, secure and comfortable universe have persisted and largely form the mental habits of succeeding generations, including the present one. . . As a result few human beings are able or willing to view any subject objectively and, according to Mr. Tyrrell, this is particularly true in the exploratory branches of science." Publisher's note

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 20 '52 850w

Kirkus 19:671 N 15 '51 180w

"The author is well read, but not an authority on science or philosophy. Of limited value." A. D. Osborn
+ Library J 77:212 F 1 '52 80w

"This is a book of first-rate interest, the product of a powerful mind thinking freshly and originally about one of the most hackneyed subjects of our time, the nature and

TYRRELL, G. N. M.—Continued
 limitations of scientific method... Mr. Tyrrell's name has hitherto been associated with psychical research... In the present work psychical research enters in only as providing Mr. Tyrrell with a clue to the special role which he has assigned to the intellect as a biased and limiting interpreter of reality." C. E. M. Joad
 + New Statesman & Nation 42:290 S 15 '51 900w

Reviewed by J. F. Wharton
 Sat R 35:16 F 2 '52 450w

"In spite of the claims of many scientists, he regards the problems of philosophy, psychology, politics, art and religion as wholly and for ever beyond the reach of scientific inquiry. Any attempt to force them within its scope, Mr. Tyrrell believes, will spell cultural disaster. This is an ominous warning which merits careful consideration by scientists and non-scientists alike. Although it might seem to many that Mr. Tyrrell goes too far in his indictment, there can be no doubt that he has performed a valuable service in teasing out the hidden assumptions which lie behind the so-called 'scientific attitude.'... Mr. Tyrrell develops his argument with persuasion and skill... None the less, the reader may well wish to inquire what alternative to the methods of empirical science Mr. Tyrrell has to offer. Here he will be disappointed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 11 '52 500w

U

UBBELOHDE-DOERING, HEINRICH. Art of ancient Peru. 55p 240pl 4 col pl $12.50 Praeger
 709.85 Peru—Antiquities. Indians of South America—Art

"A short introductory section sketches the archaeological research that has brought to light the wonders of Peruvian art and outlines the development of the arts and their symbolism. Black-and-white photographs on 240 pages and four in color eloquently present examples of textiles, ceramics, stonework, and metalwork." (Booklist) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 49:37 N 1 '52

+ Kirkus 20:627 S 15 '52 160w

"A visual delight." A. B. L.
 + N Y Times p7 O 5 '52 100w

Reviewed by H. J. Spinden
 Sat R 35:48 N 1 '52 750w

ULAM, ADAM BRUNO. Titoism and the Cominform. (Russian research center studies) 243p $4 Harvard univ. press

949.7 Communism—Yugoslavia. Tito, Josip Broz, known as 52-5044

"[A] picture of the Yugoslav leader based on intimate knowledge of the facts... [The author] does not belittle Marshal Tito's achievements. On the contrary, he makes it clear that it was Marshal Tito—and he alone—who transformed the Yugoslav Communist Party of 1920 from a bunch of 'revolutionary romanticists' debating the propagation of Esperanto into a group of hard fighters; who mobilized the wartime resistance; who, undaunted by hardships and setbacks, laid the groundwork for future seizure of power by his party." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
 Ann Am Acad 282:175 J1 '52 480w

"It takes a scholar of high qualifications to disentangle the man from the myth and lay bare the real motives of his actions. This has been done with exemplary skill by Adam B. Ulman, assistant professor of government at Harvard University." E. S. Pisko
 + Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 23 '52 550w

"Mr. Ulam's thought-provoking analysis of the true nature of Tito's revolt may lead to a more realistic understanding and evaluation of its ultimate effects."

Current Hist 22:319 My '52 70w

Foreign Affairs 30:681 J1 '52 20w

"Professor Ulam's book is not for the amateur in the history of communism. It is too rich in minor detail, too involved in its analysis. But for the political scientist, or even for a careful newspaper reader, it offers treasures. For though one may disagree with some of the author's conclusions, one cannot but be impressed by the weight of evidence he presents, or be fascinated following him through the labyrinth of Communist politics... Until Moscow and Belgrade throw open their archives, this book is likely to be the best account available of one of the greatest crises ever experienced by the Communist movement." Mark Gayn

+ Nation 175:35 J1 12 '52 850w

Reviewed by E. T. Simmons
 New Repub 126:19 Je 9 '52 750w

"Mr. Ulam's account shows rather frequently a certain remoteness from the Yugoslav scene." P. E. Mosely

N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '52 950w

"Mr. Ulam asks the undivided attention of his reader to a complicated and exacting thesis. And he warns against the overly-optimistic view that 'Titoism has become a weapon of self-destruction obligingly forged by Communism to spare the West the unpleasant task of studying and developing a policy toward the Soviet Union and her satellites.' There could be few better ways to begin such a study than with this book itself." R. W. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 18 '52 500w

"The author, an assistant professor of government at Harvard, expresses the hope which has certainly been fulfilled, that his book will 'make a modest contribution toward the understanding of Communism in power.' That it does little more than that is the fault, in my opinion, of his 'scholarly' approach to a subject that simply does not lend itself to 'scholarly' research." Leigh White

Sat R 35:15 My 10 '52 700w

"Although its brief bibliography could have been made more extensive, the book is well written and well documented, and should be read by all who seek a real understanding of the Yugoslav struggle with the Soviet Union and its meaning for the free world."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:291 S '52 220w

ULANOV, BARRY. History of jazz in America. 382p $5 Viking

785.42 [781.5] Jazz music 52-7353

The history of a music that had a peculiar birth in New Orleans' shady Storyville, then ranged forth to Chicago, New York, the West Coast, Europe—every place and any place it could find audience and sustenance. In these pages are described the great movements—the blues, swing, bop, cool jazz—and the lesser ones too.

Booklist 48:189; 210 F 15 '52; Mr 1 '52

Bookmark 11:157 Ap '52 30w

Reviewed by R. G. Peck
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 16 '52 280w

"The book has more than average interest in the sections dealing with the swing era and afterward—and in quotations on jazz by the people who make it." Rod Nordell

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 12 '52 440w

"The history here of the bands, the instrumentalists, the singers and the recordings is impressively inclusive; the standards applied selective; and the book should serve as a definitive guide for collectors and fanciers."

+ Kirkus 20:54 Ja 15 '52 180w

"Catholicity marks this sober, sympathetic, fact-packed history. It is not easy going, but the author is more helpful and revelatory as an interpreter than most because of his insistence on the diversity of jazz's history as well as of its nature." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:532 Mr 15 '52 160w

Reviewed by C. S. Spalding

Music Lib Assn Notes 9:416 Je '52 330w

"A book so dull at times that even a man who was reading about himself would have a hard time staying awake; at other points there is material from the free-wheeling lives of the jazz-men which is fascinating; now and then the critical theories set forth are stimulating; through long stretches the importance of the people and the performances being described is questionable." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Jl 13 '52 600w

"As a jazz historian, Mr. Ulanov, author of 'The Incredible Crosby' and 'Duke Ellington,' is painstaking but rather heavy going. He has little of the vivid ability of, say, Hugues Panassié to characterize musical styles in the stubborn medium of words. One critical flaw is avoided from the outset, Mr. Ulanov makes no foolish attempt at impartiality. He is a man of opinions and he offers them." Wilder Hobson

+ N Y Times p5 F 24 '52 700w

"Old jazz hands will find it a useful reference, even if it is a little controversial; Mr. Ulanov represents the avant-garde, and a jazz conservative—or 'moldy fig,' in Metronome's term—might complain that he stresses the crudity of the early musicians without sufficient respect for their vitality."

+ New Yorker 28:132 Mr 29 '52 180w

"This is a valuable book. The glossary of jazz words and phrases alone is invaluable. But it suffers from the sharp bias of the author. . . The really regrettable thing, however, is the fact that we are yet to get an account of this music as fascinating as the music itself—and it lends itself to a good story better than most things." R. J. Gleason

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 16 '52 1200w

"It makes a lot of sense to set down, in fairly concise fashion, a chronicle of the development of jazz in America. It adds up to even more sense when the chronicle is illuminated by illustrations and examinations of the music under discussion, then filled in with biographical matter based on historical data that are part stale, part fresh. A good index ties it all up in a neat manuscript." Frederic Ramsey

+ Sat R 35:20 Mr 29 '52 500w

"If Mr. Ulanov's book has its limitations as esthetic evaluation, it does, nevertheless, in its comprehensive and vivid survey make a solid contribution to the history of American music."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:130 Je '52 220w
Wis Lib Bul 48:89 Mr '52

ULICH, ROBERT. Crisis and hope in American education. 235p $3.75 Beacon press

370.9 Education—U.S. Education—Philosophy 51-6964

"This book, writes the author, is an attempt at evaluating the educational system of the United States and to arrive at some judgment as to whether the schools help people to acquire the degree of maturity necessary for participation in the work of a nation called upon to assume world responsibilities." School & Society

"The author of this volume presents a thoughtful and thought-provoking appraisal of the American educational system. . . Many readers will challenge what appears to be the author's social philosophy and his theory of knowledge. Even so, this is a book that should be read." Newton Edwards

+ Ann Am Acad 281:230 My '52 480w

Booklist 48:208 Mr 1 '52

Christian Century 69:313 Mr 12 '52 220w

Reviewed by William Sacksteder
Ethics 62:304 Jl '52 160w

"An attempt to align mass education with the modern world without jeopardizing moral or cultural criteria, this is both a stimulant and a depressant, and an important book for the concerned parent as well as the profession."

+ Kirkus 19:463 Ag 15 '51 200w

"That Dr. Ulich's book has outstanding merits may be cheerfully conceded. Its literary quality is deserving of high praise and, likewise, its erudition and the tone in which its discussions are conducted. But these merits do not suffice to protect it against the charge that it mistakes a high-grade form of propaganda for scholarship." B. H. Bode

+ New Repub 126:19 F 18 '52 700w

School & Society 74:239 O 13 '51 40w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:51 Mr '52 220w

ULLMAN, JAMES RAMSEY. Windom's way. 286p $3 Lippincott

52-5093

"This novel is about an American doctor who devoted his life to caring for the villagers of Papaan, South Asia. Force being foreign to his nature, he tried to resolve a strike of rubber plantation workers by peaceful means, but finds himself involved in a communist uprising. . . The exciting plot centers around the current manifestation of the eternal struggle between loyalty and treachery." Library J

Booklist 48:273; 298 My 1 '52; My 15 '52

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by Percy Wood

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 25 '52 350w

"Mr. Ullman's vivid story, set against a slightly clinical background is not an epic of either prose or historical disclosure. It is a well-written and extremely readable book of the type which tells far more of the important story of Southeast Asia than one can glean in years from the miniscule news clippings which one can squeeze from that area." Gordon Walker

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 29 '52 470w

Kirkus 20:231 Ap 1 '52 310w

"Every character is remarkably well drawn. . . Highly recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 77:895 My 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 O 17 '52 60w

"It is a noble theme, heart-shaking, bewildering. I am glad that the American public is to have the stimulation of its towering question mark. (I wish the author had left out the coarse-fibered, beautifully groomed, nightclub-dancing, rich neurotic New York wife who cheapens the book by her stereotyped unreality.) . . A fine and rewarding book, and if this does appear on the screen as well as in the book, we can feel that our movie industry is taking on more than entertainment for its spectators, that it is one of the forces of our time to stir real thought on real problems."

D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 25 '52 900w

"No one will contend that 'Windom's Way' is a great novel. Its characters are all slick-paper stereotypes. And yet, in reducing the political-economic-racial-national revolution now boiling up in Southeast Asia to uncomplicated human terms Mr. Ullman is able to dramatize the dilemma of the decent white man in that area more clearly than a drawerful of factual newspaper dispatches." Richard Match

N Y Times p5 My 25 '52 600w

New Yorker 28:142 My 17 '52 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 1 '52 410w

"It is a thesis novel, written out of yesterday's and tomorrow's headlines. But it is a tribute to the author's fine narrative skill that his ideological passion comes alive in terms of action and people. It is a book of emotions, not of oratory." Charles Lee

+ Sat R 35:23 My 24 '52 440w

ULLMAN, J. R.—Continued

Springf'd Republican p9D My 25 '52
420w

Time 59:100 Je 2 '52 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 17 '52
90w

ULRICH, HOMER. Symphonic music; its evolution since the renaissance. 352p $4.25 Columbia univ. press

785.11 Orchestral music 52-12033

A study and description of symphonic music, especially over the last three hundred years, beginning with Bach. The author, professor of music at the University of Texas interprets symphonic music as including symphonies, concertos, overtures, symphonic poems, ballet scores, and orchestral suites. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Theodore Berg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 9 '52
70w

"This is a good book for music lovers with some background and seems best suited to serve as reading in connection with a course on symphonic music or music in general, as analyses mean more when there is familiarity with the music analyzed."

+ Kirkus 20:219 Mr 15 '52 120w

"It covers so much ground that a fair share of the book, especially after the middle of the 19th century, seems rather sketchy. Useful for its analyses and tables of works (e.g. the concordance of Haydn symphony numbers); less successful in its historical orientation, and occasionally guilty of a real fluff (e.g. the statement that the second movement of Grieg's piano concerto is 'based largely upon a single melody')." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 77:1205 J1 '52 90w

"I find the book a mixed collection of fact and opinion not strong on thought. It is not hopelessly bad but I wish it were much better." Leonard Burkat

Music Lib Assn Notes 10:95 D '52 330w

"He is temperate but clear in judgment, only occasionally academic in tone, and demonstrates no distorting prejudices unless a certain predilection for late nineteenth-century German romanticism is to be so considered. Pretending to no particular originality or profundity, 'Symphonic Music' achieves none. What it does achieve is usefulness as a quick survey, a map in small scale on which those especially interested in orchestral music can locate the large-scale maps they wish to refer to for life-giving details."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 21 '52
140w

"His book is probably too special for the broad body of concert goers who intend to enjoy only what they like and who have possibly a dozen or so recordings of such favorites to play over and over regardless of their critical standing. But for auditors willing to go deeper into the subject, Ulrich's research is delightful." D. A. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 26 '52
180w

ULRICH'S Periodicals directory [1951] a classified guide to a selected list of current periodicals, foreign and domestic; ed. by Eileen C. Graves; Carolyn F. Ulrich, consulting editor. (V6) 534p $17.50 Bowker

016.05 Periodicals—Directories. Periodicals—Bibliography (43-51023)

"The work under review is the sixth revision of Ulrich's Periodicals Directory, first published in 1932. The fifth edition (1947, c1946) was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1948 [Book Review Digest 1948]. As outlined in that review, the history of the work reveals that the number of periodicals listed in the directory increased from 6000 in 1932 to 10,200 in the third edition (1938). . . More than 10,000 titles are listed in this sixth edition. According to the Preface, 'every effort has been made to include a selective coverage of outstanding foreign publications in addition to the usual wide inclusion of those of domestic origin.

. . . Periodicals which had not been published during war years and those which, although published, were not available in this country for examination for previous editions have been included, together with many new titles. . . ."
Subscription Bks Bul

"Ulrich's Periodicals Directory, sixth edition, is the most comprehensive and important classified list of current periodicals and has consistently maintained a high standard. It is recommended for medium and large public libraries and for college and university libraries."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:82 O '51 1050w

UNDERHILL, VERA BISBEE, and BURKS, ARTHUR J. Creating hooked rugs; sketches by Florence Starr Taylor. 110p $6 Coward-McCann

746.7 Rugs 51-13971

A step-by-step explanation of hooking rugs. "The book includes a long chapter on the 'therapy' of hooking rugs. The handicapped, discouraged and disabled are equally competent to engage in this pastime, and many career women and business women indulge in it because it affords an outlet for the creative urge. Some old New England designs, some provincial, some modern, are shown, with animals, flowers and a few scenes. . . Various techniques involved in hooking a rug are explained, with the necessary equipment and materials, plus color charts, while cost and care and dyeing are also considered." (Springf'd Republican)

Booklist 48:120 D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:107 F '52 20w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 77:597 Ap 1 '52 80w

"This may not be the hooked rug book the world is waiting for, but it certainly will give stiff competition to those which have preceded it, and it will challenge the future writer to do as well. After reading a while, almost any reader will become convinced that he too is capable of creating a beautiful rug." Wayne Shirley

+ Sat R 35:40 F 9 '52 100w

"A working guide for the novice by an expert teacher. . . There are numerous sketches by Florence Starr Taylor, and the book abounds in color plates and photographs." S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p12A Ja 6 '52
210w

UNDERWOOD, RAYE MILLER. Complete book of dried arrangements. 193p il $4.95 Barrows

635.96 Floral decoration 52-11290

Discusses methods of drying flowers, fruits, vegetables, foliage, and of arranging them for table or other decorative purposes. Index.

Booklist 48:354 J1 1 '52

"I've been hoping for a practical book on dried arrangements, and this is it."

+ Kirkus 20:338 Je 1 '52 30w

Sat R 35:36 Ag 2 '52 10w

UNGAR, FREDERICK, ed. What's right with America; new perspectives on the contemporary scene [by Harry S. Truman and others] with an introduction. 368p $3.50 Ungar

973 U.S.—Civilization 52-9977

"A well selected collection of speeches and articles presenting 'in wide perspective the thoughts of those men on whom rests the responsibility for our participation in world affairs, as well as . . . of those public figures who represent the best in American intellectual life.' Twenty-eight contributors include Truman, Baruch, W. O. Douglas, W. Reuther, Vandenberg, Eisenhower, Lewis Galantieri, Walter Lippmann, etc." Library J

Am Pol Sci R 46:899 S '52 30w

Booklist 48:319 Je 1 '52

"A vital summary of American public opinion. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:892 My 15 '52 140w

UNITED NATIONS (ORGANIZATION). Department of public information. Garden we planted together [foreword by Trygve Lie and others]. (Whittlesey House publication) 48p il $2 McGraw

341.13 United nations (organization)—Juvenile literature

"A picture book, adapted from the U.N. filmstrip of the same name, which demonstrates in simple dramatic terms the work and aims of the U.N. by drawing a parallel between that organization and a group of children from many different countries who work and plan together to plant a flower garden." Booklist

Booklist 49:53 O 1 '52

Bookmark 12:83 Ja '53

"The book can be read by young children, but it is the adults using it with them who can make it valuable." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:334 O '52 80w

Kirkus 20:497 Ag 15 '52 110w

"Recommended for presenting the UN to the very youngest children." M. L. Martignoni

+ Library J 77:1662 O 1 '52 40w

"The simple text with its symbol of working together to grow things, seems to us a bit too gentle a fable, yet it is a reasonable attempt to introduce a fundamental idea at this early age." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p32
+ N 16 '52 50w

"This should be a very helpful book for parents and teachers, who find it hard work to explain the elements of a complicated subject. Children will doubtless like the bold, crisp patterns of the pictures." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '52 150w

"This is not a usual picture book. . . A young child can read the few lines of text under each of the pictures, but he will get a clearer understanding with the help of an informed parent or teacher." B. W. S.

+ Sat R 35:74 N 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Spring'd Republican p8D S 7 '52 80w

UNITED STATES, NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART. Great paintings, See Cairns, H., and Walker, J., eds.

UNITED STATES TECHNICAL CONFERENCE ON AIR POLLUTION. Air pollution; proceedings; sponsored by the Interdepartmental committee on air pollution; Louis C. McCabe, chairman. 847p il $12.50 McGraw

614.7 Air pollution

"Dozens of papers presented to the Conference present authoritative data and a concise synthesis of an extensive range of modern knowledge on air pollution. Material covers types of pollution, effects on plants, animals, and human beings, legislation, and control. The book is a major work in its field and should serve to stimulate interest and educate those concerned with the problems of pollution." Booklist

"Air Pollution belongs in the technical library of every one engaged or interested in any of its phases." H. G. Dyktor

+ Am J Pub Health 42:1334 O '52 280w

Booklist 48:354 J1 1 '52

N Y New Tech Bks 37:33 My '52

"The coverage is timely and reasonably comprehensive. . . The student, investigator, plant manager, health officer, and legislator will all gain much from this compendium, one of the best in the last decade."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:337 S '52 160w

UNTERMEYER, LOUIS, ed. Early American poets; selected, with an introduction. 334p $5 Lib. pubs.

811.08 American poetry—Collections 52-519

Companion volume to the author's Modern American Poetry (Book Review Digest 1936).

This covers American poets up to but not including Walt Whitman. No index.

Christian Century 69:591 My 14 '52 150w

"It is not an original or striking collection, but it should prove useful in libraries—for these old wines require new bottles." G. D. McDonald

Library J 77:533 Mr 15 '52 130w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 27 '52 70w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 23 '52 110w

"Selection for this anthology is commonplace enough, but it is representative, and as it was intended to be 'devoted to the expanding spirit as well as the formative genius of America.'" D. B. B.

Spring'd Republican p4D F 24 '52 300w

UNTERMEYER, LOUIS, ed. Magic circle; stories and people in poetry; il. by Beth and Joe Krush. 288p $3 Harcourt

808.81 Poetry—Collections. Children's poetry 52-6912

An anthology of poetry for young people's reading. More than a hundred poems are grouped under eight general headings: Strange tales, Gallant deeds, Unforgettable people, Our American heritage, Fables, All in fun, Ballads of the Old Days, and Folk tales of our times.

Booklist 49:127 D 1 '52

"The fare is exciting. Each piece has been relished by the collector. From 10 to 15, young readers will vote this a volume to read and reread." M. B. K.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 16 '52 150w

"A wonderfully chosen collection of poems, equally for the old and wise and the young and adventuring."

+ Commonweal 57:174 N 21 '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:418 D '52 80w

Kirkus 20:702 N 1 '52 120w

"Since all selections are dramatic or humorous, this book is very useful in convincing young skeptics of the excitement and story value of poetry." L. R. Markey

+ Library J 77:2188 D 15 '52 70w

"All who know Mr. Untermeyer's 'This Singing World' know with what understanding and taste he can shape an anthology for younger readers. There is always room for good new anthologies which are edited from a stimulating new angle; his present book should lure many boys and girls from eleven up into poetry."

L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p3 N 16 '52 210w

Time 60:109 D 8 '52 20w

UNWIN, DAVID STORR (DAVID SEVERN, pseud). Crazy castle; il. by J. Kiddell-Monroe. 179p $2 Macmillan

Joan Warner and her brothers have some exciting adventures when the pony, Pride of Persia, is stolen and the children decide to solve the mystery. The scene is England. For ages 10 to 14.

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Kirkus 20:260 Ap 15 '52 80w

"Action is plausible and there is much fun and excitement in this jolly story of the English countryside. . . Recommended." L. E. Cathon

+ Library J 77:732 Ap 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 20 '52 60w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer

N Y Times p16 Je 1 '52 170w

UNWIN, D. S.—Continued

"The valiant spirit of the four as well as the spirited plot and the understanding of people and their motives will probably make this as popular in America as it is in England." C. E. Zagat

+ Sat R 35:53 My 10 '52 120w

UNWIN, DAVID STORR (DAVID SEVERN, pseud). Dream gold, by David Severn; il. by Isami Kashiwagi. 192p $2.50 Viking

52-12917

A mystery story for older boys, the scene of which is Cornwall.

"The glooms and horrors of the Cornwall coast are exploited to advantage in a well knit tale."

+ Kirkus 20:412 J1 15 '52 160w

"An unusual treatment of the 'pirate gold' theme; well-written." B. W. Schein

+ Library J 77:2079 D 1 '52 40w

"Probably this is the best written adventure-mystery-thriller of the fall, for boys over twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p36 N 16 '52 180w

UPFIELD, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Venom house. 184p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5120

Detective story.

Booklist 48:197 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52

Kirkus 19:668 N 15 '51 60w

"There is pungency in the tale as often as Upfield is describing the town or the country, but his principals are puppets speaking badly written dialogue while Boney himself is getting fairly sententious, especially when theorizing about murder." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 3 '52 90w

"One of the noblest series detectives to make his debut here in the past decade is the Australian half-caste Inspector Napoleon Bonaparte. His latest appearance is one of his best: a somewhat slow, almost ponderous novel not recommended to the impatient, but rich in colorful details of Australian life." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p12 F 3 '52 130w

"Excellent Upfield." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 F 3 '52 50w

"Brisk, breezy; detective's plodding logic nice foil for wooziness of many of personnel. Plus mark." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R 35:45 Mr 22 '52 30w

UREY, HAROLD CLAYTON. Planets; their origin and development. 245p $5 Yale univ. press

521 [521.5] Planets

52-5339

"What was the origin of the earth and other planets? No theory yet advanced has won complete acceptance. In this book, the discoverer of heavy hydrogen suggests that they were formed according to established physico-chemical principles from dust particles. The processes whereby they and the moon probably evolved are discussed in the light of this idea. The book is addressed to persons having at least a moderate degree of familiarity with mathematics, chemistry and physics." (Library J) Indexes.

Reviewed by F. A. Paneth

Chem & Eng N 30:3468 Ag 18 '52 300w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 14 '52 180w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:724 Ap 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by K. F. Mather

New Repub 126:18 My 26 '52 550w

"It is a series of scientific papers (delivered as Silliman Lectures at Yale University) that makes few concessions to the lay reader. Herein lies its strength and its weakness. It will be eagerly read by students of the sciences that it fuses, and its robust and courageous approach cannot fail to stimulate research in any number of directions. But the non-technical reader may well be misled by the confidence with which the conclusions are expressed—conclusions that are often controversial, to say the least." Cecilia Payne-Gaposchkin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 20 '52 1150w

N Y New Tech Bks 37:65 S '52

"Professor Urey's discussion is necessarily on a technical level. There is no doubt that it will provoke a controversy which will last for years and out of which will come a modification of currently accepted hypotheses of the origin of the solar system." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '52 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 18 '52 150w

"This book contains a wealth of information and abounds in recent references. It is a sequence of research papers and makes rather difficult reading. It is an advanced research investigation, tentative and modest, a responsible treatise on an exceedingly difficult topic." Peter van de Kamp

+ Sat R 35:34 Ap 12 '52 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p566 Ag 29 '52 440w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:204 Je '52 280w

URMSTON, MARY. Larry's luck; il. by Jean MacDonald Porter. 188p $2.50 Doubleday

52-5760

Story of ten-year-old Larry who was poor at athletics, but a good sport about it. The action revolves around the town's spring field day, an important day, when Larry's sportsmanship won him the admiration of his gang.

Booklist 48:384 J1 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

"Convincing children, a subject full of interest to young readers and a genuine feeling of good sportsmanship characterize the book." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:173 Je '52 80w

"Comparing favorably with her last book. The New Boy, this is another well-handled story about achieving that sense of belonging."

+ Kirkus 20:155 Mr 1 '52 150w

"The story is lively and well intentioned and will probably hold its own with the author's The New Boy." Mary Strang

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11 '52 70w

N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 90w

UTLEY, GEORGE BURWELL. Librarians' conference of 1853; a chapter in American library history; ed. by Gilbert H. Doane. 189p $3 A.L.A.

020.63 Librarians' convention, New York 51-11154

"A report of the first national conference, held in New York, with excerpts from speeches, sketches of participants, and a résumé of the proceedings. The full proceedings, reproduced by photo-offset from Norton's Literary and Educational Register, are appended. The author died before completing the book, which was edited by his nephew who wrote the introductory note on George Burwell Utley." Booklist

Booklist 48:4 S 1 '51

"For this modest and unassuming contribution to an important segment of American library history the profession must be grateful. Rereading once more these deliberations of the founding fathers, the reviewer is impressed, as always, not only with the essential modernity of the ideas they expressed but with the degree to which the profession has departed from the solid foundations which they so conscientiously laid." J. H. Shera

+ Library Q 22:145 Ap '52 2150w

School & Society 74:384 D 15 '51 10w

V

VAETH, JOSEPH GORDON. 200 miles up; the conquest of the upper air. 207p il $4.50 Ronald

629.14353[629.13338] Atmosphere, Upper. Rockets (aeronautics) 51-12928

"This is a handbook for laymen and for beginning technicians in the field of exploration of the upper air, a field limitless in more ways than one. Like an introductory textbook in style, the book contains an absorbing description of what is now known about the sky. . . The book gives excellent summaries of what has been done in high-altitude research. . . Gordon Vaeth is an aeronautical engineer at the Navy's Special Devices Center at Sands Point, Long Island. He has also worked at the White Sands Proving Grounds in New Mexico, the Applied Physics Laboratory of Johns Hopkins, and the Naval Research Laboratory." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 48:80 N 1 '51

"Those who have followed newspaper accounts of the spectacular rocket flights made during the past few years will welcome this splendid report on high altitude research. . . The text is unusually well written in terms just short of technical. . . Because of its factual content and its excellent example of how theory can be reduced to practice, this book should prove an impetus to all scientific endeavor." S. I. Gale

+ Chem & Eng N 29:5286 D 10 '51 240w

"In dealing with a subject so intertwined with government agencies and security regulations as atmospheric research, the author has done well to give a coherent over-all picture of the work. His information is not essentially new to those who have been following the field, but many readers will find things for the first time put into perspective in the larger context of the general program. To experts the account may seem somewhat sketchy, but the book was written to acquaint laymen with this new field, and excessive detail would have been a burden." R. C. C.

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 8 '52 600w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:147 Ja 15 '52 110w

"The author's style is somewhat pedestrian, but it should present no difficulty to readers who have been following upper-air research in the newspapers. Some excellent pictures of rockets and 'skyhook' balloons are included." N Y New Tech Bks 36:82 N '51

Reviewed by Michael Amrine
N Y Times p3 D 16 '51 500w

"The book gains in importance by gathering together and presenting in one place accounts of widely diverse and intensive research efforts carried on at the White Sands, New Mexico, Proving Ground, at the Naval Research Laboratory, at the Applied Physics Laboratory, and at many other establishments, and gives a good picture of the scientific objectives and general results to date of upper atmosphere research. There are many interesting photographs illustrating rockets, launchings, instruments used, and photographs of the earth taken from high altitudes."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:432 D '51 200w

VAIL, JAMES GARRETT. Soluble silicates; their properties and uses; 2v; v 1, Chemistry; assisted by John H. Wills and the staff of Philadelphia quartz company. 357p il $9 Reinhold

661.2 [661.4] Silicates (52-8812)

"A new work which supersedes the author's well-known Soluble Silicates in Industry [Book Review Digest 1929]. Planned for publication in two volumes, the division is roughly: volume I, theory; volume II, uses. The text of the present volume is essentially a well-organized literature digest, with references from statements and data to the citations of original sources. Patents, especially United States patents, are included among the sources. The author index includes the names of authors of the cited articles and of inventors named in patents. The presentation is technical, but even in the first volume, it is too theoretical for the average industrial chemist." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 77:2010 N 15 '52 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 37:79 S '52

VALENTINE, CHARLES WILFRID. Psychology and its bearing on education. 674p $6 Philosophical lib.

370.15 Psychology. Educational psychology [52-289]

"The author is the veteran professor of education in the University of Birmingham (England) with twenty-five years of distinguished service. . . The volume here reviewed surveys the 'supposed mental faculties and their training' which is largely a consideration of memory, observation, attention, followed by discussions of mental abilities, emotions, instincts, fear, anger and aggressiveness, suggestion, sex and sex education, the unconscious. . . It represents a British psychological point of view and draws largely from British sources." (Survey) Indexes.

"Containing valuable material, this volume is not especially suited as a textbook, since it lacks study questions and bibliographies, and its footnotes make comparatively rare references to research materials. Very little mention is made of American research work in educational psychology." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 74:199 S 29 '51 70w

"The material is presented simply, comprehensively, and nontechnically. . . It is valuable especially for parents who are interested in psychology and education. Its great virtue is simplicity, its fault the lack of logical arrangement of its chapters." J. E. Bentley

+ Survey 88:236 My '52 370w

VALLAS, LEON. César Franck; tr. by Hubert Foss. 283p il $4 Oxford

B or 92 Franck, César Auguste [52-7897]

"M. Vallas has written a biography that, in removing Franck from the aura of Victorian stained glass in which d'Indy had surrounded him, genuinely helps us to understand his music. Vallas does not offer us a Franck who is a subject for a psychiatrist's case-book; but he presents a man of passionate nature struggling against the oppressive influence of his monstrous father, the subtler domination of his wife, the bad taste of his time and a certain innate lack of intelligence." Spec

"Vallas constructs an honest and critical study of Franck's compositions and the details of his life. Delving deeply into the musical journals of the time, he gives us fascinating insights; his appraisals of the music are sound and balanced, and Franck the man becomes a human being at last. The translation into English by Hubert Foss is excellent." K. G. Roy

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 31 '52 220w

"This book is an attempt to present a 'detailed and definitive' biography of Franck. That it is detailed nobody can deny, and that it is definitive at least for our generation may be readily conceded. The translation appears to be generally satisfactory, though there are two seemingly inexcusable blunders in places where the French text is given along with the English." Gilbert Chase

VALLAS, LEON—Continued

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 10:101 D '52 380w

"The value of M. Vallas's book lies mainly in the fresh but fairminded and humane approach which he makes to Franck's life and character. He does not attempt any detailed analysis of the works, though such incidental comments as he makes are both sympathetic and judicious—apart perhaps from his rather extravagant account of the organ chorales. The book is written with urbanity, well produced, and excellently translated by Hubert Foss." Wilfrid Mellers

+ Spec 188:152 F 1 '52 450w

"The biographical sections of M. Vallas's book genuinely help us to listen to Franck's music, which should be the aim, rarely fulfilled, of all writing about music. His incidental comments on the works are admirably just, except when he finds that the organ Chorales combine the spirit of Bach and the spirit of Beethoven and make the best of them both. So extravagant a judgment about these remarkable but subjective and hysterical—and therefore un-Bachian and un-Beethovenian—pieces is singularly at odds with the portrait of Franck and his music which is presented in the book as a whole."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 23 '51 450w

VAN ALSTYNE, RICHARD WARNER. American crisis diplomacy; the quest for collective security, 1918-1952; foreword by Graham H. Stuart. 165p $3.50 Stanford univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations 52-6349

"Professor Van Alstyne believes that crisis diplomacy 'is a concept applicable . . . to the international issues affecting Europe and the Far East since 1918.' He has built this brief volume around two chapters of his work, American Diplomacy in Action [Book Review Digest 1944], the latest edition of which appeared in 1947, and several articles originally published in Current History, with some revisions and additions." (Current Hist) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 46:594 Je '52 40w

Reviewed by W. B. Ziff

Ann Am Acad 282:121 JI '52 500w

"This is a good book to place in the hands of readers who still cling to the illusion that the foreign policy of the Roosevelt era was divinely inspired and free from guile or error. After its perusal such readers may be able to pass on to the more realistic revisionist treatment in a book like William Henry Chamberlin's 'America's Second Crusade.'" H. E. Barnes

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 27 '52 550w

"The book is informative rather than interpretative. The author tells what happened, but he does not probe deeply enough into the reasons for the events and policies he describes. On the whole he weaves his way through controversial issues with great dexterity. Some of his statements, however, are open to serious question." N. D. Palmer

+ Current Hist 22:227 Ap '52 650w

Foreign Affairs 31:156 O '52 30w

"The book despite its good qualities, does pose a serious question of common usefulness. It seems to this reviewer that it is too brief to be useful in a college course. He also wonders whether there is anything here to excite the good grey average reader. If the latter is interested in these matters, he knows, or thinks he knows, the material presented here. And it will seem dull fare to one used, as he is, to a spicy diet of revelation, interpretation and proclamation. This is not to say, however, that it is not a book which he could read with profit. Its sober forthrightness recommends it." E. L. Katzenbach

+ Pol Sci Q 67:629 D '52 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 6 '52 240w

"Though nearly every student has his own preference in selecting evidence and placing emphasis, no one will want to deny the mastery of Mr. Van Alstyne's treatment. It is possible to argue that the attempt to tell these stories in eighty pages is an attempt that will not be useful to every reader, and this is true; but it is also true, and much more important, that a very large number of people who think they know all about it would find themselves instructed by Mr. Van Alstyne's brevity. The last half of this volume is, in my view, somewhat less successful. . . . It is the mastery of the facts throughout the volume which I must emphasize above any complaint. It is not all here, but what there is has the authority of a careful, responsible, and reflective mind." McGeorge Bundy

+ Sat R 35:46 Je 14 '52 480w

VANCE, MRS MARGUERITE. Lady Jane Grey, reluctant queen; il. by Nedda Walker. 184p $2.75 Dutton

B or 92 Grey, Lady Jane—Juvenile literature 52-8246

Fictionized biography of Lady Jane Grey, who for nine days in 1554 served as Queen of England, before she was sentenced to death. For teen aged readers.

Booklist 49:114 N 15 '52

Commonweal 57:175 N 21 '52 20w

"Highly readable, highly valuable as supplementary reading."

+ Kirkus 20:661 O 1 '52 200w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p14 N 16 '52 60w

"The complications of history, religion and genealogy so closely bound up with the story of Lady Jane are neatly unraveled by the author without obscuring the portrait of her appealing heroine." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times pt2, p22 N 16 '52 120w

New Yorker 28:206 D 6 '52 50w

"With this biography of Lady Jane Grey, the nine-day Queen of England, Marguerite Vance again proves her skill at molding imaginative flesh onto historical bone. Nedda Walker shows a similar talent. Her illustrations have a lifelike, sculptural quality." B. F.

+ Sat R 35:71 N 15 '52 180w

VAN DE KAMP, PETER. Basic astronomy. 400p il $3.75 Random house

523 Astronomy 52-5551

"An introductory book by the Director of the Sproul Observatory. Though addressed to lay readers and amateur astronomers, it is not a book on star-gazing. Rather it deals with the universe as a whole, the main systems of stars and planets, and with astrophysics. No serious reader should find it difficult to follow." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:354 JI 1 '52

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1517 S 15 '52 50w

"If you are already an amateur star-gazer and, without quite knowing how to go about it, want to proceed still farther into the field, Doctor van de Kamp's introduction to astronomy may very possibly be the guide for which you are seeking. . . . 'Basic Astronomy' is not a book for the dilettante. But in return for serious study and effort it will reward the reader with a priceless awareness of the beauty, the majesty and the order of the universe around him." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 28 '52 130w

VANDENBERG, ARTHUR HENDRICK. Private papers; ed. by Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr. with the collaboration of Joe Alex Morris. 599p il $5 Houghton

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. U.S.—Foreign relations 52-5248

This book contains matter chiefly relevant to American politics and international relations from the author's "papers" from Pearl Harbor (1941) to his death (1951). In his introduction the editor describes the "papers" as follows: "His papers were in the form of scrapbooks, diaries, and letters. In the course of his twenty-three years in Washington, he kept a yearly scrapbook in which he entered chronologically all of his Senate speeches and many hundreds of newspaper and magazine articles relating to matters in which he had a special interest. His diaries were written irregularly. Sometimes he would let weeks pass without making an entry. Then he would write at one sitting a complete account of some lengthy series of events in which he had participated. On other occasions he would make brief entries to accompany newspaper clippings that he pasted in his scrapbooks. . . His letters, as many recipients know, were often little essays in themselves. He wrote a tremendous number of them—many were long explanations of current problems. . . As far as possible these records are presented intact in this book."

Reviewed by Herbert Elliston
Atlantic 190:75 J1 '52 1700w

Booklist 48:279 My 1 '52

Bookmark 11:184 My '52 30w

"This is fascinating reading and makes one hunger for the uncut and uninterpreted diary."
Walter Trohan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 20 '52
1150w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ap 21 '52
1000w

Reviewed by Donald McDonald
Commonweal 56:180 My 23 '52 900w

Current Hist 23:62 J1 '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 30:674 J1 '52 70w

"Don't minimize its long range as well as its immediate value. It should be read by every leader, every aspiring politician, every aware American citizen."

+ Kirkus 20:101 F 1 '52 320w

Reviewed by Harold Lancour
Library J 77:716 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Wayne Morse
Nation 175:13 J1 5 '52 1200w

"Vandenberg was an honest man. . . His story is a reminder that a man of honor can be wrong, but when he sees that he is wrong will stand up and admit it; so it comes into the present situation like a strong sea-wind sweeping over a fetid swamp." Gerald Johnson
+ New Repub 126:17 Ap 21 '52 1400w

Reviewed by J. F. Dulles
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 20
'52 1450w

"His private papers are not merely one more book about the great revolution of American foreign policy. They are an intimate record of the conversion of a man and a nation during one of the most critical periods of world history. They are a most revealing account of the way in which foreign policy is made in a government of divided powers. They are the story of a complex and fascinating human being, who played a critical role in the development of American leadership in the world, and fortunately, they are written by the man himself and not, like most of the post-war reports of the mighty, the work of a competent ghost." James Reston

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 20 '52 2200w

Reviewed by R. H. Rovere
New Yorker 28:132 Je 7 '52 1900w

"This is in all ways a remarkable document, illustrating the United States Senate at its best and, better yet, the true statesmanship of a man who was not afraid to change his mind." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 4 '52
460w

"Those who wish to ponder the deeper lessons of the swift flow of public events during the last decade will profit from the reading of this book." P. H. Douglas

+ Sat R 35:24 Ap 19 '52 1150w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:242 S '52 200w

VANDERBILT, AMY (MRS HANS KNOPF). Complete book of etiquette; a guide to gracious living; drawings by Fred McCarroll [and others]. 700p $5; indexed $5.75 Double-day

395 Etiquet 52-10369

A new book of etiquette which attempts to maintain "a flexible attitude" about modern manners. It covers: The ceremonies of life; Dress and manners; Home entertaining; Household management; Correspondence; The family and social education of the children; Your public life; Official etiquette for civilians; Travel etiquette at home and abroad. Index.

Booklist 49:83 N 1 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 10w

"The approach is, on the whole, realistic rather than ritualistic, and only fussy on occasion; the Vanderbilt name will have a certain cachet; and the book itself should have a steady, standard sale."

+ Kirkus 20:492 Ag 1 '52 120w

Reviewed by Robert Evett

New Repub 127:22 D 29 '52 90w

"In writing what is obviously the most comprehensive of current manners manuals, Amy Vanderbilt has, while codifying today's manners for those who wish information on usage, made a large contribution to the future social historian. This historian or reader will minutely get to know some of us (or at least the way we are supposed to behave) from birth through death and all around the clock every day between—whether we travel, sit at home or spend part of the day away on a job." Leo Lerman

N Y Times p30 O 19 '52 700w

"The author not only writes with an unvarnished frankness but has pushed the horizon of social propriety out to include such goings-on as divorce proceedings, the entertainment of problem drinkers, and appearances on television. . . In the four years it took her to get out her book she has not only viewed etiquette as a cradle-to-the-grave proposition, but turned out advice (most of it highly sensible) on almost every conceivable aspect of life."

+ Time 60:58 O 13 '52 750w

VANDERVELDT, JAMES HERMAN, and ODENWALD, ROBERT PAUL. Psychiatry and Catholicism. 433p $6 McGraw

253.5 Psychology, Pastoral 51-12652

"Both authors are connected with Catholic University of America (Washington, D.C.); one is a psychology professor, the other a child-center director. This priest-psychiatrist team integrates modern psychiatry with moral and religious values; they simply state the Catholic position on theology and philosophy, 'avoiding . . . controversial issues.'" Library J

"Because it is a thoroughly scientific summary of verified findings, this treatise on modern psychiatry is free of anything that conflicts with Christian ethics. It is not intended for general circulation nor adjusted to the taste of the light-minded reader; but it contains pages quite indispensable to that large group of puzzled persons who have no capable professional adviser at hand."

+ Cath World 175:479 S '52 150w

"In a book written for so wide a reading public, it is likely that many will find portions which, as far as they personally are concerned, are superfluous, but all will find in the book much valuable and illuminating material. The selected bibliographies at the end of each chapter are for the most part well chosen and should prove valuable, though the extensive foreign language publications will be of little assistance to the average American reader. This is a book for reading, for study, for reference, and (since it does not pretend to be a final word) for discussion." W. C. Bier

+ Commonweal 56:396 J1 25 '52 950w

"All psychiatric material and case histories are up to date, and will be appropriate for educated laymen and professional people (physicians, lawyers, social workers, marriage

VANDERVELDT, J. H.—Continued
counselors, etc.) Since the strictly medical and the purely theological sides are presented so well, college and public library catalogers may have a problem—whether to file this sizable textbook on the psychiatry or the religion shelf." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 77:1011 Je 1 '52 140w

"In spite of weaknesses in its polemic, the book goes a long way toward reconciliation and represents the first large-scale attempt of this sort in the Anglo-Saxon world. . . The didactic parts which do not deal with controversial issues are excellent. So are many of the pragmatic sections. The remarks concerning the priest's attitude toward patients suffering from anxiety neurosis should be enlarged into a booklet and distributed to all ministers of religion." Karl Stern

+ N Y Times p6 J1 13 '52 600w

VANDIVER, FRANK EVERSON. Ploughshares into swords: Josiah Gorgas and Confederate ordnance. 349p $5 Univ. of Tex. press

B or 92 Gorgas, Josiah. Confederate States of America. Army 52-1653

Based on public and private papers, this is a full length, sympathetic biography of General Josiah Gorgas who was head of Confederate Ordnance during the war, and father of William C. Gorgas of Panama Canal and yellow fever fame. Bibliography. Index.

"Ploughshares into Swords is almost a history of the Ordnance Department, C.S.A. The research is well done. The style, amateurish in the opening part, improves in the middle portions, and becomes almost brilliant toward the last." C. W. Williams

+ Am Hist R 58:144 O '52 500w

"Frank Vandiver's biography is a much-needed contribution to Southern history. One may wish that the author, who by-passed high school and college to enter graduate school, had not by-passed freshman composition, for grammatical lapses occasionally mar the otherwise brilliant writing." J. K. Bettersworth

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 27 '52 200w

"Mr. Vandiver, although still a young man, has long been a student of Confederate history. Making use of General Gorgas's diary, an abundance of unpublished letters, and the Official Records, he has created a striking picture of this 'right man in the right place' whose achievements have heretofore been insufficiently publicized. Mr. Vandiver has produced a book which will find a place of lasting prominence on the Civil War bookshelf." S. F. Horn

+ Sat R 35:19 Ag 16 '52 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:243 S '52 180w

VAN DRUTEN, JOHN. I am a camera; a play in three acts. 182p il $2.50 Random house 522 52-5920

This play is based on the Berlin stories of Christopher Isherwood and Isherwood himself is one of the characters. The time is 1930, the place Isherwood's room in Berlin. The play was first presented in New York in November 1951.

Dramatic criticism by Walter Kerr

Commonweal 55:277 D 21 '51 600w

"Focuses but fuzzily on the soulseek Berlin of 1930, and but fuzzily on the fuzziness of Isherwood. It focuses with seeming sharpness on a young English girl with the most astounding lack of morals, but assumed to have great charm. It is difficult to see what she has to do with Berlin, or Berlin with her." W. P. Eaton

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 6 '52 180w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '52 110w

"Whatever its faults may be, the play is never dull. Its best scenes are fresh and sensitive and have a fine honesty. They have that unposed, spontaneous quality which can endow a snapshot with a vitality unknown to most studio portraits. Few characters I can remember have been drawn as candidly as Sally Bowles. Part of her validity is that she is left unresolved and that her inconsistency is shown as her chief consistency." Dramatic criticism by J. M. Brown

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:26 D 22 '51 1550w

VAN HERRIKHUIZEN, F. W. See Heerikhui-zen, F. W. van

VAN RENSSELAER, ALEXANDER. Magic [a family activity book] il. by John N. Barron. 44p $1.50 Knopf

793.8 Conjuring—Juvenile literature 52-6396

Describes twenty-five tricks for young readers to perform—tricks with coins, cards, ropes, handkerchiefs, and a magic wand.

"Given a little time and a lot of patience, any young persons could master the tricks described here, and the number of birthday parties which would be enlivened by their performance could easily reach fantastic proportions." M. F. Kieran

+ Atlantic 190:102 D '52 50w

Booklist 49:76 O 15 '52

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 23 '52 30w

"Lots of fun for everyone."

+ Kirkus 20:556 S 1 '52 50w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 77:1824 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p36 N 16 '52 20w

VAN RIPER, PAUL PRITCHARD. Handbook of practical politics. 214p il pa $1.95 Holt

329 Politics, Practical. U.S.—Politics and government 52-6635

"How to organize for 'effective citizen political action—Partisan or nonpartisan—at the grass roots, local level' is explained in a lively, informal manual, using a variety of quoted material. Drawings, charts, tables. Bibliography." Bookmark

Booklist 48:332 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 30w

"A book that should be in the hands of all small groups informing themselves on their responsibilities as citizens, League of Women Voters, party organizations, and so on. Unfortunately the format, the crowded pages and small type predominating, makes forbidding reading."

+ — Kirkus 20:219 Mr 15 '52 210w

"Recommended for all libraries." R. S. Taylor

+ Library J 77:893 My 15 '52 80w

"It would be a useful thing to place this book in the hands of every person of voting age. It might give a lot of party bosses a headache, but it would be a great thing for America." W. D. Patterson

+ Sat R 35:12 J1 19 '52 400w

VAN SILLER, HILDA. Last resort, by Van Siller [pseud]. 235p $2.50 Lippincott

51-11210

Detective story.

Reviewed by E. Fowke

Canadian Forum 31:286 Mr '52 70w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ja 20 '52 80w

Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 60w

"Miss Van Siller after half a dozen overheated tries, managed a very satisfactory thriller in 'Paul's Apartment' (1948). This, observed through the outward consciousness of the wooden young Englishman, is equally satisfactory." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 20 '52 140w

"If the dénouement and its interminable explanation are awkward, the well-handled love-story and the artfully drawn background should attract readers of any school." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '52 90w

"The mystery is of the placid kind, with a slight lift added by your uncertainty as to who's the detective, but somehow you keep reading. C Plus." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 27 '52 70w

"Background realistic, cast palpably ditto, but occasionally tiresome (as who isn't?)." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R 35:31 Ja 26 '52 20w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. Away and beyond. 309p $3.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

52-9050

A collection of nine science fiction stories.

Booklist 49:69 O 15 '52

Kirkus 20:478 Ag 1 '52 40w

Library J 77:1761 O 15 '52 20w

"This belongs on your shelves beside his recent 'Destination: Universe'; and it's a pleasure to remember that there are still some first rate unreprinted shorts from this 'Astounding' period." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 O 26 '52 120w

"An interesting fact about the author is made clear in this collection of nine s-f stories: he writes lucidly of robots, humanoid calculators, and extra-terrestrials. But when he attempts the psychology of a human protagonist or antagonist, he fails dismally." V. G.

+ — N Y Times p29 O 12 '52 100w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 21 '52 60w

"Always lively but much double-talk." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 20w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. Destination: universe! 295p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

52-5053

A selection from the author's science-fiction short stories.

"Facile endings mar several of these tales, but Van Vogt must be credited with plot ingenuity, skill in mystification, and a certain poignancy at his best, which is frequent in this collection." Mark Reinsberg

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 20 '52 120w

Kirkus 20:97 F 1 '52 70w

"Van Vogt has been known to the hard-cover reading public chiefly as the author of vast, intricate and ponderous novels; now at last this collection displays what the magazine-reader has long known: his mastery of the economical short story adventurously developing a startling imaginative idea." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 1 '52 160w

N Y Times p15 Ag 10 '52 130w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 20 '52 140w

"All the best of Van Vogt." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R 35:44 My 24 '52 20w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. Mixed men. 223p $2.75 Gnome press

52-10217

Science-fiction novel.

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 S 21 '52 160w

Kirkus 20:239 Ap 1 '52 90w

"This book, an amalgamation of three stories from 'Astounding' 1943-1945 with much added material, is one of van Vogt's least successful. . . To be commended only to the most ardent devotees of van Vogt's individual brand of hyper-expansive intergalactic fantasy." H. H. Holmes

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 15 '52 100w

"It's certain that Van Vogt has written little, if any, science fiction; it's equally certain that he has written some superb stories of high adventure. Unfortunately, this novel reads like a bad parody of one of these." J. F. M.

— N Y Times p15 Ag 10 '52 120w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 6 '52 50w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:43 O 18 '52 30w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. Weapon makers. 220p $2.75 Greenberg

52-5626

Science fiction.

Bookmark 11:211 Je '52

Reviewed by Mark Reinsberg

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 20 '52 110w

"Magnificent romantic melodrama (if you are willing to grant a fresh impossibility every ten pages)." H. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 My 11 '52 180w

"This sequel to 'The Weapon Shops of Isher' is even better than its predecessor." Villiers Gerson

+ — N Y Times p36 Ap 27 '52 100w

"Somehow or other, Van Vogt manages to make this interesting, although at times the implausibilities make one writhe." Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 30 '52 180w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R 35:34 Ag 2 '52 30w

VARIETY (periodical). Spice of Variety; ed. by Abel Green. 277p $3.50 Holt

817

52-10299

"An anthology of articles which have appeared in the celebrated theatre trade periodical. Included are Fred Allen, Ethel Barrymore, Gene Buck, Eddie Cantor, Harry Hirschfeld, Arthur Kober, Joe Laurie, Jr., Gypsy Rose Lee, and Maurice Zolotow among others." Library J

"Written for Variety's annual anniversary editions, they find the authors frequently trying too hard. The free and easy atmosphere of Variety's own briskly paced columns, which bulge vividly with the hullabaloo and the humdrum aspects of show business, apparently is difficult to capture between cloth covers." William Leonard

Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 16 '52 110w

Kirkus 20:592 S 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 77:1814 O 15 '52 30w

Reviewed by Richard Lockridge

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 16 '52 450w

"As is true of other things in life, some of the pieces are better than others, and it possibly isn't chauvinism which causes Mr. Green to remark that 'the best writing in 'Variety' is by its staffers.' The guests, while generally O. K. are, after all, just people like Allen and Benny." Lewis Nichols

+ — N Y Times p14 N 16 '52 360w

"The book's chief asset is its heavy dose of nostalgia which touches almost every phase of show business. If these fond memories affect you, they will probably compensate for any failure on the part of individual pieces to bring off whatever they set out to do."

+ — Sat R 35:27 N 29 '52 220w

VAUGHAN, LADY AURIEL ROSEMARY MALET (ORIEL MALET, pseud). Jemima. 279p $3 Little

52-9782

Novel of adolescence. Jemima, a seventeen year old English girl, dismissed from her boarding school because of her parents' long drawn out divorce, is sent to Paris, ostensibly to learn French. There she is infatuated with a charming youth who is in love with someone else. Jemima is almost relieved when she is summoned back to England.

Booklist 49:106 N 15 '52

"Engagingly artless and delightful in its characters, this gives a quiet credulity to youth and its yearnings."

+ Kirkus 20:570 S 1 '52 170w

"Recommended for readers who want a quiet interlude or a rest from more complicated novels." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 77:1656 O 1 '52 90w

"Excellent as are parts of the book, they do not outweigh the dullness and superficiality of adult characterization and the triteness and, at times, carelessness of plot." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 19 '52 380w

"All the children in the book are small masterpieces; neither darlings of the intellect, nor sentient dolls, but greedy, matter-of-fact, affectionate, humorous individuals. Jemima has too much natural candor and innocence to be the sensitive tortured spirit for long. Her suffering is real, through rejection and betrayal. But her spirit rises sturdily to the test of growing up. The book is a small fragment of universal wisdom and humor." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p51 N 9 '52 210w

"Miss Malet writes brightly and gives a good deal of thought to her people before she starts to contend with them, but she is at her best when she is not trying to bring off big scenes of worldly wit and chatter, to which she is rather attached."

+ New Yorker 28:153 O 25 '52 70w

VAUGHAN, JOSEPHINE BUDD. Land and people of Japan; il. from photographs. (Portraits of the nations ser) 128p $2.50 Lippincott

952 Japan—Juvenile literature 52-5106

"An up-to-date introductory book on Japan for readers of twelve up. The author has lived in the Orient for fifteen years, and in Japan 'during the whole of the occupation.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:201 F 15 '52

Bookmark 11:236 J1 '52

Reviewed by Mary Handy

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 15 '52 140w

Horn Bk 28:245 Ag '52 100w

Kirkus 20:33 Ja 15 '52 180w

"An important addition to the 'Portraits of the Nations Series.'" L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 2 '52 230w

New Yorker 28:204 D 6 '52 70w

"Mrs. Vaughan has presented the story of Japan and the Japanese people so simply and with such clear continuity that it can be read and appreciated by even the younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R 35:28 Je 28 '52 120w

VAUGHN, MARGARET. Good food without salt; introd. by Mary Catherine Tyson; foreword by Solomon Silver. 188p $3 Crowell

641.56 Cookery for the sick 51-6346

This book does not set forth the advantages of a salt-free diet, but, after such a diet has been prescribed by a physician, shows how palatable and interesting meals can be served containing little salt. Each recipe gives sodium-content and calories per portion.

Booklist 48:180 F 1 '52

Reviewed by Ogden Martin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 14 '51 140w

"The recipes have a great deal of variety and originality, and spices, herbs, and wines provide interest and sophistication."

+ Kirkus 19:371 J1 15 '51 120w

VAYGOUNY, MARGARITE. Peter the stork; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 109p $2.25 Macmillan

51-13382

Story of a little Danish girl and her pet, Peter the stork. In Denmark all storks are called Peter. This Peter was too frail to migrate to Egypt for the winter, but stayed with Greta, and became practically a member of the family. For grades 4-5.

Booklist 48:187 F 1 '52

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

Horn Bk 27:413 D '51 60w

Kirkus 19:456 Ag 15 '51 110w

"A bit clumsily written at times, it, nevertheless, brings a warm feeling of home and security and of Denmark through the seasons." Inger Boye

+ Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 4 '51 50w

"The subject of the book, and the Danish setting, will interest American children. It is unfortunate that the translation is awkward. . . The illustrations are pleasant and specific as to background." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 13 '52 130w

"It is charming and simple, well written, and especially appealing in its Christmas scene which is excitingly real."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 11 '51 100w

VEEDAM, VOLDEMAR, and WALL, CARL BERNARD. Sailing to freedom. 246p $3.50 Crowell

910.45 Erma (sloop). Refugees, Estonian. Voyages and travels 52-7593

In 1945 Soviet Russia invited the Estonians who had found refuge from the Nazis in Sweden, to return to their native land. Rather than face a Russian domination the author and a small band of others, men, women and children, bought a small vessel and fled in it to America. This is the story of their voyage.

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:158 Ap '52 40w

"It's an inspiring, entertaining, exciting, and humorous chronicle of true adventure well written by the two authors, an Estonian newspaper man and an American magazine writer." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 16 '52 280w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 6 '52 380w

Foreign Affairs 31:162 O '52 20w

Horn Bk 28:189 Je '52 30w

"A courageous chronicle and a sea story with terrific human interest."

+ Kirkus 20:53 Ja 15 '52 190w

"As gripping a tale, as touching a story as you will read in many a day. Human interest, humor, adventure, the sea, not to mention Grandma's philosophic comment, but above all, courage—make wonderful, inspiring reading for old and young. Don't miss it!" R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:209 F 1 '52 130w

"You will be thrilled in the best sense of that abused word at the perils they met, and overcame, be amazed not only at their fortitude, but at their humor. You will meet some marvelous people, not the least of whom is Grandma P, and in a pretty sorry mess of a world your faith and pride in the human race will be restored."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 18 '52
190w

"This is really more thrilling than 'Kon-Tiki.' It is an escape story. It is men, women and children against the sea and the Soviets. A grand tale." William McFee

+ N Y Times p14 F 24 '52 450w

"A slapdash but nonetheless fascinating record."

+ New Yorker 28:131 Mr 29 '52 160w

Reviewed by Scott Newhall

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 4 '52
140w

"Sailing to Freedom" strikes a full, rich note, more tuned to the ears of our ancestors than to ours; it may twinge the conscience of those of us who did not have to sail 8,000 miles to live in America." E. S. Allen

+ Sat R 35:19 Je 28 '52 500w

VELIKOVSKY, IMMANUEL. Ages in chaos; 2v; v 1. From the Exodus to King Akhnaton. 350p il $4.50 Doubleday

932 Jews—History (52-5224)

A reconstruction of ancient history from the Exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt, to King Akhnaton. By the author of Worlds in Collision (Book Review Digest 1950). Index.

Booklist 48:294 My 15 '52

Reviewed by W. H. Krogman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 20 '52
450w

Christian Century 68:805 Jl 9 '52 360w

Kirkus 20:36 Ja 15 '52 150w

"The author of Worlds in Collision has done it again. Here is a second work that will keep the experts busy and that makes exciting reading for the layman." A. D. Osborn

+ Library J 77:1076 Je 15 '52 210w

"Velikovsky's 'methodology' is a total neglect of fundamentals and a penchant for dealing with the bizarre and incredible, as all scientists and historians who are acquainted with his previous book will recognize at once. Although he implies a knowledge of them, it is evident that he does not really know cuneiform . . . nor Egyptian, nor any other language necessary for the interpretation of the sources of the history of the ancient Near East, beyond the Hebrew and Aramaic which he learned in childhood. . . In short, the book swarms with absurdities and impossibilities." William Albright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 20 '52 1300w

"An exasperating mixture of fact and fancy, presented with great solemnity and a show of specious erudition." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '52 1300w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 8 '52

800w

VENN, MARY E. (MARY ADRIAN, pseud). Honeybee; il. by Barbara Latham. 49p $2 Holiday

595.7 Bees—Juvenile literature 52-13412

The life cycle of the honeybee told in simple prose for ages 6 to 9.

"It can be highly recommended as a gift for young nature-lovers." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 28:417 D '52 40w

Kirkus 20:500 Ag 15 '52 110w

"One of the most fascinating presentations of the life of the hive that this reviewer has seen. And one sure to interest children of 5-10." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 77:1820 O 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p28 N 16 '52 30w

"Miss Adrian writes with clarity and imagination; the many fine pictures by Barbara Latham help to make this a book that will appeal to the beginning reader." Eugenia Garson

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '52 110w

"The scientific facts, so amazing in themselves, and a more or less narrative style have been agreeably combined in this life story of a honeybee."

+ New Yorker 28:203 D 6 '52 30w

VENN, MARY E. (MARY ADRIAN, pseud). Tugboat mystery; il. by William Moyers. 123p $2 Houghton

52-7200

Mystery story for boys and girls.

Bookmark 11:186 My '52

"A contrived and amateurish story."

— Kirkus 20:30 Ja 15 '52 90w

"Recommended for boys and girls 8-12." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 77:539 Mr 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 20 '52 40w

"In spite of the promise of the title and the unusual background, the story is not exciting, even for little children. There seem to be no motives for the mystery, and the characters' actions are inconsistent." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p16 Je 1 '52 100w

"Librarians and booksellers will testify that there is just as devoted a following for children's mystery stories as there is for the adult 'who-done-its.' Indeed there is a real need for fairly easy, well-written stories that will satisfy this group. This book is a not altogether successful attempt to provide such fare." C. E. Zagat

Sat R 35:53 My 10 '52 140w

VENTURI, LIONELLO. Italian painting: the Renaissance. See Italian painting: the Renaissance

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Strange story of our earth; il. by the author and from paintings by Charles R. Knight; with an introd. by L. Don Leet. 255p $3.75 Page

550 Geology. Paleontology. Earth 52-7955

"A panorama of the growth of our planet as revealed by the sciences of geology and paleontology." (Subtitle) Written for the layman. Glossary of geological terms. Index.

Booklist 48:235 Mr 15 '52

"Not for the beginner; language is advanced and sentences complicated. Explanations of technical terms are rather complex. A popularization rather than a text, it will be enjoyed by senior-high school students who are already familiar with the fundamentals of geology and biology." N. S. Chasteen

Library J 77:1019 Je 1 '52 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 6 '52
190w

VESTAL, STANLEY, pseud. See Campbell, W. S.

VIAL, A. E. LOCKINGTON. Alpine glaciers [il. with photographs]. 126p il $6.75 British bk. centre

551.31 Glaciers [52-7754]

Study of the movements of glaciers in the Alps, illustrated with 86 photographs. Index.

Reviewed by Ernest Richter

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Mr 30 '52
90w

"Of considerable scientific and mountaineering value. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:797 My 1 '52 20w

VICKERS, ROY. Murder in two flats. 215p
$2.50 Mill
Detective story.

52-5056

Kirkus 19:649 N 1 '51 50w

"A deplorably dull book." James Sandoe
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 10 '52
100w

"A dull and confused conventional murder puzzle which might possibly have seemed acceptable twenty years ago." Anthony Boucher
— N Y Times p20 Ja 13 '52 40w

"Alibis and complications slow the pace a bit, but the characters are fun and the mystery works out fairly. Thoroughly readable if not too startling. B minus." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 20 '52
70w

"Not so hot." Sergeant Cuff

— Sat R 35:59 Ja 19 '52 40w

"As a technical problem, some readers may find it diverting, but for others it gets so involved that it may become a bore to follow. There is little of interest to be found in either the characters or the story, but it can be put on the list of selected reading for insomniacs." D. F. M.

— + Springf'd Republican p8D F 3 '52 50w

VIDAL, GORE. Judgment of Paris. 375p $3.50
Dutton

52-5296

"Philip Warren, like Paris, is handsome, he has given himself a year to find himself, and like so many others, has gone to Europe to do it. He meets in turn Regina Durham, wife of a politician (the counterpart of Juno), who wants him to find himself in the power of politics; Sophia Oliver, who offers beauty; and Anna who gave her own self and saved Warren from being alone." Library J

"Mr. Vidal writes with a pleasant, quietly keyed irony, but his novel suffers from emotional anemia. His hero has 'a terrible feeling that nothing matters,' and this indifferentism is apt to communicate itself to the reader."

+ — Atlantic 189:85 Ap '52 160w

"The Judgment of Paris' is excellent entertainment, but it is far from being the 'major novel' his publisher would have us believe it is." August Derleth

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 9 '52
300w

"Lots of willowy chatter, ingenious buffoonery, and scholarly asides for an amusing few hours."

Kirkus 19:711 D 15 '51 190w

"This is brilliant, full of humor, and frequently wise. It ranks with the best of Huxley. However, since it is concerned in its lesser characters, with Europe's international set, some of the incidents may exclude the book from some collections. Otherwise, recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ — Library J 77:144 Ja 15 '52 140w

New Repub 126:22 Ap 21 '52 180w

"Mr. Vidal can write, but despite all his intellectual fanfare of quotes from the ancients and his adoption of blunt detail from the moderns, he fails to achieve the seriousness of a philosophy of life." Virgilia Peterson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 8 '52
500w

"The necessity for self-discovery in love has been the buried theme of all of Vidal's work up to now. The fact that it has at last been brought to the surface and dramatized in a novel of genuine force and substance is the best of possible assurances that the long apprenticeship is finally coming to an end." J. W. Aldridge

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '52 1000w

"A diligent compilation of smart European chatter that is, unfortunately, too large to be handy, too special to be generally useful, and too personal to be really up to date."

New Yorker 28:118 Mr 15 '52 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 6 '52
600w

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Sat R 35:18 Mr 22 '52 400w

Springf'd Republican p10D Mr 30 '52
120w

VIERECK, PETER ROBERT EDWIN. First morning; new poems. 120p $3 Scribner 811 52-12815

A third book of poems by an American poet now professor of history at Mount Holyoke college.

"Dr. Viereck is staying young too long. His 'new poems' are still full of promise; but by now, in his thirties, he should have backed them up with performance. . . Too many of the poems are marred by Dr. Viereck's combined will to preach and to be pert, which is, frankly, a pity." Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 57:77 O 24 '52 200w

"There is music, there is thought, there is life and intimacy and wit in this volume, which may appeal to new readers of poetry as well as those already acquainted with the poet."

+ Kirkus 20:485 Ag 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 77:2175 D 15 '52 130w

"For a while, in 'The First Morning' one can respond with a good deal of pleasure to a new sense of composure that seems to be pervading the work of the author. . . But pretty soon, about halfway through the section of pastorals, the reader begins to feel so prodded, so jabbed, so goosed, so chivvied, so nagged, so hot-boxed and high-pressured, into excitement, that he begins to long for some nice good old dull Lake poet, for a Crabbe or a Barnes." Rolfe Humphries

Nation 175:392 O 25 '52 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 9 '52
150w

"A truly admirable book of poetry. What gets in the way of his freshly-minted lyrics is not his art, compulsive and genuine as it is, but his intolerable egoism, which permits him to intrude subordinate irrelevancies that might well have appeared in an appendix." I. L. S.

+ — Sat R 35:20 D 27 '52 270w

VILLIERS, ALAN JOHN. Monsoon seas; the story of the Indian Ocean. (Oceans of the world ser) 337p $4.75 McGraw

950 Indian Ocean

52-5347

The story of the "flying-fish ocean", the Indian Ocean. "The Indian is the smallest of the three true oceans, and the richest in history; it has been traversed by the ancient ships of Egypt (bound for the land of Punt), Chinese junks, Arab dhows, proas, caravels, the unwieldy, spice-laden 'floating warehouses' of the East India Company, Yankee clippers, P. & O. liners, and, during the two world wars, German raiders." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 48:358 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 J1 6 '52
330w

Kirkus 20:220 Mr 15 '52 120w

"The best kind of a book for the arm-chair traveler or the would-be explorer." M. D. Read
+ Library J 77:1525 S 15 '52 70w

"The story of the Indian Ocean and its fabulous islands, fascinating in content and effective in style."

+ Nation 175:57 J1 19 '52 110w

"Whatever familiarity the reader has with the personality of the Indian Ocean, with the races and men who warred and traded upon it, Mr. Villiers offers a new adventure. The author's qualifications as biographer of the Indian Ocean are well-nigh unique." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Je 1 '52
1100w

"Captain Villiers tells a straight reporter's story, without either the atmosphere of a Lafcadio Hearn or the imaginative insight of Pierre Loti. . . For all that, 'Monsoon Seas' is a highly interesting book. The endpapers are conventionally fussy, but the maps in the text are a delight." William McFee

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '52 550w

"It offers a surfeit of material to the historian, but Mr. Villiers has sorted it out well, and since he himself has sailed the waters in an Arab pearler, in full-rigged ships . . . his writing reflects a comfortable seafaring knowledgeability."

+ New Yorker 28:140 Je 7 '52 120w

"Few could tell it with the vigorous sweep that Villiers gives his narrative, and fewer still have the personal knowledge to give the narrative the depth he does. There are maps and photographs, and a selected reading list of other books for those who would like to go further. The reader will regret only that the volume couldn't have run to twice its 315 pages." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 12 '52 700w

"The stories are endless, and it is like sitting with an old sailor on the fo'c'sle deck at night while the night swings gently. In this day and age there are few pleasures greater than listening to a sailor telling his tales of the sea." Robert Payne

+ Sat R 35:12 Jl 26 '52 650w
Time 60:80 Jl 7 '52 750w

VINACKE, HAROLD MONK. United States and the Far East, 1945-1951; pub. under the auspices of the American Institute of Pacific relations, incorporated. 144p $3; pa $2 Stanford univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East) 52-1172

Brief survey of the United States' foreign policy in Asia since the end of World war II. Includes an account of the MacArthur controversy. The author is professor of political science at the University of Cincinnati. During the war he was a specialist on Japan for the Office of War Information. Index.

"A very clear and impartial presentation of the shifts and changes, and of the influences domestic and foreign which brought them about. There is a notable absence of partisanship in so controversial a subject, and the book is highly to be recommended as a reliable guide to how the present unsatisfactory situation came about." L. A. Mills

+ Am Hist R 58:189 O '52 140w

Am Pol Sci R 46:594 Je '52 40w

Reviewed by H. R. Isaacs

Ann Am Acad 282:124 Jl '52 320w

"The book is an admirably clear, well-balanced synopsis of American-Far Eastern relations during a momentous period but it suffers from an undistinguished, academic style that will not attract the very readers who could profit most from reading it." Robert Peel

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 26 '52 330w

Current Hist 22:229 Ap '52 100w

Foreign Affairs 31:166 O '52 20w

"Any moderate-sized book which undertakes, as this one does, to elucidate these issues, to digest the millions of words spoken or written about them and to present a careful and balanced account of our policy can be only welcomed. Whether this particular book quite fills the bill will depend to some extent on one's point of view, and its publication under the auspices of the Institute of Pacific Relations, so often subject to Congressional inquiry, is likely to expose it to controversy." O. D. Tolischus

+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 6 '52 1100w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 13 '52 180w

"Anyone interested in a non-partisan, decently impartial, and well informed review of our policies and problems in the Far East, will find it in this book." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R 35:40 Je 21 '52 300w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:175 Je '52 120w

VINCENT, JOHN NATHANIEL. Diatonic modes in modern music. 297p $12 Univ. of Calif. press

781.22 Musical intervals and scales 51-14593

"This work divides itself naturally into two parts which, although more or less independent, are nevertheless sufficiently related to be treated under the title The Diatonic Modes in Modern Music. The two divisions are roughly: (1) theory, and (2) history. Book One, Theory, has two parts: A Diatonic Theory of Chromaticism and Kindred Studies. . . Book Two, A History of the Diatonic Modes, comprises two parts: Early Systems and the Genesis of the Harmonic Modes. Although Book Two concerns chiefly the period since the rise of the major-minor system (1600-1900), a sketch of the previous scale history is included in Part One, for the purpose of orientation as well as to throw into relief the thread of diatony, which is one of the constants of occidental music." (Intro) Bibliography. Index.

"Vincent's method is not a natural and logical deduction from observed phenomena, but an arbitrary system which fits those phenomena only at certain points." R. S. Hill

Music Lib Assn Notes 9:411 Je '52 460w

"However the general practicability of Mr. Vincent's method may be questioned, the clarity of his presentation must be appreciated, as well as the wealth of illustrations he marshals in defense of his theory. Musicians will find this a stimulating and highly interesting work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:19 Mr '52 240w

VINING, MRS ELIZABETH (GRAY). See Gray, E. J.

VINTON, IRIS. Passage to Texas; il. by Kathleen Elgin. 192p $1.75; school ed $1.59 Aladdin

52-11855

An historical novel of Texas in the 1830s, when it was still a part of Mexico but was being settled largely by emigrants from the United States. The story recounts the experiences of the Woodley family on the trip to Texas and on their arrival. For readers 10 to 12.

Kirkus 20:557 S 1 '52 90w

"Swiftly-moving, dramatic story. . . Characters well portrayed; background unobtrusively introduced." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 77:1667 O 1 '52 50w

"The boys are real and the adventures interesting, though the historic point seems a bit minor in interest." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 28 '52 80w

VIRGIL (PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO). Aeneid; tr. by C. Day Lewis. 288p ltd autog ed $3.75 Oxford

873.1

52-13026

"Mr. Lewis's is the first translation of the 'Aeneid' ever 'commissioned for broadcasting'—and not merely commissioned, but actually broadcast, over the BBC's Third Programme. . . Mr. Lewis has adopted a loose-jointed six-stress meter which gives him abundant play, so that some of his lines have as few as twelve syllables and others as many as seventeen. This flexibility permits a line-for-line rendition of the original that would either be impossible of accomplishment under a strict metrical scheme, or could be accomplished only at the cost of alternate padding and compression." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by W. P. Tryon

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 18 '52 160w

"Mr. Lewis's style is conversational—rapid, incisive, and boldly modern in diction and rhythm. At once the effect is quite different. Though he tells the story well and makes a very good job of the descriptive and narrative passages, and sometimes, as in scenes of action, gives a more vivid and exciting rendering than any other translator I have read, yet in the more elevated passages . . . one feels that this conversational style does not soar with the original, and that the emotion and passion are muted or lost." W. H. Semple

VIRGIL—Continued

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '52 500w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 9 '52 200w

"It is disappointing to discover that the poem on the page by no means measures up to the poem spoken. Far from being incisive, it is inert, a mass of language; and the only conviction lies in the development of the narrative. The reason for this would seem to be the medium with which the British poet, C. Day Lewis, has chosen to work." Dudley Fitts

N Y Times p10 O 26 '52 290w

Reviewed by L. P. Wilkinson
Spec 189:546 O 24 '52 700w

"The Aeneid lives primarily because of its poetic quality, but in translation the loveliness of the language is in peril. Professor Day Lewis's metre with six stresses permits a variation of the line from 12 to 18 syllables, which ensures speed, variety and elasticity. But the over-all impression is one of dry austerity, where there is little which so memorably stamps itself on the imagination that one says 'This is it. He's got it splendidly right.'"

Times [London] Lit Sup p686 O 24 '52 500w

VISCARDI, HENRY. Man's stature; introd. by Bernard M. Baruch. 240p $3 Day
B or 92 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc.

52-9615

The author, who was born with stumps for legs, describes his own struggles to learn to walk on artificial limbs, his teaching of amputees to walk during World War II, and his years as executive director of J.O.B. or Just One Break.

Booklist 49:62 O 15 '52

Bookmark 12:31 N '52 20w

Kirkus 20:495 Ag 1 '52 200w

"This volume opens fresh insights on rehabilitation to industry, the public, even the disabled, themselves; and, incidentally, it is very interesting reading. Recommended for all readers." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 77:1812 O 15 '52 120w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 2 '52 450w

"Mr. Viscardi is to be praised for using his pain to save others from pain, as well as to remind those whose burdens may be lighter that there are others who suffer more. As Bernard M. Baruch writes in his introduction, 'Those who too often lose themselves in the petty complaints of everyday life will be moved to re-evaluate their problems after reading this book.'" Lucy Freeman

+ N Y Times p26 O 5 '52 440w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p11D O 26 '52 250w

VITTORINI, ELIO. Red carnation; tr. by Anthony Bower. 244p $3 New directions

52-11063

A novel about an adolescent-boy, growing up in Mussolini's Italy. "The red carnation is the gift of a girl he admires idealistically and romantically; it is in turn given by him to a prostitute under whose spell he falls. Love, pure or sensual, is not however the only element in his life; there is also the thread of his relationship with the traditional 'best friend' of all youthful stories, and some concern with the attraction of Fascism for the adolescence of the period." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R)

Atlantic 190:79 S '52 200w

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 17 '52 340w

"Rarely has an Italian novel been so seedy, pretentious, glib, and completely dependent on the process of reproduction, without anything ever being produced, as The Red Carnation. No Italian reader would waste time on this kind of stuff unless he were a subscriber to 'Living Biographies of Heroines of Harems,' or a rabid collector of pictures like the one on the cover of this novel." Serge Hughes

— Commonweal 56:441 Ag 8 '52 380w

Kirkus 20:349 Je 15 '52 210w

"The translation is on the whole good, though it is occasionally too literal. . . 'The Red Carnation' is not first-rate Vittorini by any means, but its painstaking and accurate analysis is very much to the point at a time when increasing numbers of youngsters—twenty years later than Vittorini's Mainardi—are searching for the strong word, the flexed muscle." Frances Keene

+ — Nation 175:175 Ag 30 '50 800w

"The Red Carnation is depressingly precise, perhaps even a bit more so than Vittorini intended. . . Still, it would be absurd to blame Vittorini for having been what he was; he could not help growing up in, and being twisted by, Mussolini's Italy. We need only insist on certain standards: between a novel like this one, for all its talent, and a novel like Bread and Wine there is a moral chasm." Irving Howe

New Repub 127:19 Ag 4 '52 650w

"Readers who were won over to Vittorini by 'In Sicily' will find this somewhat slighter book not unworthy to stand beside it; those whose introduction to him may come with the reading of the present novel will be immediately aware of an authentic personality even though some of the aspects of the work may not seem especially original. . . The work is not without its defects. Though the protagonist, his best friend and even the two girls are credible enough, some of the devices, the diary, and the exchange of letters between the two youths, aside from being rather hackneyed are not convincing in themselves." T. G. Bergin

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 3 '52 480w

"What Signor Vittorini is saying in all this cannot be precisely said in any other way. But he is showing how, out of the duality of Mainardi's loves, arises the inverted sense of responsibility, the sense of guilt; how the longing to return to the blamelessness of childhood becomes a longing for a violent restoration of unity, a longing to be condemned and commanded, to hide the tainted self in the terrifying group. Nothing, surely, will be more important to us to understand in the next ten years." Donald Barr

N Y Times p4 Ag 3 '52 700w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 28:85 Ag 16 '52 1700w

"Although it is not as perfect a novel as 'In Sicily,' Elio Vittorini's early book, 'The Red Carnation' deserves a high place among the contemporary novels that explore the formative years." H. C. Webster

Sat R 35:16 Ag 2 '52 480w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ag 10 '52 100w

"This is one of the oldest stories in the world, and Author Vittorini, like most of those who have retold it, has failed to avoid seamy sentimentality. . . Where Vittorini excels is in matters that are more real than romantic. He brings to life the hostel in which Mainardi and his fellow boarders eat, sleep, gossip, quarrel, and exchange adolescent dogma on everything from Homer to modern politics. He gets down pat the earnest remarks that bubble from sophomore lips. . . He shows, too, and convincingly, that for Mainardi to have been a young Fascist was the most natural thing in the world, especially after Mussolini gave him a dramatic black shirt and a shiny pistol."

+ — Time 60:82 Ag 4 '52 440w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 42:16 autumn '52 270w

VOGELER, ROBERT ALEXANDER. I was Stalin's prisoner, by [the author] with Leigh White. 314p $3.75 Harcourt

B or 92 Communism—Hungary 52-6443

The personal experiences of an American business man who was arrested on charges of espionage, brought to trial, convicted, and imprisoned for seventeen months in Hungary. The book begins with his youth, and closes with his release and return to the United States. Index.

"Even if this book were only—as it is advertised—"the complete Vogeler story," it would belong with the most valuable contributions to understanding conditions of life and human fate in the satellite countries. But Mr. Vogeler's book tells us much more than a personal story." George Denicke

+ Ann Am Acad 284:216 N '52 350w

Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 20w

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 175:316 JI '52 240w

"A 'civilian' hero as he was, Vogeler rendered an immense service to the free world by writing this book, which might help to change the complacent 'this can't happen to me' attitude of so many Americans. . . Vogeler's book was written in cooperation with Leigh White, a free lance journalist and well known author himself, whose readable style and interesting presentation is a great asset of this highly recommended volume." Nicholas Nyaradi

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 4 '52 600w

Christian Century 69:878 JI 30 '52 80w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p13 My 3 '52 600w

Foreign Affairs 31:163 O '52 40w

"It's a frightening story, this, as the victimization of one man exposes our uneasy, unsteady foreign policy in the face of the Soviet stranglehold of Western Europe. A book to be watched, in spite of the cooling off period since the headline interest in the case."

Kirkus 20:247 Ap 1 '52 330w

"An extremely important book, in that it is first hand, competent, authoritative evidence on the inhumane, legicidal procedures of Communists in extracting 'confessions' in their political trials. . . Should be widely read." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:790 My 1 '52 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 14 '52 150w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 4 '52 800w

"Robert Vogeler has been able to tell his story, thanks largely to the persistent efforts of his wife to achieve his release which was finally accomplished when Washington paid what amounted to a ransom. His account has been smoothly and competently facilitated by Leigh White, an experienced journalist who had the advantage of knowing Budapest when it was a gay city." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '52 1000w

New Yorker 28:139 My 10 '52 220w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 1 '52 700w

"Readers are by now familiar with the torture techniques which the Russians use to force 'confessions' from innocent victims. 'I Was Stalin's Prisoner' is, to the reviewer's knowledge, the first personal history in which an American citizen describes his reaction to those techniques." H. C. Wolfe

Sat R 35:14 My 10 '52 700w

"Few accounts of what transpires in the satellite countries have such a ring of truth in them. Mr. Vogeler, with the assistance of Leigh White, has written an effective report that handles the period of his imprisonment in Hungary with restraint and sincerity." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p19A Je 1 '52 300w

VOGT, VON OGDEN. Cult and culture; a study of religion and American culture. (Minns lectures) 260p $3.25 Macmillan

901 Culture. U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Religion 51-13989

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet

Ann Am Acad 280:219 Mr '52 450w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 69:130 Ja 30 '52 1000w

"Dr. Von Ogden Vogt, clergyman-scholar par excellence, has distilled, in this modest book, the essence of a long and fruitful professional life. Although he has addressed himself to all sorts and conditions of men, his central message makes an especial appeal to those who call themselves educated and who are, at the same time, estranged from any organized religion." J. F. Hayward

+ J Religion 32:136 Ap '52 430w

"Dr. Vogt covers a vast amount of territory in this book, and it is an interesting journey following his agile mind. . . Reading this book is a broadening experience." K. D. Miller

+ Sat R 35:42 Mr 1 '52 110w

School & Society 75:111 F 16 '52 30w

"This is a brilliant book, written with insight and charm, by the pastor emeritus of the First Unitarian Church of Chicago. . . To the task of formulating a cult [adequate to contemporary civilization], the author addresses himself intelligently and eloquently, but unfortunately, unsuccessfully." H. E. Jensen

+ — Social Forces 31:178 D '52 500w

VON ENGELN, OSKAR DIETRICH, and CASTER, KENNETH EDWARD. Geology. 730p il $7 McGraw 550 Geology

51-12653

"An introductory college text, suitable for use by both students who will take only an introductory course and those who plan to pursue the subject further. It provides a view of the basic content of the main branches of geology, including paleontology. Also, there is a brief presentation of current theories of cosmology." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 49:61 O 15 '52

"The book is written in a clear style and is adequately supplied with literature references and illustrations."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:71 S '52

VON HAGEN, VICTOR WOLFGANG, and VON HAGEN, CHRISTINE (BROWN). Four seasons of Manuela; a biography; the love story of Manuela Sáenz and Simon Bolivar. 320p $5 Duell; Little

B or 92 Sáenz, Manuela. Bolivar, Simon

52-5527

The first biography of Manuela Sáenz who in 1822 became the mistress of Simon Bolivar, and kept that place for the rest of his life. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:359 JI 1 '52

+ Bookmark 11:209 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 JI 27 '52 470w

"A highly readable and informative book."

+ Kirkus 20:181 Mr 1 '52 320w

Reviewed by J. A. Borome

Library J 77:790 My 1 '52 140w

"Mr. Von Hagen, after considerable research, tells this story of Manuela. This reviewer would be happier were the account better documented, if he had told where he had found his new and interesting facts. And the reviewer also confesses that he would like this retelling better were not quite so many pages devoted to reconstructing the various phases of the tortured lives of the hero and his love." Hubert Herring

VON HAGEN, V. W.—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 8 '52
1150w

"As Mr. von Hagen tells her story she emerges not only as one of the most appealing women South America has ever known but as one of the fascinating mistresses of history. Indeed, one might be tempted to think the author had embroidered on facts to create this dynamic personality were his book not so impressively documented." V. L. Warren

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '52 600w

"Mr. von Hagen tells the story dramatically and with some of the qualities of historical fiction, bringing the extraordinary Manuela to life with considerable success, and giving the reader enough of Bolivar himself and of the general background so that the narrative of politics, conquest and revolution comes clear. It is in its way one of the notable love stories of history, and the author makes the most of its highlights, and of the strangely violent atmosphere in which the lovers moved." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 6 '52
750w

"Von Hagen is the author of eighteen books on Latin America. Some are technical, for he is a geographer and naturalist with a wide knowledge of anthropology and archaeology, but all are careful, honest books, mostly well-written and interesting. Several are brilliant and delightful. He emerges as our best scholar and best writer in the field he has chosen. 'Manuela' is a fascinating and rewarding book, quite apart from its singular importance." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R 35:19 Je 7 '52 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 14 '52
120w

Wis Lib Bul 48:214 S '52

VON HOFMANNSTHAL, HUGO HOFMANN.
See Hofmannsthal, H. H. von.

VON MISES, RICHARD. See Mises, R. von

VONNEGUT, KURT. Player piano. 295p $3
Scribner

52-2613

"A satiric, somewhat humorous picture of the U.S.A. when managers and engineers take over, machines do practically everything, and selected experts run the machines." Library J

Booklist 49:15 S 1 '52

"Mr. Vonnegut has done a first rate job that should sell." Seymour Korman

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ag 24 '52
350w

"A tough, tightly written book of a brave new world to come. . . The automatic checker player that is beaten when crossed wires overheat it, a talking helicopter, a monstrous machine with a tape recorder memory, all these absurdly ingenious machines give the book its special quality and fascination. And this new performance on the player piano of western civilization is worthy of more thoughtful attention."

+ Kirkus 20:330 Je 1 '52 220w

"An important plea for reconsideration of human values, emphasizing that 'men, by their nature, seemingly, cannot be happy unless engaged in enterprises that make them feel useful.'" R. W. Henderson

Library J 77:1303 Ag '52 90w

"This novel, it seems to me, stems not so much from an intelligent apprehension as from the intellectual's sense of inferiority in the presence of the garage mechanic, at least while the mechanic is fixing the intellectual's car, or when he is presenting his bill. Why this feeling, which in its generalized state is one of non-participation in and non-contribution to society? Behind it may lie a sense of guilt. The intellectual despises the machine, but accepts its benefits—must accept them, willy-nilly. No Walden for him! That's only a suggestion of course, but it's one the writer of the next anti-machine novel might consider before he throws his sabots into the gears." David Goldknopf

— New Repub 127:19 Ag 18 '52 650w

"Mr. Vonnegut lacks the dark streak of personal horror that makes Orwell's work memorable; but he has, to compensate, a lively satirical humor that bubbles up, again and again, in fragments of fancy. 'Player Piano' is evidence of a probing mind and an observing eye. It is not Mr. Vonnegut's fault that his field of effort has of late been extensively and increasingly tilted." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ag 17 '52
650w

"'Player Piano' is a less earnest book than either 'Caesar's Column' or 'The Iron Heel,' and a less serious one than 'Brave New World,' but what Mr. Vonnegut lacks in fervor he more than makes up in fun. To take only one example, nothing could be more amusing than his account of the antics of the aspiring engineers when they gather on an island in the St. Lawrence for pep talks, competitive sports, formalized informality and the careful cultivation of the big shots. Whether he is a trustworthy prophet or not, Mr. Vonnegut is a sharp-eyed satirist." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '52 360w

"The trouble with this book, as with many similar stories, is that the author gets his human beings so close to the machines that they are dehumanized, which means that although the nightmare remains, there is no sense of tragedy, and none of pity, and we are left with a feeling of disgust and weariness."

— New Yorker 28:88 Ag 16 '52 30w

"As a work of science fiction, it is incomparably better written than nine-tenths of the material in the field. As a piece of entertainment, it is first rate." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 29 '52
800w

"'Player Piano' has its bright side as entertainment, and its witty moments. But it's not funny." Charles Lee

Sat R 35:11 Ag 30 '52 700w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 42:20 autumn '52 170w

VOORHEES, MELVIN B. Korean tales. 209p
$3 Simon & Schuster

951.9 Korean war, 1950- . U.S. Army.
Eighth army 52-13787

"Lt. Col. Melvin B. Voorhees, formerly a newspaperman in the Pacific Northwest, describes the workings of the Eighth Army headquarters in Korea (EUSAK). For the most part, he deals with the press and problems of military censorship. Seven of the twenty-one pieces are imaginative, but they are not far removed from the author's experiences. Colonel Voorhees names, indicts, and presents the evidence against those war correspondents, press bureau chiefs, and public journals whose avid desire for news scoops led them to compromise military security." Sat R

Booklist 49:102 N 15 '52

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 30 '52
350w

Kirkus 20:530 Ag 15 '52 200w

"An often angry book, an often tender book, an always revealing book, but according to the deputy information officer of the army an 'unseemly' book. No security is involved; no offending passages have yet been cited; and Colonel Voorhees has not been accused of any political indiscretions. What he has done is tell the uncomfortable, sometimes terrifying truth." Merle Miller

+ Nation 175:559 D 13 '52 800w

"If dangerous material does indeed exist, it can only be discovered by a finer-toothed comb than this reviewer was able to apply. For, on the whole, this is a book and a record of which the generals, the Army and in fact the American people should be proud. . . . To this reviewer, however, it appears that Col. Voorhees has failed in understanding the real dilemma which often confronts reporters of integrity. . . . In other fields the colonel seems more perceptive. His glimpses of the Korean people, for instance, interspersed in small chapters throughout the book, show a wide understanding of the psychology of the common man in Korea." Margaret Parton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 14 '52 480w

"This is a blessed event. At last the United States Army has given birth to a top-grade writer. From the Korean war has come finally one thin volume of prose which is apt to be remembered long after we have forgotten the heroisms of Heartbreak Ridge and the frustrations of Panmunjom." S. L. A. Marshall

+ N Y Times p3 N 16 '52 500w

"A mélange of reporting, personal opinion, and brief fiction, all set down at practically white heat by a lieutenant colonel who spent eighteen months on active duty with the United States Eighth Army in Korea. . . . Colonel Voorhees gives considerable space to an airing of his views on the newspapermen covering the war. . . . In other chapters, the author is similarly outspoken in his appraisals of the various commanding officers in the area. . . . These digressions, which could have been advantageously compressed, do much to obscure the excellence of the book as an over-all survey of the achievements and the fumbblings of a ground force comprised of the representatives of sixteen nations, all under a single command."

+ — New Yorker 28:189 N 29 '52 150w

Reviewed by J. M. George
Sat R 35:44 N 29 '52 220w

W

WACH, JOACHIM. Types of religious experience, Christian and non-Christian. 275p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

204 Religions, Philosophy and religion. Psychology, Religious A51-9885

Contents: The place of the history of religions in the study of theology; Universals in religion; The concept of the 'classical' in the study of religions; The idea of man in the near eastern religions; Spiritual teachings in Islam with special reference to Alhujwiri; The study of Mahayana Buddhism; Caspar Schwenckfeld: a pupil and a teacher in the school of Christ; The role of religion in the social philosophy of Alexis de Tocqueville; Church, denomination and sect; Rudolf Otto and the idea of the Holy. Index.

"This reviewer has a vestigial connection with theology as a youthful seminarian, and the book was read—most of it—with interest. Whether sociologists without such a background would find it worth while is doubtful. But Prof. Wach did not write for sociologists and the men in his field will undoubtedly welcome it. For the author is a man of sound scholarship, strong personal convictions, and has a charitable and irenic attitude toward those who differ." Ellsworth Faris

+ Am Soc R 17:253 Ap '52 650w

Reviewed by A. C. Garnett
Ann Am Acad 281:235 My '52 400w

"The book will be of interest mainly to the student of theology or history of religions. It presents technical, detailed information rewarding to the trained reader." Douglas Straton

Christian Century 69:669 Je 4 '52 1100w

Reviewed by G. W. Briggs
Churchman 166:12 Jl '52 140w

"The author contends that a systematic interest has guided him throughout. It will undoubtedly be more difficult for the reader to discern that central interest than it is for the author to state that he expresses it in the book. The book will impress many as being the collected essays of a historian of religions, written at various times and for various purposes. Perhaps the wise reader will peruse each chapter as a unit, drawing from it the pertinent analysis and insights it contains, rather than trying to force this diversified material into a unified, systematic pattern. Such became the conclusion of the present reviewer long before he had come to the end of the volume." G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 29:211 Ap '52 600w

"Professor Wach insists very properly that a study of the history of religions would be a dilettante pursuit unless it provided material for theology. 'With norms we have again become desperately concerned.' He writes as a Christian anxious not to overlook anything of value in other traditions. No Christian could want to criticize such a procedure, but we should like to be a little clearer about what he supposes Christianity essentially to be and, therefore, how other religions are related to it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 16 '51 350w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:44 Mr '52 270w

WADE, BOB, and MILLER, BILL (WADE MILLER, pseud) Shoot to kill. 249p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

51-14820

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:647 N 1 '51 60w

"'Shoot to kill' is as steadily absorbing and explosive a tale as any of those Wade Miller has written about Max Thursday. It is fresh as the others have been because Miller discovers a new milieu and a new set of characters for each excursion." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 6 '52 120w

"Purely American, far more concerned with force than grace, and eminently satisfactory, despite a little gratuitously crude sexiness." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p21 Ja 6 '52 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 6 '52 90w

"Honest job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:26 D 29 '51 20w

WADE, HENRY, pseud. See Aubrey-Fletcher, H. L.

WAGENKNECHT, EDWARD CHARLES. Cavalcade of the American novel; from the birth of the nation to the middle of the twentieth century. 575p $6.50; text ed $4.80 Holt

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism 52-7022

"Companion volume to Cavalcade of the English Novel [Book Review Digest 1943]; built on a similar plan—fairly long essays on many representative novelists followed by briefer notes on lesser writers, with full and up-to-date bibliography and notes." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 48:335 Je 15 '52

Bookmark 11:234 Jl '52 30w

"Not only students but anyone curious about the rich heritage the American novelist is heir to, will delight in this Cavalcade. If he has done no more than start a run on the stories of William Dean Howells, Edward Wagenknecht will not have written in vain." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 176:77 O '52 250w

"One of the smaller useful services Mr. Wagenknecht performs is to link our fiction with relevant photodramas. But in the large, illustrated by pages on Mark Twain, Howells, James, and many others, this book will at once supplant all its predecessors, for it is better written than some, more scholarly than most, more up-to-date than any other. Until someone issues a 10 volume history of our fiction, or until the passing of a decade brings much new material and a change in reading and critical taste, Prof. Wagenknecht's 'Cavalcade' will be the standard work for both student and common reader." G. C. Knight

WAGENKNECHT, E. C.—Continued

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 25 '52 350w

"A useful book for students and study groups, for reference and for informing opinion. Should be in all Public Libraries, college and High School Libraries."

+ Kirkus 20:184 Mr 1 '52 210w

"Since Dr. Wagenknecht is essentially a romanticist, and sometimes moralistic, it lacks something of the cool clarity of Carl Van Doren's The American Novel (1940), but it is both fascinating and informative to read. Non-conformist, too: he seldom sees eye-to-eye with Edmund Wilson; thinks the famous Paul of Willa Cather's 'Paul's Case' 'a nasty brat'; and abominates Freudian 'explanations' of The Turn of the Screw. Recommended for all libraries, especially reference collections." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 77:893 My 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis

New Repub 126:21 Je 23 '52 750w

"This is a thoroughly useful survey, containing a few sharp insights, much information of a factual sort, and some comment . . . of solid interpretive value. And if the volume is over on the textbook side—well, it was written with this in mind. The general reader, if he is seriously interested in the American novel, will still find the book a valuable map to the broad regions of the subject, with useful guideposts sticking up everywhere." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 15 '52 600w

"Many of the insights and judgments made in this volume are useful and sound, but they tend to be caught in a flow of discussion that is chatty and anecdotal. The tone of the writing suggests a once-over-lightly approach." W. V. O'Connor

+ — Sat R 35:11 Jl 12 '52 700w

"Most of the essays in this fresh and comprehensive historical survey provide good introductions to the important American novelists; the numerous and excellent footnotes and a full bibliography direct the reader to all the best scholarship and criticism in the field."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:251 S '52 200w

WAGNER, CARL. Thermodynamics of alloys; tr. by Svante Mellgren [and] J. H. Westbrook. 161p $6.50 Addison-Wesley

541.36 Thermodynamics. Alloys 51-12189

"This book is a translation, revised and enlarged by the author, of Carl Wagner's article 'Thermodynamik metallischer Mehrstoffsysteme' first published in Handbuch der Metallphysik, Volume 1, Part 2, edited by G. Masing. . . The present translation stays close to the original German edition; however, the monograph has been brought up to date by inclusion of a discussion of new methods and data published between 1940 and 1951. There are also new sections on ternary and higher-order systems, empirical formulas and relations between thermodynamic functions and the electronic constitution of alloys." (Chem & Eng N) Bibliography. Index.

"In its present form this book represents a very good, up-to-date review which should be of general interest to both physical chemists and metallurgists. The worker in the field will be particularly attracted by the alloy index and the very complete bibliography which comprises 419 entries. The appearance of this book in English was overdue." O. J. Kleppa

+ Chem & Eng N 30:3202 Ag 4 '52 160w

"A short but valuable treatise of interest in connection with the physical chemistry and metallurgy of alloy formation."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 37:34 My '52

WAGNER, GEOFFREY A. Venables. 271p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

52-8146

A Gothic novel, the scene of which is Venables, an English country house. The mystery about the house and the death of the owner, twenty years before, is solved at the beginning of World War II.

Kirkus 20:47 Ja 15 '52 180w

"Venables is that rare and startling phenomenon in modern fiction, the genuine Gothic novel. Unsophisticated, yet written with intermittent and hair-raising artifice, it is unashamed, unabashed kitsch, the kind of thing an imaginative M. F. H. might write after reading Lesbia Brandon." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 44:429 O 11 '52 330w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 14 '52 140w

"What had really happened to the late Col. Waldo Bellingham? Why did the beautiful and most passionate Catherine Bellingham both love and hate her adopted son David? What did the codfish-faced butler Gilman have to do with the strained and sinister atmosphere of Venables? These and similar questions are at the end a little too neatly resolved for this reader's taste. . . Yet it should be noted that addicts probably won't object too strenuously." H. F. West

N Y Times p22 Mr 30 '52 280w

"No Daphne Du Maurier, the author has concocted a preposterous piece which you will be able to read in a completely dark room without raising a goose-pimple or missing a single cliché."

— Sat R 35:45 Je 21 '52 160w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

Spec 189:548 O 24 '52 140w

Springf'd Republican p7D My 18 '52 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 10 '52 90w

WAGNER, RUTH H., and GREEN, IVAH E. Put democracy to work. 132p il $3 Schuman

321.82 Democracy—Juvenile literature

52-10860

"The authors define democracy and trace its development from its beginning in Greece, explain what communism is, list some rights and duties of both young people and adults, point out stereotypes and misconceptions about peoples, nations, and race, give examples of the work of international youth organizations, and discuss the United Nations and the Declaration of Human Rights. Directed to young people, the book throughout gives concrete suggestions as to how they as individuals can 'put democracy to work.' Grades 7-10." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 48:384 Jl 15 '52

"The importance of this book lies first in its simple and concise history of democracy—in terms of important movements and declarations, with an interpretation of what democracy is ideally—and its clear definitions of communism, of the United Nations, and of the Declaration of Human Rights." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:334 O '52 90w

"Recommended for ages 10-14 and for teachers working with them in elementary grades." L. M. Schueren

+ Library J 77:731 Ap 15 '52 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pt2, p32 N 16 '52 60w

"It is addressed throughout to the individual child. Each boy or girl who reads it thoughtfully must find in it a challenge and a responsibility. It is illustrated with well-selected photographs."

+ Sat R 35:47 O 11 '52 160w

WAHL, ARTHUR CHARLES, and BONNER, NORMAN A., eds. Radioactivity applied to chemistry [contributors, John W. Barnes and others]. 604p il $7.50 Wiley

541.38 Radiochemistry

51-5978

For descriptive note see Annual for 1951.

"There are few tools as helpful to a research worker as a comprehensive and well organized survey and bibliography of the broad field in which he is working. 'Radioactivity Applied to Chemistry' is such a volume for all persons interested in the past accomplishments and future potentialities of radioactive nuclides as aids in the solution of chemical problems." J. E. Willard

+ Am Chem Soc J 74:1365 Mr 5 '52 450w

"The book is recommended for the researcher engaged in radioactivity studies as well, and perhaps even more so to the one who is not, but who wonders whether he should be." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 59:333 Ja '52 210w

"This work under its moderately descriptive title is an unusual combination of text, treatise, and handbook. . . An alphabetically arranged bibliography of authors and literature references when used in connection with the subject index with reference to the text is fairly satisfactory, but there is no way of finding the work of a given author in the text unless his subject is known and indexed. In other words, such a bibliography, immensely valuable as a source of literature references, is a one-way street, from text to author, but lacking in reverse facility. This is a minor criticism of an otherwise splendid index. In future editions it may become advisable to divide the text and the tables under two separate covers, although the present arrangement is more convenient for the volume of subject matter here presented." S. C. Lind

+ J Phys & Colloid Chem 55:1577 D '51 320w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:424 D '51 290w

WAITE, WILLIAM W. Personnel administration. 683p il $7 Ronald

658.3 Employment management 52-7605

"This textbook restates the fundamental philosophies of personnel administration as they have evolved during the past half century, and shows how these fundamentals find continual expression in specific, practical administrative methods and techniques. The theme of the book is America's demonstrated ability to solve complex problems of employing, training, and administering the work force by a combination of adaptability, common sense, and a growing understanding of human relations." (Pref) The author is Associate professor of Industrial engineering at Columbia University.

Booklist 48:355 Jl 1 '52

"Mr. Waite has given us a book which is better suited to classroom use than to individual study, but its inclusiveness may recommend it to supervisors and administrators as well as to students and teachers of management methods. It combines the philosophical and practical approaches to the subject, and stresses heavily the basic principle of personnel administration—human relations." Phyllis Osteen

+ Library J 77:1407 S 1 '52 100w

"Personnel Administration is a very complete, up-to-date, well-written and well-illustrated handbook, making good use of the illustrative example and embellished, to its credit, with some very fine material on the development of basic personnel administration philosophies." Ernest de la Ossa

+ Management R 41:554 Ag '52 400w

Special Libraries 43:272 S '52 100w

WAKELING, ARTHUR, ed. Earning extra money in your workshop; a Home Craftsman's manual on profitable methods and market-tested projects. 192p il $2.95 Home craftsman

680 Handicraft

52-3333

A manual for the home craftsman, giving instructions on how to make novelties for sale. A section is devoted to plans for making fifty articles which find sales in gift shops. Diagrams. Index.

Booklist 49:28 S 15 '52

Reviewed by William Yates

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 19 '52 60w

"It is a miscellany rather than a systematic manual, but some home mechanics will undoubtedly find profitable ideas in it." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:1816 O 15 '52 30w

WAKELING, ARTHUR, ed. How to build your own workshop equipment. 255p $3.95 Home Craftsman Publishing Corporation, Room 603, 115-117 Worth St, N.Y. 13

680 Workshops

52-9489

"A Home craftsman's manual with fully illustrated step-by-step instructions on the construction of workbenches, power-tool stands, shop cabinets, tool chests, racks and bins—accessories for both power tools and benchwork—clamping equipment and vises—drafting and layout facilities—wood-finishing, bending, heating and sandblasting equipment." (Sub-title) Index.

"Simple take-apart drawings and step by step instructions take the guesswork out of every project. We can recommend this compilation wholeheartedly." William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 14 '52 50w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 77:906 My 15 '52 60w

WALDEN, AMELIA ELIZABETH (MRS J. W. HARMON). Marsha on-stage! 251p $2.50 Morrow

52-5939

"Although the best actress in New Sharon High School, Marsha Blake was jealous of Stephen. What happens to her jealousy makes an exciting tale for teen-agers." Bookmark

Bookmark 12:14 O '52 20w

"The book's contribution lies in the acting and directing suggestions made in it. This is Miss Walden's second story of the theater. For anyone interested in the stage, 'Sunny-cove,' too is worth reading." Lucile Pannell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 16 '52 110w

"Stage talk and plenty of discussion on all topics from costumes and lighting to needing the next fellow's personality weaknesses, raise this above the average in teen age stories, and in spite of many issues which are headed in fairly obvious directions, the characters are real and sympathetic to read about."

+ Kirkus 20:460 Ag 1 '52 160w

"Amelia Walden's fans will demand it, although it doesn't come up to Gateway or Waverly." Ann Nelson

Library J 77:1669 O 1 '52 40w

"It's shaky on motivation but strong on the kind of glamorous characters that 14- and 15-year-olds might imagine becoming by 18. Luckily, few of them will, but it would be hopeful if they realized they didn't want to." B. B. Thorpe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52 50w

"This book is as filled with acting and directing tips as a raisin pie with raisins. It will, like Amelia Walden's earlier treats, be devoured in one sitting by older girls." Bernice Frankel

+ Sat R 35:58 N 15 '52 350w

WALDMAN, DOROTHY. Goomer; pictures by Marie C. Nichols. [60p] $1.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

Cats—Legends and stories

Stories and pictures about a tough little Siamese kitten named Goomer.

"An excellent book for small children."
Elizabeth Yates
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52
70w

"A cat book on the sentimental and uninspiring side."
— Kirkus 20:403 J1 15 '52 100w

"The author shows an understanding and appreciation of cats and so does the illustrator, Marie C. Nichols." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 77:1663 O 1 '52 60w

"There is not much story, it is just one of those real reports on a pet which other pet-lovers recognize as true." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 9 '52
110w

WALDMAN, FRANK. Delayed steal; il. by Vincent Sullivan. 150p $2 Houghton
52-7201

"Story of Billy Tyler, the son of the manager of the Yankees, who came back from war service in Korea to find that his father was opposed to his playing professional baseball. Billy went through discouraging months of playing with semi-professional teams in Central America. Then he played in Florida with the Yankees and with the Detroit Tigers. The story ends with a thrilling, tense game in the race for the pennant which Billy and the Tigers won."
Sat R

Booklist 48:285 My 1 '52

"Good sports novel [and] good baseball."
+ Kirkus 20:78 F 1 '52 140w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11
'52 40w

Sat R 35:60 My 10 '52 40w

WALDMAN, FRANK. Dodger doubleheader, by Joe Webster [pseud.]. 160p $2 Pellegrini & Cudahy
52-9054

Story of twin brothers who play with the Brooklyn Dodgers. For teenaged boys interested in baseball.

"As any story concerned with the Dodgers would be, there is considerable trouble brewed before everything comes out all right. But even though the Dodgers usually triumph over the Giants (which ain't so), this is a stimulating little story." I. H. Marsh
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26
'52 80w

"The young fan who likes the explodingcigar, hot-foot type of joke will like this book—although he will find that the playing scenes don't have the breath of the park." W. C. F.
N Y Times pt2, p26 N 16 '52 100w

Reviewed by W. H. Baker
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '52
30w

WALDMAN, FRANK. Rookie from Junction
Flats, by Joe Webster [pseud.]. 151p il $2.50
Pellegrini & Cudahy

Baseball story for boys of twelve to sixteen.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 189:86 Je '52 30w

Reviewed by J. C. Worley
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 15 '52
50w

Kirkus 20:194 Mr 15 '52 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 My 11
'52 30w

"Mr. Webster has brought warmth and humor to this fabulous tale of big league success. And he has deftly made an important point: the second division plays as vital a part in deciding the world champion team as the four leaders." M. L. Krupka
+ N Y Times p18 J1 27 '52 80w

WALDORF, LYNN OSBERT. This game of football. 257p il $4 McGraw 796.33 Football 52-9457

"A veteran coach draws on successful past experience to explain the fundamentals of football, giving pointers on training, practice, etc. Numerous photographs and diagrams, three charts." Bookmark

Booklist 49:29 S 15 '52

Bookmark 12:8 O '52 20w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:1905 N 1 '52 40w

"Waldorf's book is heavily statistical. It reads rather like an instruction manual to an exceedingly complicated steam turbine. Even so, it is likely to be a popular manual. Budding players and young coaches will grab up Pap-py's text. It should interest anyone who ever cheered Celerio on a bootleg around right end.
And it is certain to sit in dog-eared grandeur on the bedside tables of thousands of football-frantic youngsters this fall." Jere Witter

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 31 '52
750w

WALES, NYM, pseud. See Snow, H. F.

WALEY, DANIEL. Mediaeval Orvieto; the political history of an Italian city-state, 1157-1334. 170p il $4 Cambridge
945.6 Orvieto, Italy 52-8823

"History of a small independent commune of the Papal States from the time it was granted self-governing status to the coup d'état of its first tyrant. The author, a British medieval historian, has based his work almost entirely on original sources." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography, Index.

"Professor Waley makes available in English the history of one out of the hundreds of unlucky communes, of the rise, glory, and fading of Orvieto. Furthermore, the study is in itself a gem." R. L. Reynolds

+ Am Hist R 58:88 O '52 450w

Am Pol Sci R 46:588 Je '52 30w

"The author is to be congratulated on his treatment of the development of Orvieto. . .
The book has several appendixes containing material which could, except for the genealogical detail, be more properly incorporated in the text. There is an exhaustive bibliography and a usable index." M. N. Hardwicke

+ Ann Am Acad 283:232 S '52 400w

"The author's dislike of terminological exactitude leads him to underestimate two basic thirteenth-century social and constitutional changes. His failure to distinguish clearly between such terms as knights, nobles, and Magnati causes him to forget that the nobility of the early fourteenth century may well have been quite different from the patriciate of the late twelfth century. Again, he is singularly indifferent to the meaning of the gradual growth within the Popolo of the power of relatively undemocratic guilds and societies. Perhaps Mr. Waley's difficulty is that he has concentrated only on primary sources. . .
One looks in vain for names like Flessner, Besta, Ercole, Gualazzini, Georg Dahm, and Heinrich Wolf. There is much history in Mr.
Waley's little book, but its meaning must be read between the lines." J. H. Mundy

+ — Pol Sci Q 67:477 S '52 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p536 Ag 15
'52 600w

WALKER, CHARLES RUMFORD, and GUEST, ROBERT HENRY. Man on the assembly line, 180p il $3.25 Harvard univ. press
331.7 Assembly line methods 52-5410

"The research reported in this monograph is on the satisfactions that workers on an automobile assembly line derive from their jobs. A representative sample of 180 workers was interviewed in their homes with a schedule designed to bring out facts, attitudes, and opinions about their jobs, their relations to fellow workers and supervisors, working conditions, pay and promotions, and relations to the union. The results throw new light on the controversial question of the influence of paced and repetitive work on the satisfactions that men derive from their labors." (Foreword) Index.

"There is much in this small book that will benefit personnel managers and union officials alike. Especially interesting is the discussion on the desirability of job rotation and job enlargement as a means of decreasing the boredom that goes with specialization." H. L. Sheppard

+ Am Soc R 17:795 D '52 500w

"This is an excellent volume overall. In just two places do the authors seem to slip. The first is in not discounting some of the workers' accounts of their previous jobs. Since work 'on the line' has a low 'status' connotation, it is entirely possible that previous job experience was 'built up' to more variety and skill, for example, than it actually possessed. The second is in the conclusions where remedies for repetitiveness, for example, may be applicable or necessary only for transition problems rather than for permanent ones." H. J. Lahne

+ Ann Am Acad 284:192 N '52 650w

"Both management and union representatives will find in this frank, clear presentation, new approaches to the problems of monotony, tension, and depersonalization created by mechanization of work. As a model for further studies it will also interest technicians. Both authors have had valuable experience for this kind of work." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 77:898 My 15 '52 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ag 17 '52
140w

WALKER, DAVID HARRY. Pillar. 313p $3
Houghton

52-6238

"For 58 months six men of differing background live together in a German prison camp and in laconic but impressive fashion, their deep comradeship is revealed, kindled by older, disillusioned Busty, the 'pillar of their house.'" Bookmark

Booklist 48:185 F 1 '52

Bookmark 11:109 F '52 30w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p7 F 28 '52
450w

"A superb story."

+ Kirkus 19:681 D 1 '51 230w

"Written with brilliant characterization, great versatility, and in each episode well sustained suspense." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:144 Ja 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 11 '52 40w
Nation 174:609 Je 21 '52 70w

Reviewed by G. D. Painter

New Statesman & Nation 43:160 F 9
'52 480w

"Occasionally, because of his primary concern with the interplay of character, the prison camp atmosphere gets a little dim; and occasionally the Freudian influence on his character drawing becomes a little too obtrusive. But these are minor flaws in a novel of solid purpose and craftsmanship." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 17 '52
500w

"Stylistically, 'The Pillar' has faults. Mr. Walker has a jarring habit of letting his characters ruminate about themselves in the second person, and at times he doubles up adverbs as maddeningly as James Jones. But he has written the most thorough and revealing and also the warmest account of military imprisonment in World War II that this reviewer has seen." John Brooks

+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '52 550w

"It is a fairly interesting book, to be taken at a leisurely pace."

New Yorker 28:108 F 23 '52 80w

"Mr. Walker, who has two other novels to his credit, is a careful craftsman and a talented observer. As a veteran of five years of imprisonment, he undoubtedly feels more about it than this obviously well-informed novel quite manages to indicate. The reader may occasionally feel that he has dealt too much with the business rather than the passions of captivity." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 23 '52
340w

Reviewed by Leonard Amster

Sat R 35:16 F 23 '52 400w

"There are fortunately novels of which the reviewer can only say: Read this, it is good. Mr. David Walker's The Pillar presents us with a group of Allied prisoners in five years of war, so vividly, convincingly and with such a nice sense of values, that any summary is likely to put off the readers who would most enjoy it." Tangye Lean

+ Spec 188:58 Ja 11 '52 180w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52 90w

"Mr. Walker's book is an honest and readable attempt to dredge a long and monotonous experience of its significance, but all the time he seems to be struggling with a theme somewhat beyond his talent, and would perhaps have done better to stick to facts than grapple with the problems of fictitious characters."

Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 1 '52
170w

Wis Lib Bul 48:95 Mr '52

WALKER, FRANK. Hugo Wolf; with 8 pages of plates and music examples in the text.
502p $6.50 Knopf

B or 92 Wolf, Hugo

51-13230

Critical biography of this Austrian musician best known for his songs. Index.

Kirkus 20:25 Ja 1 '52 170w

Reviewed by P. L. Miller

Library J 77:720 Ap 15 '52 140w

Reviewed by Sergius Kagen

Music Lib Assn Notes 9:406 Je '52 450w

"The most moving book about a composer since Turner's 'Berlioz.' Written with no heightening literary power like Turner's, presenting fact in exhaustive detail, Mr. Walker's book nevertheless moves us profoundly by what it tells us about Wolf's personality and behavior, his functioning as an artist, his terrible end, and about the devotion and loyalty of some of the people he became involved with." B. H. Haggin

+ Nation 175:139 Ag 16 '52 1000w

"This absorbing book enters, as closely as discretion permits, into the emotional life of Hugo Wolf; but those of us who hoped that it would throw further light on the origin of the composer's madness, and (still more) relate this to his abortive love affairs, will, I fear, be disappointed. . . . The deterioration in his character during the five or six years preceding the collapse of his mind in 1897—a deterioration which issued in outbursts of unreasoning, offensive and churlish behaviour far wilder than any of which he had previously been guilty, must surely have been caused, at least in part, by the ravages of the disease. Mr. Walker gives us an admirably lucid narrative of these years, but it is difficult not to feel as we read it that there is a piece missing somewhere." Edward Sackville-West

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:218 F 23
'52 3000w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 20
'52 600w

"The special charm of this book is that one seems to live with Wolf, one learns to know him not only as a musician but as a human being, an erratic, unpredictable, blessed, yet doomed man. One feels the horror of his illness and death as one would that of a friend. I closed the book shocked and grieved. Then I looked again through his songs—and forgot the human being." Lotte Lehmann

WALKER, FRANK—Continued

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '52 950w

New Yorker 28:146 Ap 5 '52 190w

"I cannot thank Mr. Walker enough for having written his book. Only much later, when you mull it over, do you realize what effort, what research, and—last not least—what love must have gone into this biography. While you read it you are not conscious of all this. And this is as it should be. You are transformed into the very era, the very world that centered around a genius: Hugo Wolf." Elizabeth Schumann

+ Sat R 35:48 Ap 26 '52 1050w

"Mr. Walker has wise and important things to say by the way; but their impact is weakened because they are not the book's core and centre. After all, even a composer such as Wolf, who lends himself so readily to the biographical approach, interests us as a man because of the music he wrote. It is graceless to carp when one is offered so much of value. Let us merely say that this fine book still leaves room for a study of the nature and significance of Wolf's idiom as a song writer; and that Mr. Walker is the man to write it." Wilfrid Mellers

+ Spec 188:24 Ja 4 '52 750w

"Sympathy and insight inform every one of Mr. Walker's 14 chapters and it is their presence in what he writes that inspires his readers' confidence. The biography, in the complete sense of the word as applied to a musician, is thus authoritative, and authority sets the seal upon the value of this most wise and scholarly, attractive and urbane book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p834 D 28 '51 1100w

WALKER, JOHN CHARLES. Diseases of vegetable crops. 529p il $7.50 McGraw 635 Vegetables—Diseases and pests

Ag 52-409

Manual which is based on an earlier lithoprinted one published for use in a course in vegetable diseases offered to graduate students. It is intended as a guide to the nature and control of most of the diseases of important vegetable crops. The author is professor of plant pathology, University of Wisconsin. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 48:355 J1 1 '52

"A reference book of concisely stated, useful information. . . Although the book may occasionally serve the needs of the home gardener, it is a professional-level work for plant pathologists, county agents and farmers who grow vegetables on a large scale." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 77:906 My 15 '52 80w

WALKER, KENNETH MACFARLANE. Venture with ideas; meetings with Gurdjieff and Ouspensky. 212p $3.25 Pellegrini & Cudahy
197 Gurdjieff, Georges Ivanovitch. Uspenski, Petr Dem'ianovich 51-12756

"This account of the impact of the teachings of Gurdjieff and his disciple Ouspensky—a system of mystical or 'esoteric' knowledge—is remarkable in that the author is an eminent man of science; a surgeon, well-known for his pioneer work in medicine, who developed one of the last war's secret weapons. Back in 1923, a friend took Kenneth Walker to one of Ouspensky's meetings in London, and this was the beginning of the venture chronicled in this book." (Atlantic) No index.

"The main ideas of the Gurdjieff-Ouspensky system of development are summarized as lucidly as such things can be, and the book is free of the fuzzy exaltation prevalent in works pertaining to the Higher Life. The most arresting part, perhaps, is the vivid and entertaining picture of Gurdjieff and of the meal-time rituals at his Paris establishment."

Atlantic 189:86 Mr '52 170w

"Generally burning in a cosmic glow that often blinds us to the scientific fact rather than elucidating its elements, there are nevertheless in this little system, the traditional ear marks of good sense—know thyself, learn to laugh, don't worry about what other people think, live in harmony. For the very frustrated."

Kirkus 19:716 D 15 '51 200w

"Mr. Walker's sketch of Gurdjieff is done with great skill and makes fascinating reading. He possesses in a high degree the rare ability to make righteousness readable, and the long account which leads up to and finally tracks down the Master comes to the reader with something of the effect of a picaresque novel on the spiritual plane, a record of the adventures of a soul among the seers. But seers of what? This brings me back to the question, the answer to which has hitherto been kept in suspense, how are the spiritual powers which would enable us to defy death developed? Alas, we aren't told." C. E. M. Joad

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:18 J1 7 '51 1100w

"You will understand that this is a serious book written about a serious matter by a serious man. Nevertheless, you'll probably find yourself floating through air about midway through and not sure where you'll come down. Probably Dr. Walker's chief success here is in creating the desire to find out just what Gurdjieff's system is. It is not successful at all in explaining what effect 20 years of following the system had on Dr. Walker, which was the author's stated objective." C. D.

San Francisco Chronicle p27 Mr 23 '52 240w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Sat R 35:26 Mr 8 '52 900w

Time 59:100 Ja 28 '52 900w

"Dr. Kenneth Walker has given us a short but very attractive account of his own association with these two remarkable men, with a summary of their chief doctrines."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 17 '51 500w

WALKER, TURNLEY. Dream of innocence. 311p $3.50 McKay

52-8415

"A first novel based on the experiences, ambitions and plans of several young prostitutes in New York City written in rather matter-of-fact fashion. There is no definite plot; murder of a race track gambler by two of the women supplies a limited amount of tension and excitement." Library J

— Kirkus 20:162 Mr 1 '52 210w

"Not recommended." E. S. Brown

— Library J 77:595 Ap 1 '52 130w

"The life story of Geraldine is beautifully schemed, written with skill and much loving detail, and reaches the climax of its well-veiled, sophisticated irony in a denouement that is as right—and as inevitable—as rain after drought." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 8 '52 350w

"The arithmetical possibilities of writing 311 printed pages without a single line of wit, a fresh phrase or a sentence provocative enough to reread should be few, but Mr. Walker has ingeniously managed to win on every one." Harrison Kinney

— N Y Times p16 J1 27 '52 200w

"Mr. Walker's undoubted power of writing and his ability to penetrate the jungle psychology of his moral cretins does not quite justify his extended celebration of their lives." E. J. Fitzgerald

— + Sat R 35:33 Je 28 '52 200w

WALL, GERTRUDE WALLACE. Gifts from the forest; photography by John Calvin Towsley. 96p $2.50 Scribner
634.98 Lumbering. Sawmills 52-9150

"Tells the story of modern lumbering methods from the felling of the lordly giants of the forest to the finished lumber. Excellent format; photographs; maps on end papers show important forest areas. The importance of conservation, reforestation, the modern equipment used, and the skills needed are all explained and illustrated." Library J

Booklist 48:304 My 15 '52

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates

Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 14 '52 80w

"Boys and men will find this factual book unusually attractive and readable." V. H.

+ Horn Bk 28:247 Ag '52 80w

"A wonderful book for the class room and all young reference libraries."

+ Kirkus 20:260 Ap 15 '52 130w

"Thoroughly fascinating and useful book. . . Recommended as one of the best books on industries." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 77:910 My 15 '52 100w

"It is a book for boys over twelve and for men, a beautiful record of a great industry, to be shown in high schools as a career book for boys, but of wide general interest also. The conservation angle is well handled. The endpapers offer a map of United States forest regions. It is the handsomest informational book of the spring." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 11 '52 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p16 Je 1 '52 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '52 140w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R 35:47 S 20 '52 90w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:262 S '52 70w

Wis Lib Bul 48:177 Jl '52

WALL, MERVYN. Leaves for the burning. 217p $3 Devin-Adair

Satirical novel about contemporary Ireland. Three middle-aged friends set out to walk to Yeats' funeral. Instead their meeting ends in a long drinking bout in pubs across Ireland. Their failure to reach the funeral symbolizes their futile, aimless lives.

"Although Ireland is the immediate background, the entire world of the West, 'ancient, Christian, humane,' is involved in this autumnal reading of our fate. Yet in spite of all this, here is at times a rollicking book. Perhaps mercurial, the word so often applied to the Celtic temperament, is the word for it." Riley Hughes

Cath World 176:313 Ja '53 270w

"If this picture of contemporary Ireland is even moderately near the truth it cannot be considered very flattering. . . In any event, the author has written a book which, within limits, comes close to perfection. Those who are willing to lay aside their prepossessions (of whatever kind) will find Leaves for the Burning excellent fun." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 57:20 O 10 '52 450w

"The character of the book is anything but sordid, though drunkenness and failure loom large in it; the incidental characters . . . are shown through an acute comic vision." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 29 '52 120w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

New Repub 127:22 D 15 '52 100w

Reviewed by G. D. Painter

New Statesman & Nation 43:161 F 9 '52 270w

"It is a terrifying portrait which Mr. Wall draws, for he describes it exactly as such things happen; it is as true of middle-aged failures in the United States as it is of their counterparts in Ireland, and it is far too accurate to be issued without a warning. Enter it at your peril." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 23 '52 360w

"His book is short and entertaining, its chief weakness lying in his willingness to sacrifice his characters and their feelings to the mockery (it sometimes almost descends to ordinary crankiness) that he seems determined to express at all costs."

+ — New Yorker 28:152 O 11 '52 140w

Reviewed by Edward Parone

Sat R 35:44 O 25 '52 240w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

Spec 188:214 F 15 '52 120w

"A brilliantly amusing, bitter and occasionally sentimental novel. . . Mr. Wall's picture of cynically good-humoured corruption infecting every aspect of society is not a new one; but Leaves for the Burning is notable for the way in which moral corruption blends indistinguishably into the atmosphere of Irish country life. Through the whole grotesque, comic parade of chicanery and superstition . . . Mr. Wall discovers a state of mind which is at once fantastic and curiously convincing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p73 Ja 25 '52 500w

WALL, STANLEY, and HAMMONDS, CAR-SIE. Food for home use; producing and conserving. (Windsor press bk) 288p il $3 Pop. mechanics

630 Vegetable gardening. Fruit culture. Live stock 51-1429

"Not a book of recipes but a background for producing and conserving food—how to grow fruits and vegetables, to raise poultry and food animals—and how to cure, can, and freeze. Every question is answered for the amateur but the book is designed for those who live on large places." Library J

"This book should have wide appeal to families who are planning to produce all or part of their food at home, as well as to agricultural workers who give guidance to families in food production and conservation. . . The authors are on the staff of the department of agricultural education of the University of Kentucky and have the background of agricultural education and experience that enables them to write an interesting and authentic book on a subject of interest to many." H. M. Pickett

+ J Home Econ 44:222 Mr '52 350w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 76:2003 D 1 '51 50w

WALLACE, DAVID DUNCAN. South Carolina; a short history, 1520-1948. 753p maps $7.50 Univ. of N.C. press

975.7 South Carolina 51-13847

A "reduction" of the author's three-volume History of South Carolina published in 1934. When the author died in 1951 all but the final touches on this work were done. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p12 F 10 '52 120w

"Professor Wallace's approach is dispassionate, his interpretation of history broad, and his sure grasp of South Carolina's past without question. Although his treatment of the period since Reconstruction is too thin to be adequate, it is in the writing of his story that he has failed to measure up to what we might have expected. Unfortunately, the book is not well-organized, the narrative lacks continuity, and the tendency is to record data as in a catalogue." D. W. Grantham

+ — Sat R 35:48 Je 14 '52 270w

WALLACE, ELIZABETH. Unending journey. 286p il $3.50 Univ. of Minn. press
B or 92 52-5323

Reminiscences of an American woman, now in her eighties, who has been a scholar and traveller, teacher, and friend of many famous men and women of Europe and America.

WALLACE, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Miss Wallace's awareness of the interrelation between places and their inhabitants, past as well as present, her unflinching sympathy and understanding for all people no matter how different their habits, her sense of humor which never seems to have deserted her even under the most trying circumstances—all these together with her consummate mastery of the written, and spoken, word make The Unending Journey delightful reading as well as fascinating comment on education and mores in many places during the past three quarters of a century." Catharine Seybold

+ Am Hist R 53:196 O '52 380w

Booklist 48:359 J1 1 '52

Reviewed by Gertrude Buckman

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 15 '52 200w

"For all the famous names an index would have been welcome, and some cutting of more narrowly personal parts. But the grateful reader finds here one record of the vigor and vision which have given America its cultural prominence and responsibility in the world today." E. C. Dunn

+ N Y Times p20 Je 8 '52 350w

WALLACE, ERNEST, and HOEBEL, EDWARD ADAMSON. Comanches; lords of the south plains. (Civilization of the American Indian) 381p 11 maps $5 Univ. of Okla. press 970.1 [970.3] Comanche Indians 52-11087

"Ernest Wallace and E. Adamson Hoebel, historian and anthropologist, respectively, have re-created the life of the bold, confident people who for three-quarters of a century dominated the prairies of the Southwest. All of it is here: the toil and stress and joyous ingathering of the buffalo harvest, the exultant feats of horsemanship, the happy sociability of the tepee village, the excitement of war and raiding. Then military defeat and the loss of the buffalo. . . It closes with the opening of the reservation to white settlement in preparation for Oklahoma statehood in 1907, and the forced entrance of the Comanches upon the 'White Man's Road.'" N Y Times

"The authors have consulted all available sources and their book is likely to remain the standard work on its subject." Stanley Vestal

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 J1 27 '52 250w

"It is a good story well told, without romanticizing, but with understanding and detachment. Here are neither noble red men nor red devils, but a people perfectly adapted to their environment, loving their life and their wild land and sky. Back of all the book's color and drama is the fidelity to truth that comes only from painstaking research." Angie Debo

+ N Y Times p35 S 14 '52 240w

"The authors, a professor of history and a professor of anthropology, respectively, come from the very area about which they write. . . They give a thorough, readable, documented account of how the Comanche lived, what they thought, why they survived as long as they did." W. H. Hutchinson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 J1 27 '52 400w

"Lucidly written, with a minimum of ethnological jargon, [the authors] have produced a work of genuine but unobtrusive scholarship." J. M. England

+ Sat R 35:18 O 18 '52 260w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p8C N 9 '52 160w
U S Quarterly Bk R 8:268 S '52 180w

WALLACE, FRANCIS. Front man. 217p $2.75 Rinehart

52-8737

Novel about football. A new coach finds that football at his old college has become involved with shady associates. He fights for a return to good sportsmanship and wins against all odds.

Kirkus 20:429 J1 15 '52 150w

"Good entertainment for the sports fan, and apple pie for the teen ager." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:1506 S 15 '52 60w

"A good story." J. H. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26 '52 40w

"'Front Man' has in it some of the finest literary football since Mr. Wallace's first—and still, I fear, his best novel—'Huddle.' But when young Johnny Stone's State Team is between games, things get badly confused." D. M. Mankiewicz

+ — N Y Times p25 O 12 '52 260w
Sat R 35:38 D 6 '52 150w

WALLACE, MRS KATHLEEN. Immortal wheat; a personal interpretation, mainly in fictional form, of the life and works of the Brontës. 253p $3.50 Putnam

Brontë family—Fiction 52-5282

Describes the intimate lives of the Brontës in a mixture of biography, literary criticism, and fiction.

Booklist 48:227 Mr 15 '52

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Je 29 '52 460w

"Miss Wallace's imagination has a tendency to recoil on itself. Her fictional form might well have been a little less so. Yet, for all that, hers is the most complete book about the Brontës that has yet appeared, as well as the most enlightening guide to what they wrote." Francis Russell

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24 '52 500w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 F 24 '52 850w

"If you read the Brontës as required reading, this isn't your book. But if you were nourished on them in your teens and the family at Haworth parsonage was as real to you as your own, on no account will you want to miss it." Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 25 '52 600w

"No Brontë-lover should fail to add this delightful and companionable book to his shelf." Eleanor Slingsby

+ Spec 187:104 J1 20 '51 550w

"Frequent change of tense and liberal use of italics sometimes make for confusion in this book, and so many 'sentences' without verbs inject a certain jerkiness. The author presupposes the reader's knowledge, and sometimes waxes sentimental, but her approach is highly individual and intensely personal, and the spirit of this strange brood can hardly ever have been so fully and so poignantly conveyed." D. B. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 9 '52 360w

WALLACH, IRA JAN. Hopalong-Freud rides again. 143p $2.50 Schuman

817

52-12434

"Fourteen rather strenuous parodies of contemporary literary styles. The author is catholic in his distastes—his work ranges from a burlesque of Gayelord Hauser to one of Jean-Paul Sartre—and while having his fun he gets in a few political licks at the extreme Right." New Yorker

"Several of his capable parodies in his ride-along volume demand close scrutiny or they almost pass for the thing they're counterfeiting. Once this is understood, however, and proper precautions taken, Wallach's highly literate Bronx cheers emerge unmutated." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 21 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:433 J1 15 '52 90w

Reviewed by Gilbert Millstein

N Y Times p7 S 14 '52 400w

"The book is uneven, and some of the pieces fall completely flat. Among his better efforts are the piece on Sartre (a playlet), and 'Get Off My Galaxy,' a poke at science fiction."
 + — New Yorker 28:137 O 4 '52 70w

WALLBANK, THOMAS WALTER. India in the new era; a study of the origin and development of the Indian union and Pakistan, new nations in a changing Asia. 204p 11 maps $3.25; pa $2.40 Scott

954.09 India—History. Pakistan—History
 "A study of the movement which brought about the independence of India and Pakistan and the problems faced by the nations since the acquisition of their new status. Professor Wallbank has chosen to introduce his study of the Indian independence movement with a survey of basic conditions and trends in Asia as a whole. He regards the experiences of India as one part of the general political and social upheaval gripping Asia." Current Hist

Booklist 48:157 Ja 1 '52

Current Hist 21:95 Ag '51 70w

"His study is a valuable contribution to an understanding of the new India and its problems," N. Srinivasan

+ Pacific Affairs 25:200 Je '52 300w

"The general reader and beginning student will find here a vast amount of material condensed in readable form. The work contains, however, no new disclosure or novel interpretation, and an almost exclusive reliance on secondary sources leads to some minor errors of fact. The presentation is objective, and this is no small virtue in the Indian field, where history so frequently has an imperialist or nationalist flavor."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 8:165 Je '52 140w

WALLER, WILLARD WALTER. The family; a dynamic interpretation; rev. by Reuben Hill. rev ed 637p $5.25 Dryden

301.42 [173] Family. Marriage 51-10632

"The purpose of the book is clearly defined. It is to study the American middle class family in its interactive aspects, that is, as a group of socially interacting personalities. It does not attempt a study of the family as an institution. . . The book is organized to follow the natural history of the family group: life in the parental family, courtship, early marriage, parenthood, and empty nest. Each of these stages receives roughly a section of several chapters. There is also a section dealing with family disorganization, including chapters on both bereavement and divorce. A chapter on proposed changes concludes the book." (Social Studies) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1938.

"The bibliography shows good coverage of the literature in the field. . . Readers will find in this revision the chief merits of the original, plus numerous additions of pertinent data and interpretations." R. E. Baber

+ Am Soc R 17:251 Ap '52 500w

"The Family is a volume packed with information, new data, and pertinent research. For reference work it will be valuable and will assuredly assume a place as a college classic in study of family life." L. R. Schulz

+ J Home Econ 44:141 F '52 370w

"Instructors interested in the social process approach rather than the institutional, will find this a definitive text. High school teachers will find it valuable background for themselves and their most able students." W. C. Neely

+ Social Studies 43:45 Ja '52 400w

WALLICH, HENRY CHRISTOPHER, and ADLER, JOHN HANS. Public finance in a developing country: El Salvador—a case study; with the collaboration of E. R. Schlesinger [and others]. 346p $6 Harvard univ. press

336.7284 Finance—El Salvador 51-13476

"A factual and analytic report of an on-the-spot investigation, with government cooperation, analyzing the effects of increasing taxation and government expenditure on producer and consumer, and on the various aspects of the national economy. Professor Wallich is author of a similar study on the Cuban monetary system, and a frequent consultant for Latin American governments. Mr. Adler is Chief, General Studies Division of the International Bank." (Library J) Index.

"Although the book provides a complete review of the Salvadorean fiscal system and is for this reason useful to the Latin American specialist, the general reader interested primarily in the problem of economic development will find few generalizations and propositions applicable to the financing of economic development in other countries. . . The chief weakness of the book lies, however, not in its atypical country subject-matter, which must be accepted as given, but in its failure to fulfill the promise of the title and preface by dealing with the key problem of the rôle of public finance in national economic development." Morris Bornstein

+ — Am Econ R 42:630 S '52 750w

Reviewed by H. R. Enslow

Ann Am Acad 280:241 Mr '52 190w

Foreign Affairs 30:685 Jl '52 30w

"Perhaps one cannot have everything, but he misses in this model certain needed institutional information; for instance, on the quantity and quality of the educational program and as to the effects of what appears to be the virtual absence of local government. Application of fiscal theory is in general sharp and illuminating. However, one may question the assumption that export taxes cannot be shifted forward in any degree (i.e., without any information as to the production taxes which fall on other suppliers in other countries)." H. M. Groves

J Pol Econ 60:179 Ap '52 500w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1934 N 15 '51 70w

WALPOLE, HORACE, 4th earl of ORFORD. Correspondence . . . ; ed. by W. S. Lewis [and others]. (Yale ed. of Horace Walpole's correspondence, v15-16) 2v 11 ea $10 Yale univ. press

B or 92

51-8369;51-8379

"This sixth installment of 'The Yale Edition of Horace Walpole's Correspondence' differs from its predecessors in that it does not present the letters which passed between Walpole and a single one of the numerous recipients of his letters but gathers together smaller batches to or from no less than eighteen people. It is thus something of a miscellany, but it has nevertheless a unifying interest. The common bond is antiquarianism. . . These volumes enable us to see for the first time Walpole's short and unhappy correspondence with Thomas Chatterton in its proper context." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"As a whole the letters lack the charm and human appeal of earlier volumes. Yet those who read the letters to know more of Walpole or of his times will not be altogether disappointed. . . For a study of the historiography of the eighteenth century these particular volumes contain many useful and interesting bits of information. They show that Walpole and his correspondents were concerned with techniques of criticism and with standards of historical writing." D. M. Clark

+ Am Hist R 57:730 Ap '52 320w

"The letters have hardly the same lively interest as the gossipy letters in the more continuous series, but there is the important episode of the connection with Chatterton which brought Walpole such undeserved criticism. Mr. Wilmarth Lewis in his introduction makes out a good case for him. A good many of the letters are new. Walpole is never dull even when he is merely making polite acknowledgments."

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 22 '52 120w

"Mr. Lewis and his assistants have done their editorial work with the thoroughness and accuracy to which all who know this edition are accustomed. The illustrations, though not very numerous, are strictly appropriate. The printing is almost, though not quite, impeccable." S. C. Chew

WALPOLE, HORACE—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 27 '52
950w

"Needless to say, in the present volumes there has been no lessening of editorial care. The texts have, so far as possible, been scrupulously checked with the original manuscripts; the annotation is full, yet compact. In many ways the Walpole edition has become a model of editing procedure, often imitated, and constantly used as a standard by which to measure the effectiveness of other projects. . . W. S. Lewis' edition unites the best of two worlds—the verve, the delight, the enthusiasm of the avid collector, and the sober thoroughness of academic scholarship. Rarely has there been a happier combination." J. L. Clifford

+ Sat R 35:29 Je 14 '52 750w

"Although the 292 letters they contain—214 of them Walpole's, the remainder from one or other of his nineteen learned correspondents—inevitably lack the unifying sympathy and intimacy of those exchanged by Walpole and Gray or Montagu or the Misses Berry, they have in antiquarianism a common subject which, pursued over a course of sixty years, gives them a unity as interesting if not as personal as Walpole's correspondence with Cole, the closest and most assiduous of his antiquarian acquaintance." John Hayward

+ Spec 189:439 O 3 '52 800w

"Perhaps any correspondence of this type must seem a little flat when compared with the 20 years' interchange of letters between Walpole and Cole, to which their sharply contrasting idiosyncrasies and their mutual passion for gossip lent so delightful a flavour. But there is a great quantity of material here that is both interesting and entertaining. Some of it, and not that alone which bears on the Chatterton episode, is quite indispensable for a proper understanding of Walpole."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p644 O 3 '52
2350w

U S Quarterly Bk R 8:122 Je '52 240w

Reviewed by Leonard Bacon

Yale R n s 41:463 spring '52 900w

WALSH, CHRISTY, ed. Baseball's greatest lineup. 312p il $3.75 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball—Biography 52-8286

"The Baseball Writers' Association transfers the 'All American' idea, and attempts to select, by nation-wide ballot a team consisting of the best player in each position during the past 50 years. Each player is written up by a well-known sports writer." Library J

Booklist 49:8 S 1 '52

"A nice accounting of the best in baseball." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:1409 S 1 '52 40w

Reviewed by Nathan Aleskovsky

N Y Times p40 O 5 '52 130w

WALSH, JOHN J. Boxing simplified; with the assistance of Otis J. Dypwick. 110p il $3.95; to schools $2.95 Prentice-Hall

796.83 Boxing 52-6276

A book by the boxing coach of the University of Wisconsin. "Every phase of the sport from selecting the proper equipment to handling the boxer between rounds is discussed. Early conditioning, drills, workouts, the all-important fundamentals of stance, punching and blocking are described and illustrated in step-by-step detail." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:181 F 1 '52

"This is primarily a textbook for coaches and a good one, emphasizing amateur sport. Detailed instructions. Well illustrated." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 77:442 Mr 1 '52 40w

WALSH, MAURICE. Son of a tinker. 245p $3 Lippincott

52-5048

Contents: Son of a tinker; Heather wine; The bonesetter; Butcher to the queen; Not my story; My fey lady; The mission sermon; A dialogue; The prudent man.

Booklist 48:230 Mr 15 '52

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52 20w

"'Son of a Tinker' and the other stories in this book are as readable as any you're likely to find for a while. They're bright and they're warm, and seldom far from the glint of laughter. They're exactly the kind of stories to go with the settings which Maurice Walsh, with his notably magic way with words, has prepared for them." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 24 '52
410w

"I'm no lover of the short story genre, nor yet of dialect tales, but I'll take Maurice Walsh any time. And this is good Maurice Walsh."

+ Kirkus 19:710 D 15 '51 160w

"Two of the stories, 'Son of a Tinker' and 'The Bonesetter,' are of a rare quality and would rank first in any collection. . . Maurice Walsh has built up a following in this country for his Irish and Scotch novels and readers of The Spanish Lady and Trouble in the Glen will want this." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 77:361 F 15 '52 80w

"Maurice Walsh, who is one of Ireland's most popular and prolific authors has a gift for spinning romantic yarns in which love and laughter are neatly balanced. Furthermore, when Mr. Walsh follows this formula as he does in three of the longer stories here and writes of love with tongue in cheek, he is at the top of his form. . . When, however, Mr. Walsh forsakes his humor and gravely tells a romance touched with tragedy set in the early part of the last century called quite appropriately, The Bonesetter, he is not so successful." Richard Harrity

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 24 '52
500w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p22 F 24 '52 270w

New Yorker 28:124 Mr 8 '52 40w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

Sat R 35:25 Ap 12 '52 480w

WALSH, THOMAS. Night watch. 217p $2.50 Little 52-5016

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:159 Ap '52

Kirkus 20:16 Ja 1 '52 80w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 43:740 Je 21 '52 80w

"Readers of 'Nightmare in Manhattan' will remember it with the admiring pleasure that led the Mystery Writers of America to award it last year their annual 'Edgar' (as in Allan Poe), as the best 'first' novel published during 1950. In 'The Night Watch' Mr. Walsh appears to have written the best second novel too and as writers and readers both know, that's probably a harder job than the first." James Sandoe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Mr 23 '52 270w

"A trifle less original and solid than Walsh's memorable debut novel, 'Nightmare in Manhattan,' it's still a strong and vigorous study of three plainclothes men on a stake-out—one a man of professional integrity, one a weakening and one a potential killer." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 30 '52 100w

"In form, 'The Night Watch' is a more or less conventional chase item, but Mr. Walsh has made his characters so real and, with the exception of his villain, so appealing that it is easy to overlook its rather casual construction."

+ New Yorker 28:123 Mr 15 '52 160w

"The chase is as breathtaking as if it were happening to you, and the people come alive in Walsh's tight realistic prose. Altogether, a lulu." L. G. Offord
 + San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 23 '52 80w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
 Spec 189:48 J1 4 '52 60w

"The detail, of which there is a great deal, is sharp, and the equivocal atmosphere of police work, with emphasis on concealed hostilities and the importance of 'buck-passing,' is well done. The degree of realism is far superior to that which we find in most crime stories. Nevertheless we are left with the feeling that Mr. Walsh has spun out to novel length the material for a short story."
 + Times [London] Lit Sup p449 J1 11 '52 250w

WALSH, WILLIAM HENRY. Introduction to philosophy of history. (Hutchinson's univ. lib: philosophy ser) 173p $2; text ed $1.60 Longmans

901 History—Philosophy 51-13553

"This book, the author tells us, is primarily intended for philosophers, in the belief that English philosophers, in their distaste for philosophies of history written by German metaphysicians, have unduly neglected history, whilst admitting that 'philosophy of science is a perfectly serious branch of study.'" (Canadian Hist R) "The author divides his subject into two parts, the first dealing with the critical and the second with the speculative aspects of philosophy of history. The bulk of the work is devoted to the former set of problems." (Canadian Forum)

"This book, by a Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, should be of great interest to those who are interested in philosophy and/or history. It is written with all the charm, urbanity and humor that we have come to expect from British scholarship. . . . The exposition is at all times deft and illuminating. This book is both instructive and fascinating, and its low price, for these days, is something of a marvel." D. R. G. Owen

+ Canadian Forum 32:19 Ap '52 400w

"Mr. Walsh's book is of set purpose short, the work of a teacher of philosophy, plainly written, meaty, but comprehensible to the layman, including the historical student less acquainted with philosophical terminology and methods. There is an excellent brief note on 'books for further reading.' The only omission noted there (as in the text) is of any reference to Troeltsch." R. Flenley

+ Canadian Hist R 33:168 Je '52 900w

"For both its content and its writing this book deserves to be commended for what it claims to be, an introduction to a most interesting subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p601 S 12 '52 650w

WALTARI, MIKA TOIMI. A stranger came to the farm; tr. by Naomi Walford. 254p il $3 Putnam

52-9848

"Against the haunting background of the Finnish countryside with its innumerable lakes and mountains, the drama of the stranger Aaltonen and the enigmatic mistress of the farm is played out. Both find a brief happiness, brief as the lovely Finnish summer, in spite of the hatred of the woman's husband, tortured, neurotic and given to drink. But through the Northern woods their fate stalks them inexorably." Publishers' note

Atlantic 190:99 D '52 120w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 2 '52 350w

Kirkus 20:667 O 1 '52 180w

"For all libraries." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 77:1812 O 15 '52 100w

"Mr. Waltari's clothing of his ironically, tragically human story in terse, spare, appropriate prose, and the deeply poetic mood in which he has written it have made of 'A Stranger Came to the Farm' a tale worth telling." F. H. Bullock

 + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 19 '52 650w

"Now and then, when he is describing the pastel adorns of a sub-Arctic spring or the hard, clean rituals of the farmer's daily round, Mr. Waltari breaks free of his allegory. At such moments his page glows with a special life. For the most part, his slow-motion danse macabre reminded this reader of a Perelman take-off on Eugene O'Neill, with all the fun extracted. Naomi Walford's translation mirrors perfectly the diabolic solemnity of the original." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p44 O 19 '52 400w

New Yorker 28:153 O 25 '52 30w

"It is good of its kind, but I am afraid it is more of an interesting item in relation to Waltari's body of work than an enhancement of his reputation. The publishers liken it to 'Ethan Frome' and there is perhaps a slight basis for the comparison. On the whole, however, it has too much passion in it, and too much of a 'Grand Guignol' quality, to be the counterpart of Mrs. Wharton's bleak classic." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R 35:38 N 29 '52 260w

WALTER, GERARD. Caesar; a biography; tr. from the French by Emma Craufurd; ed. by Therese Pol. 637p il maps $5 Scribner

B or 92 Caesar, Caius Julius 52-8179

Study of the life and career of Julius Caesar. The author is a French scholar. Bibliography. Index.

"A very comprehensive biography of Julius Caesar, based on industrious research into contemporary sources. It is a pity the book is so pedantically written and awkwardly translated (from the French), because Caesar's life, of which most of us know only a fraction, is quite phenomenally rich in color, drama, and psychological interest."

+ Atlantic 189:82 My '52 160w

Booklist 48:264 Ap 15 '52

"Walter has on the whole dealt fairly with the evidence and has presented an account which holds together. Readers may well be stimulated to make use of the extensive bibliography and notes (graciously reserved for the end) to attempt less formal essays of their own." M. St. A. Woodside

Canadian Forum 32:68 Je '52 550w

"Walter has a good knowledge of the ancient writers dealing with Caesar and his times, and he has read the more important modern studies, but his book does not aim at high scholarship. It is written rather as a semi-popular biography. There are many episodes which a critical historian would present rather differently, and several which he would present quite differently or not at all, but in the long run they make little difference." J. W. Swain

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 6 '52 350w

Reviewed by C. W. E. Morris

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 17 '52 500w

Kirkus 20:27 Ja 1 '52 110w

"There is need for a good biography of Caesar in English, based on recent scholarship. This, though it will rouse disagreement, is probably the best to date. . . . For most libraries." Dorothy Sinclair

+ Library J 77:719 Ap 15 '52 110w

"A heavy, long, dull book. Mighty the subject's personality may be, but obviously one which the author dislikes extremely. . . . Neither the illustrations nor the maps are immediately significant; the most valuable feature of the book would seem to be its thoroughness in listing other works of reference."

+ Nation 174:457 My 10 '52 90w

"I feel justified in saying that this large and laborious biography is an unsatisfactory book, with several important omissions and errors, and not well enough translated and edited. Its chief disadvantage is one which I fear will prove fatal in the United States. It assumes, in its readers, far more knowledge of Roman

WALTER, GERARD—Continued
political history, social movements and leading personalities than 99 per cent of us possess. . . Professional scholars have, you will say; and the book must be meant for them." Gilbert Highet

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 23
'52 1000w

"The form of his present book is that of facts without argument; it is a fresh approach to the biography of Caesar. If the reader is sometimes left in a little doubt as to the background of some part of Caesar's life he still would not want to be dragged through an infinity of arguments in answer to the very positive views of earlier biographers. . . Mr. Walter's book is not one to be raced through between dinner and the theatre. It has 545 pages of text, all packed with facts. . . It is, nevertheless, the work of a man who knows how to tell a story." R. M. Haywood

N Y Times p27 Mr 30 '52 650w

"A work primarily for scholars, it is heavily documented, and the background it presents is tremendously detailed. . . The author builds up his portrait stroke by stroke and misses nothing. When there are two contradictory records of an incident, he examines both and, with the aid of logic and collateral facts, renders his own judgment. His chapter on Caesar's assassination is a superb piece of graphic writing."

+ New Yorker 28:143 Ap 5 '52 190w

"Within limits, 'Caesar' is an informative biography, and worth reading, if only to renew one's amazement in the human potential. The book has stimulating notes, a rich bibliography, but inadequate maps." R. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 Ap 20 '52
280w

Reviewed by C. A. Robinson

Sat R 35:11 Ag 16 '52 650w

Reviewed by M. L. W. Laistner

Yale R n s 42:121 autumn '52 950w

WALTERS, FRANCIS PAUL. History of the League of nations. 2v $11.50 Oxford

341.12 League of nations 52-7354

Covers the history of the League of Nations from its beginnings in Paris and London in 1919 to Lord Cecil's final address in Geneva in 1946. The author was an assistant to Lord Robert Cecil, then joined the secretariat of the League, with which he was connected until 1940.

"This book is definitive as an over-all narrative of the political accomplishments, frustrations, and failures of the League of Nations. No one is likely to improve its record of the interplay of the policy—or impolicy—of states acting as separate entities and of their action—or inaction—as members of the international organization under the steady impact of the Covenant." D. P. Myers

+ Am Hist R 57:932 Jl '52 850w

Reviewed by F. H. Soward

Canadian Hist R 33:291 S '52 750w

Current Hist 23:62 Jl '52 80w

Foreign Affairs 30:670 Jl '52 70w

"Highly recommended for all scholarly libraries and for reference collections of larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 77:531 Mr 15 '52 210w

"This book deserves wide reading, especially in the United States. It illuminates a period of history which we have curiously sought to avoid; it shows that we, too, as a nation, can make mistakes." Arthur Sweetser

+ New Repub 126:19 Mr 24 '52 700w

"At this precise moment of historical time a good history of the League of Nations is well timed. . . A plain straightforward account of what the League did and what was done to it is useful at this moment when we stand on the brink of another worst war in history, because it may help us to understand why the international machinery, which everyone agrees is necessary to prevent the wars which nobody wants, does not work. We may perhaps then understand why we get the wars which nobody wants." Leonard Woolf

+ New Statesman & Nation 43:377 Mr 29 '52 900w

"Here, at long last, is an adequate history of the League of Nations. . . Mr. Walters' concise and well-told story serves to remind us of the stout-hearted men and women who, in the face of overwhelming difficulty, pioneered in a completely new field of human relations." R. B. Fosdick

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '52 1200w

"The history of our times is especially rich in important works by those who participated in great events or were privileged observers or highly qualified specialists. This book will take its place among them. Its theme lacks the drama of war or the allurements of personal memoirs found in the writings of soldiers and statesmen, but through the critical years between the two world wars the League of Nations was the center of international action in a drama all its own, all the more appealing because of its tragic end." J. T. Shotwell

Sat R 35:14 Ap 5 '52 700w

"This [is a] most serious and moving book." Max Beloff

+ Spec 188:147 F 1 '52 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 11
'52 3300w

"It is written with a fine objectivity that does not conceal the author's convictions nor his critical attitude towards individual statesmen and nationalistic policies, though these are always restrained in expression. . . The book is in the form of straightforward narrative and constitutes an admirable survey of international relations between the wars as seen through the eyes of Geneva." Charles Seymour

+ Yale R n s 41:609 summer '52 1100w

WALTON, BRYCE. Sons of the ocean deeps; jacket il. by Paul Orban; endpaper design by Alex Schomburg. 216p $2 Winston

52-8973

Science-fiction for older boys.

"Good story." Mark Reinsberg

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 16 '52
30w

Kirkus 20:561 S 1 '52 50w

"Has an interesting idea in exploring the depths of the sea rather than outer space; but its maturing-of-a-cadet plot contains every cliché ever employed in a West Point or Annapolis novel." H. H. Holmes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 26
'52 40w

"Poorly written, oververbose and badly motivated." Villiers Gerson

— N Y Times pt2, p28 N 16 '52 50w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 16 '52
300w

WARBEKE, JOHN MARTYN. Power of art [ed. by Norah McG. Warbeke]. 493p $6 Philosophical lib.

701 Art—Philosophy. Esthetics 51-14699

"Dr. Warbeke's special field of academic scholarship is philosophy—Ph.D. at Leipzig, professor at Williams, Amherst and Mount Holyoke. His field as a practicing artist is music—organist at Princeton and organ recitalist at many places. He has done research in the history of art in Europe and the Orient, and has taught college courses in aesthetics. He first considers the nature of art in general and of the aesthetic experience as related to other forms of experience and activity. Separate chapters are devoted to painting, sculpture, music, poetry, architecture and drama. Other chapters discuss the contributions of the arts to ethics, religion and philosophy." (Christian Century) Index.

"Dr. Warbeke's book seems to contain the substance of a lifetime of close observation and careful thought. . . The gentle sanity of his judgments will commend itself to those who feel that even the wildest of the 'moderns' should be regarded with sympathy as sincere seekers after something they can't find." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 69:370 Mr 26 '52
500w

"Stylistically, the book could have profited by a great deal of careful revision. There is never any question of the author's enthusiasm for his subject, but his efforts to express this enthusiasm make his writing incline toward preciosity, bombast, pretentiousness, and wordiness. He scarcely lets a page go by without a foreign phrase and an esoteric allusion. The sentence structure is frequently awkward; the book as a whole, loosely organized." Manuel Bilsky

Ethics 62:229 Ap '52 370w

"One may wonder whether artists, art-lovers, and art-critics are more generous and free from jealousy than other people. But the man this philosopher of art was will support his argument. His posthumous book will reveal to readers who did not know him what Professor Warbeke's friends have known: his gentle wisdom about the fine qualities of life, his wish to share them, and his confidence that aesthetic experience is the one great way to the common good—if we remember that the good which art does must be forgotten in the good it is." Van Meter Ames

+ J Philos 49:397 My 22 '52 900w

"The author, a philosopher by profession, reveals throughout his discourse a broad background in the arts based on lifelong travel and study together with personal experience in music as an organist. In the absence of any particularly new or striking views, most of the value of the book comes from the wealth and range of examples chosen from the several arts and from the provocative discussions of many of the fundamental problems of esthetics. One can not help regretting that the author did not pursue his discussion of meaning in music a little more rigorously." Glen Haydon

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 9:287 Mr '52
350w

"The Power of Art' is altogether an admirable work. It is an exposition of considerable weight, yet is at the same time scholarly without being pedantic and popular without being written-down. And the beautiful prose in which it is written, too rarely seen nowadays, makes the book, itself, a remarkable example of literary art." W. C. Smith

+ Springf'd Republican p7D Ap 27 '52
450w

